Editorial

"Oh, dearly, dearly has He loved,
And we must love Him too:
And trust in His redeeming blood,
And try His works to do."

Whether unification is a thing to be sought or fought, depends upon what kind it is.

Germany seems about to learn in rather a hard fashion that it is sometimes easier to start trouble than it is to stop it.

A brother inquired, a few days since, what we thought of a Methodist pastor, in charge of a very prominent church, always standing to lead in prayer. We think, to say the least of it, that this is a very UNMETHODISTIC practice.

In planning your year's work, keep it in mind to make prayer a large factor in every phase of it. Without this, failure awaits you, no matter what else you may do. The men who have stirred the world and set forward the boundaries of the Kingdom have been men who lived much upon their knees.

It is unfortunate when any church in a Conference becomes possessed of the notion that it can be served only by a transfer. Frequently there are men near-by who are more capable and efficient than any stranger that can be secured in some other State. Happy is the Conference that can discover merit and strength in its own members and further develop their powers by setting them to larger tasks! Our Bishops should help them to do this.

We reproduce from the Publisher's Column in the Gospel Advocate of Nashville, a publication of the Church of the Disciples (Campbellite), exactly as it appears therein, the following: "We carry baptismal pants in stock. Price, $15. In ordering, state size of shoe you wear. Always order at least one size larger—two sizes larger will not be too large." Whether the cost of these "pants" is normal, or whether it has been affected by the general upward trend of prices, we do not know.

As wicked as the world is to-day, it is doubtless better than it has been in any other period since the human race became numerous and was scattered over the earth. True, there is much in the present condition of the Churches to depress one; but if the real, vital disciples of Jesus everywhere could be gathered into one body, it would be a mighty host. These should see that a superficial Christianity is not substituted for the Christianity of Christ and the Apostles. The latter alone, when taken in its full significance, is adequate to meet the deep necessities of sinful men and redeem this fallen planet. Far more than any appeal for organic union, the Churches of this period need to hear and heed the Master's call to holiness of heart and life. That alone will bring "the unity of the Spirit" for which our Lord prayed.

THE WORK OF THE NEW YEAR.

The Conferences and holidays are now behind us, and before us stretches the new year with its privileges and opportunities. Shall we not endeavor to make it count for more, both with respect to our own religious development and our achievements for the Master, than any preceding year of our lives? Such certainly ought to be the high purpose of every pastor and every member of the Church. Every disciple of the Lord Jesus should ardently desire to become, as time passes, increasingly holy and strong in character and fruitful in good works, and he should spare no effort that would help toward the realization of these noble ends. May we offer to the workers in this part of the field a few suggestions stressing some things that we deem to be of great importance?

1. We would urge each one to look well after his own spiritual life. Feed it; nourish it; guard it. Study earnestly the Bible with a view to your own personal benefit, and tarry for a season on your knees in the closet every day. No time thus used is wasted. It helps one to keep in touch with the risen Lord, strengthen one's faith, and endues one with the power of the Holy Ghost. The person who does not have his periods of real devotion will soon find himself shallow in his experiences and impotent to minister effectively to needy souls. This is universally true. The highest dignitary in the Church can no more escape the consequence of such negligence than the most obscure preacher. When men cease to "hunger and thirst after righteousness" they are no longer filled with it. Past impartations of strength will not suffice for the present.

2. Christian workers should in their endeavors put "first things first." The highest function of the Church is to minister spiritually to the souls of men—to reach and save the lost, and to build up in Christ those brought into the household of faith. To this supreme work of the Church all its other activities should be kept subordinate and made contributory. That it may be accomplished, houses of worship are erected, parsonages are built, preachers are sent, assessments are imposed, and money is raised. So, for any congregation to occupy itself wholly or chiefly with these secondary things and neglect the great primary task for which the Church of Christ was established, is to make a tremendous mistake. The world may measure the success of a pastor by the material improvements that he has consummated and the moneys he has secured for various commendable purposes, and too often Conferences and Bishops seem to take the same view; but we may be assured that the Master does not. In nothing of this kind did Paul find his "joy and crown." What gave him delight were his converts—those whom he had turned from darkness into the way of light. Penitents at the altar of a congregation are worth incomparably more than any number of dollars in its treasury; and saints that it has developed and which it is ripening for heaven are its noblest products, whatever else it may have to its credit. No preacher has had "a good year" who, at its close, has not been the means of spiritually blessing and enriching those among whom he has labored. The fruits of the Spirit brought to perfection in human hearts will not perish as will all material things, but will be garnered in the sky; and thus may one accomplish a work that will endure forever. So, let us in the year now beginning resolve that, without neglecting the subsidiary things that are needful, our deepest concern shall be to bring the lost about us into the Kingdom and to lead our fellow-Christians into the possession of more of the mind that was in the blessed Christ. Thus shall we perform a service that no merely human organization or agency can render, and fulfill our part of the mission that has been committed alone to the followers of Him who died upon the Cross, but who rose from the dead and who still lives to save humanity.

3. And shall we not be more earnest in our Christian labors during the coming year? There are many considerations that should appeal to us to stir up the gifts that are within us and do the utmost in our power to set up the Divine Kingdom in human hearts. For one thing, the night is swiftly coming when no man can work—every hour brings it nearer. Then, too, Satan and sin are busy on every side. And, moreover, those about us are fast marching to the tomb and to eternity. The opportunities that challenge us to-day may be forever gone to-morrow. Only men whose souls are on fire with a consuming passion to rescue the perishing and to spread Scriptural holiness over the earth may hope in any large degree to arrest attention and help religiously people who are in the paralyzing grip of the refined materialism and subtle worldliness of this day. Little need be expected of half-hearted toilers.

THE KIND OF PREACHERS NEEDED.

The compiler is usually neither a scholar nor a thinker, though some people are foolish enough always to imagine him to be such. For our part, we have never had much fancy for a preacher who in the pulpit is chiefly an exhibiter of other men's wares, even if he properly labels them. We had rather a minister would speak to us out of his own mind and heart, though his utterances be commonplace. No sermon has in it much power that has not back of it the speaker's own personal experiences and convictions. This doubtless was why God chose to have the Gospel propagated by a living ministry, rather than through impersonal agencies. He wants WITNESSES, not human phonographs reeling off the sayings of others.

THE REAL CONQUEROR.

Earth's truest victor is the man who worthily keeps to the end the Christian faith. This cannot be done without fiercer battles than were ever fought with material weapons. No soul ever reaches "the pearly gates" that Satan has not done his utmost to destroy.

WHEN WEARY LET GOD THY STRENGTH RENEW.

By "Subscriber."

All who would live contented here
This lesson well must learn.
That life is filled with toil and care
But neither should we spurn.
Both toil and care are helpful.
If we will but faithful be
And in nothing be neglectful.
But live consistently.

Let us note the many blessings
We have along life's way—
All fraught with every carefulness
From God's own hand each day.
The sun with its life-giving power.
Without which all would die
The air we breathe each blessed hour—
Then why repine or sigh.

Nay, do not murmur nor complain.
What e'er thy lot may be:
Though it be joy or ceaseless pain.
It may prove best for thee.
Just manfully and faithfully
Fight all life's battles through;
And when the way seems hard for thee.
Let God thy strength renew.

IT IS THE LIFE THAT COUNTS.

"If I live as if there were no God—no God to protect, no God to console, no God to punish—what am I but the fool that said in his heart, 'There is no God.' What is the theism of the lips compared with the atheism of the life?"—A. H. Wells.

WHOLE-HEARTED CONSECRATION.

What we need is to stop dallying with sin. We must come to hate the devil and all his works, we must take the Bible more as our fathers took it, and believe it and govern our lives by its precepts; we must believe intensely in heaven and hell, in sin and salvation, in the fundamental and eternal verities of God, and then preach them and live them. Above all, we must give ourselves and all we have to God and wait before him until we get the cleansing and empowering baptism of the Holy Ghost.—Bishop Mallalieu.

HABIT A CABLE.

"Habit is a cable. We weave a thread of it every day until at last it becomes so strong we cannot break it." This is one of the many well known sayings illustrating the power of habit.

The law of the world is that things grow from small to great, from the one cell to the many celled structure. So character starts with action, the action grows into a habit, and habit is the leverage of character.

The closer men study these laws the more they see how dominant they are. The percentage of conversions after the thirtieth year is passed is very small. Some indeed maintain that a man does not change his character after he reaches physical maturity. He that is unjust let him be unjust still, is the divine law.

How necessary, then, that the right choice be made at the beginning of life! That is where choice counts. Then by weaving a daily strand of good habit we shall find ourselves more definitely and safely held to a life of righteousness. But if the habit is a bad one how dangerously we may be snared in a trap of our own making! Watch the daily action. Put the best into the details of life, especially into the spirit in which things are done.—Onward.

"Even our adversity may prove a burning bush in the desert where God may remind us of better things to come."

A PRAYER FOR THE COMING CONFERENCE YEAR.

Ella Hays McRae.

O God, the work of another year is opening! Our hearts go out to each laborer in thy vineyard. We thank thee for a place in thy kingdom of service. Help us to see how beautiful it is to work with thee. Open the hearts and homes of men and women to receive those whom thou hast sent. May there be a rich increase of the Priscilla and Aquila, the Phoebe, the Dorcas and the Barnabas type; and a marked decrease of the Demas, Philetus and Alexanders. From the highest place to the lowliest appointment may there come a deepening and quickening of the spiritual life. If the stain that comes from walking in the world-way of selfishness and sin is found on any minister of thine, or if through weariness, privation or discouragement the burden has grown too heavy for another; oh, grant that to the one may come the experience of Peter in the upper room; that he may accept the divine washing in all its entirety, and with the Master gird himself for the lowliest service, measuring up to the supreme test of nobility in Christ's kingdom, "in honor preferring one another"—and to the one fainting beneath his load may some strong Simon of Cyrene be sent who, taking the burden upon his own shoulders, shall walk with him a while.

Give to each one the world-wide vision. May we see and share the travail of His soul and be satisfied. May each altar be aglow with sacred fire, and from our parsonage homes may there go out sons and daughters clear-eyed and strong, equipped for any service in thy kingdom. May love abound, and by this may all men know that we are thy disciples. And through this coming year, in life or death, "May the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us, and the work of our hands establish thou it." Amen.

A MAGDALEN ATONES.

Those who knew New York's night court in the past few years knew also Mary Bell, a little middle-aged woman who devoted her time and her slender means to helping fallen women back to the path of virtue.

Night after night she attended the night court's sessions, always with a cheery word, sometimes with an offer of a job, frequently with the contents of her purse for the victims of New York's underworld—the women caught in raids, shed and sent back to the streets.

Day after day she met the boat from Blackwell's Island, to aid and advise the girls released from the reformatory to face again the problem of life for women marked with the scarlet letter.

Little was known of Mary Bell except that she kept a rooming-house in West Thirty-fourth Street and devoted all her earnings to the succor of unfortunates.

Then came a night when a prisoner in the night court told Mary Bell of relatives in Jersey City; when the "angel of the night court" prevailed on the judge to discharge the woman, and then emptied her purse so that society's victim might go home to her kin.

With not even carfare left, Mary Bell trod the miles to her rooming-house in a drizzling rain. Next day she had a cold, but she met the Blackwell's Island boat; that night her cold was worse, but she attended night court just the same. For a week she fought both sickness and the forces that oppress; then she died.

With her death it was discovered that Mary Bell was really Mary Goode, once keeper of the most notorious resort in New York, who testified against the police in the Rosenthal case, and later made charges of vice graft that sent seven men to prison.

After these disclosures the police turned on Mary Goode the full power of their persecution. She tried to live a decent life, but wherever she went she was hounded. Landlords, informed by the police of her past, turned her into the street. Employers, told by the police of her story, discharged her from her jobs.

One day she disappeared.

She did not reappear.

"East river!" was the probable thought in the minds of her persecutors.

But the death of Mary Bell, "the angel of night court," bared the story of one Magdelen who did go her way and sin no more, and who did outwit the "system" that makes the reform of fallen women next to impossible.—Jackson (Miss.) Daily News.

CHRISTIANITY AND WAR.

By T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

No ethical questions before the American people to-day are more in need of concise and satisfactory answers than those pertaining to the relation of Christianity to war, to preparedness, and the kind of peace Christ believed in and came to establish in the earth.

Much inglorious and un-Christian peace has been preached among us and practiced in homes, in communities, in churches, in nations, and everywhere: peace purchased in the home by the sacrifice of the just authority of parents, in communities by allowing lawlessness to flaunt itself unrestrained, in churches by allowing evil to go unrebuked, and among nations by allowing the principles upon which the life and liberty of the world depend to be trampled under the foot of arrogant power.

The Peace That is no Peace.

Such peace Christ came to destroy. Such peace is, as the old prophet declared, "no peace," when he cried, "They have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace." And Christ in a similar vein affirmed: "Think not that I am come to send peace on the earth (such a peace as you think of and are familiar with, of tame submission to injustice and wrong); I am not come to send peace but a sword." Christ came to enthrone in the hearts of men the love of righteousness, justice, liberty, as dearer than life itself; as dearer than family ties, the love of even father or mother. Under every conceivable circumstance He taught that when it comes to a choice between principle and peace, principle must be adhered to, and peace, property, life itself let go. Without this spirit no individual or nation can be fundamentally Christian. They must be, indeed, however idealistic in words or Christian in profession, fundamentally materialistic; valuing physical safety and material comfort and prosperity for the individual and the nation above the principles in loyalty to which alone, at all costs, personal and national character consists.

The first great conquest of Christianity is the bringing of the individual man into such unqualified loyalty to God and the right. The second great conquest is the bringing of family groups into submission and respect for just and rightful authority. The third is the extension of this to communities; and the last and crowning conquest of Christianity thus far in history is a nation which in its principles of government is in harmony with Christian ideals. Such is America, we believe, above all other nations. She stands and has ever stood for justice, for liberty, for "the square deal" in all human relationships. So Christ inspires in individual and in national life the love of right, the hatred of wrong; and none can deny that he would encourage the eternal warfare of right against wrong. This is the meaning of that strange utterance of his: "I am come to send fire on the earth; and what will I (how earnestly do I long) that it be already kindled."

Can War be Christian?

But the vital question is: Does Christianity permit only a spiritual warfare? and does it forbid war and preparedness against war under all circumstances?

In answering this, a clear distinction must be made between the Christian teaching, first, to the individual and the Church, and, second, its teaching to the State. Also a distinction exists between Christ's teaching to the individual as an official representative of government, and his teaching to the same individual in personal and private relationships. A general failure to make these distinctions is the occasion, we believe, of the almost universal confusion of thought on this subject.

The doctrine of Christianity to the private citizen is undoubtedly that of non-resistance, of patience, of long-suffering; and men are taught of Christ to "resist not evil," to "avenge not yourselves." His words to Peter when, as a private individual, against the authority of the nation, Peter sought to resist the arrest of Jesus, "Put up again thy sword into his place; for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword" (so indiscriminately quoted of late), were a rebuke to an individual for lawless violence, thoroughly consistent with Christ's teaching everywhere to the individual, but having no reference whatever to official or governmental action. To quote such a passage against the State reveals either ignorance of the context or insincerity, neither of which is commendable. For to the State, to "Caesar," to "the powers that be as ordained of God" is clearly committed to the task of governing; and the place of the soldier bearing the sword and the officer enforcing laws is clearly recognized. So the "pistol-toter," the fighter, the bully is anything but the Christian type; but to reproach a nation (a policeman or a sheriff), and that in the name of Christ, as some high in Church and State are doing, for preparing adequately to fulfill its God-appointed function of protection and defense is to reveal lamentable confusion in Christian ideas and astounding failure to grasp the fundamental character of a State—which latter failure Christianity in no wise justifies or is party to.

Plainly the New Testament places the sword—the gun in modern parlance—as the emblem of power in the hands of the State, as "a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil." See how strong are the words! And "He beareth not the sword in vain;" no weakness or vacillation is suggested here. The Christian State, then, should be, must be, righteously powerful to fulfill its God-ordained function of governing within and protecting from destruction from without the principles upon which true government is established. When diplomatic appeal to law, reason and conscience as between nations fails, the alternative is either war or national (and ultimately world-wide) submission to the dominance of injustice and wrong. The choice of any nation which values its soul above its skin must be war under such circumstances.

It is only after the evil has been subdued and the victory won that the peace which Christ believed in and came to establish in the earth is possible of realization. Peace in righteousness and honor is alone the Christian ideal; and until such peace is attained the follower of Christ must approve himself a good soldier, allying himself always with God and the right, fighting courageously that evil may not reign, either in the lives of men or in the world of nations.

Is war then ever Christian? Yes, if for justice and right, in the name of God and humanity, against oppression and wrong. The glory of war (and there is glory in it; God pity the man who cannot see it) is the sublime enthroning of duty and principle at infinite cost above all physical and material considerations whatever. The Christian citizen then, at the call of his country, who in his private capacity would never go armed, may as a soldier, or an officer of the law, carry a gun and use it, too, with deadly effect, and with all good conscience toward God, as history reveals. An English colonel said to John Wesley: "No men fight like those who fear God. I had rather command five hundred such than any regiment in his Majesty's army." For the propagation of the Kingdom of God in the earth by the individual and the Church no force is permitted—"the weapons of our warfare are not carnal;" but in the maintenance of government it is both enjoined and is necessary. For Christianity to speak otherwise would be to show herself ill adapted to and without appreciation of the practical needs of the world. It would be to deny to right the "appeal unto Caesar," and render Caesar powerless to protect or defend. It would be to ignore the place of might in the world and in the universe.

Might the Defender of Right.

The doctrine that might makes right is, of course, utterly anti-Christian. But the modus operandi for the nation, the world, and the universe is, "Might, the Defender and Guardian of Right." Upon this basis alone, in a dualistic universe, the ideal of honorable peace is anywhere or ever possible in heaven and earth. Such an ideal is already assured ultimately by the fact that "The Lord God omnipotent reigneth." God's almightiness (an attribute now largely forgotten in our gentle talk of the kind Father) is our only assurance of the final triumph in peace of right and the righteous. Such an ideal can be approximated in a nation only as that nation is both righteous and mighty—like God. The dream and hope of our times is that it may yet be realized in a world of nations with united power insisting, through some grand tribunal, that the relations of all shall be established in wisdom, justice and brotherhood. Until then God expects every nation, as every individual, to do its duty. It seems that America is now determined to do hers.—New York Christian Advocate.

REPORT OF THE HOSPITAL COMMITTEE OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren:

The financial depression throughout this section during the year made it impossible to project a large and liberal campaign for the hospital, and our Field Secretary has therefore been greatly hampered in his work. But he has raised over $36,000 for our proposed hospital, more than $16,000 of which is in cash. All expenses, including the annual note on our property and accrued interest, have been paid and there is a balance of $1450 in the treasury.

Our Hospital Commissioners have adopted plans adequate to meet the crying need and worthy of our people's ability. Our ample site was the promise of large things. The architectural plans provide for a building of five units, affording, when complete, five hundred beds. The Board proposes, first, building the three front units, the main and central unit to be seven stories high and the east and west units, or wings, to be five stories each, thus providing in the first building three hundred beds.

The need for our Methodist Hospital is most urgent. The hospital facilities of this section do not by any means meet the demand, and the poor and dependent are especially without provision of this kind. We must prove to all men that our loved Church makes her members as tender of heart and helpful of hand as those of any denomination in the world.

We are glad to hear of the plans on foot for the campaign in the city of Memphis under the leadership of an acknowledged expert, and that there is every promise of great success. We also commend the wise and opportune determination of the Hospital Board to place other solicitors in the field as soon as suitable persons can be found.

Hospital Day.

We join the other co-operating Conferences in setting apart January 28, 1917, the fourth Sunday, as HOSPITAL DAY, and we hereby request all our presiding elders and preachers in charge to observe the day in all our churches, Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues, and that our people be urged to make large and liberal offerings to this great home missionary enterprise of our Church.

It is proposed that each of the four interested Conferences at once raise $5000 to endow a room in the Methodist Hospital, in which its own preachers can receive surgical and medical treatment and care free of charge whenever it may be needed. The Memphis, North Mississippi, and North Arkansas Conferences have already pledged themselves to do this. We must also have such a room, and we should raise the money NOW.

Our Field Secretary has been diligent and faithful and has done well in the face of many difficulties. Let us give him our earnest prayers and heartiest co-operation.

We recommend the election of J. R. Jones, J. T. Leggett, P. H. Enochs, L. N. Dantzler and W. E. Lampton as our Hospital Commissioners.

We call attention to the unanimous re-election of Rev. H. M. Ellis as Field Secretary by the Board of Commissioners of the Hospital and the request that he be reappointed to that position. We appreciate this honor conferred upon our brother, and we heartily concur in that request.

W. H. SAUNDERS, Chairman.
J. L. DECELL, Secretary.
For the Committee.

A CHRISTMAS SERMON.

My Dear Dr. Meek: On the morning of Christmas Eve our new presiding elder, Rev. V. C. Curtis, occupied the pulpit, filled it indeed, of the First Methodist Church in Greenville. His text was that most significant inquiry: "What is truth?" Never having heard him preach before, I was somewhat startled when he announced so ambitious a theme. I had never heard it used before, but had always heard of its being used when some half-baked theologian wished to air his pious skepticism. No such use was here made of it, but upon it Brother Curtis erected a logical and eloquent defense of our holy religion. His familiarity with the deductions of the skeptical scientists seemed perfect, and the ease with which he answered the questions raised by his text was refreshing and comforting. The literary form and matter of the sermon met the requirements of the most exacting standards. I am not familiar with Brother Curtis' educational advantages, though I am sure he is not a seminarist; but if he is a self-educated man, as I suspect that he is, he is a complete justification of the impeachment of modern educational methods and a most notable endorsement of the historic position of Bishop Pierce with reference to theological seminaries. Thank God for a man who believes something and who takes seriously the obligations imposed upon him, not only by his call to preach, but by the solemn vows which he voluntarily assumed before entering upon his high vocation.

On every hand I heard nothing but commendation of Brother Curtis' sermon, and I regret that I shall not have the privilege of hearing him often and of co-operating with him in his work in this great district. The severance of ties which bound me to the Greenville District and the North Mississippi Conference is very painful—it is a high fellowship and I shall carry the brethren in my heart.

It is said that the average salary paid Southern Methodist preachers in California is $764.

The two largest Annual Conferences in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are the Virginia Conference, which has within its bounds 126,935 Methodists, and the North Georgia Conference, which has 124,085.

An effort is being made to organize a so-called "New Thought Circle" in New Orleans. The city has had a visit from Dr. Julia Seton for that purpose. Likely this effort will succeed for a time. Almost any fad can secure a temporary following.

The Alabama Christian Advocate says that if one wishes to secure a seat during the preaching hours in the spacious First M. E. Church, South, of Birmingham, Ala., of which Dr. George R. Stuart is pastor, one must go some time before the services are to begin.

A press dispatch sent out a few days ago declared that Dr. F. J. Prettyman, Chaplain of the United States Senate, would be asked to serve the church in Roanoke, Va., left vacant by the assignment of Dr. U. G. Foote to the Rayne Memorial congregation of this city.

The Spartanburg (S. C.) Journal reports that Rev. John W. Frazer, who was recently transferred from the Alabama to the Upper South Carolina Conference and stationed at Central Church, Spartanburg, has begun brilliantly his pastorate in his new field. Mr. Frazer is a young minister of unusual gifts.

The Birmingham (Ala.) Preachers' Association has resolved to ask the North Alabama Annual Conference to memorialize the next General Conference to remove the time limit. City preachers have been somewhat inclined to do away with the time limit ever since Methodism was transplanted to these Western shores.

It is stated that the Arkansas Conferences at their late sessions endorsed the selection of trustees for Southern Methodist University by the Educational Commission. It will be remembered that they declined to name trustees for that institution last year; hence the action of the Commission. Good for Arkansas!

At the recent session of the Florida Conference, Rev. J. B. Mitchell and Rev. L. M. Broyles (both ex-Mississippians) were returned to First Church, Jacksonville, and Hyde Park, Tampa, respectively. Brother Broyles contributed a fine article on "Christians and the Christmas Spirit," to the Christmas number of the Florida Christian Advocate.

The Florida Christian Advocate, in referring to the work of Bishop Collins Denny at the late session of the Florida Conference, says: "Bishop Denny's presidency was eminently satisfactory. Impartial, kind and brotherly in a marked degree, he won all hearts; and should he be returned to this Conference another year, he will be cordially welcomed."

After a prolonged session, the First Congregational Church of San Francisco has formally declined to recall Dr. Charles F. Aked. The vote stood 154 for calling him, and 136 against doing so. A two-thirds vote was necessary, according to the rule of the congregation. It is stated that Dr. Aked will devote himself to the lecture platform and to supplying pulpits.

According to the official classification made last August, the register of chaplains in the regular army is as follows: Roman Catholic, 14; Protestant Episcopal, 12; Presbyterian, 7; Methodist Episcopal, 7; Baptist, 5; Congregationalist, 4; Lutheran, 3; Methodist Episcopal (South), 2; African Methodist Episcopal, 2; Colored Baptist, 2; Unitarian, Disciple, Dutch Reformed, Universalist, and United Brethren, 1 each. Total 63.

Rev. R. J. Campbell, of England, who for a number of years filled the pulpit made famous by Dr. Joseph Parker, has written a book, entitled, "A Spiritual Pilgrimage," in which he tells of "the steps through which he has passed from the strictest Protestantism, through pantheistic liberalism, on to the most radical sacramentarianism of the High Church." A contemporary, in noting this publication, expresses the fear that Mr. Campbell's "traveling days" may not yet be over.

We take the following from the Eastern Methodist (Philadelphia, Pa.): "The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago opened its fall term with 712 men and women as resident day students, and 33 instructors, 5 of whom are new members of the faculty. This does not include the evening classes. The total number enrolled for the year has been 5713—1717 in the day and evening classes and 3996 in the correspondence department. This great school is uncompromisingly loyal to the Bible as the very and eternal Word of God, and as, therefore, of supreme authority."

Bishop Candler, Dr. S. D. Long, of Martha Washington College, Rev. S. B. Vaught, and Prof. S. G. Gilbreath spent Sunday, December 10, in Knoxville, Tenn., in the interest of Emory University. They secured subscriptions amounting to more than $2300, and it is stated that others will follow. Though he has been at work only a short time, Dr. W. J. Mecoy, the Emory Commissioner for the Memphis Conference, has already raised about $1800 and collected about $300 on former subscriptions. More and more this fast growing institution seems to be taking hold of the hearts of Southern Methodists.

The most costly church edifice in the United States, by far, is the Protestant Episcopal cathedral in New York City, St. John the Divine. Into it has already gone $5,000,000, and it is affirmed that it will take between five and eight million more to complete all parts of the great structure according to the designs. The actual running expenses of the cathedral at present is about $75,000 per annum. It is said to have no permanent local congregation, its worshipers consisting mostly of transient people, who pay very inadequately toward the maintenance of the magnificent plant and the work carried on in connection with it.

UNITING METHODISTS.

An effort is being made to bring about organic union between the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Protestant Methodist Church. It would appear to many of us that this might well be accomplished. But the question is one which belongs exclusively to these excellent brethren of the three denominations named. Already the enthusiasts are urging it with more vehemence than wisdom. It is reported that Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix, of the Southern Methodist Church, at the Saratoga General Conference, used words to the effect that "for the last forty years we (the Methodists) have been wandering in the wilderness like a lot of miserable fools and miserable sinners."

Bishop Hendrix resents this interpretation being put upon his words at any time or on any occasion. The Bishops of the Southern Church, in session at Atlanta recently, took exceptions to all this kind of spirit and expression. They say:

"The men who have shaped and controlled our policies for that period have been consecrated Christians, worthy in every way of the commanding position that they have held among us, and we resent any words that tend either to belittle their ability or cast discredit upon their characters."

This is noble, and will command the respect of true Christians everywhere. The attempt to reflect on the noble men and women of the past always betrays a coward and a fanatical weakling. There was doubtless reason for these various divisions at the time they occurred, and the testimony which they gave has done good to the whole Church in correcting error and wrong, and in advancing truth and righteousness. In many such cases the desired object has been attained, and division is no longer necessary. In such cases, let the conferring brethren use all wisdom and patience, let them meet in mutual regard for the present virtues and historical integrity, and let them come together in the spirit and mind of their Lord, and let their union be one in the truth and faith of God, and it will be a blessing not only to themselves, but to the whole Church. May God bless our Methodist brethren in all these things.—The Presbyterian (Philadelphia).

BUDDHISTS PRAY FOR CHRISTIANS

Buddhists in China are praying for the people afflicted by the war in Europe. A proclamation printed on a large poster was found posted on one of the great Buddhist temples of China, "the Pagoda of the seven Towers," proclaiming seven days of fasting and prayer for the cessation of noise of arms and battle in Europe and for those who have succumbed to wounds, that they may obtain a new life by a happy transmigration in a purified and sanctified earth. "The European war," so runs the proclamation, "lasts long; many soldiers have been slain, with no hope of seeing the cessation of those feelings of hostility which are setting the nations against each other."—Northwestern Advocate.

THE DEAD LINE.

The "dead line," about which we hear so much (and its mention blanches the face or cheek of some), is no straight line. Observe a war map; see the irregular black line that indicates the disposition of the fighting troops. That line is irregular because of the inequality of opposing forces. An army pushes its line just so far as it is able to overcome opposition. When it becomes weaker than the enemy's line, then the line concaves. It is just so: As long as a preacher is able to overcome the temptations to ease up, to depend upon the past, and resort stealthily to his "barrel," just so long will he be empowered to push the line of conflict—the "dead line"—far into the enemy's country. Every man marks his own dead line. We have known some who have never reached it; they were always advancing, and died on the forward march. We have known others who reached it ere they began the fight. And the pathetic fact about many such is, they are unconscious of the limitation and are unable to account for their brief "offensive." But it operates along perfectly natural lines.—Northwestern Advocate.

The new ruler of Austria-Hungary will be known as Emperor Charles I in Austria, but as King Charles IV in Hungary.

The New York Independent says: "The new Governor of Utah, Simon Bamberger, is a Jew, and therefore in that Mormon State, a 'Gentile.'"

The interest on the British war debt during the fiscal year ending March 31 last is declared to have been 34,445,846 pounds sterling—more than $170,000,000.

Citizens of New Orleans are beginning to plan for the celebration in February, 1918, of the 200th anniversary of the founding of this city. Mayor Behrman has named a committee to lead in this undertaking.

President Woodrow Wilson attained to his 60th birthday on December 28, 1916. Mr. Roosevelt was 58 years of age on the 27th of last October, and Hon. W. J. Bryan will be 57 on March 19, 1917. Ex-Justice Charles E. Hughes will be 55 on the 11th of next April.

According to a Washington (D. C.) dispatch for the first eleven months of the year 1916 the foodstuffs shipped from the United States to Europe amounted in value to $670,000,000—more than $60,000,000 a month. This doubtless explains in part at least why the cost of living is so high in this country.

The people of Denmark have voted in favor of selling the Danish West Indian Islands—St. Croix, St. John, and St. Thomas—to the United States, the vote standing 283,694 for the sale, 157,596 against it. Before the proposed purchase can be finally consummated the Danish Parliament will have to ratify the treaty of transference. The price to be paid for these islands is $25,000,000.

The French Government has decided to confer upon General Joffre the distinction of making him Marshal of France, in recognition of his great services. This title is said to have fallen into disuse since the establishment of the third Republic. A bill in 1873, regulating the army grades, retained the rank, but specified that the conditions under which it would be conferred should be fixed by a supplementary bill, which has not up to the present been enacted.

By means of charitable funds which it had raised for that purpose, The Times-Picayune (New Orleans) distributed dolls and toys to between 12,000 and 13,000 poor white children of this city on Saturday, December 23. The presents given away on that day cost approximately $7500, this fund being about $1500 in excess of that secured for this object in any preceding year, and it took five hours to make the distribution. A similar bestowment of gifts was made to more than 10,000 poor negro children on Monday, December 25. This benefaction of this great journal, which it has kept up for many years, is certainly a beautiful and highly commendable one.

The Government has selected the following cities as locations for the 12 Farm Loan Banks that are soon to be established: Springfield, Mass.; Baltimore, Md.; Columbia, S. C.; New Orleans, La.; Houston, Texas; St. Louis, Mo.; Louisville, Ky.; St. Paul, Minn.; Omaha, Neb.; Wichita, Kan.; Spokane, Wash.; and Berkeley, Cal. The patronizing territory of the New Orleans bank will be Louisiana, Alabama, and Mississippi. The total capital stock of these 12 institutions will be $9,000,000. It is expected that the Government will have to take most of this—under the provision of the law which empowers the Secretary of the Treasury to make up the unsubscribed stock. Each borrower must subscribe for stock in the bank he obtains money to the extent of 5 per cent of his loan. The rate of interest is limited by law to 6 per cent, but it is expected that it will not be higher than 5½ per cent, with a probable later reduction.

On December 21 the Census Bureau at Washington gave out a very interesting batch of population statistics, based on careful estimates. The entire population of the continental United States was fixed at 102,017,312, while, with all of our possessions included, the figures were increased to a total of 112,444,629. It was stated that the drift of population is still toward the cities; 40.9 per cent of the country's inhabitants are now set down as living in cities of more than 8000, against 38.9 per cent in 1910. Three States have decreased in population since 1910—Kansas, South Dakota and Wyoming. Florida has had within the last six years the largest percentage of increase of any State in the Union—22.5. The six largest cities in the nation were credited with populations as follows: New York, 5,602,841; Chicago, 2,499,722; Philadelphia, 1,702,518; St. Louis, 757,302; Boston, 756,476; Cleveland, 674,073. Southern cities: New Orleans, 371,747; Louisville, 238,910; Atlanta, 190,558; Birmingham, 181,762; Richmond, 156,687; Memphis, 149,995; Nashville, 117,057. These estimates have not taken into consideration local conditions that may have arisen since 1910 of a character that might affect the growth of population; they are based entirely upon the percentage of increase shown during the prior decade.

THE JOINT COMMISSION IN SESSION.

We take the following concerning the meeting of the Joint Commission on the Unification of American Methodism, which assembled in Baltimore, Md., on Thursday, December 28, from the Baltimore Sun of December 29—the sessions of this body are executive and no definite information as to what it has or has not accomplished is available at this writing:

"Effective work on the plan of corporate union of the two Episcopal Methodist Churches will begin at 10 o'clock this morning at the First Methodist Episcopal Church when the two commissions on union meet for formal organization into a Joint Commission.

"All the sessions will be executive and secret, even representatives of Church papers—except the editors among the commissioners—probably being excluded. The Conference is expected to continue into next week, and on its decisions and its unanimity will depend to the greatest extent the ultimate success or failure of the movement for union.

Task a Difficult One.

"Though almost any one of the 50 Commissioners will unhesitatingly state unofficially that the union of the two bodies is ardently to be desired, if it were possible to unite with complete unanimity of spirit, none will tell his opinion of the definite prospects. Bishops Earl Cranston, of the Northern Church, and Edwin D. Mouzon, of the Southern Church, have been foremost among advocates of union and consider the continued disunion almost an iniquity, according to the tenor of their speeches made in Baltimore and elsewhere. But even they hesitate to prophesy, when they consider the triple referendum facing any action, no matter how unanimous, of the Joint Commission.

"After the Joint Commission finishes its work, the outcome of which is by no means certain, the two General Conferences, the hundreds of Annual Conferences and possibly the thousands of individual congregations will have each to vote on the proposition before it becomes officially the will of the two denominations.

Joint Meeting Held.

"The two Commissions met together at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in the chapel of First Church and adopted resolutions introduced by the Rev. Dr. John F. Goucher to meet separately in the afternoon and evening and reconvene for joint organization this morning. A short prayer service followed, and at 11 o'clock a public service of worship was held in the church. Bishop W. F. McDowell opened with prayer, Bishop Warren A. Candler preached the sermon, and Bishop Cranston led the communion service. Bishop Candler's sermon was strictly "spiritual" and did not touch on the problems to be threshed out in the Conference.

"In the afternoon a session was held by the Southern Commission at the Hotel Rennert, with Bishop Candler presiding and the Rev. Dr. Frank M. Thomas, of Louisville, Ky., as secretary. The Northern Commission met at Goucher College, with Bishop Cranston presiding, and A. W. Harris, of New York, as secretary.

"The Northern Commission was entertained at dinner at Goucher College by Dr. Goucher after the afternoon session, and held a consultation in the evening. The committees on organization and procedure, composed of five men from each Commission, met at night at the Hotel Rennert to arrange the program for to-day. They include Bishop Collins Denny, the Rev. Dr. W. J. Young, of Atlanta, Ga., the Rev. Dr. A. J. Lamar, of Nashville, Percy D. Maddin, of Nashville, and Judge M. L. Walton, of Woodstock, Va., from the Southern Commission; and Bishop McDowell, the Rev. Dr. D. G. Downey, of New York, the Rev. Dr. Edgar Blake, of Chicago, Judge H. W. Rodgers, of New Haven, Conn., and Alexander Simpson, of Philadelphia, Pa., of the Northern Commission.

"Aside from the religious aspects, it was observed that Charles Warren Fairbanks, former Vice-President and on the Northern Commission, drank buttermilk at his luncheon with Bishop E. E. Hoss, of the Southern Commission, in the Rennert grill room."

A THRILLING LECTURE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I should like to call attention to the fact that Brother J. A. Stockwell, our missionary to Africa, is at home and expects to visit a number of our congregations during the next few weeks. He gave his lecture in my church last night and about 800 people were present, the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church uniting with us in the service. Brother Stockwell comes from the very heart of Africa, and has had a thrilling experience, which he tells in a simple, direct and fascinating way. The lecture is profusely illustrated with lantern slides made from pictures that he himself took. The lecture made a profound impression, and I should like our people all over Louisiana to hear it; and especially the Epworth Leaguers should see and hear this consecrated man. Brother Stockwell's address is Lake Charles, La., and if any League or congregation would like to have his stereopticon lecture, it would be well to write him at once. He has some open dates in January.

The Great Battle

VOTES.

A contemporary well says: "The great age of many newspapers is a chronicle of great tragedies—loathsome pestilence also of unmeaning bestiality.

The first "dry" month in Virginia where prohibition recently went into effect saved the state in the maintenance of prisoners $20,000. The total of commitments for violations of the law were reduced nearly one-half.

Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular said in effect: "The smashing power of the prohibition movement more than anything else is the new attitude of the public press." One manifestation of this spirit is shown in the fact that there are 450 daily papers and 70 magazines which will not carry liquor advertisements.

Four important prohibition measures are now before Congress: (1) A bill to suppress the sale of liquors in the District of Columbia; (2) a bill in the interest of prohibition in Hawaii; (3) the resolution to submit to the States an amendment to the Federal Constitution forbidding the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors; (4) a bill to exclude liquor advertisements from the United States mails. Why not write your Senators and Congressmen in the interest of these measures?

The following are the prohibition States: Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Arizona, Colorado, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Iowa, Michigan, and Maine. Besides these, Utah and Florida are understood to have elected Legislatures committed to prohibition. If Florida, as is expected, joins the "dry" column, only two "wet" States will be left in the entire South—Louisiana and Texas. Alaska has also voted largely for prohibition.

NO NEED FOR IT.

The following is worth passing on: W. R. Huston, editor of the Chetopa (Kansas) Advance, received a whiskey circular urging him to buy a full quarts for Thanksgiving and get a pocket-book as a premium. Huston wrote back that the fellows who invested in booze wouldn't have any use for a pocket-book.

A SIGNIFICANT RULING.

An important ruling by the Romish Archbishop of Chicago has just been made. Every priest he ordains must pledge himself to total abstinence for five years. Archbishop Mundelein says: "If the young priests keep the total abstinence pledge for five years, it is easy to see they are likely to continue the practice for the rest of their lives."—N. W. Christian Advocate.

TRY IT AND SEE.

Bishop W. F. McDowell

In that thrilling story, "The Man Who Forgot," Senator Mallon, with his political eyes opened at last, said to the temperance agitator, "Politics is politics. The great trouble about whiskey is that there isn't anything you can say in favor of it in a stump speech." Certainly, not. There is nothing you can say in favor of it anywhere. You cannot say anything in favor of it to your sons and girls. You cannot say anything in favor of it in your church or Sunday school. You cannot say anything in favor of it in your lodge or club. You cannot say anything in favor of it in your shop or store. You cannot say anything in favor of it in your school or in your party. You cannot say anything in favor of it in our bank or in your town. Try it once and see. You may think you can say a lot of things against prohibition, and you may deceive yourself with the idea that saying things against prohibition is equivalent to saying things in favor of whiskey. The Senator was entirely right. There is nothing you can say in favor of whiskey in a stump speech or anywhere else. And that ought to end it.

FIFTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Bradley, who now reside at 1413 Jefferson Avenue, Jackson, Miss., celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage in December 27, 1916. The former was born in January 2, 1842, and the latter in August 16, 1842. They were married in Pilot Grove Wesleyan Chapel, Barnsley, Yorkshire, England, on December 27, 1866. Brother Bradley is a member of the Mississippi Annual Conference, having been a member of that body for forty-four years, and being now on its "Honor Roll" of superannuates. He has behind him a highly creditable record and enjoys the confidence and esteem of all who know him. Mrs. Bradley has been to him a helpmeet, indeed, and has adorned the difficult position of a Methodist itinerant's wife. From their home have gone forth two useful and promising young ministers, members of the North Mississippi Conference, both of whom graduated at Millsaps College and took a theological course at Vanderbilt—Rev. C. V. Bradley, of Tupelo, and Rev. T. M. Bradley, of Cleveland, Miss. We wish this worthy couple, who have walked hand in hand for half a century, many more recurrences of their wedding anniversary, and pray that their paths may grow increasingly brighter unto the perfect day. There is much inspiration in such lives.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Bradley.

"I DID NOT RAISE MY BOY TO BE A SOLDIER."

By Dr. James T. Hughes.

Edwin Markham wrote a poem for a meeting of "The International Conference of Women Workers," in which these lines occur:

"O mothers, will you longer give your sons
To feed the awful hunger of the guns?
What is the worth of all these battle drums
If from the field the loved one never comes?
What all these loud hosannas to the brave
If all your share is some forgotten grave?"

The Truly Unselfish Mother's Answer.

God gave my son in trust to me
Christ died for him, and he should be
A man for Christ. He is his own.
And God's and man's, not mine alone.
He was not mine to "give." He gave Himself that he might help to save
All that a Christian should revere.
All that enlightened men hold dear
"To feed the guns!" Oh, torpid soul!
Arise and see life as a whole.
When freedom, honor, justice, right,
Were threatened by the despot's might,
With heart aflame and soul alight,
He bravely went for God to fight
Against base savages whose pride
The laws of God and man defied,
Who slew the mother and her child,
Who maidens pure and sweet defiled.
He did not go "to feed the guns."

He went to save from ruthless guns
His home and country, and to be
A guardian of democracy.

"What if he does not come?" you say
Oh, tell! My son would be more gay
For knowing he died nobly, than
And that memories be mine.
God's test of manhood is, "... know
For 'will he come?' or 'did he go?'"
My son will know that he might die,
And yet he went, with purpose high,
To fight for peace, and overthrow
The plans of Christ's relentless foe.
He dreamed on the battlefield
He went to make these nations yield.
If he comes not again to me
I shall be sad; but not that he Went like a man—a hero true—
His part unselfishly to do.
My heart will feel exultant pride
That for humanity he died.

Forgotten grave." This selfish plea
Awakes no deep response in me.
For though its grave I may not see,
My boy will never forgotten be.
My dear son will never be
His or his body that may lie
In foreign land, and I shall keep Remembrance long, forever deep
Within my heart, of my true son,
Because it triumphs that he won.
It matters not where any one
May lie and sleep, when work is done.

It matters not where some men live,
If my dear son as life must give.
Hosannas I will sing for him.
Even though my eyes with tears be dim.
And when the war is over, when
His gallant comrades come again,
I'll cheer them as they're marching by,
Rejoicing that they did not die.
And when his vacant place I see,
My heart will bound with joy that he
Was mine so long—my fair young son—
And cheer for him whose work is done.

Greater significance is given to these lines by Dr. Hughes by the fact that his own son was killed in action some time ago and now lies buried in France.—Christian Guardian, Toronto, Canada.

It has been suggested that a memorial church be erected in Baltimore in honor of the late Bishop A. W. Wilson. This would be a fitting monument to this noble son of Southern Methodism, who grew to such majestic proportions and who wrought so effectively for the upbuilding of the Master's Kingdom.

GRANDMOTHER'S MAXIM

Eleanor W. F. Bates.

I never could tell what my grandmother meant,
Though she has the wisest of brains;
"I have noticed," she said, "In the course of my life
That lazy folks take the most pains."

I hated to mend that short rip in the skirt
Of my dress, where the pocket-hole strains,
And grandmother saw it, and laughed as she said,
"Yes, lazy folks take the most pains."

And that same little rip, when I went out to ride,
Was caught in my bicycle chain;
Oh, then I remembered what grandmother said,
"That lazy folks take the most pains."

For instead of an inch I must sew up a yard,
And it's just as her maxim explains;
I shall always believe what my grandmother said,
"That lazy folks take the most pains."

A PENNY AND A PRAYER.

"Was that your penny on the table, Mary?" asked her mother, as the children came in from Sabbath school. "I was afraid you had forgotten to take it."

"Oh, no, mother; mine went into the box."

"I am glad it did, but did you drop anything with it?" asked her mother.

"No," said Mary. "I had nothing else to put in."

"Do you know what becomes of your penny?"

"No, mother."

"Do you care to know?"

"Oh, yes, indeed I do! I wish it to do good somewhere."

"Well, then, after this, every Sabbath when you drop in your penny, drop in a prayer, too, that your penny may do good work for God. If every penny carried a prayer with it, would not the money do a wonderful work? And would you not enjoy taking your pennies even more than you do now?"—Olive Plants.

TWO CHICKENS.

Lillian M. Wire.

Mamma gave to each of the girls a hen, a pretty white one. "If you care for the chickens, you may have them to sell, and you may do just what you like with the money. I will not take any charge of it."

How pleased the girls were! They gathered the eggs very carefully, and when the tiny chickens were found one day, the children were delighted.

Very regularly were the little creatures fed and watered by the two sisters.

When at last the chickens were ready for sale, each child had two dollars. Cenie purchased some embroidery silk and a towel. Upon the latter she embroidered the word, "Mother," in blue.

It was nearly time for mamma's birthday. Myrtie purchased a bracelet for herself—a cheap piece of jewelry—and a box of bon-bons.

On the night of the school contest she lost her bracelet. She wept bitterly and could not be consoled.

"I shall keep it very carefully to remind me of my little daughter's love."

"Next year I'll get you something, too, dear mamma," Myrtle said.

"If we live, girlie," mamma added gravely.

"Not mighty deeds make up the sum
Of happiness below;
But little acts of kindness
That any child may show."

A SINGLE SOUL.

"Ruth, I have tickets for the concert of the Bell Ringers on Wednesday night. Can you go?" Alice said to a friend, as she stopped at her gate.

"It is prayer-meeting night."

"I know; but they sail for Europe on Friday night, and it is their last concert."

"But I never stay away from prayer meeting for anything."

"But this is a sacred concert—and only once. We can worship just as well there."

So, reluctantly, against her convictions, Ruth consented.

That night the girl dreamed that an angel in shining raiment stood beside her and asked her gently, "Where are you going to-morrow night?"

And she answered, "I thought I would go to the concert."

Then the angel said sadly, "Have you so little appreciation of the value of a single soul?"

Vividly the vision came back to Ruth the next morning, as she lay saying softly to herself, wondering what it could mean—"So little appreciation of the value of a single soul."

She decided that she must take back her promise to attend the concert and go to the prayer meeting.

Ruth sat in the house of prayer with a strange joy in her soul, singing:

"Plenteous grace with Thee is found.
Grace to cover all my sins;
Let the healing streams abound—
Make and keep me pure within.
Thou of life the fountain art;
Freely let me take of Thee;
Spring thou up within my heart,
Rise to all eternity."

As the music ceased, the girl sprang impulsively to her feet. "I meant to hear the Bell Ringers tonight," she said, "but I decided I would rather come to the prayer meeting, and I am happier here than I should have been at the concert, and I am sure no music could be sweeter to me than the hymn we have just sung."

As the hour of closing drew near, the pastor arose and invited any who would give themselves to Christ to come forward.

As he waited in silence, a lady in mourning walked slowly up the aisle, and, kneeling, was shown the way of salvation.

When service was ended, a friend came to Ruth and said, "The lady who went forward wishes to be introduced to you."

Much astonished, the girl went to receive the introduction to Mrs. Walters.

"I wanted to tell you," the lady said, that I owe the fact of my being a Christian to-night to your testimony. I have not been inside of a church for ten years. I came to please a friend, and when you said you would give up a concert for a prayer meeting, and that no music could be sweeter to you than the hymn, 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul,' I thought to myself, 'There must be something in religion; and I am going to have it.' So I wish to thank you, for it is because of your testimony that I shall go home to-night a servant of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Ruth held out her hand and pressed gratefully that of her new friend. She knew now the meaning of the angel's message.

She could not tell Mrs. Walters how nearly she had come to proving recreant to her trust, nor of the dream which had influenced her in the true direction, so she answered simply, "I thank you for telling me this. I shall never forget it."

Yet she little guessed what cause she would always have to remember it. Ruth's home was close beside the railroad track. About midnight she was awakened by a horrible, crashing sound.

Looking from the window, she could see where the midnight express and the 11:30 freight had collided. The frantic cries of the frightened, and the piercing shrieks of the wounded made her shudder. But she bravely put away all thought of self, and, calling her father, was soon ready to go with him to the rescue.

And the first face which looked into hers as she stood beside the burning train was that of Mrs. Walters. Pale and peaceful it was, though showing how intensely she suffered. She was extricated and borne to Ruth's home. The power of speech was almost gone. She rallied a little as they laid her on Ruth's couch. Taking her hand and pressing it to her lips, she whispered feebly, "Child, I'm going—it was my last chance—what if you had not spoken—what if I had not taken Jesus?"

And, kneeling there beside the dead, the tears raining down her face, Ruth promised her Father always to give her testimony; always to appreciate the value of a single soul.—Western Christian Advocate.

"A little boy only six years old was boasting that he worked in a blacksmith shop. 'What do you do there?' he was asked. 'Do you shoe horses?' 'No, sir,' he answered promptly. 'I shoo flies.'"—Our Dumb Animals.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The great North Mississippi Annual Conference—
A company of men cultured and clean—
Assembled in the hospitable town of Winona,
In the year of our Lord, November, 1916.

In the chair was our own Bishop W. B. Murrah,
Now a resident of Memphis, Tennessee—
An honored churchman, a scholar thorough,
And a president pleasing as one need be.

This body, composed of ministers and laymen—
Men of ability, character, tried and true—
Whose unselfish service where they had been
Was approved of God and uplifting to the pew.

From districts, stations, circuits, and missions,
Each field requiring continuous hard toils,
With cheering reports of revivals and decisions,
They were happy in possessing the spoils.

"Unification," a question of Church-wide concern,
Provoked sensational debate, a friendly fight—
Opponents awaited other minds to learn—
When revealed, the decision was proper and right.

On this question the Advocate took a decided stand,
And for the safety of Southern Methodism has stood;
Though often struck by the enemy's uplifted hand,
Has the admiration and praise of the Brotherhood.

Business was dispatched with great care and ease
By various boards and leaders, wise and fair.
With what was done the Church is well pleased,
And "there'll be shouting, shouting in the air."

Reports all made and the business completed,
For the new appointments, the hour had come.
With breathless silence, each member was seated
And heard the announcement of his future home.

Winona entertained to the satisfaction of all,
Universally proclaimed by her distinguished guests;
And this writer must say to great and small,
There was none that excelled his, at R. C. West's.

His unbounded love and esteem shall still abide
For these godly men of much spiritual power;
Do not forget him, laboring by the river's side,
For the royal people of beautiful Sunflower.

Sunflower, Miss. L. WESLEY CAINE.

Editorial

THE QUESTION OF MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

We have spoken so many times in these columns concerning the importance of providing adequately for the support of our pastors that we will not at present discuss the question again at any considerable length. In view of the fact, however, that our presiding elders are now on their first rounds and that most of the assessments for this purpose in Louisiana and Mississippi will he made within the next few weeks, we feel moved to say that we trust that the stewards everywhere will see that the best that is possihle is done for their preachers. As they know, the cost of living is now very high, and it is always unfortunate for a pastor to be annoyed by financial worries. Ministers need new books and first-class periodicals in order that they may prepare to do their pulpit work well, and not a few of them have children to educate. Such matters should always be taken into consideration.

Nor is it enough merely to make an assessment that is ample. Some system should be devised for distributing it properly and collecting it promptly and regularly. It is a great hardship to require a preacher to wait until the end of the year for half his salary. We are inclined to think that perhaps monthly payments are the best for stations and quarterly payments for circuits. But whatever plan may be adopted, it should be faithfully operated. No scheme will execute itself. The steward is a very important functionary in our Church, and a good one could hardly he too much commended. Methodism owes a vast debt to these officials who make it possihle for her ministers to do their work, unhampered by entangling material responsibilities.

WHY SHOULD THEY BE NEGLECTED?

The editorial entitled "A Magdalen Atones," which we are reproducing in this number of the Advocate from a recent issue of the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News, is quite pathetic and suggestive. It shows how difficult it is for a young woman who has strayed from the path of virtue to regain and keep it, hounded as she is almost certain to he hy a sneering world, and often too, we regret to say, entirely distrusted by professed Christians, who ought to lend her a helping hand. Yet it seems that the woman referred to did triumph over the obstacles thrown in her way, not only living a decent life, but also performing a noble service to other erring sisters.

Are the Christian Churches making anything like the efforts that they should to reclaim this unfortunate class of transgressors? We fear that they are not. The fact that many such women, some of them when comparatively young, find their situations so intolerable that they seek to escape from them hy committing suicide, indicates to us that a goodly number of them might perhaps be saved if intelligent Christian work were directed to that end. And why should not the door of hope be kept open to them? Are they sinners above all other evil-doers? Have not they immortal souls? Did not Jesus die for them, as well as for others? Are they barred from being cleansed and empowered to keep clean by the power of the Holy Spirit? There is no such teaching in the glorious Gospel of the Son of God.

What excuse shall we he able to give when we stand before our Lord in the judgment, if we do not do our best to rescue these outcast ones from the awful depths of degradation into which they have fallen? This needed work should not be left to a weak organization like the Salvation Army. The great, strong Christian denominations should give attention to it. We ought to have in the city of New Orleans a well-equipped Protestant institution established for the purpose of helping such women to forsake their shame and earn a livelihood respectably. Would that some noble-hearted philanthropist would give the money necessary to make such an institution possible!

ENCOURAGING.

In discussing editorially the proceedings of the late session of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, which was held in St. Louis, The Presbyterian (Philadelphia), among other things, says:

"In our times there has been a growing passion in Church and State for surveying and dictating rather than for doing, and commissions are the order of the day everywhere. The Federal Council, being young, fell into this modern mistake, and commissions have been greatly multiplied. Each commission had its secretary, and each secretary his salary and his report. It was this multiplicity of reports, no douht, that caused the Council to discontinue the commissions on Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Family Life, and Sabbath Observance. These are already abundantly provided for in other interdenominational arrangements. The Council appointed committees on these subjects which will communicate with these other interdenominational hodies. The commissions on Federated Movements and on State and Local Federations were united under the name of the Commission on Federated Movements. This reduction of machinery is a good token of the practical spirit of the St. Louis meeting, for such was the number of commissions appointed since the prior meeting that thoughtful people wondered whereunto this thing would grow.

"The most important office of the Church is the pastor, and the greatest working point is the local church. It is in this field and with this man that the heads and hearts of the people get closest together, and the most essential work is done. The multiplicity of conferences, and conventions, and commissions has cast some reflections, and brought some embarrassment on the pastorate. There has been a tendency to multiply meetings, but there is now a reaction and a tendency to emphasize the pastorate and to magnify works rather than words. Moreover, the commissions lean toward bureaucracy, while the pastorate is democratic."

We desire to commend particularly the latter paragraph of this utterance. We have for some time noted the tendency mentioned by our distinguished contemporary and have regarded it as unwise and regrettable. We do not believe that the work of the Church in any charge can be placed and kept upon a satisfactory basis except as this is done under the leadership of the pastor. Whenever he is set aside and outside agents or agencies begin to direct, harm must, in our opinion, inevitably result in the long run. Some room should be left for the man on the ground to study the situation at first-hand, and in a goodly degree exercised a local initiative. A stereotyped program of operation wrought out in the office of some bureau hundreds of miles away and sought to be put into practice everywhere without a due regard for the varying conditions in widely separated pastorates, surely cannot be expected to yield the best possible results. If a war were to be fought, the War Department at Washington would think for one moment of trying to tell commanders in the field exactly how to wage their battles, or of having them all to fight in the same way at the same time.

When we have efficient pastors we may hope to have efficient churches, but not until then. They are what we need to train and develop. No board or commission or agent can do their work. The touch of such forces is from too great a distance and too intermittent. A supervisional officialism, with all its flutter about efficiency, must prove ineffective at last. The pastor is, as he has ever been, the man of the hour. Let us then place the responsibility for the success of the work in his field upon him and leave him largely free to proceed about it in the way that he may consider the most advantageous. Some one has said that as a Church decreases in spirituality it is apt to increase the amount of its formal machinery.

CALLED HOME.

We received Tuesday night of last week, after our paper had gone to press, a telegram from Rev. W. D. Wendel, our pastor at Sardis, Miss., informing us of the death of Sister Holder, the wife of Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Sardis District. In a subsequent letter Brother Wendel wrote us as follows: "Sister Holder had been a great sufferer for two years. She made a brave fight against the disease that had laid hold upon her. She died a triumphant Christian death about 5 o'clock p.m. on Tuesday, December 22, 1916. We buried her in Sardis from the Methodist Church. The pastor was assisted in the funeral service hy the following preachers of the Sardis District: Rev. E. Johnson, Rev. R. P. Nehlett, Rev. H. G. Roberts, Rev. W. H. Mounger, and Rev. R. H. B. Gladney. Brothers Brooks and Rogers were also present. It was a disagreeable, rainy day, but a large crowd gathered to show their respect and love for this faithful wife and mother who had been called to her reward. Our hearts go out in the deepest sympathy to our beloved presiding elder and his dear children."

It is with sincere sorrow that we chronicle this sad event. As will be remembered, Sister Holder, after undergoing treatment at a hospital in Memphis, spent nearly the whole of last year in the mountains of North Carolina endeavoring to regain her health. Only a short time ago she returned home, as we had thought, much improved; but alas! the finite mind cannot tell what the future has in store for any human being. So, she has responded to the Master's summons and passed into "the City which hath foundations." We pray that the gracious Heavenly Father may have Brother Holder and the other stricken ones in his tender keeping in this trying hour. We trust that some one will send the Advocate a fitting memoir of the deceased.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, La., spent Monday of this week in New Orleans. He represented the work as progressing well in his charge. An effort is being made to raise $50,000 for a Y. M. C. A. building in Baton Rouge.

Writing from Pleasant Hill, Miss., on December 28, Rev. W. W. Bruner says: "I have reached my new home and like the people very much. I hope to do a good work for the Master here." We wish Brother Bruner much success in his new field.

Rev. O. P. Armour is finding things pleasant on the Wall Hill (Miss.) charge, his people being kind and thoughtful of his needs. Marshall is Brother Armour's native county and among his present parishioners are many friends of former days.

Rev. C. C. Wier has been well received by the Algiers Church of this city, and has taken hold of his work with characteristic energy. He has the new church enterprise on his heart already, and we predict that it will be carried forward to completion under his capable leadership during the year 1917.

Old Felicity Church, this city, and Rev. R. M. Brown, its new pastor, are reported to be mutually pleased. The work has started well, and this historic congregation has the promise of a prosperous year.

On December 28, 1916, in Brookhaven, Miss., Dr. James Marion Cunningham, of Rayne, La., and Miss Janie Mounger, of Brookhaven, were united in marriage, Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., officiating. The Advocate extends congratulations.

Under date of December 29, Rev. L. E. Alford, of Shubuta, Miss., writes as follows: "I reached my new appointment yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The first impressions of the charge are exceedingly pleasant for me. We hope for a good year."

It is with sorrow that we learn that Sister Ellis, the wife of Rev. G. R. Ellis of Seminary, Miss., has lately been ill, and that Brother Ellis had to leave the seat of the Mississippi Conference before its adjournment on this account. We hope that ere this the strieken one is again quite herself physically.

The following interesting announcement has reached us: "Rev. and Mrs. John M. Bradley announce the marriage of their daughter, Ina Bell, to Mr. Rollin DeWitt Fitts, on Tuesday, December 26, 1916—Aberdeen, Miss." We congratulate the happy bride and groom and wish for them terough the coming years life's choieest blessings.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, of the Mississippi Conference, writes: "I wish that you would call the attention of the brethren to my post-office address. We shall continue to reside at Monticello, Miss., where I have been the pastor for the last four years. Any pastors desiring my help in meetings to be held soon may communicate with me here by letter or 'phone."

A Watch Night service, participated in by Northern and Southern Methodists, was held at the First M. E. Church, South, of New Orleans last Sunday evening. Dr. S. H. Werlein was the master of ceremonies, and addresses were delivered by Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Bishop Wilbur P. Thirkield, D.D. A good audience was in attendance.

We acknowledge the reception of a neat folder, entitled "A New Year's Greeting and Message," which is a copy of a communication sent to the members of his congregation by Rev. W. L. Duren, the pastor of our First Church at Columbus, Miss. Brother Duren is entering hopefully upon his fourth year in this charge, which has long been regarded as the leading appointment of the North Mississippi Conference.

A marriage of unusual interest to a wide circle of friends was that of Miss Minnie Beatrice Vest, of Lake Cormorant, Miss., to Mr. Murray Bennett Champion, of Canton, Miss., which took place on December 25, 1916, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vest, Rev. J. A. Biffle officiating. That the lives thus united may be crowned with a large measure of usefulness and happiness, is our earnest wish.

Writing from Greenwood, La., under date of December 29, Rev. A. S. Lutz, the presiding elder of the Monroe District, says: "I have been enjoying the Christmas holidays visiting relatives and friends. The outlook in the Monroe District is very promising. All the pastors seem to be taking hold with a new grip to push the work to greater success than ever before. Two news works have been formed by taking in unoccupied territory."

Brother J. J. Garner, of Kilmichael, Miss., calls our attention to an error in his communication appearing on page 15 of the Advocate last week, in referring to the presentation of gifts to Brother and Sister A. J. Wilson, the clause, "After he had made a short talk," was used in a way that was misleading. It should have been, "After a short talk by the pastor." Brother Garner's name was also improperly written "Gainer." We regret that these mistakes were made.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute at Jackson, Tenn., of which Rev. H. G. Hawkins, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, is President, has this session considerably over 100 boarding students. Jackson is a splendid little city of 20,000 inhabitants, with a mineral artesian well with a fine flow of water, some of the finest churches in the South, and numerous other advantages. We are pleased to learn of Brother Hawkins' success in his present work.

The Advocate has no better friend than Rev. J. D. Ellis, of Woodville, Miss., who every year greets the Publisher at Conference with a large list of subscriptions. It is needless to say that this excellent service to our paper is much appreciated. The fact is, Brother Ellis has a habit of taking care of all the interests of the Church in his charge, as his record will show; and when it comes to expounding the doctrines of Methodism he does it with an effectiveness that few can equal.

Remember that Sunday, January 28, 1917, will be "Hospital Day" in the two Mississippi Conferences. To make a sueeess of tho oceasion, preparation for it should be commenced now. Get up a stirring sermon, brother pastor, and lay the claims of 'The Methodist Hospital" appealingly on the hearts of your people. Every Sunday school also should be certain to take an offering for this commendable enterprise. There is urgent need that this institution should open at the earliest day possible.

A speeial campaign for the Methodist Hospital in the city of Memphis is being arranged by Rev. H. M. Ellis, the Field Secretary of that institution, assisted by experts in that line of work. It will begin this month with a dinner at the Hotel Chisca and will continue ten days. Some of the most prominent business men in Memphis will take an active part in seeuring funds, and it is expected that the showing made will be highly gratifying. The Executive Committee of the Hospital Trustees held a meeting in the interest of this movement in Memphis on Deeember 22.

Rev. Olin Ray, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Tunica, Miss., and Miss Sarah Louise Graham, of Prairie Grove, Ark., were united in marriage at the latter place on December 25, 1916. Mr. Ray was graduated from Millsaps College with the A. B. degree in 1913, and studied theology at Emory University, where he was awarded the B. D. degree in 1916. He is a young minister of much promise. The bride is quite an accomplished young lady and has a wide circle of friends. The Advocate extends to this choice young couple feilcitations and all good wishes.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate appears a statement from Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the Ruston District, concerning the illness and retirement from his work of Rev. T. H. Morris, our pastor at Arcadia, La. We greatly regret to learn of the failure of Brother Morris' health and the necessity of his giving up his pastorate; and we sincerely hope that with rest and proper treatment his condition will soon be much improved. The statement of Dr. Henry that he is, in his present condition, without means should meet with a prompt and generous response from the brethren.

Rev. D. Scarbrough, of Phoenix, Arizona, renews his subscription for two years and sends us the following message: "The weekly visits of the New Orleans Advocate to our home are looked forward to with great pleasure. We could not get along very well without it. I have just read the appointments made at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, and have noticed with keen interest the various changes that were made. Everything that happens in my home Conference is of special interest to me. I am glad to say that we are getting along nicely in the West. The late session of the Los Angeles Conference was decidedly the best held since I became connected with it four years ago. Our work in Arizona was never in a more prosperous condition than it is now. The outlook for a very successful year all over my district is most encouraging."

REV. T. H. MORRIS ILL.

Dear Brother Meek: Brother T. H. Morris, of Arcadia, has been obliged to retire from his work because of the failure of his health. It is with regret that we give him up. He left Arcadia today for Shreveport to be with one of his daughters a few days before going to Chicago to seek treatment and be with another daughter. It is hoped that the treatment, rest, and careful nursing will restore him. The neeessity of retiring from his charge leaves him without any support for the year. The fidelity of this servant of God and the Church, and his patient and successful work places the Church under obligations to him in this hour of his affliction. Any help may be sent through the Advocate or this presiding elder.

Yours sincerely,

J. M. HENRY.

UNIFICATION COMMISSION ADJOURNS.

Just as we are closing our forms, we take from the New Orleans Daily States (Tuesday afternoon) the following press dispatch:

"Baltimore, Jan 2.—After adopting a resolution that leaves open the door for future negotiations and sets June 27 as the date for the next meeting, the Joint Commission on Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, adjourned to-day. It is understood the disposition of the Negro Methodists was the one problem for which no solution was found. Bishop Earl Cranston of the Northern body was named chairman of a committee appointed to deal with this question and report at the next meeting."

"LOUISIANA."

By Margaret Hunt Brisbane.

(This poem was read at the opening exercises of the National Farm and Live Stock Show in New Orleans last November.)

Oh! This is the State of the orange and pine,
The creamy magnolia, the lemon and vine,
The sweet-scented jasmine, the wild blooming rose,
The State where the green, rustling sugar cane grows.
Her rivers of silver, her birds on the wing,
Her climate the breath of perpetual spring,
Her "forest primeval" that poets have sung,
Oaks, centuries old, with the gray mosses hung,
Her deep flowing rivers a rich harvest yield,
And game birds call out from each waving rice field.
The mocking-bird sings in this pride of the South,
The ocean breeze kisses her tropical mouth,
Her heart is athrob and aglow is her soul—
Louisiana, the first and the fairest Creole!
Louisiana, Moon's sister, and bride of the Sun,
We crown thee with luster, thou beautiful one!
Thy men are pure gold, and thy women so fair
They tangle like pearls, in thy dark shining hair.
The gulf and the river thy sandals have kissed,
Thine eyes are ashine through an opaline mist!
Gayarre still lives in the temple he made
And Audubon's spirit still walks o'er the glade.
Thy poets and artists—all lovers—kneel down
To weave, for thy beauty, a wonderful crown.
The blue of the sky and the green of the sea
Are melted, together, in passion for thee,
Exquisite in part and perfection in whole,
Louisiana, the first and the fairest Creole!

JUST THREE THINGS.

"I once met a scholar," says Bishop Whipple, "who told me that for years he had read every book that he could which assailed the religion of Jesus Christ; and he said he would have become an infidel but for three things.

"First, I am a man. I am going somewhere. To-night I am a day nearer the grave than I was last night. I have read all such books can tell me. They shed not one solitary ray upon tho darkness. They shall not take away the only guide and leave me stone-blind.

"Second, I had a mother. I saw her go down the dark valley where I am going, and she leaned upon an unseen arm as calmly as a child goes to sleep on the breast of its mother. I know that this was not a dream.

"Third, I have three motherless daughters (and he said it with tears in his eyes); they have no protector but myself. I would rather kill them than to leave them in this sinful world if you blot out from it all the teachings of the gospel."—Christian Commonwealth.

MEMPHIS CONFERENCE FEMALE INSTITUTE, Jackson, Tenn.

TO OUR FRIENDS.

Except to superannuated preachers and the widows of preachers, the price of the Advocate to all persons (including ministers) is $1.50. There are no longer any club rates. It was with sincere regret that we adopted this new policy; but the high price of paper and other printing materials forced us to do so. Practically all other religious journals in the country have taken similar steps. We appeal to our hard-worked, faithful pastors to stand by us in these unusual times, and we believe that they will. Get all the renewals and new subscriptions that you can, brethren, at $1.50; and if any brother declines to take the paper at that price, see if you cannot induce him to have it come to him eight months for $1. We do not desire to strike off a single name from our subscription files that we can possibly retain; but, under the existing conditions, all subscriptions must be paid up or discontinued. Shall we not bestir ourselves to keep the Conference organ in the homes of our people? The best time to undertake such work is early in the year.

WILLIAM MYERS was born at Rolling Fork, Miss., on October 29, 1859, and departed for the realms of eternal glory on November 20, 1916, at Clio, S. C. He was the son of the late William and Mary C. Myers of Mississippi. While yet a lad Brother Myers gave his heart to the Lord and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. And few there are who were as faithful as he was. On April 27, 1892, he was happily married to Miss Annie McLaurin of Jefferson County, Mississippi, who still lives to mourn the departure of one so dear. Brother Myers also leaves one sister, Mrs. Maude M. Coker of Fayetteville, Ark., and one brother, Mr. G. D. Myers, of Carlisle, Miss. As steward, trustee, and Sunday school superintendent at different times through his useful life, Brother Myers rendered invaluable service to our Church and to the Kingdom of our Lord. He has left an influence that will abide. Though dead he yet speaketh. The Deer Creek Pilot of Rolling Fork, Miss., said of him: "Men seeing his consistent life and conduct honored him as a true example of the religion he professed." His home life was beautiful and happy. After four years of failing health, our brother passed peacefully away about noon on the 20th of the past November. The next day we laid his body to rest in Red Bluff Cemetery near Clio, S. C. ALBERT D. BETTS.

1. That the life of our departed brother has been an inspiration to us to follow more closely in the way of Him whom he loved to honor.
2. That his death was our personal loss.
3. That the Church has lost one of its best officials.
4. That the City of Jackson has lost one of its best citizens.

6. That the Secretary of the Board furnish the family and the press with a copy of these resolutions.

PLEASED WITH REV. J. M. MORSE.

Much gratification was expressed among the Methodists of Jackson when it became known that the new presiding elder for this district will be Rev. J. M. Morse, now serving as pastor of the Methodist Church at Brookhaven.

The return of Mr. Morse to Jackson will be the cause for much rejoicing among his many friends, not only among members of the Methodist faith, but other denominations as well.

Mr. Morse served for four years as pastor of the Capitol Street Methodist Church in this city. It was during his pastorate here that the magnificent new church, one of the finest in Southern Methodism, was built, and a lion's share of credit for that great enterprise was due to Mr. Morse. On completing a four-year tenure here he was sent to Brookhaven, where he also succeeded in building a magnificent new church, now nearing completion.

Mr. Morse was not only popular as a pastor in Jackson, but also as a citizen, and he will be cordially welcomed by all classes of our people.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, who had so capably served the Jackson District as presiding elder during the past four years, was assigned to the pastorate of the Main Street Methodist Church at Hattiesburg. — Jackson (Miss.) Daily News.

A NOTE OF INTEREST.

Dear Brother Meek: Please change the address on my Advocate to 45 Gray's Hall, Cambridge, Mass., which is my present address.

I am well pleased with Harvard University and my surroundings. I am going to be able to do almost all the work for the A. M. degree this year, and I hope to do that for the Doctor's degree in two more years.

I spent a delightful day yesterday (December 17). In the afternoon I enjoyed the treat of being for three hours in the Boston Art Museum, and last night I heard one of Billy Sunday's famous "booze" sermons. There were about 32,000 persons in attendance upon his three services yesterday, and something over 3000 "trail-hitters," as he calls his converts, among them being Ex-Governor Foss. He swayed the audience last night from first to last, closing with his coat and collar on the floor and his shirt bathed in prespiration. Wishing you a happy Christmas,

I am sincerely yours,
J. M. CARPENTER.

MARRIED.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sharp, on Dec. 23, 1916, at Wall Hill, Miss., Mr. MARCUS STEVENS, a prosperous young merchant of Watson, Miss., and Miss BESSIE EASON, a prominent teacher of this community, Rev. O. P. Armour, of the M. E. Church, South, officiating.

Near Wyatt, Miss., on Dec. 24, 1916, Mr. R. E. HALL and Miss RILLA STEWARD, the Rev. O. P. Armour, pastor of Wall Hill M. E. Church, South, officiating.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

GET RID OF HUMORS AND AVOID SICKNESS

Humors in the blood cause internal derangements that affect the whole system, as well as pimples, boils and other eruptions, and are responsible for the readiness with which many people contract disease.

For forty years Hood's Sarsaparilla has been more successful than any other medicine in expelling humors and removing their inward and outward effects. Get Hood's. No other medicine acts like it.

SOME GLEANINGS.

Doctor, did you ever have a "Conference cold?" Well here's the worst ever. The Chinese, we are told, measure the temperature by the jackets; but this thing taxes the handkerchief supply, which would be insufficient but for the fortunate visit of Santa Claus who brought his annual parcel-post consignment.

Was your stay with us at Jackson short? was I too busy? or did our paths just not cross that we got only the one time to tip our hat to ye Editor?

So far, we have heard no complaint against Bishop Murrah for permitting us to serve Crawford Street another year. Our first audience was a record-breaker; seats at premium. It was the occasion of the visit of Santa Claus to our Sunday school when, from the cradle to the stooping grand-sire, all were promptly on hand (I don't look for the like again until old Santa comes in 1917). Not to be behind the procession, Vicksburg joined all the other burgs in having "a Community Tree," the time being Sunday evening. The crowd was great, even for Vicksburg. All of the churches and clubs in the city had Christmas trees and there was little evidence of hard times. (If there ever have been times that were not hard with most people I've not known it, and if there ever came a Christmas or a circus when the chronic complaint has not been contradicted I do not recall it.)

Christmas cards with happy greetings from, here, there, and yonder! What a collection, and my hat's off to every thoughtful friend; long may they live and be happy!

But I've strayed from my first thought. It was to bear witness to the genuine regret with which our city parts with Rev. L. L. Roberts, and to say to those people at Hazlehurst that if they will give him a chance they will find that they have a good thing to keep for four years. Rev. O. S. Lewis is not a stranger to the Gibson Memorial flock, and a hearty welcome awaits him, as well as an abundance of healthy work.

Some Satartia folks have been in our city, and there is universal regret that they must part with their genial Kleiser; but what is Satartia's loss is Monticello's gain—this without any reflection upon his predecessor. Kleiser will show them some good preaching. The minutes of 1915 show that there were reciprocal honors at Monticello, and that's just as it should be, for it takes four years to get the best out of a pastor, and not less than four for the pastor to know his people. Bennett stayed there four years.

Being somewhat at the hub I am in position to say to Graves, "Fear not, Rolling Fork is looking for you, and you may make your arrangements to serve for four years some of the most refined, thoughtful people in the Conference. "J. E. J." will be neighbor to Graves on the north and his people are of same caliber, and no discount. With the passing of Alford and Chapman, we brush away a tear, and pronounce Centerville and Waynesboro under lucky stars. The Oak Ridge people have clinched a cinch on Wells; if he stays four years the Ford is "his'n;" but if not, his successor is to inherit it. I caught Roberts' Christmas gift, thinking he would turn over his "auto" to me, but he has learned somehow that he will need it in his "biz" at Hazlehurst, and said, "Nay nay, my brother." So I shall keep up the tramp, tramp, tramp the boys were marching."

The Elder has written that he will be with us on the first Sunday in January and we are reminded to give the belt a pull and brace up for another round. That God will add his mercies we devoutly pray, but we must wait patiently for the harvest.

As best I could, I gave the Crawford Street people yesterday some echoes from our recent Conference, which met with appreciation from some on the score of helpful information, and I thought, why should we not oftener give such facts to our people? My commission not having been renewed, I am writing as a plain, unassuming layman. Happy Christmas and prosperous New Year to ye editor and his helpers! T. B. HOLLOMAN.

City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron

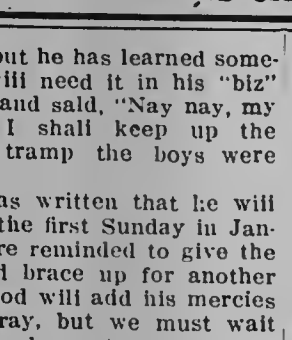
To Make Beautiful, Healthy Women and Strong Vigorous Men

NOW BEING USED BY OVER THREE MILLION PEOPLE ANNUALLY

Quickly transforms the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of weak, anaemic men and women into a perfect glow of health and beauty—Often increases the strength of delicate, nervous, run-down folks 200 per cent. in two weeks' time.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen, that a number of physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below:



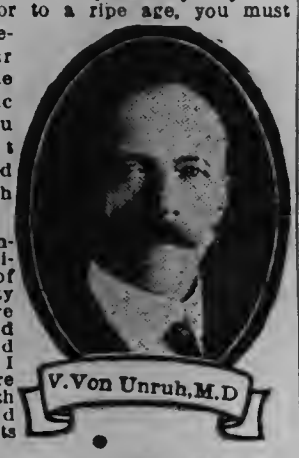
Dr. King, a New York physician and author says, 'There can be no vigorous iron men without iron.

Pallor means anaemia.

Anaemia means deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale. The flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails and they often become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn-meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked is responsible for another grave iron loss.

Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."



Dr. V. Von Unruh, Medical Director in Chief of the New York City Clinics said, "I have given Nuxated Iron a fair and prolonged trial. I have been more than pleased with the results and will continue its use."

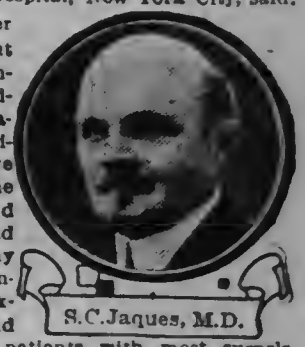
Dr. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied both in this country and in great European Medical Institutions says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple Nuxated Iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart troubles, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than lack of iron in the blood.

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron.

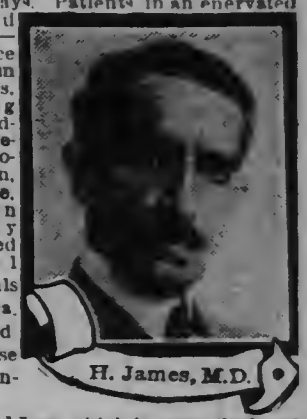
If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said:



"I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

Dr. James, late of the United States Public Health Service, says, "Patients in an enervated and devitalized state of health—those, for instance convalescing from protracted fevers, those suffering from a long-standing case of anaemia, all such people in my opinion, need iron. Of late, there has been brought to my attention Nuxated Iron. In practice I have found this an ideal restorative and up-building agent in these cases above mentioned."



NOTE—Nuxated Iron which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is the most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Bulla, in Nashville, and which are not in reality Wesley Bible classes; nor can they be until they have enrolled. I have not received a copy of the last Conference Minutes yet, but when they get off the press I will check up your class with the list of classes I have from the Nashville office and in that way locate the classes which were reported at Conference as Wesley Bible classes and are not on Dr. Bulla's roll.

Please Enroll Right To-day! If you do not know how to go about it, let us know here in the office, 407 Bolton Avenue, Alexandria, La., and we will send you the application blank for your certificate.

DECEMBER TEACHER-TRAINING.

The Gulf Division shows up well again in the December enrollment of Brother Shackford's Department—when the report was made (December 20) we had almost one-half the classes and nearly one-half the pupils enrolled from the whole Church. The Division's enrollment by Conferences was:

Alabama, three classes, at Bay Minette, Evergreen, and Moundsville, with 32 students, and two individual students; Little Rock, two classes, at Camden and Prescott, with 40 students; Mississippi, four classes, at Biloxi, Lumberton, Magnolia, and McComb, with 59 students; North Alabama, 11 classes, at Albertville, Collinsville, Flat Rock (2), Fort Payne, Gadsden, Hamilton, Maylene, Albany, Tuscaloosa, and Valley Head, with 141 students; North Arkansas, one class, at Blytheville, with 15 students, and one individual student; North Mississippi, two classes, at Caledonia and Eupora, with 16 students, and two individual students.

The total enrollment from the Division was 23 classes and 308 students; the aggregate enrollment from the entire Church was 52 classes, 723 students.

STOPS TOBACCO HABIT.

Elder's Sanitarium, located at 513 Main St., St. Louis, Mo., has published a book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days.

As they are distributing this book free, any one wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.

FROM HOMER, LA.

The Baptist people called in the night service last Sunday, December 24, and a large congregation assembled at the First Methodist Church where an appropriate service was held. The church was beautifully decorated in white, suggestive of purity. The altar and chancel rails were overlaid with white and a beautiful cross projected from the pulpit. While the choir box was also manteled in snow white, and the star of hope, the star of Bethlehem, as a symbol of that which guided the Wise Men over the Judean hills, made up the setting of the sacred edifice. Appropriate music from the well trained vested choir, a solo each from Mrs. G. B. Hefley and Miss Elinora Allen, and an instructive reading by Miss Maggie McCasland on "The Legend of the White Christmas" were interesting features of the service. The pastor, Rev. W. L. Doss, read a Christmas greeting message from Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Snelling, and delivered a forceful sermon in which he stressed the importance of a more consecrated service on the part of each professed Christian during the coming year. A voluntary offering was called for, to be sent to the suffering Armenians and Belgians, to which the congregation made liberal response.—Homer Guardian-Journal.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSIVER!

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not salivate.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

The District Stewards will meet in First Church, Monroe, on Friday, January 12, at 2 p. m. A full attendance is desired. The pastors are cordially invited. ALBERT S. LUTZ, P. E.

DR. RICE REMEMBERED.

A correspondent sends us the following note:

No pastor in Missouri is happier at this Christmas time than Dr. John A. Rice, pastor of St. John's Methodist Church, St. Louis, who has received from the Board of Stewards, through their chairman, Mr. Fristoe, a splendid check with the following letter:

"Dear Dr. Rice: I enclose you herewith cashier's check—the unanimous expression of the members of the Board of Stewards of St. John's Church of their esteem for you, and their confidence in you as minister and pastor. This expression is not only unanimous, but spontaneous. No one member of the Board is responsible for it. I have been made the vehicle through which the check and the sentiment which prompted it should reach you. Personally, I congratulate you and feel sure that your best work at St. John's Church is ahead of you. With renewed assurances of my esteem and confidence,

"J. W. FRISTOE."

Knocks Obstinate Coughs in a Hurry

A Simple Home-Made Remedy that Gets at the Cause.

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed with a persistent hanging-on bronchial cough year after year, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's so needless—there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pinex" (50 cents worth), pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind

A MESSAGE FOR THE NEW YEAR.

As we enter upon the new year we feel that every woman should have a spiritual stock-taking. So many form new resolutions, perhaps only to break them; still the effort put forth leaves its impress upon the life. There is an innate striving for something which we realize we have not yet attained: it is the striving of the spirit of woman for something yet higher and nobler.

Recently there came to our desk a leaflet from the Presbyterian Woman's Auxiliary, and as we read it over it seemed to force its message so strongly upon us that we felt impelled to pass it on to our women, and we felt that the beginning of the year was the auspicious time for its presentation.

The Leaflet.

What is first in a Christian woman's life? Make that a personal question and ask yourself what is first in your life. See if it is any one of the following things:

1. Is it myself:
   Health? Happiness?
2. Is it my home:
   Comfort? Hospitality?
3. Is it my family:
   Relationship? Education?
4. Is it my neighbor:
   Philanthropies? Reforms?
5. Is it my Church:
   Organizations? Charities?

Give them thoughtful consideration and be conscientious in answering them, for presently we are going to give Jesus' answer to each one, and God grant that his answer may be your answer, too.

What is first in a Christian woman's life? "The good is, so often, the enemy of the best" in these days of multiplied forms of good works. The woman in the busy city, the small town, even the country dweller, is appealed to for help in enough good causes to tax a dozen women's strength. Have you not found it so? Are there not times when you are puzzled to know what to do? It is difficult to always choose the best, because we do not always know what is best. Too frequently we are guided by personal sentiment, our tastes, or the fashions of the day. The latter, we know, often rule over "good works" as truly as over clothes. Shall we be constantly asking ourselves these questions: "Is this best for me?" "Do I belong here?" "Had I not better be there?" "How can I tell?"

Oh, there's the point—"how can I tell?" Find the guiding principle in your life, for it is the one which regulates your service to others, and brings power and peace to your own life. The answer to all your perplexing questions will be found in your Guide Book and comes from the lips of the Master himself. None but his words shall we study this week as we seek to answer our questions. We will not ask about any but the best things in woman's life. The second and third "best" will find their rightful places if only we find the "first best" and keep it there.

See the list above? Those are ten good and right things growing out of the right use of the five fundamental things in every woman's heart, and they seem to be the very objects of life about which Jesus has taught us so much. Study the list carefully. Is not every one fit to stand first in a Christian's thoughts, plans, time, prayer, and love?

Our answers must not come from our own best judgment, but from Him who is our King. It must be what he says, and we know that often his wisdom cuts right across our best. Would any of us dare gainsay his answer? Hear his answers, then, to-day:

Is it myself? "If any man come to me and hate not his father and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple." (Luke 14:26).

Is it my home? "Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village, and a certain woman named Martha received him into her house.

"And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet and heard his word.

"But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? Bid her, therefore, that she help me.

"And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things.

"But one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." (Luke 10:38-42).

Is it my family? "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." (Matthew 10:37).

Is it my neighbor? "Jesus said unto him, Thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

"This is the first and great commandment." (Matthew 22:37-38).

Is it my Church? "And being in Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard, very precious; and she broke the box and poured it on his head."

"For it might have been sold for more than three hundred pence, and have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her."

"Verily, I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her." (Mark 14. 3. 5. 9).

Are these answers that we would naturally give? We think not. Human wisdom does not see so clearly, but needs the guiding spirit of the Master. He has set the standard for us and we must abide by it, even when he puts himself above our very sons and daughters. What a complete surrender is needed to accept his answer! But he who sets the standard gives us grace to abide by it and to rejoice in it. Having received his power to abide by his answers, he gives us now a rich, sweet abiding joy and peace. Then, hereafter we have the reward of being forevermore with him. Is it not a glorious heritage?

Then, in conclusion, we pray that he will give to each of you the seeking of him first, and then add unto you all these other good things. They have their place in each life, and are so easily found and kept if Jesus, and Jesus only, is first, and always first.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day a glass of hot water with a tablespoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimeniary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter-pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Hair Needs Food

just as every other living thing does, and, just as every other living thing, it will die if it is not fed. Hair food takes the form of the natural oil on which it subsists. Fifty years ago the Creoles of Louisiana, who prided themselves on their hair, discovered a recipe for beautiful hair. By the use of this natural hair oil, "La Creole," they kept their hair beautiful, light and fluffy. This secret has been handed down through generations and presents the very best hair food and hair disease remedy. Does your hair fall out? Is it coarse? Is it stiff? Has it lost its natural luster? Then ask your dealer for a bottle of "La Creole" hair dressing. The price is only $1.00 and it will be the life of your hair. If he can't supply you, write at once to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

A BISHOP AT PRAYER.

A vast audience assembled in the Temple Theater, in Ocala, on last Sunday, to hear the Conference sermon of Bishop Collins Denny.

As usual under such circumstances, considerable confusion prevailed, and the sound of many voices filled the house.

Bishop Denny appeared upon the platform, advanced to the pulpit, and turning, kneeled in prayer, as our preachers used to do commonly; but which is less usual now.

He said and did nothing to call the assemblage to order; but as he knelt, the buzz of conversation died quickly down, and a hush of reverence pervaded the place.

It was an instinctive tribute of reverence paid by that great congregation to the act of worship on the part of the preacher; and it seemed to us a very beautiful incident.

This custom of kneeling in prayer upon entering the pulpit is a good one, and contributes to the atmosphere of worship. It would be well for us to revive the practice where it has fallen into disuse.—Florida Christian Advocate.

Every Cold Should Be Considered Serious

So say the best medical authorities. Unless promptly checked, often they lead to chronic bronchial and pulmonary troubles which may prove fatal.

If your cough or cold has not responded to treatment—and remember, medicine should not be solely relied on—timely use of Eckman's Alterative may give you relief.

For more than twenty years it has been benefiting sufferers from these disorders. It is especially indicated where the system demands lime, for it contains calcium chlorid so combined as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

Safe to try—because it contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs of any sort whatsoever. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

Louisville, Miss.

Dear Advocate: We arrived here Wednesday, December 13, at 9 o'clock p.m. We were met at the depot by the Louisville Board of Steward and carried in an "auto" to the parsonage, where we were met by a number of ladies who received us kindly. Good fires and a delicious, warm supper was in readiness, which was very invlting. The good people have received us in a way to make us feel at home. Surely this is an elect folk!

We hope to get hold of our work in a few days, and stay on the job. We will have to build a church here. We hope to be ready to begin building when spring comes. We will give the Advocate our attention just as soon as we get settled down to business. All in all, we feel that there is a good year ahead for us here. I believe that my people are ready for the work. I wish you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Your friend and brother, W. C. CARLISLE,

Dec. 22, 1916.

Standard, La.

Dear Dr. Meek I would like to say through the Advocate that when I read of how some of the brethren have been royally received on their new work, I do not envy them or feel bad at all. I am beginning my third year on the Standard charge, and I have never served a better people, nor met with so much kindness. Every few months a crowd composed of Methodists, Baptists, and some that do not belong to any Church, crowd into the parsonage and fill the pantry with good things to eat. Just a few days ago the good people of Urania sent us an automobile load of groceries. I only wish I might stay with these people the four years. We have everything well in hand, and are expecting a great year. While we were sorry to lose Brother May, as our presiding elder, we are sure that Brother Carter is equal to the occasion, and we are expecting great things throughout the district in 1917. Wishing the Advocate and its readers a happy New Year, I am,

Yours for souls,

E. G. WOOD.

Iuka Circuit, N. Miss. Conf.

Dear Brother Meek: My work has indeed been pleasant in many respects this year; and glad am I that it is my pleasure to serve the people of the Iuka Circuit for the year 1917. On Saturday, December 23, 1916, we were very agreeably "pounded" by the members of Snow Down Church. Gifts of silver, many nice things to eat, and a nice little box of Santa Claus' things for our baby, Leora, were included in the "pounding."

On the afternoon of the same day, Brother R. N. Dean requested me to meet some of the members of Harmony Church, at the store of Brother A. W. Davis, where I was "fairly loaded" with Santa Claus' gifts for Christmas.

On Sunday, December 24,, I preached my "Christmas sermon." Upon my return home, it was found that my wife and baby had received, from the Woman's Missionary Society of Iuka, Miss., a nice basket laden with many Christmas gifts. May God bless the women in their work for the Lord!

Brethren, in it all there is more to me than the intrinsic value of material things. I see in it a spirit of brotherly love.—Wm. I. White, Pastor.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness and bladder irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Worth $1,000,000.

If you were about to die and heard of some remedy that would restore you to health, you would gladly give all you possess to obtain it. For only 25c you may secure a box of Gray's Ointment which may be the means of preventing your death from blood poison. It is from little neglected sores, cuts, bruises, burns, etc., that fatal blood poisoning often starts. Gray's Ointment, if applied as soon as the affection is contracted, will allay pain and heal the wound, thus preventing any serious after-effects. Successfully used in thousands of homes for nearly a century. Most druggists sell it. For FREE sample, write W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

"MAIN STREET" AND UNIFICATION.

Dear Dr. Meek: The "Unification" action of the North Mississippi Conference at Winona was no doubt misleading to some people abroad. No member of that Conference, I infer, favors "organic union" with the Methodist Episcopal Church; and the resolutions adopted were evidently somewhat in advance of the sentiment of the general body of the Conference membership. The intention, as understood by most of the delegation, was simply to come into line with some other Conferences on this question, and with the Oklahoma declaration of the General Conference, and with the latest deliverances of the Southern Methodist Bishops, all of which was very innocent, and no special harm could come of this Conference action if properly understood. Naturally, it was adopted by a modest vote, though quite several of the Conference body appeared to be quite indifferent, and a few spoke against the resolutions and voted against them. Should this much-discussed unification question return again to the Conferences for consideration three or four years hence, evidently the North Mississippi delegation will be in position to enter a most distinct pronouncement; but it may never return—and so may it be.

We have had a delightful reception at the "Main Street Church," Water Valley. Nearly the entire Board of Stewards called at the parsonage, and others also of the church membership, and a fine "donation" was sent up as a "starter." The first service was the weekly prayer meeting, which was well attended. The Epworth League, Missionary Society and Sunday school appear to be actively engaged, and good congregations have attended the Sunday and Christmas Day services, with the usual full house at the Christmas evening entertainment. With some slight touching up of the church property, we shall have a situation of interest. An early official meeting indicates promptness, and monthly payments on the regular church expenses. The out-of-town churches, claiming one Sunday, have been heard from, and the hope is to meet all demands with them, without special break in the order of services at the Main Street Church. This new assignment creates no inconvenience and is accepted as an opportunity from Him who said, "Go teach, and lo I am with you."

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Editorial

"Keep us near thy side, O God!
This and all the years;
Let our wills be only thine,
And with love and purpose shine,
Till we reach the land divine,
Saved from sin and tears."

When Christ is but little in one's thoughts, he is pretty certain not to be in one's heart.

We are inclined to believe that there is such a thing as a Christian egotist, but we think that he has a long way to travel before attaining unto Christian perfection.

The Central Christian Advocate says: "They asked Mrs. Edison, 'What is your chief work?' Her answer was, 'The conservation of Mr. Edison.'" What the world owes her for that service, no finite mind can tell. The truth is, woman was made to be man's helpmeet, and that is her best mission.

Do not be content to move about in the mere sballows of Christianity. Plunge into its deeper depths? A passion for true holiness is much needed to-day both by the clergy and the laity. To have as fully as is possible the mind that was in Christ Jesus should be the dominant ambition of every follower of our Lord.

The mere trappings of office never made any man really great, though some officials and some other people seem to think so. True greatness is a possession of the soul—a thing of the head and heart and character. Place has nothing to do with it. Paul was the greatest man in the proud city of Rome even when he wore chains and was confined in a dungeon.

Without practicing intelligent methods of cultivation, no farmer can hope to grow and harvest a good crop. So, in the spiritual world there must be a sowing and a right process of culture before there can be a gracious reaping. Skill counts for much in the work of winning and perfecting souls. And well may every servant of the Master bestir himself to acquire it.

Lazarus at the rich man's gate furnished him his greatest opportunity, but the rich man saw it not and let it pass. In the physically and spiritually needy ones within your reach are to be found YOUR opportunities to lay up treasures in the sky. What are you doing with them? The unfortunate ones of the race may be the means of helping us vastly more than we can help them.

The voluble readiness with which some preachers volunteer to solve for statesmen and governments the most perplexing political and social questions makes us, we must confess, a bit weary at times. And it is observable that a few of this type of clergymen have found their way to the tripod. We learned long ago that a promiscuous garrulity is not a characteristic of profound thinkers. It is empty wagons that do the most rattling.

THE MEETING OF THE UNIFICATION COMMISSION.

The Commission on Unification met in Baltimore on the evening of December 28, and adjourned in the afternoon of January 2. The Associated Press has published an authorized statement from the Commission, which we are carrying in another column.

From this statement we infer that, while the Commission had extended and friendly conversations, no definite conclusions were reached. There seems to have been more nearly an agreement on some points than on others, but no complete unanimity on any of the essential issues involved. Committees were appointed to consider all these issues and report to another meeting of the Commission to be held on June 27, at some place yet to be designated.

We are not surprised at this outcome. It was hardly to be expected that agreements would be reached, and it is obvious there are many and grave obstacles in the way of any final agreement—obstacles which may never be removed. The powers of the General Conference, the boundaries and powers of the Jurisdictional Conferences, and the tribunal for determining the constitutionality of the acts of the General Conference are all matters of extreme delicacy and difficulty.

No one can be justly surprised at the difficulty involved in arranging for the Negro members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Of these there are some 350,000, and they have all the rights and privileges and interests in the Northern Church that any of the white members of that Church have. Being thus fully qualified members of that Church, they could not without their consent be set apart in a separate colored Church, if such a Church should be brought into existence. A member of a Church who declines to withdraw from it can not be taken out of it except by death or expulsion, and it is not now proposed by anybody that the Negro members of the Methodist Episcopal Church should be unceremoniously cast out. On the other hand, to erect them into a Conference of the reunited Church, with all the powers of any other Conference, would involve their participation in legislation for the whole Church, and at the same time such a process would exclude the members of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, to which our Church owes special obligations and has promised specific aid. We can not agree to cast this Church off, nor be party to a union which would give another body of Negro Methodists special advantages over them. It may be doubted if a unified Church, including 350,000 Negroes, would not provoke the opposition of all the other Negro Methodists in the United States. It is obvious that in settling these questions there are very grave difficulties, involving considerations of both duty and expediency.

Besides all this, the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would not consent to be subject to legislation enacted by a General Conference in which the votes of the representatives of the Negro membership of the Northern Church might be, and probably would be, a controlling power.

It is not easy to see how this problem can be solved. Almost any conceivable course taken with reference to the matter would probably weaken Episcopal Methodism in America in one or both of its great branches.

One thing is perfectly clear: Our people must go on with their work in all of its departments just as if these negotiations had never been undertaken. We can not afford to stand still and wait to see what may be the outcome of the conferences of the Joint Commission. To bring our central Conferences to a standstill, or to crumble our border Conferences, would be nothing less than unfaithfulness to duty, and would lead to consequences of great damage to religion in the South, and in the whole country.

It must now be obvious to all thoughtful people that unification is not so easy of accomplishment as some enthusiastic people have supposed. It can not be achieved in a moment, if ever; and we must not arrest any of the movements of Southern Methodism in order to wait upon the fulfillment of hopes born of emotional zeal, rather than from a careful consideration of the whole subject. It would be a calamity to arrest the progress of our Church by fixing the gaze of our people upon a goal which seems so distant, and which may never be reached at all, or at least not reached within the lifetime of the present generation.

MEN OF ONE WORK NEEDED.

Singleness of aim and a concentration of energies count for much in any undertaking. A man of many minds is apt to be a piddler, accomplishing but little. Though he possessed commanding abilities, the fact that he was swallowed up in his great mission contributed very largely to Paul's success. To the Corinthians, he wrote: "For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified; and to the Philippians, he declared:" I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ, my Lord. And again he wrote: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Is it not because he desires them to be men of one work that God calls upon those who are to be his ambassadors to detach themselves from secular affairs? Well may we beware of withholding anything that "in us is" in a service that is so weighty in its responsibilities and so glorious in its opportunities. A steady, unceasing, rightly directed earnestness is the key to power and worthy achievement. The burning lights are the shining lights in the Kingdom.

MY TRUST.

By "Subscriber."

Could I but lift the veil and see
All that lies out beyond,
To know my life, my destiny—
Would it make me weak or strong?
Or could I but the future read,
Each act of life see clear,
And know that it was thus decreed—
Would it give me hope or fear?
Not knowing this, then let me trust
In One who never fails,
Knowing full well that I must,
If I conquer when sin assails.

So, as each step in life I take,
My trust in God's secure,
Whose promise is He'll not forsake—
Then what can I need more?
For those who put their trust in him
Will never be denied
The strength they'll need to conquer sin,
No matter how they're tried:
"I'll never leave nor forsake thee"—
He's promised to all men;
And should all hell beset thee,
Just trust Him to the end.

BACKSLIDING FROM GOD.

"My people are bent on backsliding from me" (Hosea 11:7). Slipping away from God is caused by not drawing close to him. A little girl fell out of bed. When asked why, she replied, "I went to sleep too near the place I got in."—The Presbyterian.

A THING FOR USE.

Religion is for every day. Its blessings and benefits, its comforts and sweet consolations, its guidance and its inspiration are for the commonplace men and women. It is something to take with one, something that will never be out of place anywhere, something that will add to life's joy its best touch of sweetness, and will mix with all life's sorrows, hope and courage and power. A man who has every-day religion in good, wholesome quanatity can easily afford to be without a good many other things.—Christian Guardian.

WILLINGNESS TO SACRIFICE.

Look again across the seas at the armies in Europe. There we see a marvelous willingness to give blood to gain desired ends. My old University, Oxford, is empty. The University of Cambridge is empty. Edinburgh University is empty. The great industrial universities in Birmingham, Sheffield, and Manchester are empty. The young fellows are away at the front.

Look into the banks and factories and we find that the young fellows are all gone and girls are in their places. Every empty place means that a man has given his blood in the defense of his nation. Everywhere in Europe just now there is a readiness to consecrate blood in the defense of home and fatherland.

Last summer, when I was walking through a little village in Gloucestershire, I saw a woman standing at the door of a little cottage. She turned to me and said:

"Is there any news of the war this morning?"

I told her the news and then asked, "Are you very much interested in the war?"

"Very much interested in it? Yes; I have five sons at the front, and I wish I had more to give."

Five sons! Five sons!—"and I wish I had more to give."

That is the spirit of the European war—no sacrifice is too great to secure ultimate triumph.

How is it with the army of the Lord? How do we compare with the European soldiers in the extent of our sacrifice? Are we ready to give our blood to proclaim the incomparable splendor of our cause?

The first blood ought to be given when we pray. There is a way of bleeding when we pray. If I merely pray about myself or my family, there is no blood, but when I pray and do not remember myself at all, in the remembrance of other people, when my petitions go out like armies in loyal intercession, bearing other people to the throne of grace, then my prayers are red with life-blood.

Is my labor red with blood? We often tire ourselves with things of the world. How many really wear themselves out in the work of the Kingdom of the Lord?

In a biography, I read the other day of a man who said in a letter to a friend: "It is a glorious thing to get thoroughly tired out for Jesus." That is spending your blood as they are spending it for the world's liberty in Europe. That should be the spirit of the army of the Lord—red with the blood of sacrifice.—J. H. Jowett.

THE END OF LIQUOR.

There will be no whiskey or beer sold in the United States within six years, if the present rate of progress towards teetotalism keeps up.

The only thing that will retard the abolition of liquor will be the prohibitionists themselves. If they permit their enthusiasm to be turned into fanaticism they will hurt their own cause. * * * *

If the prohibitionist forces keep sane, the temperance people will do the rest.

The sale of liquor will be quickly abolished in the District of Columbia. The only opposition will be through parliamentary maneuvering.

The constitutional prohibition amendment will be submitted, and in six years, we believe, that a majority of the States necessary will declare for it.

The metropolitan press of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago are just as much in the dark about prohibition as they were about the result of the presidential election at 10 o'clock on the night following that event. With a saloon on every corner and a lobster palace in every block, they are color-blind as to what is going on in all of the great Western and Southern States and in the villages of their own States.

Prohibition is coming because it is an expression of the temperance desires of organized business, or organized labor, and of all the professions.

Railroads will no longer employ men who drink even moderately. Life insurance companies will have nothing to do with moderate drinkers.

Manufacturers want no boozers. The owners of distilleries and the owners of saloons want their employes to be sober.

The leaders in the skilled trades refuse to countenance drunkenness. The foreman of the composing room of The Commercial Appeal, no matter how badly he needed help, would not put to work a printer with the odor of liquor upon him. A drinking man will not be tolerated in a press-room. He not only endangers himself, but he endangers his fellow workmen.

Veteran reporters no longer drink. If a young man came to this office asking for a position, and stated that he drank beer or wine or whiskey, he would not be employed. The reason is that there are men who never drink that can do the work equally as well, and the editor will not undergo the added risk of a moderate drinker accidentally becoming "soused."

The distillers and brewers are beginning to realize that trouble is ahead. They preach moderation generally, but do not put their preachings into practice. The brewery interests recently offered the following suggestions for checking the prohibition movement:

First—A strict enforcement by State authorities of all excise laws.

Second—The establishment throughout the country of the German saloon system, which permits only beers, light wines and temperance drinks to be sold in dram-shops.

Third—Co-operation by brewers with the State authorities to put out of business every saloonkeeper who does not obey the excise laws.

Fifth—Discontinuance of bars in saloons, all service to be given at tables, at which customers will be seated.

The brewers will not follow their own suggestions. They will sell beer to a dive; they will wholesale beer for consumption on Sunday; they will not stop supplying beer to a saloon where treating is the order. They will not prosecute those who violate the excise laws.

The big brewers of the United States maintained branches in Memphis six years after prohibition went into effect. They encouraged their agents to violate the law here. They may say they did not, but they knew that these agents were selling beer in Memphis, and they knew it was against the law.

Years ago an effort was made to close the saloons in Memphis on Sunday. On that same Sunday morning the brewery wagons drove through the streets as usual, and unloaded casks of beer in front of the saloons.

Every day adds some new proof to the fact that the time of liquor is not long in the land. Briand has just published a decree that distilled alcoholic beverages shall no longer be sold in France.

The moderate use of wine in Italy, even now, is being discussed by scientists.

Lloyd-George will probably close up the brandy and whiskey doggeries in England. He is determined to have efficiency, and he knows what a factor for inefficiency strong drink has been in Scotland, England, Ireland and Wales.

No man wants his own son or daughter to drink liquor. Therefore he should not want anybody else's son or daughter to drink it, and he ought not to want to manufacture it to be sold to somebody else's son or daughter.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

THE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL.

To the Uudergraduates in Our Ministry:

Dear Brethren: Accept the greetings of your Correspondence School. The school was never in better condition. We are closing one of our best years. Nearly every mail lately has brought unsolicited expressions from our students as to their pleasure and profit in their studies with us. Our instruction is done personally by the Faculty of the Candler School of Theology of Emory University. This is the highest grade of instruction in our Church. There is no question of the great value of the Correspondence School methods. The late Dr. Harper, President of the University of Chicago, said his correspondence pupils did better work than those in his classroom. Of course, if a man merely wishes to slide by the Committee and pass, he can do so with little work. But if he really wishes to equip himself to preach the gospel, he will devote himself to regular, hard, systematic study. No better method for this, next to the classroom, has ever been devised than the Correspondence method of study. Some of the Conferences are so well convinced of this that they have passed a resolution requiring the undergraduates to take the correspondence work. Others have requested their Examining Committees to require this. The Examining Committees are deciding that the Committees will insist upon the undergraduates taking the correspondence work.

The only object in these different actions is to secure better equipment for our young preachers. It will not mean a dollar more in the pocket of any one connected with the Correspondence School if every undergraduate in Southern Methodism enrolls with us. It will mean merely more work for us. But it will mean a far more efficient ministry, and this is why this action is urged.

Drop us a post-card for a catalogue telling all about the school and its methods. Write us of anything you do not understand. We are glad to answer all questions, and to give our brethren every possible accommodation. The only object for which the school is carried on is to help our brethren to a better equipment for the great work of the ministry. Do not look upon us as your critics but as your friends who are trying to help you, and if you run up against a rule, remember it was made after years of experience only to conserve the work for the benefits of our students themselves.

We give full instructions for studying each book in the course for Admission on Trial and for each of the four-year courses. In addition, each of our eight professors in the Candler School of Theology offers two or more graduates course in his department, on a number of which credit is given on the degrees in Emory University.

The new courses of study are much superior to the old ones. A number of preachers who have already taken the old courses are taking these new courses with us, as they are equivalent to post graduate studies.

Several of the books in the new courses are not yet published. But they will probably be ready by the time a student finishes the other books in his year's study. Do not wait for them, but go ahead on the other books.

Will not the Examining Committees of the Conferences and others urge our young brethren to take their work with us?

This will not only be of great help to the students, but it will relieve the Committees of much hard labor.

What our Students Think of the Correspondence School.

We give below a few of the many voluntary expressions received from many of our more than twenty-four hundred students in the past few weeks. If we were to print all that we have received, they would fill a volume. These kind words not only cheer our hearts, but they also show what a great and good work the School is doing for our preachers. Many a congregation, not aware of the source of their pastor's improved ministry, if they knew the facts, would rise up and unite with their pastor in calling the Correspondence School blessed.

"I want to thank you for your prompt way of conducting the school. I am well pleased with the management of the school and want to congratulate you on your splendid work. It is the only way for the preachers to take the course with any degree of satisfaction."

"I have profited exceedingly by doing the work in this way and wish to thank you and the gentlemen who have charge of the grading of lessons, etc., for kindness shown and for prompt attention to the work sent in."

"I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the good, prompt service, and for all favors extended to me while doing the work. It was indeed a pleasure to take the course."

"I inclose herewith my check for $10 which covers my note given for tuition in the Correspondence School. The course has been worth many times this amount to me.

"I have been delighted with the course."

"The course is of untold value to those taking it."

"I wish to thank you for the kindness shown me for the past four years and to say that I could never have gotten by myself what you have helped me to get out of the course."

"I want to say that your course is valuable and that I have thoroughly enjoyed the work. The truth is I can't see how any sane person can do otherwise than enroll with you. The idea of passing an examination of merit on from two to three thousand pages during the rush of the Annual Conference seems preposterous."

"I have derived a very great benefit from the two courses that I took in your Sshool this year. I have not studied them with a view simply of getting off Conference work, but I have studied them carefully, slowly and prayerfully, in order that I might reap even a greater blessing from them. The work has been delightful in every respect, and I shall look forward with much pleasure to my further worth in the Correspondence School another year."

"The instruction sheets have often served to give a new and clearer meaning to things in the book and have helped to make the work pleasant as well as profitable. I believe the School is doing a great work for the young minister and thus indirectly for the whole Church."

May we not have an early enrollment from the readers of this message and a full and happy year's study? No toil or preparation is too severe for the great work of successfully preaching our wonderful gospel. Send us a post-card for a catalogue, giving full particulars. Address, Correspondence School, Emory University, Ga. We have our own post-office and if you leave off the word Atlanta, we will get your mail more quickly.

Yours for a better ministry,

R. H. BENNETT.

SOME STRANGE CREATURES.

By Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr.

Preachers are strange creatures. People cannot understand why it is that they believe some things that they do. Then it is hard for people to understand why it is that preachers do some things that they do. It is still harder for people to understand why it is that preachers do not do things that they ought to do. It is strange, anyhow, about preachers. Some people can't understand why it is that the preacher does not visit more than he does. Then sometimes they cannot understand why he visits so much. Again, some people think that the preacher does not preach well enough. Then, it is so strange that he spends so much time on the preparation of his sermons and that he does not pay more attention to the people than he does.

The writer preached in a community one time where there had just been a minister of another denomination that visited a great deal. It was strange the way that he did. He spent so much time in the homes of the people. They all lived in the country; so he went to see the people and took meals with them in their homes. He stayed all night in their homes. He did this so much that the people did not like it. They thought it passing strange that a preacher should do such things. Then, when this writer came to that community, he was told that he would have to do just such things as this himself. The pepole in that church got another preacher. When he came he heard about the things that had been said about his predecessor; so he did not go any at all. Preachers are strange creatures. The people did not like one fellow because he came too often. Then they did not like the other one because he did not come enough. Well now, wern't those people just a little bit strange, too, in the way that they thought about preachers? After all, isn't it true that the people, as well as the preachers, are sometimes strange, too? It is not a very easy matter to be able to tell which is the more stranger, anyhow.

Then some people think that it is a surprising and strange thing that a preacher should have any use for money. He ought to be able to get meat and bread and flour and lard without money. Perhaps it may be that the ravens ought to feed him, like they fed Elijah, and then the angels might bring his children shoes in cold weather. Even if he does need money, some people who are members of the Church and who want the preacher to come to see them and do a good many other things for them think that he is such a strange man when he expects that they should pay him at least a little once in a while. They think that he ought to get out and work for the money that he needs like other people do. Then, when he does not do this, they think that it is so strange. He ought to do this, and then he ought to go to see them and preach his sermons and look after all the rest of a hundred things that he must do, and then he ought to know, by some strange intuition, everything that Tom and Dick and Harry expect of him besides. It is very strange if he does not do this. Well, then, preachers are strange creatures. But isn't it just possible that sometimes there are some people who are strange, too?

What do you think about some plan to help out in this matter? Just suppose that the preacher would get on his knees and ask God what God wants him to do; then let him put some common sense in with it all; then let him think about what he owes to all the people; then, the next thing that he might do would be to go out and do the things that God shows him ought to be done, and that his common sense tells him are the right things, too. This, it seems to me, might help some. Then, the people might forget that the preacher is so strange all the time, and hold up his hands just a little and talk to God some too about the preacher, rather than talk so much to other people about him. This, it seems to me, might help all just a little. But if we were all to do these things, then we might get rid of some of these strange preachers, and also of these strange people. This would cause the number of curiosities in the world to be decreased, and that might not be bad.

After all, the people need the preacher and the preacher needs the people. When they forget the peculiarities of each other and strive to get down on the basis of mutual affection and helpfulness, then can they labor patiently together for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God in the world. Would that we might all, people and preachers alike, be able to do something like this. We ought to do it. The preacher ought to remember his responsibility and do his best to fulfill it. The people ought to remember theirs, too, and also do their best to fulfill it.

THE MOVING-PICTURE SHOW REDEEMED.

The time has come when sentiment must be created to effect the redemption of the moving-picture show. It is capable of good uses. It can do something better than reflect the disgusting realism of the dark and immoral side of life. It can do something better than to reproduce in pictures the love slush of cheap story books whose very moral is immoral. Perhaps the chief reason why modesty and idealism are no longer considered a necessary part of true culture and character is because of the rule and reign of the "slush" and "gush" story-book. We must shame our youth out of such low and miserable taste. We must insist that their character is known by the books they love to read and the shows they like to see. This duty has so long been neglected by parents that it now requires a long and tedious process of education to wean them away from slush and gush. But it must be done. Here is a large field for social service. Let Christian citizens get together and launch a strong campaign against the moving-picture evils and insist on its redemption. Let them go further and encourage the patronage of all innocent educational and amusing exhibitions that have tone and character. The show is here to stay; but it is badly in need of redemption, and why is so little done to redeem it?—The Lutheran.

According to the press dispatches, Villa's forces killed all the Chinese and Syrians found in Torreon, Mexico, while recently occupying that city; and Villa drove a railroad spike through the heart of the eagle on the American shield at the United States Consulate in Parral and tore the American flag into ribbons on November 5. A day of reckoning will yet come to this notorious bandit.

Church News

Alexandria, Va., has recently had a revival conducted by Rev. Gipsy Smith, Jr., in which there were 800-conversions.

The Protestant Episcopal Church claims to have had during the year 1916 a gain in membership of 27,285, which, it is said, brings the total number of its communicants up to nearly 1,100,000.

The city of Spartanburg, South Carolina, in which Wofford College is situated, has raised $40,000 for that institution, and will yet do more. This is highly creditable to that enterprising city.

Dr. J. M. Buckley, who for so long edited the New York Christian Advocate, celebrated his 80th birthday on December 16. That publication touched the high-water mark of merit when Dr. Buckley was on its tripod.

There has been "incorporated" in New York City the William A. Sunday Evangelistic Association, the object of which is to get things ready for the coming of Mr. Sunday to the great metropolis of the nation next spring.

Bishop Lawrence, of Massachnsetts, chairman of the Committee which has the matter in hand, stated a few days since that $4,000,000 had been pledged toward the $5,000,000 fund that the Protestant Episcopal Church is raising to pension retired clergymen and the widows and children of clergymen.

Rev. S. A. Nettles, formerly Editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, the organ of South Carolina Methodism, was unanimously received into the North Carolina Conference at its late session. Bishop Kilgo is stated to have commended him highly, declaring, among other things, that he was the best editor that South Carolina had ever had.

A campaign to secure an additional $500,000 for Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., is now under way, and several commissioners, representing the North Arkansas and Little Rock Conferences, are in the field. The General Board of Education, New York, has offered to contribute $100,000 of the amount to be secured.—Methodist News Bureau.

The people of Boston are reported to be overflowing the great "Tabernacle" to hear Billy Sunday. Toward the close of the fifth week of the meeting the number of "trail hitters" was stated to he more than 20,000. Even cultured Boston seems to like the plain, old-fashioned Gospel, and obviously, when faithfully preached, it is not wanting in effectiveness there.

We are indebted to the Nashville News Bureau for the following item: "Under the plan of campaign for Emory University as formulated by the Chancellor and the Board of Trust of that institution, there are now ten commissioners in the field, as follows: Rev. J. S. Frazer, Alabama Conference; Rev. S. B. Vaught, Holston; Rev. J. H. Young, Louisville and Kentucky; Rev. W. J. Mecoy, Memphis; Rev. Robert Selby, Mississippi; Rev. L. T. Mann, North Carolina; Rev. C. C. Jarrell, North Georgia; Rev. J. A. Harmon, South Georgia; Rev. E. M. Harrell, Tennessee; Rev. W. Ashury Christian, Virginia."

The following are the recognized General Evangelists of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South: "Rev. John B. Andrews, Siloam Springs, Ark.; Rev. J. M. Bass, Macon, Ga.; Rev. Luther B. Bridges, Gainesville, Ga.; Rev. John E. Brown, Siloam Springs, Ark.; Rev. Raymond Browning, Lincolnton, N. C.; Rev. D. L. Coale, Dallas, Tex.; Rev. Burke Culpepper, Memphis, Tenn.; Rev. J. O. Hanes, Birmingham, Ala.; Rev. Will J. Harney, Wilmore, Ky.; Rev. Walt Holcomb, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. Arch C. Holder, Shreveport, La.; Rev. Bob Jones, Montgomery, Ala.; Rev. G. A. Klein, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. W. M. McIntosh, Iuka, Miss.; Rev. Arthur Moore, Macon, Ga.; Rev. H. C. Morrison, D.D., Wilmore, Ky.; Rev. Thurston B. Price, St. Louis, Mo.; Rev. W. C. Swope, Charleston, Mo.

A STATEMENT BY THE UNIFICATION COMMISSION.

"To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

"We send you greetings in the name of our common Lord.

"Upon our coming together in the city of Baltimore, we had before us the report of the Joint Commission adopted at Chattanooga in 1910, the report adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Oklahoma City in 1914, and the report adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Saratoga Springs in 1916.

"It was agreed that the fundamental and vital issues between us were as follows:

"The General Conference and its powers.

"The Jurisdictienal Conferences, their number and their powers.

"We rejoice to say that the Spirit of God has been with us. Our fellowship in Christ has been intimate and refreshing. Our discussions have been frank and brotheriy. We have been of one mind and one heart in our purpose to advance the interests of the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

"It was helieved that if agreement should be reached touching the three items mentioned ahove, with time and patience and with the help of the Holy Spirit, the details of a plan for the unification of Methodism could be worked out.

"We are happy to be able to report that we find ourselves in general agreement concerning many of the questions involved. However, in vlew of the magnitude of these questions it was manifestiy impossible for us to reach final conclusions. For further consideration, therefore, we have referred these suhjects to strong committees, with instructions to present a detailed report at a session of the Joint Commission to be held on June 27 at a place to he designated.

"It is our fervent hope that the spirit of brotherly love and Christian fellowship so evidently manifest in all the deliberations of the Joint Commission may prevail throughout our Churches, and we earnestly call upon all our people to continue instant in prayer and blessing of God upon the work so auspiciously begun."

The Committees Named.

The committees are constituted as follows:

On Judicial Council—Bishop R. J. Cooke, Bishop W. B. Murrah, the Revs. A. J. Lamar, D. G. Downey, F. M. Thomas and C. B. Spencer; Charles Warren Fairbanks. Judge M. L. Walton, Col. E. C. Reeves, Ira E. Robinson.

On Jurisdictional Conferences—Bishop W. F. McDowell, Bishop E. E. Hoss, the Rev. E. B. Chappell, Dr. John F. Goucher, Dr. H. M. DuBose and Edgar Blake; T. D. Samford, Alexander Simpson, Jr., A. W. Harris, Dr. R. S. Hyer.

On Status of Colored Memhers—Bishops Earl Cranston and Collins Denny, the Revs. W. N. Ainsworth, W. J. Young, R. E. Jones (colored), J. W. Van Cleve, J. R. Day and John M. Moore; H. H. White, P. D. Maddin, Dr. H. N. Snyder, I. Garland Penn (colored). George Warren Brown and Judge Henry Wade Rogers.

General Reference Committee—Bishops E. D. Mouzon, Warren A. Candler, J. W. Hamilton and F. D. Leete; the Revs. E. M. Randall, Thomas N. Ivey, C. M. Bishop, A. F. Watkins, Frank Neff and A. J. Nast; Rolla V. Watt, William Rule, C. W. Kinne, John R. Pepper, Dr. R. E. Blackwell and J. H. Reynolds.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKER WANTED.

If some young man who can direct a Sunday school choir and take an active part in church work would like to secure employment in Lake Charles, La., I shall be glad to correspond with him. Of course, the young man should be a Methodist and a Christian. N. E. JOYNER, P. C.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

By Rev. Rolfe Hunt, D.D., President.

The Mississippi Conference Training School is located in the little town of Montrose, Miss., where there has been a school of wholesome influence for the past seventy-five years. In 1888 the institution was chartered. In 1898 it was deeded to the Brandon District Conference, but in 1904 it became the property of the Mississippi Annual Conference, and is now directed by a Board of Trustees appointed by that Annual Conference. The annual enrollment of this school is over two hundred students. Among these who have served as President are Revs. Waldo W. Moore, C. M. Chapman, G. H. Galloway, T. J. O'Neil, and J. S. Purcell.

There are now in the ministry nearly half a hundred men who have attended this institution, and who are largely indebted to it for their inspiration and training. The majority of them are Methodist preachers, hut some are Preshyterians and Baptists. During the present session eight ministerial students have been enrolled, three of them having young families. There are others enrolled who have been impressed with the call to the ministry and who will doubtless yield.

The first young man to matriculate in, and who has since received a diploma from, the Candler School of Theology was J. W. Chisholm, formerly a student in the Mississippi Conference Training School. Brother Jolly, another young man who was prompt to enroll in the Candler School, first took his course here in the Training School.

It is the earnest desire of the present administration to make the institution still more emphatically a "training school"—not only for young preachers, but for others who desire to increase their usefulness in the Church.

The trustees now own aud hold for the Conference a campus of several acres, on which is located a two-story brick hullding which cost hetween six and seven thousand dollars. This is furnished with seats and desks. A few hundred yards away is a tract of land—about thirty-six acres—which was bought for the school, but on which there is a debt of a little over $1000.

The trustees have heartiiy endorsed the recommendation to start a campaign for $25,000, so as to pay off the $1000 debt and add to the laboratory and library facilities and provide separate dormitories for males and females. We are also greatly interested in huilding several cottages on the land owned by the school for the benefit of ministerial students who have young families, these cottages and surrounding patches to be rent-free to such ministerial students. The dormitories are to be run by the authorities of the institution, strictly for the benefit of the school, hoard to be furnished students at the actual cost of operating and of supplying food. In order that the cost of hoarding may be made as low as possihle, it is proposed to set aside part of the land for pasturage and part for raising vegetables.

No less distinguished a gentleman than Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth Female College, stated recently to the Annual Conference at Jackson that he did not helieve there was an institution in the State that was doing as much for the Conference in proportion to what the Conference had done for it, as the Mississippi Conference Training School, and he pleaded for a more liberal support for it.

According to a foreign press dispatch, a meeting of the heads of the German, Austro-Hungarian, Bulgarian, and Turkish Parliaments will be held in Berlin on January 18.

Four new buildings are soon to be constructed for Sophie Newcomb College, near Tulane University, at a cost of $750,000 or $800,000. It is stated that the trustees of this institution will see that enough of its funds are preserved as an endowment to yield an annual income of at least $100,000.

One of the first acts of the Lloyd-George Cabinet in Great Britain was the calling of an Imperial Conference, which will be held in London in February. It is expected that all of the self-governing dominions of the British Empire will be represented in this great gathering by their premiers or specially designated spokesmen.

A homicide almost every day was Cook County's (practically the city of Chicago) record for 1916, according to the report of the Coroner, Dr. P. M. Hoffman. During the year there were 312 homicides, 592 suicides, 276 persons killed by automobiles, 328 by railroad trains, 133 by street cars, and 192 burned or scalded to death. The total number of deaths reported was 6323.

There are said to have been made by French and British aviators during the year 1916, 450 raids into the enemy's territory—250 by the former, 190 by the latter. These forays resulted in the shooting down of 900 of the enemy aeroplanes and in the destruction of 81 captured balloons. It is stated that the operators of air crafts as war instruments have become constantly more skillful as time has passed.

The American Honorary Commerce Commission, created by the Southern Commercial Congress, will sail for Japan from Vancouver on January 25, with a view to cultivating trade relations with the Mikado's Empire. The members of this Commission are Hon. John M. Parker, of New Orleans; Senator Fletcher, of Florida; General Julian S. Carr, of Durham, N. C., and Mr. Herman A. Metz, of New York.

Of the total losses by fire in the State of Louisiana during the year 1915, 20.3 per cent, amounting to $419,432, are classed as having been preventable; and 36.7 per cent, amounting to $739,010, are set down as having been partly preventable. The causes of the preventable fires are stated to have been, in part, as follows: smoking (the largest cause), 6.9 per cent; chimneys and flues, 5.2 per cent; stoves, 3.2 per cent.

Governor Sidney J. Catts, of Florida, requested that no inaugural ball should be given on the occasion of his induction into office last week; but, as the arrangements were under way before he made his wishes known, the ball was not called off. However, neither the Governor nor any member of his family was present; and no punch was served at this function, as had been the case at inaugural dances heretofore. Hurrah for Governor Catts!

The Department of Agriculture at Washington announced last week that the aggregate value of all crops produced in the United States last year was $8,934,587,000. This was an increase of $2,165,989,000 over the value of the crops of 1915, and an increase of $2,867,206,000 over the average value of those of the years from 1910 to 1914. Texas led in the value of its crops, with Iowa second, and Illinois third. Except North Dakota, the crops of every State in the Union showed a gain last year, though that of Alabama was very small.

The following figures show the growth of the Domestic trade of the United States within recent years: 1890—$8,000,000,000; 1895—$7,200,000,000; 1900—$11,700,000,000; 1905—$17,800,000,000; 1910—$28,200,000,000; 1911—$27,300,000,000; 1912—$31,100,000,000; 1913—$32,100,000,000; 1914—$29,900,000,000; 1915—$32,700,000,000; 1916—$45,800,000,000. What an enormous volume of business this is may be inferred from the fact that there is perhaps not a nation on earth except our own that is worth as much as a hundred billion dollars. Our foreign trade, great as it is, is small compared to our immense domestic trade.

EVANGELISM AND PASTORAL CO-OPERATION.

We have wise laws governing the evangelistic movement in the Church, and in the North Mississippi Conference we are well supplied with capable evangelists, both Conference and local. These workers are true and tried, and their past successes are a guarantee of their future usefulness to the Church in this most important field of service.

The work of Rev. J. A. Bowen and Rev. J. H. Bell, our Conference evangelists, as shown in their reports for 1916, was highly satisfactory. The fact that they had more than 1000 conversions, each (within and without the Church) under their ministry, gives evidence of a genuine work of grace that greatly blessed the Church where these men labored.

Brethren of the Conference, let us give them more work at home. Your Committee on Evangelism greatly desires to see more meetings in the winter and early spring, believing that when we get our people to adopt the plan of having early revivals it will be greatly to their advantage. So, we hope that pastors who desire to secure the services of these brethren will take up the matter with them at an early date. They will need to make up their slates as soon as possible.

Furthermore, we are pleased to have among us two other resident evangelists whose labors have been such as to commend them to their brethren—Brothers W. M. McIntosh and W. D. Bass. Brother McIntosh was made one of the General Evangelists of our Church at the recent Evangelists' Meeting held in Memphis. No man perhaps has held more great revivals in North Mississippi than he has, and doubtless he is quite as effective to-day as he has been at any time in the past. Brother Bass also has done good, solid work for a number of years, and has held many sweeping revivals.

All these men, capable, tested, and true, are at your command, brethren. We trust that you will secure the benefit of their consecrated labors, and that this will be the greatest year for old-time revivals that we have had in our Conference in twenty-five years. I feel that the preachers and people are ready for just such a general revival, and that if we will plan wisely for it, it will come.

W. M. YOUNG,
Secretary Evangelistic Committee of North Mississippi Conference.

ANENT THE UNION OF THE TWO CHURCHES.

Dear Advocate: In my humble opinion the time is a long way off when the two Methodist Episcopal Churches will ever be merged into one. It seems that it "doth not yet appear" just why this proposed union is a necessity, anyway. About the strongest argument, so far as I have observed, for this union is that in the Western part of the United States the two Churches conflict with and cripple each other. If this be true, then let me make the following suggestion as a solution to the whole matter: Let the Northern and the Southern Churches remain as they now exist and agree to each withdraw from the Western part of this country, and let a distinct Western division be organized. Then we would have the Northern, the Southern, and the Western divisions of the Church. In doing this let each division be empowered to elect its own Bishops, have its own Annual and General Conferences, and control its own affairs just as the two divisions now do. It might be well in doing this to have something like an Ecumenical Conference for the three divisions, but let each division remain a sovereign within itself. I speak now in general terms. It occurs to me that this plan could be worked out logically and thus relieve the situation, if, indeed, it needs relief.

Respectfully,
Holly Springs, Miss. W. A. BELK.

A STATEMENT.

Because of certain reports that are said to have been in circulation, we have been requested by Brother Myers to print the following statement:

"To Whom It May Concern.

"This is to certify that Mr. S. B. Myers was admitted to this institution (East Mississippi State Hospital) on August 31, 1916, suffering from a severe nervous prostration, with a temporary condition of melancholia. At that time, he was not addicted to the use of morphine, or any narcotic, and we did not treat him for the drug habit. In a comparatively short time, he recovered from this depression, and soon became much better, and after an observation of about two months, he was discharged on November 2 in a splendid condition—apparently normal.

The Great Battle

A WANT AD.

Johnson, the drunkard, is dying to-day,
With marks of sin on his face;
He'll be missed at the club, at the bar, at the play;
Wanted—a boy in his place.
Boys from the fireside, boys from the farm,
Boys from the home and the school,
Come, leave your misgivings, there can be no harm
Where "drink and be merry's" the rule.
Wanted—for every lost servant of men
Some one to live without grace;
Some one to die without pardon divine—
Have you a boy for the place?

—Kosclusko (Miss.) Herald.

NOTES.

The London Times, England's greatest newspaper, in appealing for the suppression of the drink traffic during the war, says: "Alcohol is the nation's greatest source of weakness."

The claim of the saloon men that prohibition increases the consumption of liquors is really laughable. If that were true, the liquor dealers would be shouting for prohibition from ocean to ocean.

Hon. W. J. Bryan predicted a few days ago that by 1920 constitutional prohibition for the whole country will be an unavoidable national issue, and that one or the other (if not both) of the leading political parties will advocate such an enactment in its platform.

The brewers and rum sellers, in convention assembled, prating about reforming the liquor traffic, is a sure enough "sight." Especially so to a man who lives in New Orleans, where practically every dram-shop sells liquor all day Sunday in open violation of the law. A law-abiding saloon would, indeed, be something new under the sun. We do not believe that such a thing ever has existed or ever will exist.

Under the leadership of Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, a public campaign in the interest of prohibition is now on in this State. Ex-Governor M. R. Patterson, of Tennessee, and Major Dan Morgan Smith, of Chicago, formerly attorney for the Model License League, a liquor organization, are booked to deliver a number of speeches at important points. They began in New Orleans last Sunday, where they were greeted by large audiences. Let the friends of the prohibition cause co-operate in making the tour of these distinguished speakers count for the utmost possible.

THE SOUL OF THE SALOON.

In a Louisville saloon this motto hangs on the wall: "Live Every Day so You Can Look Any Man in the Face and Tell Him to go to ———."

In this motto the soul of the saloon is exposed.—Methodist Temperance Bureau.

YIELDING TO THE INEVITABLE.

The Excelsior Brewery of St. Louis has closed because, as its manager said: "Prohibition is inevitable." A brewery at Paducah, Ky., has also closed "in anticipation of State-wide prohibition being also handicapped by a lack of business." The Paducah brewery will become an ice-packing plant.

HAIL TO THE PATRIOTIC PRESS!

The magnificent way in which patriotic newspapers the country over are taking up the fight against the prostitution of the mails by the liquor trade, deserves the highest praise. Collier's Weekly, The Atlanta Constitution, Augusta Chronicle, Kansas City Star, Des Moines Register and Leader, and a hundred other uncompromising advocates of decency in government are at death grips with this trade in murder, arson, rape and suicide. Scarcely a week that does not see a strong addition to the ranks of the newspapers demanding this reform.—Methodist Board of Temperance.

STATE UNIVERSITIES.

Serious trouble is brewing over the University of Missouri and its President is threatened with removal. The movement may go even further, for the Legislature proposes to take a hand in the controversy. The trouble, of course, is of political origin, as has frequently been the case of late with the State universities, the most marked instance being that of the University of Wisconsin.

The Missouri school got into politics during the campaign recently closed over an issue of the appropriation made for its support. In the discussion of the campaign the President of the institution was charged with having taken an attitude hostile to the Democratic organization. As the Democracy elected the Governor and Legislature and is in full control of Missouri, some of the party leaders think that President Hill should be disciplined.

This is only a repetition of what we have heard several times of late and brings out one of the weaknesses of State universities controlled by the State. Unless public opinion frowns on the practice of placing these institutions under the absolute control of partisan or factional politics and grants them some independence in their views and plans, they are certain to suffer from political interference. The case of the University of Wisconsin, a few years ago, attracted general attention throughout the educational world. The university was most successful, had a large number of matriculants, and had been doing good work. The State had apparently appreciated its services, for it conducted investigations on any lines which the Legislature or any governmental bureau or department asked; and it received in return the largest endowment and annual appropriation given any State university in America.

The crisis came when a reactionary administration followed an advanced and progressive one. The complaint was then made that the university had been too radical in its views, taking extreme and advanced positions on all questions submitted. The conservative element attacked the university for its progressive attitude and over a dozen bills were introduced in the Legislature intended to weaken or cripple it. For many months the result was in doubt; and although the institution in the end triumphed over the assaults made on it, it suffered severely in the political squabble that grew out of its attempts to aid the State by its investigations in return for the money given it.

It was only one of a dozen similar movements. Kansas had the same trouble; and political partisanship injured the University of Oklahoma in educational circles a few years ago. Now comes the same story from Missouri. It shows a defect in many of the State universities as now organized. They have made great progress and are among the most successful colleges in the country, providing for the education of many young men and women who would otherwise not have a chance of securing a higher education, but they must, to do their duty, enjoy at least some independence: The Presidents and Professors must not be used as the spoils of office, or changed like the political offices with every change of administration, and they must not be required to change their points of view on teaching, on history, economics and philosophy every time the party in control of the State and of its university changes, and thus become as unstable as the wind or as politics.—Times-Picayune.

HOW IT TURNED OUT.

(We reprint, without comment, the following from The Presbyterian. Parallel cases, we dare say, can be found in many other denominations.—Editor of Advocate.)

Much is being said and written upon the restlessness of the Church and the ministry in their mutual relations. One reason for this condition in some parts is a lusting after strange teachers. The Presbyterian Standard gives a case in point as follows:

"About a year or more ago we called attention to the strange performance of Rev. Percival Campbell Morgan, pastor of the Tatnall Square Presbyterian Church in Macon, Ga., who seemed intent upon introducing into that staid congregation all the various phases of ritualism, such as Lenten services, Easter celebrations, and other apings of the Romish and Episcopal Churches.

"We then ventured the prediction that such things, while they might attract for a time, would in the end wear out, and that the performer would some day find another place.

"A few months ago he filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy, showing that he was as extravagant in living as in church frills. Recently he resigned, though to his credit be it known that his people refused to accept his resignation. He, however, insisted upon it, and now he has begun the organization of a Congregational church, from which he originally came. This church is to be financed by Boston and other Congregationalists, and will be one more denomination in the city of Macon.

"The genius of Presbyterianism is the rule of the people, and what they want, they have a right to get; but we are unable to understand why, with the many strong men we have in our Church of the South, congregations should experiment with men from other countries and sections. We have rarely known such experiments to turn out well.

"The moral of this story is that for Presbyterians the safest method to pursue is to preach the simple Gospel to a lost race, and leave out all frills. This is the rock upon which many a ministry has been wrecked."

NOW ON A CASH BASIS.

The subscription price of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for the year 1917 is $1.50 to both the people and preachers. The Publishing Committee at its recent meeting gave orders to the Publisher to discontinue all delinquent subscriptions and to place the business of the paper on a cash basis. Many of our preachers fail to observe the rule of paying in advance, and in consequence may, unless they give the matter immediate attention, have their names dropped—an embarrassment which the Publisher hopes to escape. Under the new policy instituted, the longest time that ANY delinquent subscriber can possibly be carried is three months. Brethren, please note and heed this very important statement.

All of her days with caring
How this one and that shall know
The life of a cheery purpose,
And love with its tender glow!

Wonder how she can do it,
All of us seem to say;
Ah, what a host of duties
Brimming her busy day!
Always from morn to evening
Finding some task to do,
Keeping the sunlight shining,
And helping the skies stay blue!

Wonder how she can do it:
Mothering all with her care;
Brave in her daily struggle
And guarding us from despair;
Smiling amid the shadows,
Singing amid the dearth,
Brightening her little corner
With love and a gentle mirth.

Wonder how she can do it!
Well, there's a secret, sure,
And maybe the answer is trusting,
And keeping her own heart pure,
And never a selfish moment,
And always a thought of those,
Who find in her spirit of patience
The life of the song and rose.

GRUFFY.

Gruffy was a very small pig with a very loud squeal and a very curly tail. No wonder he was all squeal and tail. He had five brothers and sisters, all stronger than he. Whenever Father Smith filled the trough with milk, the rest of the family pushed and jostled poor Gruffy until he couldn't get near to drink one drop.

O but he grew hungrier every day! His poor little stomach was so empty that his sides almost touched. His ribs seemed to rattle when he ran.

"'Taint no use foolin' with that pig," said Farmer Smith to his little daughter Mary, who had come with him to watch the animals feed. "He's goin' to die."

"O give him to me, daddy! I'll feed him and teach him to do tricks just like the circus pig I saw at the fair."

So Mary got Gruffy. She fed him a big bowlful of milk three times a day. Later he had fresh vegetables from the garden. Every few days the little pig was scrubbed until he was pink and white. He grew fat and happy and followed his mistress everywhere just like a dog. When Mary sat down on the grass to read, Gruffy would sit down on her skirt.

Now pigs are very smart. If a teacher is kind and patient, they can be taught to do anything that a dog can be taught to do. Gruffy learned to do many tricks which Mary made him do every day before he could have his dinner. He was at last so used to performing that whenever he was hungry he would start to show off his accomplishments without even being asked. Whenever there was company, Gruffy was asked into the house to entertain the guests.

At last school opened. Mary had to shut up the pet in the woodshed and run down the road to the country school with the rest of the children.

Poor Gruffy! He put one shrewd little blue eye to a crack in the door to watch her go. He squealed until the great tears ran down his long snout. But Mary did not come back to him. Then he began to root a big hole in the earthen floor under the woodshed wall. When it was large enough he crawled through, and down the road he went with many a happy grunt. The pretty pink ribbon which Mary had tied about his neck that morning floated in the wind.

He grew tired as he neared the schoolhouse door. He stopped to listen. Didn't he hear Mary's voice? The door stood ajar; so, with a bound, in marched the unbidden guest, straight down the front aisle. Mary was doing an example on the blackboard near the front platform. When he saw her, Gruffy squealed with delight. The children all laughed, cheering the bold new pupil with the pink ribbon bow.

But Mary's pet was used to audiences at home. He felt by his stomach time-piece that it was about time Mary brought out the midday bowl of milk. So up onto the platform he scrambled and sat up, meekly folding his hoofs before him as if to say: "I'm a very good little boy. Will you please give me a nice green apple?"

Quick as a wink he rolled over several times. At last he climbed up onto a low empty chair and put his head between his legs as if to pray.

At this the teacher found her voice. "Will the owner of this wonderful animal please take him home?"

Mary rose timidly. "Please, Miss Rose," she said, "the pig belongs to me."

After that Gruffy came to the door with Mary every day until he grew too fat to waddle to school after his mistress.—Lura J. Turner, in the Advance.

HE SAID HE WOULD.

In a little town about twenty miles from Glasgow lives Widow Ross and her two boys. She was wont to say, "Eh, they're good boys enough, but I'm feared for them. I canna keep them in the house; they're aye after playin' aboot in yon stream, or awa' in the fields."

It was quite true. Jimmie and Alec Ross were to be seen always together, when out of school, taking their home-made fishing tackle to the bridge over the stream, where they would sit for hours watching and waiting, as only true anglers can, for the fish that never rose to their bait; or flying kites in the pastures near.

One day Alec fell into the stream, and he was afraid to go home until his clothes were dry; so, divesting himself of half of them, he laid them out in the sun. When they were no longer wet, he took off the remaining sticky garments, putting on the partially dry ones, and so, by installments, managed to get the water out of his clothes.

"Oh, Jimmie," he said the next morning to his brother, "ma heid is a wrang—it's too heavy for ma body. Ye'll ha'e to gang to school by yersel'; I'm fairly sick."

And so he was. He never went to school again; but in a fortnight's time was lying under the sod of a new-made grave in the little churchyard, while Jimmie was the most disconsolate boy on earth. He had lost his loved playmate, his only brother, and felt himself partly to blame for the fever brought on by Alec's fall into the stream, and sitting partially clad in wet clothes.

"What will ye do when I'm awa'?" Alec had asked two days before he died. He was quite conscious, quite happy; but he thought of Jimmie's unhappiness.

"What will you do, Alec, when I'm no' by?" was Jimmie's way of answering his brother's question.

"I'll be with Jesus Himsel' all the time," was Alec's happy and satisfied answer. He had no doubts; he thought only of poor Jimmie, left alone.

"Then I'll ha'e Him, too! Ay, I promise ye I will."

Jimmie's decision completed Alec's happiness. It was the one thing about which they had not agreed. Jimmie could never be made to see himself a sinner. "Let me be," he would say to Alec. "Gin I find it oot, ye'll soon know. But I mun find it oot mysel'.

A year after Alec's death, he appeared among the candidates for church membership. Many regarded him as too young—one of the elders suggested this to Jimmie's pastor. "Such a young boy may not know his own mind; it is over early for him to be received."

"Let him speak for himself; I can trust him," said his pastor.

When the examination was about half through, Jimmie was asked, "What did you do when you felt you were a sinner?"

"I went to Jesus, and told Him how sorry I was, and asked to be forgiven."

"And do you think He heard you, and forgave you your sins?"

"No, sir," said Jimmie; "I don't think, I know He did."

A frown shadowed the face of the examiners at such boldness. "Be careful what you say, my son. How do you know that the Lord Jesus has pardoned you?"

It really looked as if they were putting stumbling-blocks in the way of Jimmie's acknowledgment as a Christian.

"He said He would," said the boy, with a look of surprise.

"He said He would—what do you mean?" they asked.

"He said that if I confessed my sins, He was faithful and just, and would forgive them; and I confessed them, and He forgave them, sir; I know He did, because He said He would."

They believed him this time; but he was nearly crying now.

"Never mind, sonnie," said his pastor; "they wanted to be quite sure that you knew. I knew you as a Christian; they did not."

"Eh, but yon laddie has got the right of it," said one of the elders. "Flesh and blood have not revealed it to him, but God."—London Christian.

STOPPING THE MACHINERY.

Matt. 13:58; Eph. 4:30; Psa. 4:4.

Some time ago I was taken through a large factory where there were hundreds of looms at work in the spinning of very fine linen thread. * * * The manager of the mill said to me, "So delicate is this machinery that if a single thread out of the whole thirty thousand which at this moment are weaving should break, all of these looms would stop instantly." * * * He stepped up to one of the machines and broke a single thread, and instantly every loom stopped, and remained stationary until the thread was rejoined. Then they went on automatically. That mechanical wonder can be used as an illustration of "that which is spiritual." It is through one sin, one disobedience, one departure from the clearly seen pathway of the will and the fear of God that I lose the ministry of the Spirit, and not until that thread is rejoined is it that—automatically, if I dare use the term—the ministry of the Spirit in his illumination, in his refinement, in his satisfying of my heart and mind, and in his reinforcing of my efforts, is continued.—J. Stuart Holden.

The Pennsylvania Railway System claims that during the past three years it has transported 553,890,063 persons over approximately fifteen billion miles without the loss of a single life. An excellent record!

THE GLORY OF METHODISM.

The true natal hour of Methodism was when John Wesley became CONSCIOUS that his sins were forgiven and that he was a child of God. For that assurance he had been earnestly longing for years, but he had sought it through self-denial and good works rather than by faith. For a long while there was no one to point out to him his great error—even his own mother, as remarkable a woman as she was, wrote him that such a privilege was reserved for a few specially favored souls. Not until he came into touch with Peter Bohler did he learn better and find his way into the light, having his heart at last "strangely warmed." Really beginning with such an experience, the emphasis that she has ever put upon it as the needful privilege of all has throughout her history been Methodism's most distinguishing characteristic. Without such an assurance it is doubtful whether the highest and happiest type of piety can exist. By her insistence upon the witness of the Spirit and His conscious leadership, both in one's own religious development and in one's work for the Master, the Methodist Church has come very generally to be recognized as standing perhaps more emphatically than any other denomination for experimental, "heartfelt religion." Herein has lain her glory, and when she has at any time departed from this apostolic testimony her power has waned and her success decreased. In an address before the last Ecumenical Methodist Conference, held in Toronto, Canada, Bishop Hoss made the following eloquent utterance, which bears pertinently on this point:

"Our stock in trade is our religion. When that goes, we shall be the most poverty-stricken people on the face of the earth, for we shall have nothing left to fall back upon—no long-stretching centuries of history, no moss-covered cathedrals, no monumental volumes of theology, no elaborate ritual of worship. God himself, consciously known, worshiped, adored, and loved, through Jesus Christ, is our only and everlasting portion."

Let us cling to this portion as our best inheritance and richest possible possession.

A NOTABLE VOLUME.

Through the courtesy of Messrs. Smith & Lamar, our Publishing Agents, we have on our table, "The History of Methodism"—Volume II, a neatly bound book of 592 pages, which is the work of Rev. H. M. DuBose, D.D., Book Editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Editor of the Methodist Review Quarterly. This publication takes up the history of Methodism where it was left off by Bishop Holland N. McTyeire in his noble volume which made its appearance in 1885, and which dealt with the Methodist movement down to 1884, and sets forth its most important developments in the thirty-two years that have since elapsed. It takes cognizance to some extent of the doings of Methodism in other sections of the United States and in foreign lands; but, as is manifestly proper, it deals more fully with the happenings in our own branch of the great Wesleyan family. To those who know anything of Dr. DuBose's literary gifts and the remarkable historical instinct which he possesses, it will occasion no surprise for us to say that he has discharged well the responsible task which he had been requested to take in hand, and that he has made "the people called Methodists" largely his debtors by this latest product of his pen.

The scope of this noteworthy volume is too extended for us to undertake to outline its varied contents in this brief notice. Our relations to other Churches, the work of our succeeding General Conferences, the new movements that have sprung up among us, and all other occurrences of special significance are reviewed in an interesting and illuminating manner, while here and there, as the wonderful story progresses, are given fine sketches of the notable characters that Methodism has produced—men whose achievements have contributed to its upbuilding and whose names will never be forgotten. An entire chapter is devoted to the famous Vanderbilt imbroglio; two chapters are given to sketches of Annual Conferences, and one, each, to brief histories of the schools of Southern Methodism and the weekly journals of our denomination. At the close of the book is an excellent index, which enables one to turn readily to any subject in which one is specially interested.

The need of this excellent publication was so urgent that we predict for it a large circulation. No Southern Methodist preacher can afford to be without it; nor can any layman, who wishes to be informed about his own Church and Methodism in general. There ought, in fact, to be a copy of it in every Methodist home in the South. We know of no other source from which so much information concerning the recent history of our growing communion, which is the second largest Wesleyan body in the world, can be obtained. The price of this volume is $2, net. Order of Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn.; Dallas, Texas; or Richmond, Va.

DR. BRADFIELD CONVINCED.

As we stated in a recent issue of the Advocate, Dr. W. D. Bradfield, Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, three or four months ago expressed the hope that the Southern Methodist Church would not insist upon having the Northern Methodist Church set apart its Negro contingent as a necessary condition for the unification of the two denominations by reorganization. But after attending the meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, lately held in St. Louis, and participating in the wrangle over some phases of the Negro problem which was precipitated there and in which some of the colored ministers present took a vigorous part, Dr. Bradfield made in his paper of December 21 the following emphatic utterance:

"We are convinced that our Commission must insist upon the Negroes being organized into an independent Church before there can be the hoped-for reorganization of American Methodism. We abate none of our feeling of kindness and Christian charity for the Negroes in saying these things, nor do we thereby disown the solemn obligations which are upon us to co-operate in the heartiest service to the Negro race."

Our esteemed confrere is right. There is a weighty obligation upon Southern Methodists to aid in the Christianization and moral upbuilding of the millions of colored people in the South. The early missions maintained among them by our Church form one of the brightest chapters in its history, and we must do much more for them in the coming years than we have lately been doing. The best friends that the Negroes have are the Southern white people, and many of our colored population know this. The largest measure of religious progress made by the Negroes has been made by those in independent denominations, in which they have learned the important lesson of self-reliance. Of the 1,600,000 Methodist Negroes in the United States, all are in independent bodies except some 350,000, and the largest Negro Church in America, the Baptist Church, is a separate and independent body. The stern logic of facts is against the Methodist Episcopal Church when it comes to the question as to what is the best policy to pursue in seeking to promote the Christian welfare of the ten million Negroes of the United States. No scheme of operation which has the effect of awakening among the colored people an aspiration for social intermingling with the white race can be for their ultimate good, and such, in our opinion, is the inevitable tendency of the present course of the Northern Methodist Church toward them.

Dr. Bradfield now occupies the position touching this question which we have held all along, and we are much pleased to be re-enforced by his avowed judgment and influence.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. C. Price sounds an optimistic note from Belcher, La. He considers the outlook a hopeful one, and expects progress in his field.

Persons desiring to make remittances to Rev. J. Lloyd Decell, Treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, should address him at 306 North Broadway Street, McComb, Miss.

Brother A. G. Anderson, of Mayhew, Miss., remits for the renewal of his subscription and sends along with his check his good wishes and some kindly words of encouragement. We appreciate his message.

Rev. G. W. Gordon, of Noxapater, Miss., says: "We have entered hopefully upon our second year in this charge. The prospect of success seems good." Brother Gordon is one of the strong preachers of his Conference.

We have regretted to learn that Dr. S. A. Steel, the brilliant pastor of our First Church at Shreveport, La., has been somewhat indisposed with a severe cold. Dr. Steel is stated to have made a fine impression in his new field.

On a card ordering the address of his Advocate changed, Rev. J. M. Corley, of Lake, Miss., says: "We got to our new work on January 1 and were cordially welcomed. Everything seems to promise well for a good start and a fruitful year."

By a subsequent arrangement, Rev. A. J. Henry, of the North Mississippi Conference, will continue on the Mantachie charge, Corinth District, instead of going to the Ebenezer Circuit, to which he was assigned at the Conference. His address is Ratliff, Miss., route 1.

Rev. T. M. Bradley reports that he has been kindly received at Cleveland, Miss., his new charge. He further states that Rev. V. C. Curtis, the new presiding elder of the Greenville District, has made a fine impression wherever he has gone in the prosecution of his work.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer filled the McDonoghville (La.) pulpit last Sunday morning and conducted an impressive communion service after the sermon. He reports that our people there are highly pleased with their new pastor, Rev. W. A. Mangum, and that all the signs indicate that a very successful year is under way for him.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. Jas. M. Lewis, Prentiss, Miss., 4; Brother T. M. Babington, Franklin, La., 3; Rev. A. A. Phillips, Ball, La., 2; Rev. J. T. McCafferty, Durant, Miss., 3.

From a personal letter from Bishop W. B. Murrah, of Memphis, Tenn., we extract the following: "I shall go to Nashville next week to talk over Cuban mission matters with our Missionary Secretaries. We are moving on finely at present in promoting our hospital enterprise in this city." Bishop Murrah is scheduled to open the Cuban Mission Conference at Cienfuegos on February 15.

Rev. A. W. Turner, of Shreveport, spent several days in New Orleans last week in the interest of his work for the Anti-Saloon League. Brother Turner is a wise and tactful leader of the temperance forces of Louisiana. He should have the encouragement and support of all the moral people of the State in his efforts to build up and strengthen the prohibition sentiment among our citizens.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 28, IS HOSPITAL DAY IN THE TWO MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES. Every church and Sunday school is expected to observe it.

A New Year's note from Rev. C. A. Schultz brings the information that he is in place at Gallman, Miss., and is busy in the Master's work. We pray that his labors in that field may be productive of much good.

The work has opened auspiciously at Carson, La., where Rev. S. L. Riggs is the popular pastor. Brother Riggs has already begun to look after the interests of the Advocate in his field, for which service he has our thanks.

Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Guntown, Miss., writes: "We have arrived in our new field and I am getting down to work. The people have received us very kindly, and the outlook is bright. This should be, and is, one of the best charges in the North Mississippi Conference."

From Pineville, La., Rev. R. V. Fulton writes as follows: "I have made my first round on my new work, to which Tioga has been added by the presiding elder. I have met with a hearty reception at all points. I have a choice people to serve, and am expecting a good year."

"We are beginning the new year with a good interest in all departments of the work." So writes Rev. Claude P. Jones, our hustling pastor at Long Beach, Miss. We trust that this shepherd and flock will be able to accomplish much for the Master during the next twelve months.

On Thursday evening of last week, the Carrollton Avenue congregation of this city tendered a reception to their new pastor, Rev. A. F. Vaughan. A large crowd was present and the occasion was a most delightful one. Brother Vaughan has become already very popular with his flock.

Dr. W. V. Tudor, who was widely known as a Southern Methodist pastor, died at his residence in Washington, D. C., on January 5, aged 84 years. Dr. Tudor was a preacher of unusual eloquence and was once stationed in New Orleans. He had been a superannuate for about eight years.

Rev. A. B. Barry, of Meadville, Miss., gives us two subscriptions, and in his business letter appends the following note: "I have made my first round on the Meadville and Bude charge, and I am about as well pleased as a man could be. We are planning for a great year, and we will see that the interests of the Advocate are not forgotten."

The post-office address of Rev. J. A. Bowen, who was reappointed one of the Conference evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, is still Tupelo, Miss. Letters addressed to him there will promptly reach him. He is in great demand, and the brethren who may wish to secure his assistance in meetings would do well to write him at once.

Rev. Ira B. Robertson, of McNair, Miss., who is one of the honored superannuates of the Mississippi Conference, renews his subscription to the Advocate and takes time to send us a commendatory message. May the richest blessings of heaven be showered upon him, and may his saintly life long be spared! He has a shining record behind him, and a bright prospect ahead.

Rev. S. L. Pope, of New Albany, Miss., calls for a list of the Advocate's subscribers in his charge and states that he will at once see that the interests of the Conference organ are looked after. Brother Pope is making a magnificent record as a pastor, and setting a fine example to others in many things. He gives promise of large usefulness to the Church in the coming years.

A correspondent informs us that Mr. Joel Frank Epperson, of Nashville, Tenn., and Miss Mary Louise Adams, of Pass Christian, Miss., were married in the Methodist Church at Pass Christian at 8:30 o'clock on Monday evening, January 1, 1917, by the pastor, Rev. Claude P. Jones. We extend congratulations to the bride and groom and wish them great happiness.

Dr. U. G. Foote, the new pastor of the Rayno Memorial Church of this city, reached New Orleans last week and was given a most cordial reception. He preached his initial sermon to a large congregation at 11 o'clock a. m. last Sunday from the text, "For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ" (Romans 1:16), and his able discourse made a most favorable impression.

Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Sardis (Miss.) District, in forwarding his quarterly conference announcements, says: "My people have been universally kind—almost embarrassingly so. I feel grateful to each one." Brother Holder's many friends deeply sympathize with him in the great sorrow which has befallen him. He wrought nobly last year, and we pray that his labors may continue to be largely fruitful.

Rev. W. A. Jordan, the new pastor of the Central Baptist Church of New Orleans, favored the Advocate office with a call one day last week; but, much to his regret, the Editor was out and missed seeing him. Brother Jordan came to the Crescent City from Starkville, Miss., where he wrought most acceptably as pastor of the Baptist Church for several years. We pray that a large measure of success may crown his labors here.

Brother Byron Smith, of Peoria, Miss., who will soon celebrate his 73d birthday, in remitting for his subscription to the Advocate, states that he finds it a great help to him. Being afflicted with deafness, he cannot hear preaching, which fact makes the ministry of his Church paper all the more appreciated. We wish this earnest friend of our paper a year full to the brim with blessings from the bountiful hand of the Heavenly Father.

We are in receipt of a business communication from Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., of Bienville, La., in which he makes the following reference to his charge: "We have had here the most cordial reception of our ministerial life. We found enough groceries in the pantry to last a month. I have not yet been all around. 'The lines have fallen to us in pleasant places.' I see a hard year's work ahead, but I love to work." This is the spirit of a true itinerant.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., is delighted with his new field at Homer, La. He says: "We are settled and at work. I find that my predecessor, Brother Snelling, is very highly regarded by the people here. He lives in their hearts. However, they have given us a kindly reception and things are getting started off very well. We have an excellent citizenship in Homer." Brother Doss has issued to his flock a very impressive pastoral letter, which ought to do much good.

Enthusiastic reports continue to reach us concerning the work of Rev. A. Inman Townsley at Bogalusa, La. All available space has been brought into requisition, but the present church is inadequate to seat the congregations attending public worship, even when crowded to the utmost. A movement to construct a new edifice has been launched, the committee named to carry forward this enterprise consisting of Mr. W. H. Sullivan, Mr. W. C. Flanders, and Mr. A. M. Dobbs.

In a business letter to our office, Dr. I. L. Peebles, now of Meridian, Miss., appends the following note: "The Lord permitting, I expect to begin the writing of books and pamphlets soon." As will be remembered, Dr. Peebles took a superannuate relation at the last session of the Mississippi Conference. He is a vigorous thinker, and we dare say that what he writes will be well worth reading. We have known no man who has impressed us more with his piety and consecration than this esteemed veteran.

Rev. P. H. Howse, whose address is 106 Brunie Street, Hattiesburg, Miss., writes: "Please let me say to the brethren who may desire evangelistic help that I am now open to engagements. I am especially anxious to help where it is felt that my labors are truly needed. I expect to give much of my time in the summer to missionary territory and to building up the waste places. If any pastor wants to hold an early meeting I shall be glad to respond to his call at once. Brethren, I am anxious for the battle. Command me!"

Rev. J. Douglas Swagerty, of Shreveport, La., is associated in revival work with Rev. Walt Holcomb, of Nashville, Tenn., who is one of our General Evangelists. Mr. Holcomb and Mr. Swagerty are now engaged in a union evangelistic campaign at Potosi, Mo. A note from the latter states that the meeting is gripping the town, and that sinners are being converted and backsliders reclaimed in the services. Mr. Swagerty is a campaign organizer, as well as a chorus leader; and any one interested in holding a meeting may address him at Shreveport.

Mr. E. P. Peacock, of Clarksdale, Miss., is being prominently mentioned for the presidency of the Federal Farm Loan Bank which is soon to be established in New Orleans. Mr. Peacock is one of the leading bankers of Mississippi and this important trust could not be committed to safer hands than his. He is a steward in our church at Clarksdale and enjoys the full confidence of all who know him. He recently gave $2500 toward the construction of the handsome house of worship that our people are erecting in that progressive city.

Mrs. R. F. Harrell, the accomplished Editor of the Woman's Missionary Department of the Advocate, who, with her worthy husband, Rev. R. F. Harrell, has lately moved to Gloster, Miss., after four years of efficient service at Centerville, writes as follows: "We are now about settled. The parsonage here is very comfortable. The ladies had done everything possible to have it in readiness for our coming. We do not feel that we are among strangers, having been to Gloster a number of times during the past four years and having here several warm friends. The people as a whole have given us a most hearty welcome and have assured us of their earnest co-operation."

Writing from Alexandria, La., Dr. Felix R. Hill says: "I am here with my brother for the winter and early spring months. Mrs. Hill, who has been an invalid for nearly a year is slowly but steadily gaining in strength. My own health is excellent." Dr. Hill's many friends will be happy to have this cheering message from him. He requests us to state that he would be pleased to assist in special services any of the brethren in Louisiana or Mississippi who may desire his help. Dr. Hill is a pastor-evangelist of the best type and any congregation would be fortunate to have the privilege of sitting under his ministry. A letter addressed to Dr. Hill at Alexandria, La., in care of Mr. William Hill, would reach him.

We take the following from The Vidette, of Iuka, Miss.: "At the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference Rev. W. D. McCullough was sent to Shannon, after having spent two years in our town. He had the respect and confidence of our people. He is truly an able preacher, having few equals in the Conference. When the news came that Brother McCullough would be succeeded by Rev. L. A. McKeown, we felt that our own was coming to us, as he and his good wife are products of Tishomingo County. Brother McKeown is regarded as one of our most successful and popular pastors, and we feel that he and 'Miss Minnie' will do a great work among us. We extend to them a hearty welcome."

Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, dedicated last Sunday our Church at Varnado, La., which is one of the appointments on the Angie-Talisheek charge. The presentation of this house of worship for dedication was made by Mr. W. L. Warren, Mr. M. Green, and Mr. R. H. Magee, the trustees. A large congregation was present and the dedicatory exercises were quite interesting throughout. This church was built two or three years ago, but had a debt on it which was not liquidated until recently. It cost about $2500 and is a very neat and tasteful structure. The present pastor is Rev. R. H. Flowers, who has made an excellent beginning in his new field.

We have received the following interesting announcement: "Mrs. Minnow Howland Moore announces the marriage of her daughter, Minnow Howland, to Rev. William H. Huntley, D.D., on Saturday, January 6, 1917—at Atlanta, Ga." Miss Moore was for some time the teacher of mathematics in the Girls' High School of New Orleans and has many friends in this city. Dr. Huntley, who at present is stationed at Yazoo City, Miss., is one of the leading ministers in the Mississippi Conference. It was stated in the New Orleans Item that Bishop W. A. Candler, a classmate of the groom at Emory College, would officiate at this wedding. We extend to Dr. and Mrs. Huntley our hearty congratulations, and express the hope that their union may be crowned with life's choicest blessings.

From a letter from Rev. C. W. Crisler, our new pastor at Brookhaven, Miss., we take the following: "We are very comfortably settled in our new home and have met with a royal reception. I feel much as if I were returning home after a twelve years' absence. The new church building here is going to be a beautiful edifice—a credit to the city and to our Church. Our new presiding elder is at his post of duty with the added dignity and responsibility of a brand-new boy presented to his home the second day after the arrival of his family. Brother Leggett is no stranger to this district, having served it for four years before going to the Meridian District. Our people are enthusiastic over his return." We extend congratulations to Brother and Sister Leggett over this notable addition to their household, and pray that God may bless and watch over the little one.

Sage Tea Dandy To Darken Hair

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

N. W. GATLIN was born in 1843 in Amite County, Mississippi, and passed from this life on December 25, 1916. He leaves a wife, one daughter, and a number of grandchildren to mourn his going. He settled in Johnston Station several years ago, and remained there up to his death. He was a faithful member of the Methodist Church for many years. He was a steward of a model type, looking after every interest of the church. He will ever be missed in the little town and in the church which he so much loved. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Loyd Decell, of Fernwood, Miss., assisted by Brother Johnston, pastor of the Baptist Church, his neighbor and friend, and the writer. May the good Lord comfort and bless the faithful wife and loved ones in this time of deepest sorrow, and may they meet some bright day beyond the river. His pastor.

R. H. BARR.

IN MEMORIAM.

(A tribute by the Wesley Sunday school class of the Methodist Church to one of its members, Brother Roscoe R. Moore, Sr.)

Human speech cannot convey the language of the heart in expressing the loss of a life that means so much to the church, the community, and the home circle, for the heart feels more than the tongue or pen can tell. Our genial comrade and friend, our devoted Sunday school classmate, Brother ROSCOE R. MOORE, Sr., left us on Dec. 14, 1916. We mourn his going, but he so lived that when his summons came to join the innumerable caravan that moves to the pale realms of shade, where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death; he went, not like the quarry slave at night, scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust, approached the grave like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

The influence of Brother Moore's life, his words, and his death have been like leaven cast into the mass of humanity. He confirmed the doctrine of our immortality, and scattered the germs of a heavenly life by his love to his God, his family, and his neighbors. The Church has lost a faithful, devoted servant, who adorned its doctrines and gave to it the glad services of a long and markedly useful life.

Be it resolved, That this paper be spread upon the minutes of our Sunday school and a copy furnished the family.

Signed by J. L. Christy, W. F. Ballard, J. D. Turley, Committee.

He will be assisted by Mrs. Calkins, whose evangelistic Bible readings at home and ten years in India have impressed so many, and who will doubtless prove a great blessing. MRS. F. M. WALL.

Silvia Elizabeth Suttles was born in Lauderdale County, Miss., on October 12, 1845. She joined the Baptist Church in early childhood, but later, in 1867, she united with the Methodist Church at Old Spring Hill in Newton County, Mississippi, where she remained a member until her death, which occurred November 12, 1916.

On November 9, 1865, she was married to F. M. Wall. They lived together 51 years and 3 days, and the longer they lived together the more they appreciated each other; and it was a task indeed to separate after having journeyed together so long, but the reunion will come after awhile.

Mother Wall was in good health until last spring, when she was taken with heart trouble, which gradually grew worse until her departure. She was one of the most industrious, as well as consecrated, Christians that I ever saw. She worked willingly with her hands, that the necessities of life might be procured and that she might have something to give to the Lord's cause; she would often send butter and eggs to town and get such things as her pastor could utilize in the kitchen. She would often pray for the Lord to enable her to give, and I have seen the tears of joy course down her cheeks when she would praise God for answering her prayer. She was, indeed, the preacher's friend.

Her greatest desire was that all her children might become Christians before she went to heaven. Oh, how often and earnestly she would pray for their salvation! No doubt, in "that day" her children will "rise up and call her blessed."

No one, surely, has come nearer fulfilling the law, "love thy neighbor as thyself," especially when it came to visiting the sick and administering to their needs, than did she. She was an old-time, "shouting Methodist," for oftimes she would return from her secret devotions praising God aloud, and in her letters she would praise God for His goodness and mercy.

She is survived by a husband, 8 children, 31 grandchildren, 5 great-grandchildren, and 2 sisters. We shall surely miss her, but we know where to find her.

Her funeral was conducted at Spring Hill Church by Rev. H. A. Gatlin, then pastor of Fifth Street Methodist Church of Meridian, Miss., assisted by the writer, the interment being made in the cemetery near the church.

Farewell, dear one, for just awhile,
Thy face on earth we'll see no more;
But we confidently expect to meet thee,
When we've landed safely on the other shore.

Her son-in-law, J. A. WELLS.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

OLD AGE.

Poets have written of the "tragedy of old age," likening it to a bare and leafless tree, standing alone in the winter's blast with limbs torn and trunk ready for its inevitable fall. But indeed, that is not the picture of the aged in Christ. The tree of the godly life is hung full of fruitage, to be enjoyed every day, and as for being stark and leafless, it is not so. It stands high and broad, and to other travelers in the meridian of their journey, it has the cooling, restful shade as of a rock in a weary land; while the songbirds of paradise make celestial music among the branches.—B. F. Haynes.

It is what we give up, not what we lay up, that adds to our lasting store.—Hosea Ballou.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION INDISPENSABLE.

Victor Cousins, in addressing the French Chamber of Peers, said: "Any system of school training which sharpens the intellectual powers, without at the same time affording a source of restraint and counter-check to their tendency to evil, is a curse rather than a blessing." This points clearly to the imperative necessity not of education alone, but of Christian education.

BEAT THE BOLL WEEVIL—

WITH

MERIDIAN FERTILIZERS

Agricultural expert advice is to mature your cotton crop before the appearance of the boll weevil in large numbers.

HOW CAN THIS BE DONE?

1. Plant early.
2. Plant early maturing varieties.
3. Cultivate early and often.
4. Use Meridian Fertilizers liberally.

The Texas Boll Weevil Convention gives this statement:—"Protection can be had only by adopting the proper methods. Among these is proper fertilization."

Experiments prove that Meridian Fertilizers hasten the maturity of crops more than the ordinary commercial fertilizers of inferior grade which sell at the same price, and that manure and cotton seed retard the maturity. Mr. J. Vance Wilkinson, Gloster, Miss., says. "I have carefully tested brands of fertilizers made by other companies, and find Meridian superior to all others."

One-fourth of all the fertilizers used in the territory in which we operate is the RED BAG kind. Why?

Our fertilizers are especially prepared for farming in the Gulf States.

G. R. James, Medina, Tenn., says: "Several parties here tested Meridian Fertilizers with other brands costing six to eight dollars more per ton. Where any advantage was shown, it was in favor of Meridian."

THE McDONOGHVILLE (LA.) EPWORTH LEAGUE.

On the afternoon of Sunday, December 31, about 4 o'clock, our Church Lay Leader, Brother J. W. Carnes, and a number of the young people of McDonoghville met with the pastor in his study for the purpose of organizing a Senior Epworth League and of appointing a Superintendent for the Junior League, which place was made vacant by the death of Mrs. J. W. Carnes. The Junior Leaguers greatly miss Sister Carnes, who so tenderly and faithfully in the spirit of her Master taught them God's Word and trained them for service. Though death has claimed her body, she is not dead, but has entered into a larger service with God, and her godly influence and example on earth will never die. Our prayers and sympathy go out to the devoted husband and children. May God bless and comfort them!

The Senior League was organized with the following officers: President, Mr. J. W. Carnes; 1st Vice President, Miss Mabel Hasling; 2d Vice President, Mr. W. Faulk; 3d Vice President, Miss Caroline Tillotson; 4th Vice President, Mr. A. J. Oswald; Secretary, Mr. Stone Redman; Treasurer, Miss Lottie Cox; Era Agent, Miss Ida May Whitaker; Organist, Miss Anita Thaggard; Assistant Organist, Miss Nellie Pearce; Superintendent Junior League, Mrs. W. H. Black; Assistant Junior Supt., Mrs. W. A. Mangum.

BARLOW CIRCUIT (MISS. CONF.)

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you kindly publish a few words concerning the manner in which we were greeted by the people on the Barlow Circuit? Without going into minute details, I will just say that our reception was all that could be desired. Every Methodist will know what this means, as all have had some experience along this line. The good ladies had the parsonage in readiness for our coming. Since our arrival we have been shown, both by word and by deed, the high esteem in which the people of this charge hold the servants of God. We feel very much at home among them. Our predecessor, Brother S. N. Young, left the charge in an excellent condition. It is a pleasure to follow a man like Young. I hope to do a good year's work. To this end we ask the prayers of all Christians.

You are giving us an excellent paper. It ought to be in every Methodist home. I, for one, shall strive to do more to give it a wider circulation than in any former year.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

Medicated Smoke Drives Out Catarrh

Catarrh is a disease of the mucous membrane. It is characterized by a discharge through the nostrils or into the throat. It usually begins with a cold in the head. Beginning in the nostrils it spreads to all the mucous membranes of the body. The nasty discharge being swallowed, it upsets the stomach and from the stomach it is taken into the blood, and poisons and deranges the whole body. The discharge is all the time inclined to work its way from the nose back into the head—down into the throat—into the bronchial tubes and lungs. Herein is its greatest danger. Catarrh often destroys the organs of hearing and removes the sense of smell.

It is a most reliable remedy and is so simple and convenient that it can be used at home by any man, woman or child. It is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit forming drug. GIBSON MEMORIAL CHURCH, VICKSBURG.

Dear Brother Meek: We arrived here last Saturday, December 30, and were given a most cordial reception. Brother L. L. Roberts did a great work here and is greatly beloved by the people of all Churches as well as those of Gibson Memorial. Like loyal Methodists, these good people have rallied enthusiastically to their new pastor, and this fact makes me want to live closer to God and be able to do more good than ever before. Brother Holloman has cordially welcomed us also. He is not suffering so much now with that cold. Fortunately it had not gotten to his feet. I am glad to be associated with him. A welcome from all Warren County comes to me through Brother J. A. Wells, the Oak Ridge pastor of Ford car fame. I suppose the welcome includes a ride in the new Ford. I have no car like Roberts had; so I shall step with Brother Holloman and "tramp, tramp, tramp!" My climbing muscles are sore already. Brother Sharbrough assures me a hearty welcome to this district. I learned to love him long ago. I've always had good presiding elders.

Sincerely,

OSMOND S. LEWIS.

The Inward Effects of humors are worse than the outward. They endanger the whole system. Hood's Sarsaparilla eradicates all humors, cures all their inward and outward effects. It is the great alternative and tonic, whose merit has been everywhere established.

"God wants us to be so secure in our possessions that we should still be rich if every bank in the world were to break."

Keeps Our Bodies Warm.

Pure, rich, red blood is a necessity in the production of animal heat. It keeps our bodies warm. We all know very well that when the arteries that carry it to a limb are bound or tied, the temperature of the limb is immediately lowered.

There is a suggestion in this that, at this time of year especially, we should take Hood's Sarsaparilla if our blood is impure, impoverished, or pale. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood good in quality and quantity. It has an unequaled record for radically and permanently removing blood diseases, scrofula, rheumatism, and catarrh and giving strength and tone to the whole system. It is a scientific combination of roots, barks, herbs, and other medical substances that have long been used by successful physicians. Get it to-day.

ITS FOUNDATION MORAL.

Society rests upon conscience and not upon science. Civilization is first and foremost a moral thing. Without honesty, without respect for law, without the worship of duty, without the love of one's neighbor—in a word, without virtue—the whole is menaced and falls into decay, and neither letters, nor art, neither luxury nor industry, nor rhetoric, nor the policeman, nor the customs officer, can maintain erect and whole an edifice of which the foundations are unsound.—Amiel.

Did we put ourselves in the place of others, the hatred and jealousy we harbor against them would fall away.

FROM SCOOBA, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I write this to say that we are now in our new home at Scooba, having reached here on December 23. The appearance of everything is favorable for a pleasant and prosperous year. We have not been altogether idle since our arrival here. Besides the usual work of arranging the books and furniture in the home, I had the opportunity to preach twice to large congregations last Sunday. On Monday I attended the funeral of Brother Clyde Witherspoon Kitchens, who was laid to rest in the cemetery at Binnsville. On Wednesday, January 3, Mr. Robert O. Perrin and Miss Ada Louise Rawls came to the parsonage, in company with some special friends, and were joined together in holy wedlock. Last night the inmates of the parsonage were invited to a reception given by the members of the Church at Scooba, and the evening was spent very pleasantly. The parsonage inmates were remembered by those in attendance in a substantial way, which was appreciated very much by us. We are praying for and expecting great things here this year.

Jan. 6, 1917. J. T. ABNEY.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiastic on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

Calcium's Value in Tuberculosis

As a tonic and remedial agent in the treatment of tuberculosis, this element is being studied by scientists and physicians everywhere.

For more than two decades users of Eckman's Alterative have tested its efficacy in such cases, for calcium chlorid is one of the chief constituents of this preparation, which has produced beneficial results in thousands of instances. And in this form it is so combined as to be easily assimilated.

If you are thus afflicted, a trial may prove this to be just what is needed to assist Nature in bringing about a return to normal health.

It is safe to take, because it contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

Car Shortage as Regards Farmers, A Serious Question.

Speaking of the present serious car shortage and its possible effect on farmers, who are soon to enter the market for their spring supplies, including implements, seed, and fertilizer, the Atlanta Constitution, in an editorial of recent date, comments on this question, in part, as follows: "The difficulties that confronted the fertilizer movement in the spring of 1916, when there suddenly developed an extensive car shortage, just at the height of the shipping season, promises to be doubly serious the coming spring, and more. A car shortage then of approximately twenty thousand cars has grown to-day into one of one hundred and eight thousand, on Nov. 1, 1916. There is no indication of a decrease in demand for transportation, rather it will grow. Without more care, conditions will be worse next March, when fertilizers are most needed, than they are to-day. These conditions make it more important that the individual farmer should look far enough ahead to insure his own protection to get what he must have to make his crop. Fertilizers received after planting time would be practically worthless."

According to S. Eastland, President of the Meridian Fertilizer Factory, that operates large factories at Meridian and Hattiesburg, Mississippi, and Shreveport, Louisiana, and that manufactures the well known brands of Meridian Home Mixture and Union Special Acid Phosphate, his company is doing everything possible to avoid a tie-up at shipping time for want of cars. He states: "We have plenty of goods to meet the evident increasing demands. It appears that farmers are going to attempt to increase their yields per acre this season, and take advantage of the high prices for cotton, corn, and other farm products." He suggests that the farmers make early arrangements to move their fertilizer. They should see their fertilizer merchant now and be assured that they will have sufficient fertilizer to carry on their season's operations.

BROTHER POPE LEADS.

Dear Brother Meck: I think you will agree with me that Brother S. L. Pope, of New Albany, Miss., is entitled to the "first prize," as well as to "honorable mention," for sending in the full amount of his assessment for Foreign and Home Missions the first of the New Year. He is establishing a record, as well as setting an example for others. M. T. BYNUM, Treas.,

AN ANSWER TO A QUESTION.

Dear Brother Meek: In reply to the question: "What do you think of a pastor, in charge of a very prominent church, always standing to lead in prayer?" You say, "We think, to say the least of it, that this is a very unmethodistic practice." You might have added: It is a plain violation of our Discipline, and a violation of the preacher's solemn vow, when before God and the Annual Conference he promised "not to mend our rules, but keep them."

Are our rules written on "mere scraps of paper?" Fraternally,
JNO. W. BOSWELL.

Constipation

You are apt to think lightly of a slight case of constipation. Did you know that constipation is incipient auto-intoxication or self-poisoning? You cannot be too careful, for constipation without treatment is liable to become the source of far more serious ills. To be entirely healthy and have a clean body, it is necessary to keep the bowels clean and the liver active. When constipated, take Van Lax, for it is the ideal treatment for constipation. Contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. Does not gripe or nauseate. It is pleasant in taste and results. Sold everywhere by the best dealers. A Godsend to Rheumatics.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood. The cause of rheumatism is uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of your rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE MORMON CHURCH.

The Mormon Church was conceived by the devil and born in iniquity." It has a membership of 397,000, and in 1915 it gained 22,000 new members. It required 14 members to win one new member to a false religion, while it took 34 members of the only true Church to win one member. Every male member of the Mormon Church is subject to call for two years of missionary service. It is a business monopoly as well as an ecclesiastical organization. A young Mormon who makes the sacrifice of two years' service gains in the business world.

WOMEN OF THE WORLD.

Roman Catholic	170,000,000
Protestant	80,000,000
Greek Catholic, etc.	50,000,000
Total Christians	300,000,000
Pagan	600,000,000
Confucian	120,000,000
Hindu	140,000,000
Buddhist	60,000,000
Mohammedan	80,000,000

To many of these 600,000,000 of women only women can go. They are in the harem and zenana; they are field laborers and burden-bearers; they are ostracized and ignorant and swaddled in a bondage that women who breathe the free air can not understand. They know not that the world's Savior is woman's best friend.—Missionary Review of the World.

WHAT OUR SISTER CHURCH HAS DONE FOR MISSIONS.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church sent the first woman physician to India, to China, to Korea, to the Philippines. It opened the first woman's hospital in each of these lands. It founded the first Christian woman's college and the first industrial training school in Asia, the first Protestant college for women in Italy, and the first woman's college in Mexico. It is sharing in the establishing of the first Union Christian Colleges for Women in Madras, in Nanking, and in Tokyo.

The Society's forty-six years have summed up over sixteen million dollars. It sends nearly ninety-five cents of every dollar to the field. Its foreign real estate is worth nearly three million dollars. Its last year's income was $991,710.61. Its membership comprises over 200,000 women, nearly 30,000 young people, and more than 15,000 children. Over 200 Bible women aid in the work of evangelism. In its more than 1,400 schools are gathered nearly 30,000 pupils. Its doctors, with the aid of some 200 nurses and nurse students, ministered last year in 25 hospitals and 13 dispensaries to more than 250,000 patients. As the crown of its work, nearly 15,000 women and girls last year received Christian baptism.

Today one may count at least forty-five woman's missionary societies in the United States and Canada. Each holds some degree of partnership with the general Board of Foreign Missions of its denomination. Some are independent, but co-operating; others are an auxiliary or an integral part of the General Board. Some send out only unmarried women, many contribute to the support of the wives of General Board missionaries; one commissions more men than women for the foreign service. All are banded together in the new Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America.

Exact figures are not available, but one dares to estimate that four of the eighteen million dollars sent from North America to the foreign field in 1915 came from the treasuries of the women's organizations. By divine alchemy, these millions are being transformed into light and healing in all lands the world around.—Louise M. North, in The World Outlook.

A DECISION IN SONG.

India has decision Sabbaths as well as America. We are told that on one such day thirty girls in Bengal signed the following stanza, which they can sing, if they will, to the air of "Just As I Am:"

"Just as I am, young, strong and free,
To be the best that I can be
For truth, and righteousness, and Thee,
Lord of my life, I come."

Fourteen of these girls have since been baptized, and others are ready to take this step.—The Expositor.

WHY BE BAPTIZED?

One of the earliest patients at the dispensary in Toro (Uganda) was an old man who came to receive medicine for an ulcer. He became possessed with a desire to know the truth, and was put into the old man's Bible class for instruction. One day he came to the missionary with streaming eyes and said: "I want to be baptized." The missionary asked him, "Will baptism save us?" And he answered, "Oh, no, but Jesus who died on the cross." "Then what is the use of baptism?" "Well," said he, "Christ said it is to believe and be baptized, and it shows we want to leave our bad habits and follow the hands of Christ." That simple-minded, ignorant old man had caught the true meaning and purpose of baptism—salvation from sin through the Savior's atonement, an act of obedience to Christ's command and a sign and seal of the covenant of grace, followed by a life of true devotion.—The Expositor.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clogg you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder weakness.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

How to avoid Operations

Hospitals are great and necessary institutions, but they should be the last resort for women who suffer with ills peculiar to their sex. Many letters on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., prove that a great number of women after they have been recommended to submit to an operation have been made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here are three such letters. All sick women should read them.

Marinette, Wis.—"I went to the doctor and he told me I must have an operation for a female trouble, and I hated to have it done as I had been married only a short time. I would have terrible pains and my hands and feet were cold all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured, and I feel better in every way. I give you permission to publish my name because I am so thankful that I feel well again." —Mrs. Fred Behnke, Marinette, Wis.

Detroit, Mich.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so run down with female troubles that I could not do anything, and our doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. I could hardly walk without help so when I read about the Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others I thought I would try it. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and used them according to directions. They helped me and today I am able to do all my work and I am well." —Mrs. Thos. Dwyer, 989 Milwaukee Ave., East, Detroit, Mich.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."—Miss Irene Froelicher, 1923 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

If you would like special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

From the Field

Leland, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: All continues well at Leland. The official board at our meeting this afternoon (Jan. 2) adopted the budget plan, relieving the pastor of the benevolent collections, and increasing the assessment very handsomely above that of last year. We paid everything in full last year, with an excess on one or more items, and hope to do the same this year. Many substantial expressions from the membership were received Christmas, and we don't think that Leland is as bad a town as it was once pictured to be in a northern magazine. Rev. V. C. Curtis, the new presiding elder, will be with us next Sunday. He has been busy with his work on the district since moving and is already being commended for his ability, as manifested in his zeal and activity in the affairs of the kingdom. They say that he "fits right in, as if he had been an 'elder' a full quadrennium." We are with you unanimously in your stand for preserving the ideals and autonomy of our great Church.—E. H. Cunningham, P. C.

Prairie and Strongs Charge (N. Miss. Conf.)

Dear Dr. Meek: As you know, I was moved at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference from near the extreme western part of the Conference to the extreme eastern part. After spending two years very pleasantly at Main Street, Water Valley, I was read out by Bishop Murrah for Prairie and Strongs. I reached Strongs on Dec. 12, 1916, at 8:20 p. m., and was met at the train by Brother and Sister H. D. Watson, who escorted me to the parsonage, where we found a good, warm supper waiting for us; but after an entire day spent on the train, you may know whether we did justice to the nice supper or not. I have been to all the churches on the work and have been received very kindly, and I find that I have a very fine class of people to work with. I am planning and praying for a great year here. The possibilities of this charge are unlimited. If I can only get the people to see a vision of greater things in the Lord's work. People are satisfied with too little in the work of the Church, and this is the greatest drawback to the progress of the kingdom of God in many places. I find that my predecessor, A. H. Williams, wrought well here, having left behind what is, to me, a very neat and attractive parsonage. He believes in having a good home for the preacher to live in and he works for it.—C. Wesley Baley, P. C.

Winona Ct., N. Miss. Conf.

Dear Dr. Meek: At the last session of the North Mississippi Conference I was returned to the Winona Circuit for the second year. The people have received us very kindly, and we are now down to hard work. We are thankful to God for any degree of success that attended our labors last year. But it shall be our aim to do even a better year's work this year than last. Oh, the people are so nice to me! I am not an old man by any means, but I must confess that I have been here long enough to see several Christmases. And I must say that this has been the happiest Christmas that I have ever spent.

Why say this? Well, to tell the truth, Santa Claus came to see us every day for a whole week. When I was just a little fatherless lad out at the old country home in Pontotoc County, he only came on Christmas eve night, and would only leave a small amount, candy, one apple, and maybe one orange. And oh, how glad I was to get up Christmas morning to find these tokens of love in my little sock! Of course, he did all for me he was able to do. I am not grumbling at all. If you have not found it out, Doctor, I will tell you now that Winona and the surrounding community contains the salt of the earth.

On Thursday evening, Brother T. H. Spencer's auto truck was driven into our back-yard, was backed up to the back door of the parsonage, and those in charge of it began to unload it. I went out, of course, to see what it all meant, thinking that the driver had made a mistake. And, as we opened the back door, we were met by our old Professor Henry, and, on being asked, What all this meant, he informed me that Santa Claus had come to see me, and he had brought about $35 worth of such things as a Methodist preacher's family enjoy—especially about Christmas time. The list included a barrel of flour, sugar, coffee, rice, meal, molasses, canned goods, meat, etc., with about a bushel of apples, and about four dozen oranges. And there has not been a day since that Santa Claus has failed to visit us. Then, besides this, we received through the mail from two unknown friends, $5 each. May God bless the Winona people! I love them all; and, Doctor, I think they all love me. Pray that this may be the greatest year of my life.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

A NEW YEAR'S CAKE.

Mr. Editor: It was our unique experience to receive as a New Year's good wish a layer cake made by a recent addition to our church who was one hundred and nine year's old on November 23 last. Who else in the Church has had such an experience? Led by their superintendent, our Junior Epworth League also remembered us with a "pound party" some days later. P. O. LOWREY.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

Kidney Disorder

(BY DR. L. C. BABCOCK)

The most simple methods are usually the most effective ones when treating any disorder of the human system. The mere drinking a cup of hot water each morning, plenty of pure water all day, and a little Anuric before every meal has been found the most effective means of overcoming kidney trouble. Death would occur if the kidneys did not work day and night in separating poisons and uric acid from the blood.

The danger signals are backache, depressions, pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headache, chillness, rheumatic twinges, swollen joints or gout.

Since it is such a simple matter to step into your favorite drug store and obtain Anuric, anyone who earnestly desires to regain health and new life will waste no time in beginning this treatment

IT'S DANGEROUS GROUND that you stand on—with a cough or a cold, and your blood impure. Out of just these conditions comes Consumption.

You must do something. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures severe, lingering Coughs, Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Affections, and every disease that can be reached through the blood. Nervous prostration and debility are conquered by it. When you're weak after an attack of grip or fever—you will build up health and strength and put on needed flesh by taking the "Discovery."

Obtain at your drug store a vial of "Pleasant Pellets," made up of the May-apple, aloe leaves and jalap. This is the well-known pellet made up nearly fifty years ago, by Dr. Pierce, and which can be had for a quarter from almost any apothecary. Simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 64—No. 3. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3178.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 18, 1917. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

"Be but faithful, that is all;
Go right on, and close behind thee,
There shall follow still and find thee
Help, sure help."

Patience is a noble and rare virtue. And when possessed in large measure, what an element of strength it is!

Not all charity is "sweet charity." That which is based on card parties, dances, raffles, etc., might better be termed "tainted charity."

Anyhow, we think that there was one thing settled at the late meeting of the Joint Commission on Unification in Baltimore, namely that its members could not he "RELICED" into an agreement.

In his brilliant book, "Wesley and His Century," Dr. W. H. Fitchett devotes a chapter to "Wesley's Critics." Never was there a man who stood for anything or accomplished anything of consequence who was not "harked at."

* * *

There are some who want the joys and rewards of the Christian life without its sacrifices and tolls; and there apparently are some who want to be at peace with the evil things of the world and yet conquer the world for the Master. Vain dreamers are both of these classes.

In an address delivered to a great English audience in Guild Hall, London, on January 11, Premier Lloyd-George said: "I want to see your checks hurtling through the air to the enemy's trenches. Every well directed check, properly loaded and timed, is a more formidable weapon of destruction than a twelve-inch shell." There are many ways in which money is power, and there is a great responsibility upon those who possess it to use it rightly.

In a recent farewell address to the California Legislature, Governor Hiram Johnson, who is soon to take a seat in the United States Senate, said: "We have learned that the first obligation and duty of a government are to its men, its women, and its children." Mr. Johnson is right in this affirmation; and we are inclined to think that this is one of the most important discoveries of all time. Human beings are far more valuable than anything else on the earth, and only as their true welfare is promoted can a State or a Nation make real progress. The failure to recognize the fact that the interests of manhood, womanhood, and childhood outweigh the interests of property has been responsible for much of the misgovernment, wretchedness, and suffering of the past. And none of the present-day tendencies augurs brighter things for the future than the disposition of rulers and legislators to try to make the State serve and uplift the masses of the people. This is the highest and Divinest order of democracy.

THE PATH TO HOLINESS AND POWER.

Sorrow seems to be necessary to the making of majestic men. Those untouched by it appear to be too much concerned for self and too much enamored of the world to become completely surrendered to God and to carry the needs of their fellow-men fully upon their hearts. It was a lonely disciple, who had been scourged and banished, that the Heavenly Father adjudged to be fit to receive the sublimest revelations of the eternal world ever given to a human being in this present life, and Christianity's mightiest builder was afflicted with a grievous "thorn in the flesh" for which there could be no deliverance this side of the tomb. The most moving and inspiring preachers that we have ever known had been trained in the school of suffering. In finding relief for their own burdened and bleeding souls, they learned the secret of how to comfort and strengthen other needy ones about them.

Wonderful are the following words contained in the 12th chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews: "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?" And the writer, furthermore, states that the object of this chastening is "that we might be partakers of his holiness." These and other like passages of Scripture should tend to reconcile us to the sorrows and afflictions that may come to us along life's pilgrimage and help us to try to obey the exhortation of the poet:

"When God afflicts thee, think he hews a rugged stone
Which must be shaped, or else aside as useless thrown."

PRAYER INDISPENSABLE.

It should be a distinguishing characteristic of a Christian that he knows how to pray. Not necessarily to utter eloquent sentences fluently, or to express in his petitions profound and beautiful thoughts; but that his soul should know the path to God and how reverently and trustingly to speak to Him of its own deep needs and also of the needs of others that it has come to carry as a burden. The fact is, a man's prayers are a better measure of what he truly is than any other utterances that come from his lips. Though he may voice his petitions logically and in faultless English, if his religious life is at a low ebb and he is following the Master "afar off," there will be an indication of these facts in his supplications. An assumed familiarity cannot take the place of a genuine, daily intimacy with the risen Lord. One who would pray well must live well. Effectual, fervent prayer, unless it be that of a suddenly awakened soul crying out for some urgent need that it has just come to know, may be expected to emanate only from the heart of a "righteous man."

How marvelous were the prayers of Paul and of Jesus! Back of them lay their wonderful experiences and the knowledge of the Heavenly Father born of them. One person can do but little toward teaching another how to pray. Each individual must for himself chiefly acquire this power.

Do our Methodist people pray as much and as well as in other years? If they do not, no matter what else they may do, they must soon come to be less holy in heart and life than those who went before them and accomplish less for the REAL upbuilding of the Kingdom. We emphasize the world "real" because the triumphs of Churchanity are not necessarily the triumphs of Christianity. We do not doubt that much we are given to shouting over will be found to be worthless "hay or stubble" in the day when "the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is."

A GRAND PEOPLE, BUT—

Under the above caption, a Presbyterian contemporary says:

"The Presbyterians are a grand people, but they are too much given to 'joining' outside things. If they would keep the money and the brains they spend on all sorts of outside bodies, it would be better for their churches and better for the world. They can find use for all their talents and money in the activities of their Church."

We wonder if this utterance would not apply equally as well to Southern Methodists. We rather think so.

WORTH PONDERING.

The confession of faith written by Daniel Webster, which we are printing in this issue of the Advocate, is, we think, a very interesting statement. As a statesman, lawyer, orator, and thinker, Mr. Webster was world-famed, and his carefully given opinion about any matter is entitled to more than ordinary weight. We, therefore, desire to direct particular attention to the following paragraph of his reproduced utterance:

"I believe that the Bible is to be understood and received in the plain and obvious meaning of its passages; since I cannot persuade myself that a book intended for the instruction and conversion of the whole world should cover its true meaning in any such mystery and doubt that none but critics and philosophers can discover it."

This emphatic pronouncement contrasts very strikingly with some of the talk that we hear in this day.

Blessed is the man who, having nothing to say, abstains from giving us wordy evidence of that fact.—George Eliot.

"A Bible in the hands of a good Christian lasts about five years, but only a few Christians use their Bibles that hard."

'TIS BETTER ON BEFORE.

Mrs. J. M. Hart.

God's love has sweetened all my life
With gladness more and more;
And still, though bright the days have been,
'Tis better on before.

So blest am I, my cup of joy
Is daily running o'er;
And yet I learn, with each new day,
'Tis better on before.

For God's sweet gift of perfect peace
His goodness I adore,
And onward reach to deeper joys;
'Tis better on before.

It does not seem that my dear Lord
Of love could give me more,
But larger measures He bestows;
'Tis better on before.

WORTH PONDERING.

He that saveth his time from prayer shall lose it; but he that loseth his time in communion with God shall find it in blessing.—Wilder.

EVERY MAN'S MISSION.

Fruit-bearing is important to every human soul. It is to bear fruit we are appointed. The greater the fruit, the greater our joy. A fruitless life is a bitter life. And from this viewpoint we learn the lesson that not what we take in, but what we give out, not what we receive, but what we produce, is the measure of life. To pass through the course of this world and then to have written at the end, "fruitless—a failure," means bitterness and shame here and hereafter.—The Presbyterian.

THE WORK OF THE LIVING CHRIST.

Reflect upon the vastness of the work which our Savior is now carrying on in heaven. If we believe the words of the Bible we must feel that what Christ does in any one believing soul would be enough to occupy all the care, as it would far indeed exceed the capacity, of the wisest and the best of men. The cleansing of one heart, the keeping of one life, the adaptation of a Providence, as minute as it is powerful, to the good of one soul, must be a work of thought, of exertion, of time, of patience, far beyond the reach of our very imagination to conceive. But multiply this work a thousand times ten thousand, spread it through the length and breadth of the earth, protect it through a thousand generations, vary it by the infinite modification of care and of circumstance, of disposition, race and ages, reflect on all this, and you will understand as never before the magnitude of the work of the ascended Christ.—Dean Vaughan.

THE PROPER ATTITUDE.

The poetry of all growing life consists in carrying an oldness into a newness, a past into a future, always. So only can our days possibly be bound "each to each by natural piety." I would not for the world think that twenty years hence I should have ceased to see the things which I see now, and love them still. But it would make life wearisome beyond expression if I thought that twenty years hence I should see them just as I see them now, and love them with no deeper love because of other visions of their lovableness. And so there comes this deep and simple rule for any man as he crosses the line dividing one period of his life from another, the same rule which he may use also as he passes through any critical occurrence of his life: Make it a time in which you shall realize your faith, and also in which you shall expect of your faith new and greater things. Take what you believe and are, and hold it in your hand with a new firmness as you go forward; but look on it with continual and confident expectation to see it open into something greater and truer.—Phillips Brooks.

WALTER MALONE: HIS LIFE AND WORKS.

By Frazer Hood, Ph.D.

(Reprinted from the Methodist Review Quarterly)

I

The past quarter of a century has witnessed some significant additions to Southern literature. In fiction and in essay, Southern writers have achieved a success which challenges the attention of readers beyond the limits of national boundaries. They have broken the bands of provincialism, which formerly were conspicuous in so many of them, and to-day they write with a vision whose horizon is national in its sweep. In the field of poetry, also, Southern genius has produced creative results; and while this creative activity has invented no new forms of verse, it has breathed into the old forms a dewy freshness and a wholesome sanity.

Among Southern poets, Walter Malone ranks subordinate to none. Indeed, there are reasons—which I shall set forth in this paper—strong enough, it seems to me, to justify the conviction that he deserves the foremost place, not only among Southern poets, but among American poets as well. There is, however, an infirmity of mind, a kind of mental hyperopia, that blurs our perception of a contemporary artist and his art. We never feel quite certain that the image we get upon our mental retina is a true one, and we hesitate to hazard a judgment of values.

European critics, viewing Poe's art, outre mer, got a perspective that the poet's compatriots were unable to get. We are still disputing among ourselves whether Walt Whitman is a poet at all or not, while to foreign critics he bulks large on the Western shores, the most original of the new-world poets. Walter Malone being so near us, it is not to be wondered at that our envisagement of him is far from clear-cut and perspective.

If our analogy between a judgment of values and a sense-perception be permissible, then it is further true that the distance required for a clear focus is directly proportional to the greatness of the achievement. Longfellow and Lowell needed not to be removed in time for our American eyes to see them clearly, but Poe and Whitman did. In the two former pulsed a lesser genius than glowed in the two latter. The beauty that the New England poets felt and perceived was what our familiarity with great poetry had already revealed to us, and their genius was rather that of translating into American idiom what the great masters had uttered in the "grand style."

Walter Malone is one of our American poets whom the critics have reserved for some future attention. It may be that time will bury his memory "deep as the hidden sleep" of those who lie in some forgotten churchyard; but my judgment is that the future holds for him a fadeless crown of amaranth and gold.

II

Walter Malone was born February 10, 1866, in De Soto County, Mississippi, about thirteen miles southeast of Memphis, Tennessee. He was the youngest of a family of twelve children. His father, Dr. Franklin Jefferson Malone, was a man of culture and prominence in Mississippi, serving his State as a member of the Mississippi Constitutional Convention of 1868. In earlier years he had seen service in the Mexican War as an army surgeon. He died in 1873. Thus deprived of a father's care at the age of seven years, Walter did not have those advantages which the older children enjoyed; but his mother, a woman of rare powers, made amends for the loss as only a woman can do. She managed to give her younger children such educational advantages as the local schools afforded. At the age of six years Walter was initiated into the mysteries of formal learning at an "old-field schoolhouse," which stood across the State line in Tennessee, three miles from his home. He continued his attendance here until he was sixteen, trudging the distance from his home every day except when work on the farm required his presence there. During these ten years his young soul unfolded amid the influences of Nature. His spirit was always responsive to the music of birds and water brooks, to the beauty of Southern flowers, and to the grandeur of tree and hill. His early life is reminiscent of Burns who meditated in the opening furrows and caught inspiration for his earlier poems when his young muscles were fatigued from the toil between plow-handles.

When twelve years old he made his first attempt to imprison his fancies and emotions in verse. Always a stern critic of his own work, he later destroyed all these boyish efforts. Between thirteen and fourteen he wrote several articles which were published in the Louisville Courier-Journal. Thus encouraged, he began, at fourteen, seriously to write, and continued with adolescent zeal until he was sixten, when he published his first volume under the title "Claribel and Other Poems." This was a book of three hundred pages, and contained two long narrative poems and a number of shorter ones. While the poems are crude, revealing the touch of youth, they contain the promise and potency of awakening genius. It was the largest book of verse ever printed by a boy under twenty-one.

In the fall of 1883 he entered the preparatory department of the University of Mississippi, where in due course he became a freshman and graduated in the class of 1887. He was not a student after the old-time professor's ideal. He never liked mathematics, and until his last two years was a rather indifferent student, giving more time to the library than to the formal work of the classroom. He became early associated with the college magazine, and during his last year was its editor-in-chief.

In 1885 he published his second volume, "The Outcast and Other Poems." Even a hurried reading will reveal that these poems are less juvenile and show a steadier power. This book brought forth favorable comment from Edmund Clarence Stedman and Oliver Wendell Holmes. John Greenleaf Whittier, writing to the author, said: "The book gives promise, but it is not what it would be were the author ten years older. Why, at thy age, I could not make a respectable rhyme."

After his graduation, Mr. Malone was admitted to the bar at Oxford, Mississippi, and shortly thereafter came to Memphis to associate himself with his brother, the Hon. James H. Malone, in the practice of law. He launched himself with a strong initiative into the practice of law, and until 1891 his Muse was neglected. In the next year he published "Narcissus and Other Poems." Two years later came from the press "Songs of Dusk and Dawn." In 1896 followed "Songs of December and June," a little volume of twenty lyrics; and the next year "The Coming of the King," a collection of eight short stories. Such writers as Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Charles Dudley Warner, and Edgar Fawcett were high in their praises of this work.

In 1897 he retired from the practice of law and moved to New York, where, for the next three years, he gave himself wholly to literary work. In 1900 he returned to Memphis and published "Songs of North and South," a collection of poems that had appeared in magazines during the previous three years. This volume introduced the author to British readers, receiving generous welcome from Alfred Austin, Israel Zangwill, and English and Scotch reviewers. In 1904 he published a complete edition of such of his poems as he considered worthy of perpetuating. In 1906 appeared "Songs of East and West," a book containing twenty-seven poems, many of them being pictures of travel in Europe, California, Florida, Cuba, and Mexico. His most widely known poem, "Opportunity," was published in Munsey's Magazine in 1905. Whatever may be the surer judgment of the critics as to the value of this poem, it is a lyric that awakens a response in the common man's breast, and makes him feel stronger for the day's work and superior to the day's faults and failures.

In this same year, in justice of practically all the Memphis bar, Mr. Malone was appointed Judge of the Second Circuit Court of Shelby County and here by election held the office until his death, May 25, 1913.

II

I am writing this on the first anniversary of his death, and as I write there comes to my ears the plaintive music of his poem, "To an Unknown Reader":

It years to come, when I have passed away
Your careless glance upon this page may fall
So then, my unknown reader, pause I pray
And hearken to my faint and far-off call.

O, unknown reader, for your sake I plan
Beside you let me raise my wandering
I love you, let me take your hand in mine
And tell you stories, laugh or weep or sing.

From death's dark empire shall my soul depart.
Your smile, your friendship, and your love to win.
Behind I come and knock upon your heart
For God's sake, reader, rise and let me in.

These lines, so reminiscent of Beethoven's "Farewell to the Piano," disclose at once a boldness and a childlike unconsciousness not found in a lesser soul.

To those of us who knew him, Mr. Malone was the most modest of men, in whom really great dwelt to guide and restrain. But his stores of mind were phenomenal, and he had "a memory like the British Museum Library," and its material arranged as orderly. His interests were universal, and whether the discussion at a company of friends, turned to the merits of champion chess-players or to great events in history, to the habits and habitat of some little-known fowler or to the latest discoveries in science, he was equally at home, and generally astonished us by the accuracy of his knowledge. He was a keen scholar, a keen artist, and withal a man of modest demeanor, free from those eccentricities and oddities so commonly associated with men of genius. His poetry was the chief concern of his life, and he toiled at uncongenial tasks for the bread that perisheth, only that he might be able to give forth from his soul that which is imperishable. Spenser, polishing lenses during the day that he might write philosophy at night, presents us with a companion picture. While Judge Malone achieved an enviable eminence in his profession, he never valued this success.

From long familiarity with his poetry, and from a careful study of its qualities, I am convinced that posterity will make amends for the neglect into which contemporary readers and critics have allowed his poetry to fall.

(To be concluded in next issue.)

THEN AND NOW.

By Rev. P. A. Sowell.

Who among us is willing to forget? We should believe that the largest and best are ahead of us. While the horizon stretches far before us, the past is not empty space. It is the part of wisdom to look backward, as well as at the present and future.

Sitting in the silence of life's evening, these words, "Then" and "Now," knock at my thoughts with their train of suggestions. It is a bare possibility for a Methodist of to-day, knowing of the phenomena and teaching of even sixty or seventy years ago concerning Christian doctrine and experience, only through present-day sources, to understand these questions, as they were taught and believed then. It would surprise an old preacher to hear the reply to the inquiry, if made to the majority of present-day preachers, "Did you ever see and hear A. L. P. Green, Jno. B. McFerrin, Bishops Doggett, Marvin, Kavanaugh, McTyeire, and Pierce, to hear the answer, "No." Those who sat at their feet can only wonder how present-day Methodists know anything perfectly concerning those vital matters. For these men, and such like men, revolved as great luminaries in the firmament of Methodism.

In spite of this loss to the Methodists of to-day the pendulum has swung to perpetuating the family name, and one sees its phenomena be lost. Though it is possible for a business man who has moved far from the village in which he began and enlarged the sphere of his enterprises to retain his style and signature through the symbolic years, it does not follow that the children [illegible] the same mail. May this not [illegible] "Methodists." It is true we have the same family name. The love of Wesley's still finds response in our souls as it does [illegible] Methodists, but the use [illegible] many day [illegible] really the same "New" as "Then."

A few old remember how "it was said in the years ago. Methodists then made much [illegible] conversion as the Pauline experience in the way to and in the city of Damascus. Methodists taught that all men were in a Damascus road—a journey [illegible] and that there was need of [illegible] conversion. Men were urged to "seek" "[illegible] sought under conviction." There must also, they felt, be the fullness of the assurance that the voice—and a vision of the risen and glorious Christ and a conscious "reconciliation" with him. Like Paul, they had great stress on personal experience, in the new life. These Scriptures and others were much used: "Peace with God," "Know Him." They expected a real victory in the life's struggles—"keep the field"—were "ready to be offered." It was considered a misfortune to die sick for one to die calmly as the ordinary natural processes does. Like Paul, they anticipated with enthusiasm the future home—"A house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Heaven at the last was a great anticipation—it was not an incident or a by-product as I have heard from a modern pulpit. To them heaven meant everything.

They also had definite expectations through the hope of the resurrection. To them, the resurrection was not a silent slipping of the soul from the body and rising into a spiritual body leaving no more history for the body. To them, somehow some great day would come, and "God would raise the dead." They had a tender regard for their physical bodies and were concerned for destiny in it they had repented and rejoiced, suffered and triumphed, and they expected the resurrection to bring deliverance and honor to their bodies, as it had to the body of their Lord.

With no hard intent as to the present it must be said that it is true that the Pauline view as mentioned above, concerning the phenomena of the Christian experience, is not magnified to-day. A favorite text to-day is "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Service is the key-word. Neither is the Pauline view of Christ on the Damascus lesson so emphasized now as then. Teachers are making more of "The babe in the Manger," the "Son of Man," the "Teacher by the Wayside," the "Healer in the home of the Centurion," or Jesus, "with little children in his arms" than of the vision of the risen Christ. The present call is, "Follow Jesus," rather than to urge "ye must be born again."

It is true that the present teaching has a far stretching horizon—"Go ye into all the world, disciple all nations." But people who are sixty or seventy years old, distinctly remember hearing sung:

"From many an ancient river,
From many a palmy plain,
They call us to deliver
Their land from error's chain."

And these lines were sung "with the spirit and with the understanding also." And these people have a recollection that at least a few set sail, even on slow-going vessels, and were beaten hither and thither by adverse winds into strange and wide seas; but they held firmly to their compasses and prayed that God might at least bring them into some port of China or India.

Can we say which of these—the "then" or "now"—is the better? Ought we not to remember that all the yesterdays, all the to-days, and

Church News

Our two Annual Conferences in Oklahoma have started a movement to establish a Methodist Orphanage in that State, which they will jointly maintain.

Dr. W. T. Lowrey, President of Blue Mountain College, estimates that the loss from the destruction of the Jennings Building on the campus of that institution by fire on December 23, was about $15,000 more than the insurance carried.

Of the $225,000 to be raised for Galloway College (for young women), Searcy, Arkansas, the town in which it is located, has pledged itself to give not less than $25,000. We notice that Mr. Thomas B. King is one of the Commissioners for this institution.

Bishop Lambuth left early in January for New York and other points in the East and South, to look after the interests of the Church committed to his hands. He will probably not return until the latter part of March, though he may return earlier if he is abic to expedite the many and varied business interests of the Church calling him East at this time.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says: "Mr. Asa Candier was inaugurated Mayor of Atlanta last Monday night (January 1). In deference to his wishes, the inaugural exercises were simple and brief. His inaugural address shows that he is going to do his best for the advancement of the city's interests." The Georgia metropolis is fortunate in having secured the services of such a man as Mr. Candler as its official head.

The Southern Presbyterian Church, as a result of a year's campaign, has added $137,500 to its endowment for the care of aged preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased ministers. This fund now amounts to $538,500, which, with the annual contributions of the churches, will provide to be distributed yearly among such claimants approximately $100,000. Efforts will be continued to increase this endowment fund to $1,000,000.

The Western North Carolina Conference has appointed a Hospital Committee with a view to establishing a Methodist Hospital within its bounds. This Committee held a meeting in Salisbury on December 28, 1916, and steps were taken to get offers from leading cities for the location of this institution within their limits. The purpose of those having this movement in hand is to construct a plant to cost not less than $150,000.

Chancellor J. R. Day, of Syracuse University, has resigned from the Unification Commission of the Church, North, and has been succeeded by Dr. J. J. Wallace, Editor of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate. The following have also been named as alternates in connection with that body: Bishop Luther B. Wilson; President C. M. Stuart, of Garrett Biblical Institute; Dr. James R. Joy, Editor of the New York Christian Advocate, and Judge C. A. Pollock, of North Dakota.

The Christian Index, the official organ of the Baptists of Georgia, has increased its subscription price to $2.50 per annum; the Texas Christian Advocate has announced that its subscription price to ministers will be raised to $2, and the St. Louis Christian Advocate has considerably decreased the size of its pages. All periodicals, secular and religious, are feeling appreciably the effect of the high cost of printing materials incident to the European war.

The Alabama Christian Advocate says: "We congratulate North Alabama Methodism on having Dr. Thornwell Haynes as the President of Birmingham College. When he found that the Birmingham Atheltic Club was going to give a dance immediately after a game of basket ball with the Birmingham College team, Dr. Haynes had his boys to cancel the engagement." Our contemporary is right. This action deserves commendation. Would that we had in charge of our Methodist institutions of learning more men of the type of Dr. Haynes!

As a result of the efforts of Rev. Carl D. Harris, Editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, Dr. Oliver S. Baketel, the editor of the Year Book of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has finally come across and inserted therein, in lieu of a formerly unfair and misleading statement, the following just utterance: "In accordance with the Plan of Separation adopted by the General Conference of 1844, held in New York City, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized at Louisville, Ky., in 1845." We congratulate both of these gentlemen upon the straightening out of this matter. Obviously Mr. Harris is a diplomat of no mean ability.

It is stated that Los Angeles will try the plan of having steel cages for automobiles left standing on the streets, instead of merely chalked-off places. This would make the vehicles safe, but the question of expense will have to be reckoned with in the execution of this scheme.

There will be during the year 1917 four eclipses of the sun and three of the moon. Not since 1787 have there been this many eclipses in a single year, and it is stated that there will not be so many again until 1982. The first of the three lunar eclipses, which was a total one and visible throughout the United States, took place on Sunday night, January 7.

At the recent New York Automobile Show the Studebaker Company had on exhibit what was termed a "gold car," which cost $30,000. It is a six-cylinder, seven-passenger touring car, with a distinct Victoria top, and finished throughout in glistening white enamel and gold. Over 400 ounces of 24-carat gold are said to have been used in the finishing work upon this car.

The Scientific American tells of an appliance for the re-inking of typewriter ribbons that is to be placed upon the market. It is described as "a handy, compact device, no larger than a fountain pen, which will re-ink a typewriter ribbon in a few moments without the necessity of removing it from the machine. As a ribbon usually outlasts considerably the ink on it, this invention should result in a considerable saving to the users of typewriters.

The Government Department of Agriculture calls attention to the fact that, while the population of the United States has increased 24,000,000 within the last 15 years, the number of beef cattle has decreased during the same period by 6,000,000, and the number of sheep by 10,000,000, and that the increase in the number of hogs has ben only 11,000,000. According to this showing, it is not surprising that the cost of meat in this country has greatly advanced.

Hon. Frank O. Lowden, who is soon to be inaugurated as Governor of Illinois, has resigned as a director of the Pullman Car Company. In so doing, Colonel Lowden said: "I do not feel that in the discharge of my duties as Governor, I should be officially connected with a company whose interests might by any possibility be affected by any action I might be called upon to take as the Chief Executive of Illinois." This unquestionably is the proper position for a public official to take.

Judge J. A. P. Campbell, the last surviving member of the first Confederate Congress and the last living signer of the Constitution of the Confederate States, died at his home in Jackson, Miss., on January 10, at the advanced age of 87 years. Judge Campbell was a lawyer of conspicuous ability and served for many years on the Supreme Bench of Mississippi; and was also an author of law books of note. He was a man of high character and a member of the Baptist Church.

Colonel William Frederick Cody, the noted scout known as "Buffalo Bill," died in Denver, Colo., on January 10. He was born in Scott County, Iowa, on February 26, 1846, and served the Government at different times in various capacities. Of late years he had been most before the public in his "Wild West Show." He is said to have won the title of "Buffalo Bill" when he "contracted to furnish the Kansas Pacific Railway Company all the buffalo meat required to feed the laborers engaged in the construction of their road, and killed in 18 months (1867-8) 4820 buffaloes." It is stated the body of Colonel Cody will finally rest in a tomb hewn out of solid rock on the top of Lookout Mountain, near Denver. Temporarily, his remains will repose in a receiving vault in Denver, after having lain in state in the Capitol Building of Colorado.

THE CARD-PLAYING HOME.

A converted gambler of Chicago said with emphasis and from wide experience: "The card-playing home is the kindergarten for the gambling saloon." Says Mr. John Bigelow: "Nine peope out of ten, when they for the first time accept an invitation to join a game of whist or poker have no more suspicion about the passions that they may be apt to nurse than the maid of sixteen when she engages in her first flirtation." The "Christian Index" observes: "We have never known a reputable, spirtually-minded, soul-winning preacher to be a card-player, nor have we ever known Church members, distinguished for their piety and spirituality and for their regular attendance upon the mid-week prayer meeting, who were card-players. Card-playing is not profitable for the development of Christian character and for enlarging the usefulness of Christians in the promotion of spirituality and consecration in the lives of others. The tendencies of card-playing, like those of dancing, are in the wrong direction. Just as the dance furnishes victims of vice, just so social card-playing furnishes recruits for the gambling-room."—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

ANOTHER PASTOR WANTED.

Dear Advocate: I have just received a letter from Rev. C. F. Staples announcing his inability, by reason of failing health, to serve the charge to which he had been sent—Jenning and Westlake. I therefore desire to secure a pastor for that work. Please so state in the Advocate. I think I have secured a man for the mission appointment concerning which you have been carrying an announcement; so please discontinue it.

CADDO LETTER.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

It is the aftermath of that sciatica, Meek, that vexed me so last Spring, the echo of the "ouch." But the news from Baltimore is acting like a tonic on my system. I am happy over the halt of the "union" rush. Those Goucher roses will bloom and fade before the consummation of the Saratoga program. The "Commission" is composed of able men, but they have not got a monopoly of brains, and, unless I am mistaken, it will require more brains than they have to unite the two Churches, unless one or the other surrenders what each has always held as fundamental; and the halt at Baltimore means that there is to be no surrender.

I am loyal to my Church, and if they can find a method of unification that will leave us free and independent within the "union," and not subject us to the domination of a Northern majority, I will acquiesce in the plan. But personally I don't want any union. We will be stronger and happier without it, because free to develop according to our type. It is a superficial view that does not see radical differences in many things between the North and the South. These differences will not disturb us as long as each is free to conform to its own ideal; but when you force us into a union where one or the other must give up what it holds as sacred, then we clash. I am perfectly willing for the Northern man to sit down on the same seat with the Negro if he wants to. It is none of my business. This is a free country. But when he says that I must do so, and attempts by his majority to compel me to do it, right there we have trouble. Better stay apart, and I hope they will.

We like Shreveport. This is a great Church, admirably organized and well equipped for work. The people have received us kindly and we are starting off with encouraging prospects for a useful pastorate. We did not know until we had to pull up and move how attached we had become to our Columbia home. Nowhere will you find a more charming people than the people of South Carolina, and while Charleston claims to be the "creme de la creme," Columbia cannot be beat. I especially enjoyed the fine intellectual associations we had there with the University and various schools. The place has "an atmosphere" which I miss here. Yet with Centenary College as a center the day may not be far off when Shreveport can boast of something infinitely higher and better than oil and gas. There is wealth enough here in our Church alone to put this noble school on a sure foundation and make it the pride of the city. And it should not be a purely Methodist institution, but a Shreveport College. Shreveport ought to be known as the seat of Centenary College. I would like to go to Boston (for while I don't want to unite with them, I immensely like the Yankees) and have my friends say, "And you are in Shreveport. That is where Centenary College is located. Splendid seat of learning, that. Bids fair to be a Southern Harvard." Why not? All it needs is the money they are making out of the oil and gas and cotton and lumber around here. And you don't catch me abusing the Yankees until we are as free with our money for education as they are. The South is growing rich fast, and we must try to create a public sentiment that will turn more of our wealth into the production of intellectual commodities.

O these golden days, Meek! Each day we have been here has been a sparkling gem in the crown of old winter. It makes a fellow feel like kicking up his heels and hurrahing for the universe—especially when he has the good news from Baltimore. Amen.

A GREATER MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

To the Methodists of Mississippi:

Dear Brethren: Millsaps College, founded in 1892 through the generosity of the lamented Major R. W. Millsaps and the Methodists of Mississippi in response to the splendid offer first made by him, is now closing the twenty-fifth year of its history, and although it is very young in comparison with other colleges of the State, its work has been attended with phenomenal success from the very beginning. This, our only "A" grade Methodist college for Mississippi boys, ranks among the very best institutions of learning in the South both as to endowment and standard for graduation. Hundreds of graduates, thoroughly trained in mind and heart, have gone out from its classic halls to bless business and society and the Church with lofty ideals and skilled service, and many of them have already achieved large success in various occupations, reflecting great credit upon themselves and upon their Alma Mater.

Under the leadership of our lamented Bishop Charles B. Galloway, first President of the Board of Trustees, Bishop Wm. B. Murrah, the first President, and the two educators who have succeeded him since his election to the Bishopric, the College has made a record of which the Church may well be proud; but it is now realized by the faculty, by the Board of Trustees and the friends of the institution that if a larger patronage is to be obtained, and the magnificent educational plant at the command of the Church is to be utilized to the best advantage, the psychological moment has arrived when an advance step must be taken in the way of providing more adequate facilities for boarding the students of the College proper, the present brick dormitory being intended for the students in the Preparatory Department. Accordingly, the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees, after carefully considering the needs of the College and of the Methodist boys of Mississippi, have decided to launch a movement looking to the erection in the near future of a handsome and well-appointed brick dormitory to cost $60,000, and accommodating 150 students. The need of such a building is imperative, if the slogan, "a greater Millsaps College," is to be anything more than idle sentiment. The 125,000 Methodists of Mississippi are well able to provide the funds necessary for such an improvement, and if our people generally will co-operate with the college authorities in this worthy movement, the new dormitory will be in process of erection before the beginning of the next session. What ought to be done can be done. We respectfully ask the hearty co-operation of every pastor and presiding elder and loyal Methodist in Mississippi in bulding the new dormitory, and in putting 400 students in the College next fall.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Let us not lose sight of the fact that each point that goes to make a standard Sunday school is intended to bring the soul into a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ and to train each individual in Christian service.

1. The purpose of the Cradle Roll is to hold the little one for Christ, to nurture its living soul that it may grow in the grace of the Savior. Often the little child is an open door to the heart of the parent.

2. The Home Department has for its purpose the evangelizing and nurturing of those who cannot and those who will not attend the sessions of the school.

3. The one thing that makes the Wesley Bible Class of such supreme importance is that it is organized to train men how to reach the unsaved and of presenting the Lamb of God as the all-sufficient Savior. These classes are organized to study the Bible and thus be equipped for soul-winning every day in the year.

4. The Teacher-training Class has for its object the study of the child's needs, that he may present the loving Christ to the hungry soul. It is intended for the teacher to supply his own lack of mental and spiritual equipment—to study the school as an organization to be used in meeting every need of every person in the entire community.

5. The underlying purpose of graded architecture, graded organization, graded lessons, graded worship is to appeal to the natural interests at that age and meet the spiritual needs at that time. Grading is not a fad, but a necessity if we would win every child for our Lord and train the child for service in the Church.

6. Why have Monthly Missionary Instruction for the entire school? Is it to raise a little money, or to raise up a missionary Church that will be willing and will know how to present Christ to a lost world? Why are we so slow to obey the command of our Lord, "Go teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you?" Is it not because we have not been taught to teach Missions?

7. Temperance instruction is an evangelizing propaganda against the curse of strong drink. The facts we teach furnish thought, and as people think they will act. Have we not time to do some honest work on this point that the next generation may be delivered from the blighting effects of all manner of intemperance?

8. Shall we observe Children's Day simply to display the pretty little girls and get a small collection? Or shall we use the day as a means of training the young people in Christian service and of reaching a large number of people who never attend Church only on special occasions? This day properly observed affords an opportunity of touching many hearts for Christ. We must pray the evangelistic spirit into the leaders of these services.

9. Decision Day is the best day of all the good days of the Sunday school. This is the time when all our methods and our heart-life are put to the test. If there be no harvest of souls on this day we may reckon that we have been unfaithful servants—unfaithful to the one thing committed to our hands. The Sunday school that is not evangelistic through and through needs to be evangelized.

10. You ask, what has the Workers' Council to do with saving the lost and of calling Church members to a life of consecration? The W. C. might be called the C. W.—the council of war. Here is where all the officers and teachers get together under God and plan and pray until the place of meeting becomes a veritable power house. The Workers' Council is where we gather fresh strength, catch new visions, and learn how to be used of the Lord in winning our lost brothers and sisters.

The Great Battle

A BUGLE-BLAST IN UTAH.

Governor Simon Bamberger, of Utah, in his message to the Legislature of that State last week declared that the most important matter to be considered by that body was the enactment of a State-wide prohibition law. In spite of his name, the new Chief Executive of Utah seems to be a man of the right type.

THE TEXAS SITUATION.

The people of Texas in an election held to ascertain their will declared in favor of having the State Legislature to submit to them for adoption or rejection a prohibition amendment to the State Constitution; but notwithstanding this fact the liquor forces are trying to prevent the Legislators from obeying the instructions given them at the polls. Dr. W. D. Bradfield, Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, has made in his paper a strong protest against this effort to throttle the expressed will of the people. He concluded his editorial with this declaration: "The year 1917 must see the destruction of the whiskey traffic in Texas." "So mote it be."

LAW OPENLY VIOLATED IN NEW ORLEANS.

The American, a daily paper published in New Orleans, made its appearance on Monday, January 8, affirming in flaming headlines that investigation had shown that nearly all the saloons in this city were open and doing business on the preceding Sabbath day in plain violation of the law; that intoxicating liquors had been sold to minors on that day, and that the cabarets had run in full blast on Sunday night as usual. So far as we have seen, nobody has challenged the truthfulness of these statements. Let The American keep turning on the light! Indeed, we wish that its managers would make it a full-fledged prohibition paper. Such a daily journal is urgently needed in the Crescent City, and we believe that the better element of citizens in New Orleans and the surrounding country would rally to its support.

THE WEBB-KENYON LAW UPHELD.

On January 8, the Supreme Court of the United States, with two of the nine Justices dissenting, in a sweeping decision upheld the constitutionality of the Webb-Kenyon law concerning the shipment of intoxicating liquors from one State into another. The law in question forbids the shipment of intoxicants into a State in violation of its prohibition laws, and the use of the channels of interstate commerce as a basis for a right to receive, possess, sell, or use liquor in any manner not legally permitted therein. For instance, under this measure the shipment of a quart of liquor to a citizen of Mississippi every fifteen days would be permitted; but it would be in the power of that State to prohibt any shipment at all if it should see fit to do so, and after such an enactment it would be illegal for any public carrier to convey liquor in any quantity into that commonwealth. The prohibition leaders are said to regard this decision as second only in importance to the passage of a national constitutional amendment.

SENATE VOTES FOR "DRY" DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill to forbid the sale of intoxicants in the District of Columbia passed the United States Senate on January 9 by a vote of 55 to 32. Mr. Underwood's amendment to have the question voted on by the residents of the District of Columbia was lost by a tie vote of 43 to 43. Senators Williams, Vardaman, and Ransdell voted for this measure, while Senator Broussard, of Louisiana, and the two Alabama Senators, Underwood and Bankhead, voted against it. Senator Vardaman championed the bill in a speech, from which we make the following quotation: "I am not fighting the saloonkeeper, but I am fighting the pernicious traffic in which he is engaged. The saloon business has been tried in the court of public opinion and convicted. The jury has rendered its verdict and the court is now about to pronounce the sentence of extermination." This measure will now go to the House, which assembly, its friends confidently predict, will pass it.

LETTER AND CONFESSION OF FAITH BY DANIEL WEBSTER.

Daniel Webster, at the age of twenty-five years, united with the Congregational Church in Salisbury, N. H., his native place, under the ministry of the Rev. Thomas Worcester, September 13, 1807. The following letter was addressed to his pastor. From this Confession of Faith it is believed Mr. Webster never deviated at any subsequent period of his life.

Letter.

Boscawen, August 8, 1807.

Dear Sir:

The other day we were conversing respecting confessions of faith. Some time ago I wrote down, for my own use, a few propositions in the shape of articles, intending to exhibit a very short summary of the doctrines of the Christian Religion, as they impress my mind. I have taken the liberty to inclose a copy for your perusal.

I am, sir, with respect, yours, &c.,

D. WEBSTER.

Confession of Faith.

I Believe in the existence of Almighty God, who created and governs the whole world. I am taught this by the works of nature and the word of Revelation.

I Believe that God exists in three persons: this I learn from Revelation alone. Nor is it any objection to this belief that I cannot comprehend how one can be three, or three, one. I hold it my duty to believe, not what I can comprehend, or account for, but what my Maker teaches me.

I Believe the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments to be the will and word of God.

I Believe Jesus Christ to be the Son of God. The miracles which he wrought establish, in my mind, his personal authority, and render it proper for me to believe whatever he asserts. I believe, therefore, all his declarations, as well when he declares himself to be the Son of God, as when he declares any other proposition. And I believe there is no other way of salvation than through the merits of his atonement.

I Believe that things past, present and to come, are all equally present in the mind of Deity; that with him there is no succession of time, nor of ideas; that, therefore, the relative terms past, present and future, as used among men, cannot, with strict propriety, be applied to Deity. I believe in the doctrines of foreknowledge and predestination, as thus expounded. I do not believe in those doctrines, as imposing any fatality or necessity on men's actions, or any way infringing free agency.

I Believe in the utter inability of any human being to work out his own salvation, without the constant aid of the Spirit of all grace.

I Believe in the universal Providence of God; and leave to Epicurus, and his more unreasonable followers in modern times, the inconsistency of believing that God made a world which he does not take the trouble of governing.

Although I have great respect for some other forms of worship, I believe the congregational mode, on the whole, preferable to any other.

I Believe Religion to be a matter, not of demonstration, but of faith. God requires us to give credit to the truths which he reveals, not because we can prove them, but because he declares them. When the mind is reasonably convinced that the Bible is the Word of God, the only remaining duty is to receive its doctrines, with full confidence of their truth, and practice them, with a pure heart.

I Believe that the Bible is to be understood and received in the plain and obvious meaning of its passages; since I cannot persuade myself that a Book intended for the instruction and conversion of the whole world should cover its true meaning in any such mystery and doubt that none but critics and philosophers can discover it.

I Believe that the refinement and subtleties of human wisdom are more likely to obscure than to enlighten the revealed will of God; and that he is the most accomplished Christian scholar who hath been educated at the feet of Jesus and in the College of Fishermen.

I Believe that all true Religion consists in the heart and the affections; and that therefore all creeds and confessions are fallible and uncertain evidences of evangelical piety.

Finally, I believe that Christ has imposed on all his disciples a life of active benevolence; that he who refrains only from what he thinks to be sinful has performed but a part, and a small part, of his duty; that he is bound to do good and communicate; to love his neighbor; to give food and drink to his enemy; and to endeavor, as far as in him lies, to promote peace, truth, piety and happiness, in a wicked and forlorn world; believing, that in the great day, which is to come, there will be no other standard of merit, no other criterion of character, than that which is already established: By their fruits ye shall know them.—The Bible Champion.

A SAFE ROAD.

After the first of January, 1917, with prohibitive laws in effect in Virginia and Georgia, the automobile route from Washington to Jacksonville, Florida, will lie wholly through prohibition territory.—The Christian Herald.

NOW ON A CASH BASIS.

The subscription price of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for the year 1917 is $1.50 to both the people and preachers. The Publishing Committee at its recent meeting gave orders to the Publisher to discontinue all delinquent subscriptions and to place the business of the paper on a cash basis. Many of our preachers fail to observe the rule of paying in advance, and in consequence may, unless they give the matter immediate attention, have their names dropped—an embarrassment which the Publisher hopes to escape. Under the new policy instituted, the longest time that ANY delinquent subscriber can possibly be carried is three months. Brethren, please note and heed this very important statement.

BEN AND BUD.

By Ellen D. Masters.

Ben worthy is a little boy who lives with Mrs. Judd.
He does her "chores" for keeping him—and letting him keep Bud.
"Is Bud another boy?" you ask. Oh, no; he is a dog.
Ben found him, poor and hurt, one day down near the meadow bog.
"I'll take you to the house," said Ben, "and ask of Mrs. Judd
If you may not stay there with me." And then he called him Bud.
It seemed just natural to say that. They somehow seemed akin—
The little boy who was not loved, the dog so sad and thin.

And Mrs. Judd said Bud might stay, if Ben would be right good,
And do whatever he was told, and split the kindling-wood.
If you could hear Ben whistle now, and often gladly sing,
You would not say, "Poor little Ben; he hasn't anything."
Ben never thinks about himself—he's looking out for Bud.
To make his friend a pleasant home, he works for Mrs. Judd.
And Bud is such a grateful dog, and does not chase the cat,
That Mrs. Judd right often now gives him a friendly pat.
And when they sit beside the fire, while winter winds go woo-oo!
Why, Mrs. Judd will sometimes say that Bud may come in, too.
She does not know how glad it makes the heart of little Ben
That he has won, beside the hearth, a place for his dear friend.
Of course, he earned it all for Bud. For hasn't he been good,
And done whatever he was told, and split the kindling-wood?

—Our Dumb Animals.

WHILE MOTHER WAS AWAY.

"Mother's going out to-day," said Charlie Carter to Dick Burns, "and we can play in the front yard, where she doesn't let us."

Dick was puzzled. Charlie seemed pleased that his mother was going out, and he meant to play where she didn't let him. When Dick's mother went out, he felt dull, and he never did anything she didn't let him.

So he said: "When she comes back, she'll be sorry."

Charlie stared at Dick. This was a new thought.

"Yes," he said, thinking hard. "So she will. But," he brightened up a little, "she always is sorry when she comes back. She says: 'Now what have you been up to, I wonder?' That's what she says."

Dick put his eight-year-old mind hard to the solution of this problem: "S'pose you did something she liked?" he suggested.

"Dunno what I could do," replied Charlie. "She doesn't like much."

"I pick up kindling to s'prise my mother," volunteered Dick. "Sometimes I have a big pile."

"Then what's she say?" inquired Charlie, fascinated with the new thought.

"She says, 'What'd I do without my boy, Dick?'" was the answer. "Guess your mother'd say that, too."

Charlie may have had doubts, but he picked up chips. It was not bad fun, especially when Dick helped him. He picked up more and more chips till, as the time went on, there was not a chip lying round anywhere—only a magnificent pile of them in a corner. It seemed the right thing to help Dick pick up his chips; and by the time both mothers returned there were two piles of chips and two nice, clean yards and, last but not least, two expectant little boys.

They came up the lane together, those two mothers. They paused at the garden gates so close together that the two yards seemed one large one.

Dick's mother spoke first: "Such a nice yard!" she cried. "And what a pile of chips for kindling! What should I do without my boy, Dick?" Then she kissed him.

But Dick, for once, was a little unresponsive. He ran to Charlie's mother and said: "Charlie picked up chips, too, an' his yard's tidy, too."

Then Charlie's mother looked at her yard and then at her little son. He was staring up at her with very serious eyes. Somehow, he reminded her of the first year of his life, when she hadn't been quite so busy and so troubled as now. She stooped down and kissed him.

What do you suppose she said?

Why, she said exactly what Dick's mother had said: "What should I do if I hadn't a little boy to pick up chips?"

Now Charlie always finds something to do to help mother when she goes out. It was a good thing that Dick's mother went out that morning and that Dick played with Charlie.—Francis Harmer, in the Christian Register.

WHAT DOES YOUR FACE SHOW?

A few years ago I received the photograph of a boy friend of mine, who is now away at school. It was an interesting photograph, and I showed it to a number of friends.

"That face shows determination," said the first friend. "What that boy undertakes he will see through. He is no quitter." My friend was right. The boy has the reputation of staying by anything he undertakes until he has accomplished it.

"That's a clean boy—clean morally," said another man.

"How do you know?" I asked.

"Shows it in his face," he replied. "A boy whose thoughts are continually impure or whose life has a muddy stream in it, soon betrays it in his face. It may not show right away, but it will show sooner or later."

I told him, too, that he was right, for I know the boy well and believe he is morally clean.

"That boy is gentle and kind," said a lady to whom I showed the picture. She was right, too. Yet there was a time when this same boy was rough and unkind and even cruel. His face then didn't show gentleness and kindness.

The more I thought about the photograph, the more I studied the faces of boys as they came before me. What a study it is! Here's a boy who used to have such a fine, manly face; now it looks coarse and heavy. What had happened? Well, it doesn't take much study to find out—many things have come into his life which are hurting him, and his face tells the story.

What does your face show? Be sure that folks are reading it, reading it like a book. Be sure, too, that it shows what is going on inside—in the inner life. The face tells the story of the thought life; the thought life, after all, is the real life.

If as you look in the glass, your face tells the story of some things you would rather not have folks know about, remember it isn't the face you need to think about; it's the thing back there in your life that finds reflection in your face. What does your face show?—Eugene C. Foster, in Michigan Christian Advocate.

HIS LITTLE ONES.

The following story about a dog appeared in the Evening Press of Grand Rapids, Michigan:

A forlorn little fox terrier limped up the driveway to the General Hospital, holding one paw from the ground. Unobserved, he followed the orderlies as they carried an injured man into the receiving ward.

It was not until Dr. J. C. Lynch had finished treating his patient that he heard a whining and a whimpering sound at his feet.

The little dog, holding up a badly crushed forepaw, was looking appealingly up at the doctor. Pathetic brown eyes seemed trying to explain something.

THE DYING YEAR.

By Rev. M. B. Sharbrough.

Singing their requiem, the loud,
Sad wintry winds, so bleak and dreat,
Draping the earth with snowy shroud,
Proclaim the funeral of the year.

For nature dies and lives again,
And when the Old Year yields to death—
A symbol to the sons of men—
The New Year draws its infant breath:

Soon grasses spring and flowers bloom,
And verdant forests we shall see,
Which tell of life beyond the tomb—
The sign of immortality.

But now the tempter's voice I hear:
"In seeming only nature dies;
How can its changes which appear,
Man's resurrection symbolize?"

'Tis true the leaves do fade and fall
And surely hasten to decay;
But in the trunks and branches all,
The life survives the wintry day.

The grasses and the flowers, 'tis said,
When withered by the frosts have died,
But, hidden in their wintry bed
Secure, life's forces still abide."

With confidence the soul replies:
"Just so with man when end his days;
'Tis seeming only that he dies—
The outward form alone decays.

Editorial

OUR SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS AND THEIR WORK.

As has been stated in these columns, at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference Rev. T. M. Brownlee was named to succeed Rev. B. P. Jaco as Commissioner for Grenada College. Brother Jaco gave twelve months to this work, having before him the goal of raising $50,000 for the institution that he represented, and he reported at Conference that $37,000 of this amount had been secured in cash and subscriptions. The task that Brother Brownlee has in hand is to carry forward to completion this most commendable undertaking. He is young, vigorous, and magnetic, and his friends believe that under his leadership this movement will make steady headway. Let the brethren give him their sympathetic and hearty co-operation. This proposed fund for Grenada College is most urgently needed. The Methodists of North Mississippi should rally to that institution and speedily increase its resources and equipment. It now ranks as a B-Grade College in our Church, and gives promise of a widening usefulness.

Millsaps College also now has a Commissioner in the field, Rev. M. M. Black, who formerly was a member of its Faculty and who has its welfare much on his heart. This institution will celebrate next June the twenty-fifth anniversary of its establishment, and the 84th birthday of its distinguished founder, Major R. W. Millsaps. It was felt by the trustees and friends of the College that such an occasion, along with the fact that the State of Mississippi will this year celebrate the centennial of its admission into the Union, called for something to be done by the 125,000 Methodists of the commonwealth that would show their appreciation of the splendid service which this institution has rendered during the quarter of a century that it has been in existence. It is the general opinion that at present the most crying need at Millsaps is a modern and well equipped dormitory, in which students could be given their lodging and board at actual cost, thus lowering the expense of attending the institution, which is in increasingly sharp competition with other schools offering such advantages. The estimated cost of the needed dormitory is $60,000; and the raising of this money is the work to which Brother Black will address himself. Surely all of our people should feel a deep interest in this enterprise, and lend a helping hand toward its consummation.

Besides these two Commissioners, Mississippi has a third, in the person of Rev. Robert Selby, who represents Emory University. He has been in the field only a few months, during which time he has given an excellent account of himself. Primarily Brother Selby is endeavoring to raise $50,000 for the Lamar Law School building on the Emory campus, which is the contribution that Mississippi Methodism has pledged itself to make toward this promising institution, that belongs to the whole Southern Methodist Church; but in reality he is serving the entire university. If any one prefers to give money to some other department of this school, he may do so, and while seeing that it is applied as directed, the trustees will credit Mississippi with an equal amount for the Lamar Law School building from other undirected funds. Certainly no cause should appeal more strongly to our people than this phenomenal young university, which is at the center of our educational system, and in which the future of our Church is so largely bound up. It now in part belongs to the Methodists of Mississippi, and it is incumbent upon them to aid in its upbuilding and support. Shall we not show to skeptical secularists that a Church can establish and maintain a real university? This is our opportunity to do so. Let us see that we make the most of it.

It may seem to some that too many educational campaigns are being undertaken in Mississippi; but let it be noted that the whole amount of money asked for is less than $150,000. In Arkansas, where Methodism is no stronger, the people are being asked for $400,000 for Hendrix College alone. What we need in Mississippi is to become inspired with the belief that we can really do something of consequence. If Southern Methodism is to meet successfully the tremendous responsibilities of the future and make the most of her expanding opportunities, she must see that her institutions of learning are adequately equipped and soundly Christian to the core. We have before us no more appealing and imperative duty than this.

THE METHODIST REVIEW QUARTERLY.

The January issue of the Methodist Review Quarterly is before us, and we doubt whether a richer number of this stately periodical has ever come from the press. It opens with a brilliant and stimulating discussion, entitled "Christ's Person and His Cross," by the great English scholar, Dr. P. T. Forsyth, of Hackney College, London. This paper alone is worth several times the price of The Review, and it ought to be read by all our preachers. We have not yet perused all of the inviting articles contained in the pages of this publication, but the following, in addition to the one already mentioned, have up to this writing engaged our attention: "The Consciousness of Jesus," by Dr. DuBose; "Sin and Salvaton," by Dr. J. W. Boswell; "The Religious Faith of James Whitcomb Riley," by Dr. Levi Gilbert; "The Gospels," by Rev. W. S. Harrison, and "Old World War-Poetry," by Mr. Will T. Hale—all entertaining and informing dissertations. The issue contains the usual number of book reviews. This is one of the best features of this able journal, the price of which is $2 per annum; or 50 cents a number. Though well qualified for his work in the beginning, we think that Dr. DuBose is showing an increasing grasp and skill in the handling of it. Let the brethren lend him a helping hand in the task of circulating more widely this noble quarterly. Much might be accomplished in this direction if every pastor would bring it specifically to the attention of the more intellectual members of his congregation.

CONFIRMATORY.

A letter left by a prominent business man (said to be respected and wealthy) who committed suicide in a New Orleans hotel a few days since contained the following declaration: "I have no fear for the future of my soul, because I know that I am a better man at heart, and in fact, than 90 per cent of them, and I do not believe that over 90 per cent of them are going to the worst place in the hereafter." More than once we have suggested in the columns of the Advocate that perhaps there was some connection betwen the rapidly increasing number of suicides and the failure of ministers and Christian teachers to emphasize as strongly as in other days the awful consequences in eternity of a sinful life, and this utterance rather seems to sustain that view. The whole revelation of God concerning the duty, accountability, and destiny of man needs to be plainly and emphatically set forth if we would promote the highest good of humanity.

UNWARRANTED AND MISLEADING.

Zion's Herald (Boston) of January 10 contains an extended report of the proceedings of the late meeting of the Joint Commission on the Unification of American Methodism and an editorial discussion of its alleged work which are most surprising. It is represented that a way was found out of the constitutional difficulties related to the General Conference of the proposed reorganized Church; that a majority of both Commissions reached definite conclusions concerning important aspects of the contemplated Jurisdictional Conferences, and that "the Negro question alone remains pending." It is also proclaimed with great emphasis that the conclusions of the Joint Commission went beyond the "tentative" stage as to fundamental matters, and were such as to assure the unification of Northern and Southern Methodism. This issue of the Herald did not reach us until we are about to close our forms and we cannot now discuss its deliverances specifically; but concerning them we are moved to say two things:

1. Its representations are out of accord with the statement issued officially by the Joint Commission and also with the statements of others who were on the ground and in a position to know what took place. Dr. Ivey, a member of the Commission, while claiming that practical progress was made, said in the Nashville Advocate of last week, in effect, that no votes were taken as to the fundamental issues involved. He, furthermore, mildly said: "As we see it, the prospects are NOT LESS bright than they were before the meeting." Dr. James R. Joy, Editor of the New York Advocate, who sat part of the time with the Commission, being a reserve delegate, while expressing the view that the meeting was helpful to the cause of unification, said in his paper of January 11: "It is true that they did 'nothing but talk.' No decisions were reached and action was confined to appointing committees to give further study to the three main questions."

2. In view of the fact that the sittings of the Joint Commission were executive (secret) and that it gave out a carefully prepared statement concerning its work, this effort of a Church paper to unfold its proceedings and make a public pronouncement setting forth with a considerable degree of definiteness what it accomplished is, in our opinion, clearly beyond the bounds of ethical propriety. Such a procedure might be expected of a secular "yellow" journal, but for a professedly religious periodical to do such a thing is to us positively astounding. More than this we will not say now.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. B. H. Andrews, of Gonzales, La., says: "Our work here is fast developing. This is a rich field in which to labor. I am beginning my second year here, and am meeting with much encouragement."

Rev. H. T. Young, of Jena, La., Conference evangelist of the Louisiana Conference, writes: "Tomorrow, January 14, I will begin assisting Rev. J. O. Bennett in a meeting here at Jena. All my time is engaged until July 1, except about three weeks."

Dr. I. L. Peebles writes: "I am now in Meridian, Miss., in my unpaid-for house. I am ready for revival or indoctrinating work. I can preach five times daily for any number of days desired. I am still young and happy." We trust that the brethren will keep this able expositor of the Word busy.

We are carrying this week a statement concerning the campaign for Millsaps college from President Watkins and Commissioner M. M. Black. From a personal note from the latter, we take the following: "A big task has been assigned me, and one that I shrink from for many reasons; but many of the brethren have assured me of their co-operation, and I am going to do my best. The job was not of my seeking. The need of the new dormitory is imperative if the College is to move forward." Brother Black wrote from 1275 North

President Street, Jackson, Miss., which we suppose to be his address.

Dr. L. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, was in New Orleans last week, and paid the Advocate office an appreciated visit. Not being in, the Editor missed him, much to his regret.

Among those who attended the late meeting of Annual Conference Missionary Secretaries in Nashville, Tenn., were Rev. J. L. Neill, of Jackson, Miss., and Rev. C. C. Miller, of Lake Providence, La.

Rev. J. M. Huggin, of Memphis, Tenn., remits for his subscription to the Advocate, and adds: "I am in sympathy with your views, Mr. Editor, concerning the great problems confronting our Church."

Our pastors in New Orleans are arranging to hold a union Methodist meeting. The services will be held in First Church, beginning on April 22, and will be under the direction of Rev. D. L. Coale, of Dallas, Texas, one of our General Evangelists.

We desire to state that all matter for the Woman's Missionary Department of the Advocate should be sent to the Editor of that Department, Mrs. R. F. Harrell, Gloster, Miss. Time is lost by sending it to the Advocate office, since we can only forward it to her.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom no reference has been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions, lately sent in: Rev. S. C. Moody, Oloh, Miss., 3; Rev. M. F. Adams, Flora, Miss., 5; Rev. James L. Cady, Clinton, La., 2; Rev. A. M. Bennett, Tyro, Miss., 4.

Dr. W. G. Henry, pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., has received 32 members since the late session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, which adjourned December 18. Of these, 24 were on profession of faith. We are happy to have such good news from this great church.

The Bogalusa (La.) American states that it has been arranged to have Rev. A. L. Townsley, our pastor in Bogalusa, to deliver a series of lectures to the boys in the High School of that city on Tuesday afternoons at 4:30 o'clock. This announcement in that paper seems to have awakened considerable interest in both the school and community.

HOSPITAL DAY IN THE TWO MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES—SUNDAY, JANUARY 28. The city of Memphis is now making an effort to do something handsome for this institution; so let the surrounding country also lend it a vigorous helping hand. If all will assist, its doors can soon be opened for work. This is the psychological time to do something, brother pastor.

We wish again to call attention to our rules concerning the publishing of obituaries, which may be seen on our obituary page. These rules govern in all cases and should be observed. Why write a long obituary, with which no money is sent to cover the excess, and impose upon the Editor the task of reducing it to 200 words, probably in a manner unsatisfactory to the writer?

Rev. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Greenville District, writes: "The work of this district is starting off well. 'Progress' seems to be the watchword. The charges in which the first quarterly conferences have been held have given the pastors a substantial increase in salaries, ranging from 10 to 20 per cent over last year." Brother Curtis spent a day with his mother at Noxapater, Miss., last week.

We have received the following notice, signed by Mrs. J. W. Conger, President, and Miss Lillie Hartwell, Recording Secretary: "The Woman's Misionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference will hold its fifth annual meeting in the First Methodist Church at West Point, Miss., February 27 to March 2. Mrs. H. R. Steele, Educational Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Council, is expected to be present."

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant instructs us to change the address of his Advocate from Lexington, Miss., to Long Beach, Miss. He adds: "Please say to the preachers that if they know where I can be used for the accomplishment of good, I shall be glad to serve them." Though he took a superannuate relation at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference, Brother O'Bryant is capable of excellent work in revival meetings and pastors needing assistance in evangelistic campaigns would, we think, do well to call on him.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 11, will be observed as "Go-to-Sunday-School Sunday" throughout Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, South Carolina, and Florida. The object will be to enlist as many new pupils as possible, make them welcome, and secure permanent results. Every pastor, superintendent, and Sunday school worker should take a delight in making this day a success. (Luke 14: 23.) Programs free upon application. Address Rev. W. Fred Long, General Secretary of the Mississippi Sunday School Association, Jackson, Miss.

The work at Monroe, La., where Rev. E. K. Means is the brilliant new pastor has started with splendid prospects.

That noble veteran, Rev. Thomas Cameron, is looking after the work of securing subscriptions to the Advocate at New Albany, Miss. He has lately sent us 10 names for our mailing list, for which we extend to him our hearty thanks. The North Mississippi Conference has had few men of the pulpit strength of Brother Cameron in his palmy days, and probably none who lived and moved upon a nigher plane. Blessings on him and his loved ones.

Rev. A. H. Williams, pastor of Main Street Church, Water Valley, Miss., has our thanks for looking after the interests of the Advocate in his bounds. He says that things are "going" at Main Street. He is absent from that congregation at only one morning service a month, and on that day he is with it at the evening hour. His other two appointments, which come once a month, are filled at 11 a. m. and 3 o'clock p. m. Brother Williams reports that some new church furnishings and a touching up of the parsonage are in prospect.

Under date of January 11, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb writes us as follows from Verona, Miss.: "I am here with Brother W. N. Dodds, and have learned since coming here that Brother A. J. Henry, of the Macon charge, lost a son, Willis Henry, aged 17, on Dec. 22, 1916. Brother Dodds was to-day called to the bedside of his father at Myrtle, Miss., who is very ill. We deeply sympathize with Brother Henry and his family in the great sorrow which has come to them. Let the brethren remember them at the throne of grace. We hope soon to have better news from Brother Dodds' father."

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of New Augusta, Miss., sends us 5 renewal subscriptions to the Advocate, for which he has our thanks, and in his letter appends the following note: "The people here gave us a royal reception upon our arrival immediately after the Christmas holidays, and almost daily some of the substantials of life and their way to the parsonage. The present arrangement of this charge is such that it is capable of being made one of the best charges in the Hattiesburg District. With the Lord's help and the promised co-operation of the people, we expect to place it near the top by the close of the year."

Our sanctum was brightened for a few minutes the latter part of last week by brief visits from Miss Iles and Miss Gibson, Deaconesses at St. Mark's Hall. We are indebted to the latter for a copy of the Bulletin of St. Mark's for December, which shows gratifying activity in all departments of the work there. A Domestic Science Department is a new feature that has been added. It opened well, with a large number of students registered. Much charity work was done during the Christmas holidays. The Kindergarten, the Boy Scouts, the Camp Fire Girls, the Mothers' Club, and the Clinic, all reported having had a good month.

A corespondent states that he visited, a few days ago, Rev. R. M. Davis, who is on the Honor Roll of the North Mississippi Conference and who for some time has been in feeble health, at his home in Byhalia, Miss., and found him characteristically cheerful, genial, and entertaining. The writer said you ought to hear him on "unification." We should like immensely to hear him on that theme. For a profound insight into truth and genuine nobility of soul Brother Davis is a rare man. Never shall we forget how Bishop Galloway used to enjoy him. May his path now more radiant with the passing days until it ends where God himself is the light!

The district parsonage of the Aberdeen (Mississippi) District will be remodeled at a cost of $1635, a second story being added. A meeting of the preachers and laymen of this district will be held at Okolona, January 24 and 25. An excellent program has been arranged for that occasion, having been attractively prnted and scattered abroad. We should be glad to publish it, were it not for the fact that we dare not set the precedent of printing this kind of copy, as we should likely be overwhelmed with it in this day of so many meetings. Rev. T. H. Lipscomb seems to be throwing himself unsparingly into his new work, and he reports that the brethren are giving him their hearty co-operation.

From a communication to the Times-Picayune from its Washington Staff representative, Mr. Paul Wooten, we take the following: "Mr. H. H. Ahrens, for eighteen years a member of the staff of The Times-Picayune, was to-day (January 11) appointed a special agent of the Census Bureau. Mr. Ahrens will be entrusted with the gathering of data pertaining to religion. His duties will necessitate his residence in Washington." Brother Ahrens is a local preacher in our Church and has perhaps reported more religious gatherings (of various denominations) than any man in the South. We should think that his training in this respect would be very helpful to him in his new work. He will be much missed in these parts when he leaves for the National Capital.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference will be held at Crowley, La., Feb. 27 to March 2. Mrs. J. T. Nisbet, of New Orleans, is the worthy and efficient President of this body and Mrs. L. P. Ioor, of Crowley, is the Corresponding Secretary. The occasion promises to be one of much interest.

Rev. Jas. L. Galloway, of Forest, Miss., says: "We are just settled in our new home and have been received very kindly. I will not forget the claims of the Advocate and I hope to increase its circulation in this charge. The Mississippi Conference has in it no more faithful pastor than Brother Galloway whose record is a highly creditable one.

Rev. J. H. Pitts, the capable and energetic presiding elder of the Holy Springs District, says: "The quarterly conferences held thus far in this district are far in advance of those of last year—remarkably so. I am really encouraged to believe that we are growing." The charges under Brother Pitts' leadership caught the forward stride last year, and we are not surprised to learn that they are showing a disposition to keep it up.

We are in receipt of the following message from Rev. J. D. Boggs, our pastor on the Booneville Circuit: "I have not been able to do any work since Conference. I had an operation performed on Dec. 13, and I am now just getting so I can sit up and walk about some. I hope to be able to preach next Sunday, January 14." We trust that this faithful worker will soon be able to be about his "loved employ" with his accustomed vigor and energy.

Sunday, January 7, was a fine day for our Church at St. Mark's Hall, this city. Rev. W. S. Thomas preached at the 11 o'clock hour, and Brother Romano, its Italian pastor, preached at night, and the congregations were large and attentive at both services. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered in the morning, and at the two services 15 persons united with the Church, most of whom were Italians and Syrians. The outlook for our work in and about St. Mark's Hall grows steadily brighter.

The following is from Rev. W. L. Broome, our gifted young pastor at Bristow, Oklahoma, taken from a letter renewing his subscription: "I look forward to the weekly visits of the Advocate just as I did when I was a member of the North Mississippi Conference. You are giving us a splendid paper. I am beginning my second year at Bristow. This is a great field and I am happy in the work." Brother Broome is the Secretary of his Conference and sent us some days ago a copy of its annual, edited by him. It is a most creditable publication.

The friends of Rev. James W. Rogers in North Mississippi will be pleased to know that he is delightfully situated as pastor of our church in Tahlequah, Oklahoma, a town of some 4000 people, which was formerly the capital of the Cherokee Nation, and which is now the seat of the Northeastern State Normal and of a Training School supported by the Federal Government. Since his asignment to this appointment a few weeks ago, Brother Rogers has received 15 members into the Church and induced his people to buy a $2500 parsonage. During the three preceding years he was in the presiding eldership—one year on the Madill and two years on the Vinita District, the largest district in the East Oklahoma Conference—and while he was traveling the latter 12 new churches were organized and the salaries of the pastors advanced 20 per cent."

TREASURER CHOSEN.

Mr. Editor: Please announce that W. E. Morse, of Jackson, Miss., was elected Treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance at the late session of the Mississippi Conference. The brethren will please send all moneys collected for Conference Claimants, Delegates to the General Conference, the Bishops, and the Superannuate Endowment Fund to him.

J. M. MORSE,
President Joint Board of Finance.

PRESS THE MATTER NOW.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference:

Please press your collection for our superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of preachers. Do this for them—the money is urgently needed. Remember that the first Sunday in March (and every Sunday in March on circuits) is "Veterans' Day." Let our larger churches and stations pay the whole amount of their assessments by April 1.

J. M. MORSE,
President Joint Board of Finance.

Jackson, Miss.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

WILLIAM A. YOUNGBLOOD was born in Scott County, Miss., on June 11, 1845, and died at Glen Allan on Dec. 26, 1916. He was happily married to Helen Noblin on Oct. 17, 1872. He is survived by his wife, six children—two sons and four daughters—and four sisters. He joined the Lutheran Church early in life, and later joined the M. E. Church, South, living a consistent member of the same until his death. He was a steward in the church for a long number of years. He truly loved the Church and enjoyed his religion. He was patriotic, serving three years as a Confederate soldier. But his best service was in establishing a Christian home and giving to the world, in his children, noble Christian men and women who have already taken up the work he started. He was an honored and respected citizen, numbering his friends by his acquaintances. The world suffers a great loss in losing a citizen of his type. Our friend and loved one has gone, but we know where he is. "He can't come back to us, but we can go to him." His pastor,

A. T. McILWAIN.

On Oct. 8, 1916, at her home in Bay Springs, Miss., our beloved friend, Mrs. C. B. ROGERS went to her home in heaven, where shadows never come and where all is love and light. With mingled emotions of sorrow and sympathy, the members of the Missionary Society offer in love this tribute to her memory. She was a woman of strong character and high purpose, and hers was a life of great usefulness. During a long illness no murmur was ever heard; no fear of death was ever expressed. The going away of this friend is peculiarly sad to all who knew her, and we know that our loss is great. We recognize God's overruling hand, and shall always strive to emulate the true, faithful, humble spirit which was predominant in her life. We feel drawn closer to God, and will be more faithful to our daily duties, so that when death shall come to us, we, too, may be ready for the summons.

We extend to the bereaved husband and family our deepest sympathy, and commend them to the loving kindness of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well. Mrs. J. B. KING.

MRS. MARY FORIST FAYARD was born in Walton County, Florida, in 1848, and died at Springfield, La., on Dacember 3, 1916. She was married to Rev. E. D. Fayard in 1875. Of this union were born five children—two of whom preceded her to heaven. She joined the Methodist Church in 1882, and lived a Chirstian life until her death. The writer visited her often in her last days. She was a good Christian, always expressing her faith in God. Sister Fayard loved her church. Her health kept her from attending its services some time before her decease. She was devoted to her husband and children. Brother Fayard, being a preacher, had to leave his wife to go to his appointments, and she was always ready for him to go and preach. In our prayer services, and in her home, she would praise the Lord. She said, "I am ready to go." May the Lord bless the loved ones and help them live so as to meet her in heaven! All was done for her that fond hands and loving hearts could do, but her father in heaven said, "It is enough come up higher." Her pastor,

CHARLES THOMAS BUTLER was born near Calvary, Ga., on Oct. 25, 1857, and died in Arcadia, La., on Dec. 3, 1916. In the death of this Christian gentleman, the Methodist Church at Arcadia has lost one of its most devoted and earnest members. For thirty-seven years he served the church in various official duties, and in all he was faithful and hard-working. In 1882, he was married to Miss Eugenia Young of Arcadia. His wife and seven children are still living. The writer was well acquainted with him during the last four years of his life. He was constantly sick, and suffered a great deal. But he uttered no complaint, and the pain which constantly attended him, seemed to sweeten and ennoble his fine character. Friends who had known him for many years rendered every possible service, and when he passed away, every business house in Arcadia closed iis doors as a tribute to his memory. His funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by the pastor, Rev. T. H. Morris. A multitude of friends assembled at the Methodist Church and followed the remains to their final resting place. The angel of the resurrection guards his sacred dust; his spirit has passed into the open sky. He was one of my best friends. I loved him. E. K. MEANS.

"God's ways are past finding out." Never was this Scripture more fully realized than on the morning of August 21, 1916, when the soul of Mrs. SARAH J. BEVERLY passed away. She was the daughter of Brother and Sister A. Havens, and was born in Jackson County, Miss., on May 14, 1888. She was converted early in life and joined the Methodist Church as a child, at the age of 11 years, and so far as I could learn she was ever true to her solemn vows. On Dec. 26, 1916, she was married to J. E. Beverly, of McHenry, Miss., and for almost ten years she made him a happy home. To them were born three girls, who, with the heart-broken husband, have suffered this irreparable loss. As her pastor for almost two years, I can testify with loved ones and others who knew her that she was a good woman. She loved her Church and was always in her place when not providentially hindered. It was always a blessing to make a pastoral visit to her home and to enjoy her hospitality. She was a great sufferer during her last illness, but she was ever patient and submissive to the Divine will. On August 22, with a large concourse of people, we laid her body to rest in the McHenry Cemetery, to await the resurrection morn. We believe "She hath done what she could," and has gone to her heavenly reward. May God bless and comfort the sorrowing loved ones!

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

Bodily Housekeeping

(BY SAMUEL HAMILTON, M. D.)

The subject of drinking water with meals has been misnnderstood.

In recent years investigation by means of X-rays, the observations of scientists snch as Cannon, Grutzner, Pavlov, Fowler, Hawk, prove that an abundance of water taken during digestion is necessary in good bodily housekeeping. Drink plenty of water with each meal, Do not drink ice-water at any time.

If your kidneys are sick, or you suffer with lumbago or rheumatism at times, pain in the back or back of the neck, take a little Anuric before meals. This can be found at any good drug store. Therefore my advice to young or old is, always drink plenty of pure water. And for long life, occasionally take tablets of Anuric three or four times a day.

It is simply wonderful how quickly Anuric acts—much more potent than lithia. You will find it dissolves uric acid as water does sugar.

HELP IS OFFERED. and is freely given to every nervous, delicate woman, by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Remember ingredients on label—in Tablet or Liquid form.

In every "female complaint," irregularity, or weakness, and in every exhausted condition of the female system, the "Prescription" never fails to benefit or cure. Bearing-down pains, internal inflammation and ulceration, weak back, and all kindred ailments are completely cured by it. It's a marvelous remedy for nervous and general debility, Insomnia, or Inability to Sleep, Spasms, Convulsions or Fits.

Iron the Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous, Rundown People 200 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next, take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day, after meals, for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent, or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

IS THE WORLD GROWING BETTER?

Mr. Barton, of the Expositor, propounded the above question to some of the leading men of our country, among them being Lyman Abbott, Charles W. Eliot, John Wanamaker, Thomas Mott Osborne, Wm. J. Burns, and Samuel Gompers—all of them men of wide experience, and well qualified to give their observations upon such a vital question. All agree that we are growing better, though sometimes, when we look at present conditions, we are tempted to doubt it; but by comparing with past years we have the fact of advance strongly impressed upon our minds. Mr. Wanamaker says: "There is no question but that the standards of righteousness are higher to-day than at any period in the world's history."

Another article is emphatic in declaring that it is better for women and cites educational advances in America, India, and Japan. Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery says that in India woman is not a mere toy for man any longer. When marrying he now wants a companion. They both have a new conception of married life, as shown by the fact that outside of some of the cities separate houses are being built for young married couples who desire to break away from the patriarchal, or group family.

"In the new Civil Code of Japan the word 'concubine' does not appear. And, best of all, this code allows men at thirty and women at twenty-five to marry without parental consent, thereby destroying the old parental despotism which has blighted the lives of so many boys and girls."

A CHURCH MEMBER NOW.

The distribution of 5000 New Testaments by Mr. Yung Tao, who described himself as "not a church member" on the slip which accompanied each book, containing a personal message for the recipient and calling attention to the merits of the Bible, was mentioned in the September Review. Now the welcome news has come of the baptism of Mr. Yung by Rev. Chauncey Goodrich, D.D., of Peking. He writes that Mr. Yung sent his motor car to take him to the church service. In the afternoon of the same day the celebration of the Bible Society centennial took place in Peking, and Mr. Yung made an address, speaking earnestly of the power of the Bible to change men. "Half of the expense of the celebration," Dr. Goodrich concludes, "including the putting up of the tent, which seated 4000 people, were paid by Mr. Yung. He has lately promised the Young Men's Christian Association $4000 (Mexican) a year for some of their educational work, and he has in mind other work for the Church."—Review.

THANKSGIVING OBSERVED IN MACON.

Deaconess Cora Barchers, at No. 1 Wesley House, Macon, Ga., writes the following regarding their Thanksgiving celebration: "Thanksgiving was a very happy and blessed day for us and our people. About seven in the morning we had a sunrise prayer meeting, which was a most precious service. The mothers asked for this service, and one of our mothers led. There were twenty-one present. During the morning we prepared and delivered about twenty-four baskets to the poor families. We were at home to our friends during the afternoon and in the evening we had a glorious Thanksgiving service. The large assembly hall was filled with people. Dr. Dargan, of the Baptist Church, preached a helpful sermon. Special music had been prepared by the children and others."

Sunday School

SOME INTERESTING QUESTIONS.

In a little leaflet just issued by Rev. John W. Shackford, the Superintendent of the Teacher-training Department of our General Sunday School Board, occur these questions:

"1. Who holds the key to the future? The children and young people in their teens constitute the present strategic opportunity for the future of the Church and the Kingdom. Who is providing their instruction and training in religion?

"2. Compare the number of this Church of the future who attend on the preaching service with the number who are found in the Sunday school classes. Consider also the intimate and personal relationship between teacher and pupil and the opportunity of the teacher to adapt truth and training to individual needs.

"3. In the face of the facts can any pastor fail to see how largely the making of the Church of the future is already in the hands of his teachers, to whom has been committed the ministry of teaching the same gospel that he preaches?

"4. Is there anything in the whole round of the pastor's duties more important than that looking to the character and equipment of those who have to do with the foundations of the Church?

"5. What of the present teachers? Let him ask such questions as these:

"(a) Are my teachers prepared by their knowledge of Christ to teach him to the pupils?

"(b) Have they a reasonably true and full grasp of the gospel message?

"(c) Do they appreciate the responsibilities and opportunities of their position as teachers in the Sunday school?

"(d) Do they know how to adapt their teaching to the needs of the pupils? and are they holding their pupils and leading them forward in the knowledge of the truth?

"(e) What is being done for the better equipment of these teachers?

"6. What of the teachers of the future?

"(a) Are the teachers of the Sunday school being selected with care such as becomes so important an office and ministry in the Church?

"(b) Are they being selected in advance and given the preparation that they ought to have before entering upon their work?

"(c) Is the Sunday school policy in the selection and training of teachers adequate to insure a sufficient number of prepared teachers for the future work of the school?"

AN ANSWER.

Our Church is sparing nothing in its efforts to provide a training course that will meet the needs of the Church as indicated in the questions above and thus help the pastors with their problems of preparing those who are to be the teachers of the gospel to the future Church. And those problems, no conscientious pastor can neglect.

The Standard Training Course, now in preparation and the first two text books of which are in use, is eminently calculated to give such training as will make more efficient teachers than the Church has ever known, and its introduction into all schools is earnestly urged. "The Pupil, The Teacher, and The School," (Barclay), and "The Worker and His Bible," (Eiselen and Barclay), are the two books in use and Inquiries addressed to Rev. John W. Shackford, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.; or to your Conference Sunday school Field Secretary, will bring prompt and full replies.

Try This Pleasant Herb Smoke. Sent Free By Mail.

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted forty years to the treatment of Catarrh, is the originator of a certain combination of medical herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. The smoke-vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As the disease is carried into these passages with the air you breathe, so the antiseptic, healing vapor of this Remedy is carried with the breath directly to the affected parts.

This simple, practical method applies the medicine where sprays, douches, ointments, etc., cannot possibly go. Its effect is soothing and healing, and is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit forming drugs. It is pleasant to use, and not sickening to those who have never smoked. No matter how severe or long standing your case may be, we want to show you what our Remedy will do.

To prove the beneficial, pleasant effect, The Blosser Company, 704 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga., will mail absolutely free to any sufferer, a sample that will verify their claims by actual test. This free package contains a pipe, some of the Remedy for smoking and also some of our medical cigarettes. If you wish to continue the treatment, it will cost only one dollar for a month's supply for the pipe, or a box containing one hundred cigarettes. We pay postage.

If you are a sufferer from Catarrh, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness, or if subject to frequent colds, send your name and address at once by postal card or letter for the free package, and a copy of our illustrated booklet.

HOW SHIVAR MINERAL WATER RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To cure Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, gall stones, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-M, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

"WHAT BEAUTIFUL HAIR!"

Have you ever heard that remark made as some one passed by who had carefully kept hair? Did it not make you envious and did it not make you ashamed of every coarse, stiff or gray hair in your head? Did it not make you wish that you, too, had kept your hair carefully and could hear similar compliments passed on ou? Don't envy a beautiful head of hair. It is your privilege to have one. The beauty of the hair depends entirely on its care; and its luster depends on the food on which it subsists. Hair must be fed. Every single hair is a distinctly individual living thing and it demands food. Unless you feed it, it is going to be stiff and coarse and void of beauty. Follow the example of the Creoles of Louisiana, who pride themselves on their hair. Get their recipe. It was kept as a race secret for many years but you can get it now by asking our dealer for "La Creole," the natural hair dressing, or by sending one dollar to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Relief in Pulmonary Or Throat Troubles

depends largely on the sufferer's ability to upbuild a weakened system, and thus hasten a return of normal body functions.

In this effort much depends on fresh air—night and day—and rest and good food. The patient should refrain from work that overtaxes, and all sanitary precautions should be taken. These commonsense measures do not always achieve the desired results unless aided by proper medication.

It is here that Eckman's Alterative has evidenced its worth, for in many cases it has effected lasting benefit. And often such troubles seem to yield to it.

In no case is its use attended with possible harm, since it contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

THE PRICE OF LEADERSHIP.

"Missionary leadership is the one solution of the whole missionary problem," says Dr. Zoremer. Not money, but men; not statistics, but dynamics; not how many we can enlist, but how much we can enlist in this enterprise will give us the victory. The price of missionary leadership includes seven elements.

The first price is vision. What is a leader? Dr. J. F. Mott says: "A leader is a man who knows the road, who can keep ahead, and who can pull others after him." Li Hung Chang told General Grant once that the whole of the human race was divided into three classes: those that are immovable, those that are movable, and those that move others. The third class are the leaders. In the eleventh Chapter of Hebrews I notice that seeing the invisible is God's baptism into leadership. As soon as you see something that everybody else cannot see, then God is baptizing you to leadership in that thing.

After vision comes decision. Every one of those great heroes in the eleventh Chapter of Hebrews was a man of decision. They saw and then they considered.

The third price of leadership is knowledge. Read that chapter again. You will see Moses learning all the wisdom of the Egyptians, Paul trained to be a great philosopher or theologian. In the same way all the missionary leaders to-day have risen to leadership by the facts that they know. The greatest foe to business leadership is superficiality. A man who does not know banking will never be a banker; it is the man who begins that subject and studies it and makes it a life-long study who becomes a financier. A man who believes in politics is not a statesman; it is the man who knows the thing right down to the bottom. If we can know missions like that, we shall be leaders. We have to know enough to make out our case and prove our facts.

The fourth requisite to missionary leadership is passion. The leader is the one who keeps ahead. I think that this is where many of us fail—the best of us; we become callous to the facts of missions. If you want to make people follow your leadership you must actually do what Christ did—have compassion on the multitude.

The next price to pay is sacrifice. That is where the leaders particularly fail—self-sacrifice. Nothing pulls so much as the print of the nails and the mark of the spear. Sacrifice is the price of missionary leadership.

Self-effacement is a price to be paid which is still greater and harder and more fundamental. It is not the golden prow that steers the ship, but the oak rudder away down below the waters. A man who seeks prominence is not a leader; a man who seeks results is a leader. Those men are missionary leaders who are willing to efface themselves for the sake of the kingdom of God, willing to suffer anything as long as the great cause is advancing—men who do not count personal plans when they interfere with the plans of God.

The last price to pay is the hardest, and that is loneliness. The leader is the one who keeps ahead or alone. The loneliest ship on the Atlantic is the ship that sails fastest. The loneliest man in your denomination is the man who sees the vision of what your denomination could do. And the loneliest missionary in Korea or Japan or Arabia is the man who sees what the others cannot yet see. The price of leadership is always loneliness. There is no loneliness so great as the loneliness of a great idea that nobody else has caught.

There is not one rule for leadership for the foreign missionary and another for the worker at home. The same unchangeable law applies to both. The leader at home, as well as the one abroad, must have a vision, the will to reach it, a passion for it, even to sacrifice and self-effacement, and must bear the brunt of loneliness, of having a consuming passion for something which others cannot see, or see but faintly.

Why is it that there is scarcely a community in which missionary work does not languish for want of leadership? Is the price too great? Is the effort not worth while? What is there in life that is more worth while? O, let us catch the vision and pay the price!—Lutheran Woman's Work.

PAEANS ASCENDING FROM THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Why these songs of praise? Because the pledge is overpaid. Is it not cause for general rejoicing and the loud singing of allelujahs? Mrs. Holmes, the Conference Treasurer, writes that the pledge is overpaid about $100. The women of the Louisiana Conference are to be congratulated, for it shows that an earnestness of purpose characterized their efforts during the year. They realized their great responsibility and were willing to make sacrifices for the advancement of their Father's work. Surely he has crowned their efforts with success and we pray for his continued indwelling in their lives, and that 1917 may be characterized not only by a more generous giving of their substance, but of their lives to his service.

Neglected Wounds Troublesome.

Did you ever notice how a small wound often festers and produces pus? That is a sign that the wound is becoming infected—it is the danger signal of blood poison. Don't neglect small wounds. Slight bruises, skin abrasions, sores, cuts, burns, pin pricks, etc., often cause blood poison which may prove fatal. Apply Gray's Ointment immediately to the affected part. It allays pain, heals the wound and prevents the serious and common after-effects. It has been used almost daily for ninety-six years by a multitude of families. Isn't that enough proof of its merit? Only 25c a box at drug stores. For FREE sample, write W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman, and likewise every man, could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags," and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and refreshing the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

PAINS IN SIDE AND BACK

How Mrs. Kelly Suffered and How She was Cured.

Burlington, Wis.—"I was very irregular, and had pains in my side and back, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and using two bottles of the Sanative Wash I am fully convinced that I am entirely cured of these troubles, and feel better all over. I know your remedies have done me worlds of good and I hope every suffering woman will give them a trial."—Mrs. ANNA KELLY, 710 Chestnut Street, Burlington, Wis.

The many convincing testimonials constantly published in the newspapers ought to be proof enough to women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they need.

This good old root and herb remedy has proved unequalled for these dreadful ills; it contains what is needed to restore woman's health and strength.

From the Field

Dry Creek, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have reached my new field and have made one round. I think that I have a good people to serve. While as yet there is no parsonage on the work, we feel sure that provision will be made for us. Being away from headquarters caused a delay in the receipt of our mail, so that we failed to get many of the nice Christmas cards that were sent to us until at a late date. I want to express heartfelt gratitude to my brethren and friends who were so kind as to remember us, and I wish a happy and successful year to all the members of the Louisiana Conference.

Longville, La. J. S. RUTLEDGE.

New Albany, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our church in New Albany has just closed such a successful "Every-member Canvass" for raising our missionary assessment for the year 1917 that I think you and your readers will be interested in the results and how they were attained.

On his return from Conference, our wide-awake and efficient pastor, Brother Pope, began to prepare for the "canvass." From the pulpit and by a personal letter to every member of the church, he explained the nature and advantages of the "Every-member Canvass." He asked that it be made the object of special prayer. Committees under the capable chairmanship of Mr. Carl Craig, our lay leader, were appointed to visit every Methodist home and present the claim of missions. The afternoon of December 31 was set apart for the work and every church member was requested to stay at home during the time. On the morning of the day appointed, Brother Pope preached a deeply spiritual sermon on "The Great Commission." It was a splendid preparation for the work of the committees, which was carried out in the afternoon of the same day.

The evening service of the day was an inspirational one. The program, consisting of songs, Bible readings, and talks along missionary lines, reached its climax in the report of the "Every-member Canvass" committee. The report showed not only financial success, but the fact that the church membership, as a whole, gave willingly and gladly. The money collected paid our missionary assessment for 1917 in full, with the neat sum of $70 in excess.

Our "Every-member Canvass" has been a great blessing to the church. Aside from the very material benefit of having our missionary assessment paid already, we are realizing the educational value of the "canvass." The subject of missions occupies a larger place in the minds and hearts of our people than ever before.

We wonder now why we have not used the plan ere this—we shall, no doubt, use it exclusively henceforward. And to any sister church which has not tried the "Every-member Canvass," we would say, "Do not be afraid of it. It pays in dollars and cents, in the growth of misionary spirit, and in general spiritual uplift."

Mrs. W. T. BOSWELL.

New Albany, Miss., Jan. 5, 1917.

GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATED.

On January 2, 1917, after the Methodist Church, which had been beautifully decorated, had been filled to its seating capacity by the many friends of Brother and Sister Davis, the bride of seventy summers and the groom of seventy-two, came in, and were seated on the rostrum; and a sweeter, and happier occasion, was never witnessed by any congregation. After a short talk by the pastor, the congregation was led in prayer by Brother Boyd, pastor of the Baptist Church; then congratulations were in order, and, with happy faces, the friends of this noble couple came forward and wished them a long stay among us. After a very pleasant hour had been passed, we were invited to the Sunday school annex where refreshments were served. Dr Gill, a life-long friend of the Davis family, made the presentation speech, and delivered to them a gift that had been provided by their friends. It consisted of one hundred dollars in gold, which was indeed a symbol of the service that has been rendered by them to the Church, and the community as well. Brother Davis then replied in a few touching remarks, and every one went away feeling that it was good to be there.

Brother Davis has been superintendent of the Sunday school here for twenty-five years, and Sister Davis has been a constant, consistent, and most successful worker for the cause of her Lord and Master. Their lives have been a holy benediction to this humble servant's heart, just as they have been to all with whom they have come in contact; and we feel that we shall be able to say when they have laid their armor down, "They have fought a good fight; they have kept the faith, and there is laid up for them a crown that fadeth not away.

Big Eaters Get Kidney Trouble

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus ending bladded disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Without the way there is no going; without the truth there is no knowing; without the life there is no living. I am the way which thou shouldst pursue; the truth which thou shouldst believe, the life which thou shouldst hope for.—Thomas a Kempis.

The Bible is not given to a people exclusively for their own use. It is the food of the whole world, the volume from which whatever is human must draw the soul's sustenance. And no more right have a people to keep this book to themselves, whilst thousands in other lands are worn down by moral famine, than they would have to hoard the earth's fruits, if their own wants were supplied, and the cry of starving multitudes swept across the seas. It is food for the whole world.—Lutheran.

PROGRESS—WHICH WAY?

The question of whether the world is getting better continues to perturb the mind. The square and the compass, the scale and the meter, however, are the instruments by which reckoning is now made in forecasting what will take place. The physician prescribes and the lawyer advises, and the old world rocks merrily along. The business world has settled down to mathematical certainty; profit and loss result in the successful or unsuccessful following of formulas prescribed and become sacred through constant practice.

Wisdom After a Fashion.

A certain quality of worldly wisdom which assists one in bringing about results most satisfactory to self is the order of the day. Progress has assuredly been made in the discovery of what is harmful and not harmful. Several decades ago towns in Louisiana were in the habit of providing, at threatening times, citizen police to prevent individuals entering the corporate limits who might cause the yellow fever epidemic to spread. But the discovery of the "stegomyia calopsis" ended the yellow fever peril in short order and proved the futility of the efforts of the guardsmen. The whole world all at once recognized that liquor injured the person of the imbiber, and no longer is the saloon the guarded business house of the past. Russia, with a sweeping edict, did away with the great use of "vodka," France passed legislation against the vending of "strong drink," and England is frowning upon the selling of "rum." In this country more than one-half of the States are "dry," and of all the counties only three hundred and thirty-five are "wet." Progress is being made in the art of self-protection. What with all the inventions and discoveries of recent years it is evident that much advancement is experienced in the art of applying material resources to physical comfort. Never was there such an age as now unfolds itself to us; and the future holds many things of marvel and surprise. For practicality, for pleasure, for human longevity, the world has advanced beyond the possibility of a mere per centum estimation.

This natural pragmatic tendency has been largely accelerated in an indirect manner by the Church, whose guns against worldly indulgences have been silenced almost, and whose voice has been joined with the teachers of reform to cause vice to cease for the preservation of the physical. So far as it goes, the reformation type of ministry is needed. Men should know that strong drink will dim the luster of the eye and will deprive the step of its elasticity; they should know that it will cause them to ill treat their families and deprive them of bread. But other information is being gleaned also, which gives power to compound felonies against the laws of righteousness and to commit heinous misdeeds with the least reaction taking place to cause the offenders to suffer. It is somewhat similar to the wisdom which enables the thief to avail himself of every advantage.

Careful study of what is harmless has been made. Light amusements, like the dance and theater, are not only indulged, but by many they seem to be regarded as essential to their welfare. Violations of the sanctity of the Sabbath has reached a stage of indifferent treatment by those who shape moral sentiment. Following this procedure to its limits, those who indulge themselves sometimes assume that the moral law may no longer be regarded as essential and that the Church is a decadent institution belonging to the past. That examples of worldliness have been set by those who continue in affluent circumstances render the road easy for multitudes.

Where Progress Is Most Needed.

Now that men have learned that sin should not be committed to injure the physical man, it is time for the lesson to be learned that sin should not be committed against God. The theologian may say that sin against God and against oneself or his neighbor is the same, but to the man upon the street there is a great difference. When sin results in disease, do men think of the wounded Christ or of their own wretched plight? When the frown of others has been incurred, with the possible loss of social prestige or financial power, is the fact considered that God is disobeyed or that calamity has come upon the wrong-doer? is the heart lifted to God when the evil days come nigh, or is the brain set to work to conjure up ways for escaping the temporal calamity?

It is high time that sociological teachings be reinforced by a deepening of religious consciousness and the realization brought home that it is not humanity we must ultimately serve, but God; that it is not the poor and needy who command attention in the last instance, but the suffering Christ. To those who love to contemplate what Paul terms a "mystery" which Christ came to implant upon earth there seems to be something lacking. The Sermon on the Mount speaks of the disciples as being the "light of the world" and a "city that is set on a hill" which cannot be hid. Are we mistaken in thinking that the modern disciples of the Lord do not occupy the exalted spiritual position which was Christ's desire for them when he uttered these words? He further said: "Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men." The unparalleled wisdom of the peoples of this age for perpetrating their own designs, and the apparent ineffectiveness of the teachers of spiritual righteousness, remind one of Christ's saying, "For the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light."

But we have the utmost faith in the Church Triumphant, and it shall stand forth in its glory because Christ is the head and it is the body. Humanity shall be taught that it cannot crown itself with the laudets of righteousness merely through the exercise of self-acquired wisdom. The world—the wicked and warring world—shall learn that salvation is by the suffering and risen Lord. The world has been bought through the Christ sent of God "before the foundation of the world," and this salvation, which is witnessed by God himself through "signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost," cannot be neglected. Let the people progress toward the holiness and perfection of God in the same ratio, at least, in which they utilize his material blessings for their own ends. The body of a man is the last consideration; the soul, in its wretched and lost condition, needs the utmost attention. The deep and feverish concern for progress and human welfare must be directed into the proper channels of spiritual salvation.

The Exceeding Sinfulness of Sin.

But the world is yet to learn, in spite of many obvious lessons, that sin is the great cause of its misfortunes and sorrows. All other conditions are affected by the state of the heart in relation to its Maker; and when we get ready to cast the evil spirits out of the inner self the time will be at hand to make the whole man clean. The opinion seems to prevail in many quarters that Jesus was more interested in the body of the leper than he was in his soul; that he was more intent upon the restoration of the sight of the blind man than he was of cleansing his spiritual vision. Had this been his mission, what great opportunities he missed while upon earth to demonstrate his power with the multitudes and free the nation in which he lived from the oppression of a foreign tyrant! But even such a passing thought leaves a dissatisfied state of mind, for the mission of Christ was one of redemption. The mark of Cain, the bleeding heart of the sinful king David, the sufferings of the wanton nation of Israel which went afar after the gods of the heathen—all need the redemptive blood of Christ before the shackles can be removed. The presence of sin in the heart will now precipitate the tragic circumstances that has always attended its existence. The crying need is that men should pray with the poor publican, bowing in the dust: "God be merciful to me a sinner." Peter's tears after his denial of his Lord scalded his soul into a great victory. Paul's astonishing revelation of being out of harmony with the Savior of mankind inflamed him into an activity which could only result from a heart that had known the refining fires of redemption.

Let Zion awake, and let her trumpets call men to rebuild the walls. Men who have tasted and experienced the new life testify of its reality and lasting qualities. They center their affections upon the kingdom, and look to the realization of that city which "hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

C. A. B.

The amount of time you spend alone with God, and with your own soul, has no little to do with your comfort, and your strength, and your fruitfulness.—Dr. Alexander Whyte.

HIS LAMP.

Annie Johnston Flint.

His lamp am I.
To shine where he shall say;
And lamps are not for sunny rooms,
Nor for the light of day,
But for dark places of the earth
Where shame and wrong and crime have birth,
Or for the murky twilight gray
Where wandering sheep have gone astray,
Or where the light of faith grows dim
And souls are groping after Him.
And as sometimes a flame we find
Clear shining through the night
So bright we do not see the lamp,
But only see the light;
So may I shine—His life the flame—
That men may glorify His name.

FOUND ONLY IN CHRIST.

In the life of the voluptuary there is no comfort. I need not draw aside the curtain that hides the excesses into which Solomon's dissoluteness plunged him. But I tear off the garlands which hide this death's head, and I hold before you the reeking skull of sinful pleasure. There is no peace in the life of the voluptuary. Solomon answers, "None! none!" Where is there any? In the religion of Jesus. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." In Christ is peace. In Christ is pardon. In Christ is everlasting joy, and nowhere else.—Talmage.

NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITIES.

In a certain city a gentleman of large business interests was converted. After his conversion he said to us, "I have often wondered why it is that Christian people, if they really believe what they profess, show so little interest toward winning others to Christ. I have a brother-in-law who is a minister, and spends his summer vacations with me. Yet in all these years that he has been coming to our home he has never once talked seriously with me about giving myself to Christ." That minister, through neglect of duty, was condemned in the eyes of that unsaved business man.—The Master Workman.

BLIGHTED.

Hearts become hard in the same way that footpaths do—by constant tramping upon them. Vain and silly thoughts trip swiftly and tirelessly back and forward. Every indulgence of the flesh stamps with feet of iron. Rejected reproofs, omitted duties, broken promises, march ponderously upon its sensitive surfaces. As a cattle path across a meadow is lower and harder and blacker than the green sward it divides, so is the path of a bad habit upon the human heart. No grass or grain can grow upon the cattle path, nor can the good seed of the Kingdom sprout in the track of an evil habit.—Unidentified.

THAT'S DIFFERENT.

There is a story told of a somewhat eccentric preacher who was driving along a country road when he was attracted by the appearance of a farmhouse. Its whole air was so peaceful that it looked like an ideal abode. It occurred to him that, fair as it seemed, it might still be lacking in that which was most essential, so leaving his carriage he went to the door. A middle-aged woman answered the summons, and he propounded this question without hesitation, "Madam, does Jesus Christ live here?" The woman seemed somewhat startled, but though he repeated his inquiry he received no answer, and when he had gone she ran out where her husband was chopping wood, and told him of her caller. "Didn't you tell him that we belonged to the Church?" demanded the old man. The wife shook her head. "Didn't you tell him we give money every Sunday?" Again the gray head made its negative reply. "'Twasn't anything like that he wanted to know, John. He wanted to know if Jesus Christ lived here—that's different."—Forward.

WALTER MALONE: HIS LIFE AND WORKS.

By Frazer Hood, Ph.D.

IV

The poetry of Walter Malone is no ordinary verse. The sheer quantity of it compels notice. No poetry can be measured alone in terms of volume; but if the other qualities that go to make great poetry are to be found also, the quantity is a factor that must be given its meed of worth. It is because I find so many evidences of exquisite imagery, so many instances of those characteristics of fine poetry that one must rather feel than describe, I have no timidity in asserting his claim to genius. Lovers of poetry delight in quoting you Browning's fine lines,

Lest you should think he never could recapture
The first fine careless rapture, as an example of this indescribable quality of poetic power. In the poetry of our author are many, many examples of the same power. Describing the strange beauty and melancholy of submarine life, he says:

But never trills or warbling wake those bowers;
No sound uprises in those songless realms;
The petals of those blossoms never thrill
Or tingle with embraces of the bees.

Humming-birds seen in tropical forests are,

bright banditti of the Southern skies
That rifle sylvan hordes of honey dew.

And again, take those lines descriptive of the first feelings of love in the adolescent heart:

Love then was light as the feet of a fawn,
Brilliant of brow as dazzle of dawn,
Jocund as June, unwearied of wing,
Hearing his heart like a goldfinch sing.

And that longing for their labor in the freemen's hearts shall be
Like the green blood of the springtime, tingling in the turf and tree.

(Note the use of "blood" from its common association with color to its truer association with function.)

The range of his poetic vision is as broad as the world itself. He has given us many love lyrics that burn with passion, many that ache with a sorrow that dews the face of a Niobe in tear-drops sharp as acid. There are poems of awakening love; there are poems of youthful love; and songs of wedded bliss enjoyed far into life. Then there are delicate portraits that glow in the bosom of his volumes like cameos fine-cut. Take that most beautiful of them all, the portrait of lovely Isabel when first her beauty burst upon the soul of De Soto:

Oh, she was lovelier than an April morn,
With April skies, and April birds and bloom,
With April songs, and April suns and showers,
Now laughing and now pouting, now in tears,
But ever bringing visions of delight.

No one but a poet unconscious of his gift would have hazarded such an adjectival repetition, and none but a master could have achieved such a result.

He loved children, and some of his most cunning workmanship is expended in exhibiting boy-life with its wild, care-free days. Here is one of his boys:

Along the street
His brown bare feet
Remind me of a baby faun,
By fern-fringed pool
In shadows cool
Leading a throng of fluting birds at dawn.

No hermit thrush
Through woodland hush
Could trill a tune more fresh and free;
No mocking-bird
More gladly heard
Through verdant vine-clad swamps of Tennessee.

Then there are poems of wild fancy that startle us by their very boldness. Take, for instance, that weird conceit suggested by Coleridge's line,

Woman wailing for her Demon Lover.

The conception is poetic to the core. After a few stanzas describing the overthrow of Satan in heaven and his casting out, the woman who had beheld his defeat, speaks:

Here I come to meet thee, Satan, ruined king whom I adore,
Thou my prince, my lord, my master, and mine idol evermore!

Now I see thee come to meet me, and I rush within thine arms,
While my bosom bounds with passion for thy wild and wondrous charms.

I, the seraph, blest and beauteous, robed in radiant starry light,
With my golden locks encircled with the lilies pearly white;

I, that soar on swan-like pinions, blossom-bosomed, flower-fair,
I, with eyes like lucid dew-drops, twinkling in the azure air;

I have come to meet thee, Satan, with thy wings of ashen gray,
Seared with sins and seared with sorrows that shall never pass away!

No excerpt from this poem can do it justice, and one must read it through to get the full force of its stately rhythm and its weird passion.

As an illustration of his calmer mood which reveals his sensitiveness to friendship, the following lines, "To a Friend," may be recalled:

Tormented sorely by the chastening rod,
I muttered to myself, "There is no God!"
But, faithful friend, I found your soul so true,
That God revealed himself in giving you.

Time would fail me to speak of all the themes that attracted his fancy. There are poems dealing with economic conditions; there are descriptive sketches of landscapes in many lands; sunsets burst upon us in his pages with a variety of forms and colors like those the Divine Artist throws upon the evening sky. There are matchless poems on birds and flowers and trees; indeed, no poet has given us more Nature poetry than he. In it all one who reads is astonished at his wealth of simile and metaphor, at the music of his lines and the cooling freshness that delights on every page.

V

It has been remarked by Mr. M. W. Conolly that Judge Malone has given a new note to Southern literature "based upon Southern life, Southern scenes, and Nature as she appears in the South alone. The early writers of America harped on larks and nightingales which they had never heard, and on rosemary and rue which they had never seen. . . . The mocking-bird was practically the one Southern bird known to literature. . . . Judge Malone has taken the redbird, the bluebird, the woodpecker, the humming-bird, and others, and put them in the place of the feathered songsters of Europe of which we know nothing. He has taken the magnolia, the dogwood, the redbud, the passion flower, the trumpet flower, and others, and made them popular in literature."

While it is true as Alfred Austin said that he finds in the verse of Judge Malone "deference to the best traditions of English poetry," his was no servile imitation of it, and one of the most priceless of these traditions was that a poet was never to try to picture forth anything that he had not first seen and felt in his own experience—a perception of Nature, not the perception of some one else's perception, is demanded by "the best traditions of English poety."

No one can read the poetry of Walter Malone who has not learned the language and felt the heart-pulse of Nature. He speaks in the vernacular of song-birds, thrills with the melody of water brooks, and palpitates with the passion that the flowers feel when the winds of heaven come awooing among them. "He came from the soil, and remained a son of it," as a friend expressed it. Nature was to him no panorama of painted beauty.

She was a mother on whose breast he could sob out his sorrows, exult in the tonic of achievement and hope, and to whom he could unlock the sleepless brood

Of fancies from his soul, their lurking place,
Nor doubt that each would pass ne'er to return
To one so loved, so watched, and so secure.

He was in something more than a metaphor a child of Nature, taught to speak her language, cunning to interpret her moods, and sensitive to feel her great life. While all his poetry is by no means Nature poetry, it all is suffused with her influence. One could tell, whatever mood the poet was in, whether revealing the untutored soul of pagan brave, or exposing the ugly venom in the heart of crafty Spaniard, or describing the redbird darting zigzag through the green of forest like a flame—one could note the influence of Nature through it all.

VI

When we come to study his epic poem, Hernando De Soto, we discover an entirely different attitude toward Nature. I think his treatment of Nature here discloses a conception not to be found anywhere else. Wordsworth conceived a preestablished harmony between us and the natural world so that Humanity and Nature can easily live and converse together. Tennyson, with everwavering faith, speaks sometimes as if Nature did not exist at all apart from our thought: "Her life the eddying life of our living soul." Browning conceived Nature as a wild, unhuman, unmoral, unspiritual being who has an elemental life, but no soul. She has a certain kind of interest in us, an interest, however, not sustained. The powers that play in Nature, if we happen to be in harmony with them, befriend us:

Their work was done—we might go or stay,
They relapsed to their ancient mood.

In the De Soto, while Nature appears in her beneficent and benign aspects, often she is "red in tooth and claw." But even here, to Walter Malone, it was not so much a Berserker rage that moves Nature in her destructive force, whether in tornado or miasmas and fevers of a tropical swamp, as it was a godlike resentment at man's shameless intrusion into her sacred sanctuary.

The Oriental bard differs widely from the Western poet in his treatment of Nature. In the poetry of the former, Nature is the great reality, man but an incident. Nature is vast, mysterious, transcendent; man a puny creature, scarcely in the thought of Nature at all, and then only as a despicable, sprawling thing. To the Western poet, Nature is but little more than a background of impalpable cloud and sky to his picture of man. Nature sometimes is the theater boards, upon which man stalks in gigantic strides and plays his part. Sometimes Nature is the Ganymede who bears the goblet to the great Olympian, sometimes the gentle Hebe adorning and enlivening the courts of men. However variant the accent, the dynamic stress is always on man. In the De Soto there is another treatment yet. Man and Nature are related not in subordinance. They are peers. Often there are dubious battles waged between them. Sometimes there is a truce, whose term is conditioned upon the observance by each of the other's rights. "The contest with Nature," says the author, "is one which all must face; it is inevitable; it is unavoidable; it is one that from the cradle to the coffin ceases not. We may live in peace with our neighbors, or we may contend with them, grow weary of strife, and agree on an armistice. But with Nature we can never negotiate a truce; between us there can be no cessation of hostilities." How strangely out of harmony does this conception seem with his treatment of Nature in his earlier poems. This is the conception presented in his epic poem. A careful study of this apparent disharmony may be resolved, I think. If there is nothing new in his treatment of Nature in his earlier poetry, certainly in his epic there is.

VII

A few words must be said on the quality and literary value of his masterpiece, Hernando De Soto. It was the work of eight years. Five years before it was published I read it in manuscript, and the author then thought it would be pubilshed shortly; but so careful an artist was he that he was unwilling to let it go from his hand until he was sure he had exhausted his powers upon it. It is a long poem; its author is one of our generation. These two facts afford sufficient evidence to the minds of many to find an indictment upon. But some of us are willing to overlook the first fault if the interest is sustained, and will be inclined to hear further evidence which may mitigate the severity of the second. Among critics there is a diversity of opinion as to whether the poem has the power to hold one's interest. My early association with its authorship makes me feel incompetent to pass a judgment free from bias. I have resorted to a method in vogue in psychology study. I arranged certain tests. I read it to rather large audiences—one time to a woman's club, another time to several hundred high-school pupils, again to some fifty business and professional men, and finally to a small group of children. From the results obtained, I am convinced, in my own mind, that whatever other literary merits this epic may lack, it is a story with power to catch and hold the interest. The narrative is full of action, and flows with a strong current which does not eddy into distracting episode. The author is master of the story-teller's art. But some have criticised the poem because there is such an abundance of description. To my mind the criticism reveals a misconception of the author's purpose. A more careful reading will show that what is taken as simple description is in reality narrative, wherein not man, but Nature, is in action. Our author says: "In the life of a pioneer like De Soto, the fight against Nature is no more episode, no passing phase of his mission. It is the beginning, the middle, and the end of all his labors." How else could this fight against Nature be exhibited but by description? It is a description, however, full of movement, and partakes of the nature of narration.

It has not been my purpose to write critically of the poetry of Judge Malone. My task has been an humbler one. It has been my purpose to write an appreciation, with the hope that the readers of the Review will feel drawn to the pages of the poet himself and there form their own judgment. He is no longer a contemporary. Let us hope that the longing expressed in the following lines from his pen has had its fruition:

I long to soar from sod,
And tread in glory of celestial grace;
To live beyond the time my grave is trod,
Proving a crown-prince of immortal race;
To emulate beautitudes of God,
To reach his kingdom, and behold his face.

PLACING ORPHANED CHILDREN.

The question is frequently asked, "Is it better to place children in a private home, or in an orphanage?" Our invariable answer is, "It is better to place the child in a good Christian home than in any institution, no matter how well conducted that institution may be." But we insist on the emphasis being placed on the "good Christian home." We know that the children in an orphanage, properly conducted and not overcrowded, are a thousand times better off, have better opportunities, better treatment, and get better training than the children in many so-called "homes."

We consider this one of the important questions of the times. Too much care cannot be taken in the placement of dependent children, and the question of finding the proper home for the homeless child must not be considered too lightly, or handled too carelessly. There are many serious phases of this great work, and an experience of over eight years in handling this problem has taught us some very important lessons. Among them are the following:

First—Great satisfaction and in most cases permanent and natural homes are found for children when placed from infancy to three and four years of age. Most people who want foster children at this tender age want them to love, and to fill a place in their hearts demanded by lofty parental impulses. We are always glad to place every child we possibly can at this age, and we always have more appeals for children of this age than we can find children to place. For this reason we never have in the Orphanage for any length of time children under the age of four years, unless for some important reason it is best for the child, or for the people who want the child, that it be not placed.

Second—Our experience teaches us that children placed from four to eight years of age, often cause trouble. People who take them frequently have never had any children of their own. Their fancied ideal of a perfect child is too severely tried and they soon become wearied of the noise, restlessness, and untiring energy of the youngster. In many such cases we are begged to take the children back again and are compelled to do so.

Third—In most cases applicants for children over eight years of age want children for helpers in the home—nurses, maids, cooks, or servants. When these applicants are asked to sign papers obligating themselves to educate, give them kind and affectionate treatment, and treat them as members of the family, they refuse to do so, and the matter is dropped.

Fourth—We have always felt that we are under obligation to protect the people who take a child from us, as well as protect the child we place. We consider it almost a crime for a family to take a child, care for it, love it, plan for its future, and then be compelled to give it up just when their hopes are being realized. So we have refused to place children until we can give every assurance that there will be no future trouble.

With the exercise of the greatest care we have found that fully 50 per cent of the children placed after six years of age are returned to us, and sometimes when we are ill-prepared to take them back.

Finally—There are many children that cannot, or should not be placed in private homes. It is a sad thing for a family of four or five children who, through no fault of their own, are left homeless, to be ruthlessly torn apart, scattered into widely separated communities, with all ties severed, never to know each other, and in most cases to lose sight of each other, and to grow to maturity unknown to each other. There are natural ties that should not be ignored. Sentiment has its place in life, and to ignore the natural bonds, even in children, is a very grave injustice. There is no more pathetic sight than to see families of from four to six children, fondly clinging to each other, seeking to gratify that natural love that God has so nobly planted in the human breast. Then it often happens that mothers, even fathers, are overtaken with financial or physical disasters. They are left helpless, perhaps temporarily, to provide for themselves or their children. They are forced to give up their children. To take these children and scatter them out over the country, and forever cut them off from their living parent, so that if they should recover either their financial or physical ability to care for their own, and not then be able to have their children restored to them, would be an act well-nigh unpardonable. We would like to be in position to hand back to such a mother, or father, if they be worthy parents, their children. There are many other reasons why the question of home-placement for children is a most serious problem, and makes the institution for orphans, properly conducted, an absolute necessity.

In fact, all organizations for placing children are compelled to build and operate detention homes, or places where children can be cared for until homes can be found for them, and where the many children that are returned to them can be cared for—and these places eventually become orpanages.

We contend that we are doing this work as carefully, as effectively and as judicially as it is possible for it to be done with safety. We claim to merit the confidence and respect of our people, and we are planning for a larger and better plant, and urge the people of our Church and Conference to stand by their own institution as long as it is doing a merited work. When it is mismanaged, or fails to do the work it should, a change should be had in the management, and the work and support of the Orphanage maintained on a fair and just basis. We stand ever ready and willing to surrender this work to more skillful and better hands whenever the people of our Church decide that such a change is necessary. Until then we claim the right to the undivided support and loyal co-operation of the people called Methodist in Louisiana.

ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent, Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

"WE WALK BY FAITH, NOT BY SIGHT."

How fruitless have been the efforts of worldly men to explore the spiritual realm and to understand Christianity! They have yet to learn that the Christian religion is altogether different from the natural sciences, and that therefore, it must not be regarded in the same materialistic way, though the many sad failures and deplorable shipwrecks of life which they have made in seeking to fathom and to determine from a mathematical view-point, with nice distinctions, just what it is, ought to have taught them this fact long ago. They have blindly stuck to reason, but in the search after the great hidden truths of God and in the examination of the revelation that He has made of himself through his only begotten Son, faith occupies the first place and reason a secondary place. If one would even partially understand the religion taught by our Lord, he must be a Christian, and be able to look at the problems of life through the eyes of a believer. The man who, like doubting Thomas, must see before he can believe, will never make a happy Christian, and yet this is the position which far too many otherwise good people occupy with reference to the one true religion, which admits of no rival belief. The Christian knows very little, but he feels certain that God will always take care of his obedient children, and this fact satisfies him. He places implicit trust in God and loves Him and his fellowmen. He believes that it is better to walk by faith than by sight, because in the former case he is led by the hand of God, while in the latter he would have to depend solely upon himself, and he knows how frail a thing human nature is. He does not ask to see the "distant scene." He feels that one step at a time with the aid of Almighty God, manifested in the "Kindly Light" of the Third Person of the Adorable Trinity, is sufficient.

ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

E. H. RANDLE, LL.D.

E. H. Randle died at his home in Hernando, Mississippi, on September 27, 1916, after a short illness, and was buried at Holly Springs, Miss. He was born on December 13, 1830, in Henry County, Tennessee. In the early colonial days his ancestors came from England, settled in Virginia, moved to North Carolina, and thence to Tennessee. He was educated at Andrew College, Trenton, Tenn., graduating therefrom in 1856. In the same year he established Caledonia College, at Caledonia, Tenn., this being his first school. He spent fifty years in the schoolroom, having taught in Caledonia, McKenzie, Paris, and Ripley, Tenn., in Paducah, Ky., and in Byhalia and Hernando, Miss. At Hernando he established the "Randie University School," which was maintained under that name for several years after he retired from active teaching.

He was married three times—first to Miss Letitia Alexander. She died leaving one son. He then married Miss Sarah Anna McPherson. She died leaving three children. Later he married Miss Elia Roberts, of Holly Springs. She and his four children survive him and mourn his death.

He was more than an ordinary teacher. His life was a worthy example for the army of boys and girls and young men and young women who came under his influence as a teacher. That benign influence will bless his memory unto generations yet unborn.

He was a scholar. It was his delight to drink deep of the Pierian Spring. He was a scientist, and discussed and wrote on scientific subjects. He was one of the first to advance the theory of "Antagonism of Germs" in the human system. Many years ago at a meeting of the Tri-State Medical Society in Memphis, he contributed and read an article upon this theory, which then was empirical, but which is now a recognized truth. He was a practical philosopher and could harmonize the wisdom of God with the folly and weakness of man. In the year 1905 the Southwestern Baptist University at Jackson, Tenn., as a merited desert conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. He also contributed many articles to the newspapers and to periodicals upon a great variety of subjects, all of which emphasized the fact that he was a deep thinker and a profound reasoner. He loved the South. He loved and cherished its traditions. He defended it as a soldier under General Bedford Forrest in the Civil War, and in times of peace he wrote for it with a trenchant pen. His was a cheerful disposition. Life with its duties and responsibilities was a pleasure to him rather than otherwise.

At the early age of fifteen years he professed religion at a camp meeting and joined the Methodist Church, and for more than three score and ten years, continuously lived a splendid Christian life. His life typified the sentiment of that sacred song, "I Love Thy Church, O God." He laid not up treasures on earth, but in heaven. His life was a testimony as to the genuineness of the Christian Religion. He wanted all men everywhere to love God and their fellowmen. As the sun that has run its course sinks itself into the West, as the fruit that is well ripe yields itself readily to be plucked, so our friend and brother laid himself down and was gathered up to his Father's.

"He was a good man and abounded in good works. When shall we see his like again?"

Hernando, Miss. F. C. HOLMES.

GOD IN HISTORY.

No intelligent student of history can be at the same time a pessimist. It is true that there have been very many tragic pages in the record of human life upon this planet. It is true that even to-day there are many clouds in the sky, and that it must be admitted that we have not yet come very close to any satisfactory goal in human goodness and well-being. But we cannot read history with open eyes and not see in all its surging movements some reaching out after better things. Human history is not a movement in a circle; there is in it, plainly, a tendency upward, as if a divine spirit were seeking through it an ever higher, and better, and holier expression. Even in the midst of the present great war can we not plainly see a divine goodness patiently trying to reap a rich harvest of human well-being out of all the terrible sowing of strife and struggle? And it is becoming increasingly manifest that He is not to try in vain. We never could be surer that God was in human history than we can be to-day.—Christian Guardian.

PRESS IN.

"A self-opening gate is sometimes seen on country roads. If a traveler stops before he gets to it, it will not open. If he drives up, the wheels of the carriage press the springs below the roadways, and the gate swings back. Thus we should meet all barriers. The Christian must press close up in faith, and the difficulty will be overcome."

Church News

The Committee on the status of the Negroes in the proposed reorganized Methodist Church will meet in Cincinnati, Ohio, on April 10, 1917.

Of the four Committees constituted at the recent meeting of the Joint Commission on Unification to consider certain important questions three of them have Northern Methodists for chairmen.

The Educational Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will hold an important meeting at Dallas, Texas, April 4 and 5. It is stated that Hon. Asa Candler will be one of the speakers on that occasion.

Dr. J. W. Lee, now Chaplain of the Barnes Hospital, is said to be organizing a national movement to purchase and preserve the house in St. Louis in which Eugene Field, the poet, was born. This movement deserves to succeed.

Bishop W. A. Candler's sermon at the opening session of the Joint Commission on Unification at Baltimore was a masterful one. Without being excessively sentimental, it fully met the requirements of the occasion. Bishop Candler is a great figure in any company of men.

Dr. A. L. Andrews, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, at Fort Worth, Tex., has already received in the few weeks of the present Conference year that have elapsed, 76 members. There is scarcely an abler and more effective man in Texas Methodism than Dr. Andrews.

We take the following from The Alabama Christian Advocate of January 11: "An indirect report has reached us that the 'progressives' (on the Unification Commission) were well pleased with the results of the late Baltimore meeting, believing that the cause of unification was advanced. On the other hand, it is also rumored that those who doubt the wisdom of union believe that the recent meeting showed the impossibility of overcoming certain difficulties."

Rev. O. P. Ader pays the late Mrs. James Atkins, the accomplished wife of Bishop Atkins, a beautiful tribute in a recent number of the North Carolina Christian Advocate. Among other things, he says: "One of the finest things in the life of Mrs. Atkins was her loyalty to her Church. She believed in her Church with all her heart—believed in its polity and in its doctrines, and was proud of its heroic history and ministry. She felt and feared at times that we were lax in our loyalty and loose in our living, falling below the holy living and dying of our fathers, and at such times she would say to me, 'You must preach to us on the Minor Prophets.' I well knew what she meant: she feared the Church she loved so much would fall below the Bible standard of living, and thereby lose the favor of God and lose also its old-time power and glory. She well knew the secret and source of power of the Church that is to conquer the world."

A GOOD START FOR THE MEMPHIS HOSPITAL CITY CAMPAIGN IN MEMPHIS.

The ten-day whirlwind campaign to raise in Memphis $150,000 for the Methodist Hospital was launched under the most favorable conditions at a six o'clock dinner at the Chisca Hotel, Friday evening, January 19.

Nearly 300 enthusiastic workers were present. The Executive Committee, consisting of eleven of the biggest business men of the City, presided over by Mr. J. R. Pepper, and the Woman's Advisory Committee, composed of five of the most influential women of Memphis, under the leadership of Mrs. W. B. Murrah, with other distinguished guests, sat at the executive table.

The dinner was an orthodox Methodist affair—an abundance of everything, and the long famed yellow-legged chicken forming the center and staple. After this was the feast of intellect and soul.

Our honored and faithful mayor, Mr. T. C. Ashcroft, who is in command of the men's division, delivered the opening address, which was of such high order and so enthusiastic that he was frequently interrupted with rounds of applause. He declared that the coming week would be Hospital Week at the City Hall, and no one need hope for discussion of appointments or other business there during that time.

Then our loved Chairman, Mr. J. R. Pepper, delivered a happy address, being followed by Mr. R. R. Ellis, who declared this campaign would initiate the building of a new and greater Memphis. Captain G. T. Fitzhugh delivered a strong and beautiful speech, appealing to the highest instincts of the soul, and declaring that the Methodists have bought an ideal site and must have an ideal hospital. Mr. F. C. Barber, the campaign director, followed with a telling speech in which he said forcefully that there have been four aristocracies in the history of the race, namely: the aristocracy of might, the aristocracy of lineage, the aristocracy of wealth, and above all the aristocracy of service.

Mr. Barber announced advanced pledges amounting to $44,750, as follows:

O. K. Houck Piano Company	$ 250.00
K. R. Armistead	500.00
A. K. Burrow	500.00
J. S. Robinson	500.00
L. M. Stratton	1,000.00
Joseph Newberger	1,000.00
W. C. Johnson	1,000.00
R. W. Bailey	1,000.00
Hessig-Ellis Drug Company	1,000.00
Memphis Street Railway	1,000.00
T. K. Riddick	2,000.00
Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Norfleet	5,000.00
Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Fitzhugh	5,000.00
Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Goff	5,000.00
L. K. Salsbury	5,000.00
J. H. Sherard	5,000.00
Mr. and Mrs. John R. Pepper	10,000.00

The announcement of each subscription was greeted with hearty cheers.

Then the captains and their teams of ten—consisting of seventeen teams of men and eight of women, representing all creeds of the best people of Memphis—began the work of selecting the names of those from whom they are expected to solicit contributions from the lists that had been carefully prepared. With the greatest interest and enthusiasm they gave themselves to this work for nearly two hours.

During this time it became known that Captain Clarence Saunders, president of the chain of grocery stores known as the Piggly-Wiggly, had personally subscribed $1000, and in a full-page advertisement in the Sunday morning Commercial Appeal Memphis citizens were informed that 5 per cent of the gross sales of all these stores would be devoted to the Methodist Hospital for the coming ten days. As these are among the most popular grocery stores of the city, it will mean much to the Hospital.

Memphis is into the work for a finish, and we are confident that the subscriptions will exceed $200,000 before the ten days of the campaign are over.

H. M. ELLIS, Field Secretary.

HOSPITAL DAY.

Attention, Presiding Elders, Pastors, Sunday school Superintendents and Epworth League Presidents!

The fourth Sunday of January is Hospital Day throughout the four co-operating Conferences. Everywhere, every Methodist is expected then to be thinking about the Methodist Hospital, praying for the Methodist Hospital, and giving as liberally as his means will allow for the building of the Methodist Hospital.

In the City of Memphis a great campaign is on and there is little doubt that more than $200,000 will be raised within ten days for this institution of our Church. The cause is gripping the people everywhere. God has blessed our section with great prosperity, and we owe Him a thank offering for this abundance as well as for the peace that has blessed our land, and the health which we have enjoyed.

Let us put our thanksgiving into a liberal gift for our unfortunate brother.

Other Hospital days have been observed in more or less perfunctory manner. Let us observe this in a way that shows our heart is in the work and that will guarantee the success of the enterprise.

The Methodist Hospital is going to be built—there is no doubt of it. What will be the share you and your church or Sunday school or League will have in it?

Make the best of your opportunity and remit the amount collected promptly to H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary, 1025 Lamar Boulevard, Memphis, Tenn.

H. M. ELLIS.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

This week we enter on the second term of the current session of this time-honored institution, with an auspicious beginning. All except two of the pupils that were with us before Christmas have returned, and four new pupils have been enrolled, one of these being a daughter of one of our sainted dead of the North Mississippi Conference. In order to utilize the "Annex," and to accommodate some worthy boys that are poor, we take a few co-eds. Among these we have seven ministerial students. We also have ten children of Methodist ministers, not counting ministerial students, nor the President's children. Three of our young preachers are doing supply work, and are giving good account of themselves.

In point of attendance, and as regards the character of the work being done here, the present session is one of the best in the history of the institution.

Respectfully,

T. J. O'NEIL, President.

NOTICE.

Brother W. A. McKennon, who has served so effectively as Treasurer of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board for the past two years, has resigned that position, and Mr. T. W. By this arrangement our Treasurer and our Field Secretary are in the same city, and the work can be administered to better advantage for that reason. Brother McKennon's resignation was voluntary, and it was he that suggested Brother Holloman for this office. He remains a member of the Board, and is the Chairman of the Shreveport District Organization.

All remittances of pledges, Children's Day funds, and payments on the two per cent assessment should hereafter be sent to Mr. T. W. Holloman, Alexandria, La.

ST. LOUIS ALMOST "DRY" ON SUNDAYS.

The following press dispatch was sent out from St. Louis, Mo., on January 6. "The Sunday Closing law against saloons became effective here at midnight. Saloons must remain closed from midnight Saturday until 5 o'clock a. m. Monday. Practically all the territory in the St. Louis district is now 'dry on Sundays.' This is good for the Nation's fourth city in size, and we trust that the spirit of reform will soon win greater triumphs there.

ENGLAND AND DRINK.

Prohibition—the word is ringing through Great Britain. Long the watchword of a hopeless minority of crusaders and dissenters, it is being echoed by multitudes of people who, two years ago, uttered the term only in contempt and loathing. Government purchase and strict control seems now the more probable result of the uprising, but the significant thing is that absolute prohibition for the period of the war is demanded by a growing army of the very Britons who formerly upheld the liquor traffic as inviolable and indispensable.—Philadelphia North American.

THE ARIZONA WAY.

The following press dispatch was published a few days since:

"Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 29—Five hundred gallons of whiskey, wines and beer were poured into a city water wagon here today and the streets of the business section sprinkled with the liquor. Two hundred automobiles and several floats formed a parade that followed the water wagon. A band played a dirge. The liquor was confiscated in raids by the sheriff under the new Arizona prohibition law and its destruction was ordered by Superior Judge Stanford."

PROHIBITION MOVEMENT.

The friends of prohibition have good reason to be gratified by the progress which their cause is making. The movement for preventing the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors began many years ago. As far back as 1851 Maine passed a prohibition law, and for sixty-five years it has been unlawful to sell or manufacture liquors in that State except for medicinal or manufacturing purposes. From time to time other States followed the example of Maine and passed similar laws, but did not in all case retain them. At present twenty-three States and one territory have adopted prohibition. These States, with the dates when this policy went into effect, are shown in the fallowing table:

Maine	1851	Colorado	1916
Kansas	1880	Oregon	1916
North Dakota	1889	Washington	1916
Oklahoma	1907	Arkansas	1916
Georgia	1908	Iowa	1916
Mississippi	1909	Idaho	1916
North Carolina	1909	South Carolina	1916
Tennessee	1909	Nebraska	1917
West Virginia	1914	South Dakota	1917
Arizona	1915	Michigan	1918
Alabama	1915	Montana	1918
Virginia	1916	Alaska	1918

From this table we learn that within the last few years prohibition has been moving forward at a startling rate, while in the two years just passed such laws have gone into effect in States which together have a population of 12,000,000. At the elections held in November the people voted on the question of prohibition in Michigan, Nebraska, South Dakota, Montana, California and Missouri. Two of these States—California and Missouri—voted "wet," the other four voted "dry." In Nebraska and South Dakota, prohibition is to go into effect this year (1917), while in Michigan and Montana it will not go into effect until next year. Alaska also voted for prohibition at the recent election, for no law of a territory is valid unless it is approved by that body.—St. Nicholas.

THE MISSISSIPPI METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

Dear Doctor Monk: The new year is starting off well for the Orphanage. Our new head matron, Miss Antelia Tate, from New Albany, is getting her work well in hand and seems to be the right person in the right place. Our new farm manager, Brother J. J. Childre, who was an official member of our church at Magee, Miss., for the past several years, is a great lover of boys and the boys at the farm have already fallen in love with him. I think he will make a great success. We have a good corps of helpers throughout the institution and all seem to be interested in their work and doing nicely. The health in the Home is good. We are still carrying out the prescribed diet, as recommended by the United States Health Service.

The past year was a good one for the Home, and we ask the same loyal support of all the churches, Sunday schools, Missionary Societies, Epworth Leagues and individuals for the coming year, and, where possible, an increase in the amount of contributions to meet the advance in the cost of living.

With four exceptions, our district agents throughout the State remain the same as last year. Brother J. G. Parham of Rolling Fork is agent for the Port Gibson District in place of Brother Hugh Junkin, who resigned on account of ill health; Brother W. T. Rogers of New Albany has been selected as the agent for the Corinth District in place of Brother Neblett, who has moved to another district; Rev. T. J. Halfacre of Artesia has been selected as agent for the Columbus District, in place of Brother Baird, who was moved out of it; Rev. J. E. Stephens, of Coahoma, has been selected as agent for the Greenville District in place of Brother Shaw, who was sent to another part of the Conference. If these new agents do as well as their predecessors, we shall be highly pleased.

Where practicable, we would prefer that reports be made through the district agent. This encourages the agent, helps the district, and is just as good for us.

We request the pastors from the two Conferences to please appoint some person, who is especially interested in the Home, as a special agent at each church in his charge. I would ask the pastors also to notify the manager of the Home when they know of any good, Christian home wanting a child from the Orphanage.

We have 219 in the Home at the present time, and everything is moving along nicely.

J. B. RANDOLPH, Superintendent.

A RARE COMMUNION SERIVCE.

The writer had the rare privilege on the second Sunday in January of administering the holy sacrament to a class of French converts who had never before seen either of the sacraments administered by a Protestant minister. These converts were the fruits of the missionary efforts of Rev. E. N. Barrios, a local preacher employee of the Baker-Wakefield Cypress Co., of Plattenville. He is a Frenchman who was recently converted in the Nazarene Church at Lake Charles, and is a fine type of both a godly man and a gospel preacher. In his few months of Sunday afternoon work at Labadieville on Bayou Lafourche, where this service was held, he has what he has reason to believe would be a church with a membership of about fifty French Creoles, some of whom understand practically no English, if only he had a house for them, with a graveyard where they could bury their dead, and a pastor, so that they would not be dependent upon the Catholic priests for these services. He has done this work in a rented shack of a hall that he has himself paid $3.50 per month rent for.

Brother Barrios is thought by those who know his worth to be one of the best French preachers in the South Louisiana field, and needs to be supported and set free to preach the gospel to his benighted people in this section. Who bids for the privilege of supporting him? We will be glad to give further information.

CHURCH EXTENSION AID.

1. The annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension, the meeting at which appropriations are made, will be held early in May, 1917.

2. The Board will not consider applications which have not been presented to the Conference Board of Church Extension, or its Executive Committee, for approval.

3. The Conference Boards of Church Extension, or their Executive Committees, meet early in March to approve applications and transact such other business as may properly come before them. Applications should be in the hands of the Secretary of the Conference Board of Church Extension at as early a date as possible.

4. Blanks for use in making applications may be secured from this office, and when applying for blanks information should be given as to whether aid is desired for church or parsonage, and as to the purpose of the trustees to apply for aid to the General or Conference Board, or both. A line to this office will secure application blanks, accompanied by detailed instruction.

5. Delay in preparation of the application, and therefore failure to place same before the Conference Board, does not constitute an "emergency case."

6. Applications reaching this office later than April 1 cannot possibly be placed on the calendar.

W. F. McMURRY,
Corresponding Secretary.

NOW ON A CASH BASIS.

The subscription price of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for the year 1917 is $1.50 to both the people and preachers. The Publishing Committee at its recent meeting gave orders to the Publisher to discontinue all delinquent subscriptions and to place the business of the paper on a cash basis. Many of our preachers fail to observe the rule of paying in advance, and in consequence may, unless they give the matter immediate attention, have their names dropped—an embarrassment which the Publisher hopes to escape. Under the new policy instituted, the longest time that ANY delinquent subscriber can possibly be carried is three months. Brethren, please note and heed this very important statement.

HE TOOK TIME TO DIE.

There was an old fellow who never had time
For a fresh morning look at the Volume sublime,
Who never had time for the soft hand of prayer
To smooth out the wrinkles of labor and care.
Who could not find time for that service most sweet
At the altar at home where the dear ones all meet,
And never found time with the people of God
To learn the good way that the fathers have trod;
But he found time to die!
Oh, yes!
He found time to die.

This busy old fellow, too busy was he
To linger at breakfast, at dinner, at tea,
For the merry small chatter of children and wife,
But led in his marriage a bachelor life.
Too busy for kisses, too busy for play,
No time to be loving, no time to be gay,
No time to replenish his vanishing health,
No time to enjoy his swift-gathering wealth;
But he found time to die;
Oh, yes!
He found time to die.

This beautiful world had no beauty for him:
Its colors were black and its sunshine was dim.
No leisure for woodland, for river, or hill.
No time in his life just to think and be still.
No time for his neighbors, no time for his friends,
No time for those highest immutable ends
Of the life of a man, who is not for a day,
But for worse or for better, for ever and aye,
Yet he found time to die!
Oh, yes!
He found time to die.

—Amos R. Wells, in "Harper's Weekly."

TRUE TO HER TASK.

Mme. Poulain was the wife of a signal-man on a French railway, who had charge of a signal box at St. Denis, and was on guard from six at night until six in the morning, while she was on duty the other twelve hours. He had just signaled a train and was waiting in his little cabin to hear the express go by, when he was shot. His cry for help awoke Mme. Poulain. She lighted a lamp, and while bathing her husband's face heard the whistle of a train. She sprang from her husband's side, set the signals which permitted the train to pass, made the proper entry in the record book, and returned to her husband. Several people came to her aid, an express for Paris was stopped and the wounded man placed upon it, but he died before reaching Paris. His wife continued the service throughout the night, signaling and entering each train. At six o'clock, when she had finished her duties, she went to the North Station and fainted beside her husband's body.

Her devotion to duty has evoked enthusiasm throughout France, and there is a general demand that she be decorated with the ribbon of the Legion of Honor.—The Presbyterian.

BIBLICAL BOTTLES NOT GLASS.

Who made the first bottle has never been determined, but the necessity for some means of transporting liquids, of which water was undoubtedly the first to be considered, must have existed from the beginning of the human race, and it is generally considered probable that the first receptacle for this purpose was made from the skin of an animal. This was removed with as little mutilation as possible and all the unavoidable openings carefully sewn up, leaving a single leg for filling or emptying, which was tied up with a cord.

These we know were used ages ago by many primitive people, and have since been employed extensively in many parts of the world, and even to-day they may be seen in use in some Oriental countries. It was this kind of a bottle that was referred to in the Bible in the much-quoted dictum relating to putting new wine into old bottles. The objection to this procedure was that the skin of an old bottle has become fully stretched and weakened by use, and if new wine was put into it the pressure of the gases generated by the continued fermentation of the wine would burst the bottle.

It is a generally accepted fact that glass making and glass bottles originated among the Egyptians, although at what date no one has presumed to state. Even in Egypt, however, the art of glass making in its early history appears to have been confined to certain localities, and was not practiced at all widely.—Scientific American.

ASKING QUESTIONS.

Peter sat alone on the back steps. He wished his mother would get well. She always told him everything he wanted to know. Aunts were different. He had asked Aunt Ann only nine questions, and then she had said:

"Now, Peter Piper, if you ask another question, first thing you know you'll turn into a Question Mark Boy."

"Is the dot—" Peter had begun.

"Shoo!" Aunt Ann had interrupted. "Go and sit on the steps. Not another question! Find out things for yourself."

And all he had been going to ask was whether the dot was a foot, and would he have only one if he did turn into a Question Mark Boy! Very well. He'd never ask Aunt Ann another question. Maybe he'd never ask anybody another one!

As he was thinking this, along came the rag man.

"Want to sell that carpet?" asked the rag man.

"What carpet?" asked Peter. Then he remembered and looked down at his feet. There were two.

"The one you're leaning up against," said the rag man.

Peter turned around and saw a big roll of carpet back of him.

"Is that for me?" asked the rag man.

"I don't know," replied Peter. "I'll go ask Aunt Ann."

He took three steps toward the door and then stopped. He would not ask Aunt Ann anything. She had told him to find out things for himself.

"You can have it for a nickel," he said to the rag man.

The rag man gave him a nickel, rolled the carpet down to his wagon, and drove away whistling. Peter ran to the candy store and spent the nickel for an ice cream cone.

The next week Peter's mother came down stairs. Now Peter would have been happy had not Pearly, the colored man, stopped coming that week.

"Where is—" began Peter. Then, remembering the one-footed Question Mark Boy, he changed his question to "I haven't seen Pearly around this week."

"Poor Pearly," said Peter's mother. "Aunt Ann had to discharge him. She thinks he is not honest."

"What makes—Pearly's all right," said Peter.

"I wish I knew so," replied his mother. "But the carpet is gone—my best upstairs carpet. And Pearly did ask Aunt Ann how much a good carpet would cost. He is going to be married and wants to furnish a house."

"Maybe Pearly didn't take the carpet," said Peter in a weak voice.

"At last, after thinking for some time, Peter decided that he would risk a question for Pearly's sake. So he asked, "If you knew Pearly didn't, could he come back here to work and be married?"

"Yes, indeed!" exclaimed Peter's mother.

"Well, then, he didn't. I sold it to the rag man for a nickel. Aunt Ann said if I asked another question I'd turn into a Question Mark Boy like this."

Peter drew from his pocket a dirty piece of paper on which was the Question Mark Boy that Aunt Ann had drawn.

The next moment Peter was gathered close in the arms he had so longed for, and his mother was saying, with laughter in her dear voice, "It's time mother was getting back to Peter boy. There must be a thousand things he wants to know. He'll never turn into a Question Mark Boy asking questions of mother. That's what mothers are for—to help little boys learn things and train them into wise men. And the question you didn't ask cost mother twenty dollars.

"Now run over to Pearly's and tell him mother wants to see him. And Peter, shall we celebrate by paying Pearly two dollars more a week? That will help buy a new carpet for the new house."—Janet Thomas Van Osdel, in Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Editorial

THE NEGRO EXODUS.

The exodus of Negroes from the South to the North has been attracting considerable attention throughout the country and has been considerably commented upon in the public press. A statement sent out from Washington, D. C., about the middle of November estimated the number that had left the Southern States at about 120,000—we have seen no later statement as to what extent this number has since been increased.

Various reasons have been assigned as to the cause of this northward migration. At first it was charged that colored men were being transported by Republican leaders into States that were doubtful politically with a view to trying to carry them for their ticket in the Presidential contest; but we gave little credence to this accusation because we do not believe that there is now a State in the Union where new-comers could be converted into eligible voters within a few days or weeks.

Another explanation that has been given is that wages are low in the South and that the colored people who left were animated by a desire to secure better pay for their work. We are inclined to think that the abnormal conditions in the Northern States incident to the European war, such as the high price of farm products and the great demand for laborers in munition factories, with the large remuneration thereby made possible, along with the boll weevil situation and short crops in the South, have been the main factor in the starting and maintenance of this movement. Indeed, the Government authorities at Washington have publicly declared that this is true, and they have also pointed out the fact that many white unnaturalized laborers have gone back to their home countries in Europe because of the war, thus creating a great need for new employees in many Northern localities. But it should be kept in mind that these conditions are unusual and are not likely to continue long, and that as a rule Negro laborers secure more satisfactory employment in this section of the Union than they do in that across the Ohio.

The most regrettable thing in connection with this development has been the disposition of some to try to use it as an occasion for striking at the white people of the South. For instance, a Negro preacher at the recent St. Louis meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is said to have pictured the colored people as fleeing for their lives by the thousand from the Southern States, and to have affirmed that their grievous wrongs to-day appeal more loudly for justice than do those of any of the war-oppressed peoples of Europe; and we noticed a few days since the declaration by a white dignitary of a Northern Church that nothing will stop this emigration except "a larger sense of security of life and property." There is no justification for such utterances as these. It is true that the number of colored men lynched in the South is a positive reproach to us (a single one would be a reproach), and that by every token we should stop such violence; but this lawlessness is not restricted entirely to Negroes. To be sure, it is more often visited upon them than upon white men, and race prejudice doubtless has something to do with this; but over against this must be placed the fact that the criminals of the South are much more largely black than white.

To suggest (in papers circulated over uninformed sections of the country) that the lives and property of the millions of Negroes in the Southern States are in any large sense insecure is to misrepresent the true situation and do a grave injustice to a generous and noble people. So long as they obey the laws of the land, the lives of the colored population are as safe in this section as they would be anywhere on earth, and if from the Potomac to the Rio Grande there has ever been a single court that in its judicial proceedings has made any difference between the property of the black man and the white man, we have never heard of it. Such charges find an ample refutation in the hundreds of thousands of happy, contented colored families that are scattered throughout the land of Dixie, large numbers of them owning their own homes. Their condition is vastly better than many of the white people in the congested centers of the North, where may be found overflowing charity soup-kitchens and far-reaching bread-lines.

As an offset to the foregoing misrepresentations, we will adduce statements from two colored men which have lately come under our observation. The first is from Bishop E. Cottrell, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church—the Church organized by our denomination. It is as follows:

"In fifty years the Negroes have acquired more than a billion dollars worth of property in the South. They bought their land from Southern white men who gave them time to pay for it, and in every community the white man has had a hand in building Negro churches and schools. Some Negroes may complain of "Jim Crow" cars, but they should remember that fifty years ago they were traveling on their feet."

The other statement referred to is a letter from a Negro resident of New Orleans to one of the papers of this city. We give it below:

"To the Editor of The Item:

"The reports circulated through the daily press concerning the great exodus of Negro laborers to the North seems to have occasioned much apprehension among the home-loving element of Negro citizens of the South. As an exponent of, and a life-long believer in, the doctrines and teachings of our great educator and leader, Dr. Booker T. Washington, I cannot understand how my people can so easily forget his life's work, which was to convince the Negro that the South is the best place for him to live in and work out his destiny.

"Just stop and consider the treatment accorded the Negroes who recently arrived in the city of Pittsburgh. This particular case should, and no doubt will, be food for reflection for many, as well as a stimulus for action on the part of those who are aspiring to be race leaders, and who have had an opportunity to travel through the North, and thereby are in a position to call the attention of the people to the discrimination practiced in the Northern cities against Negro tradesmen and skilled laborers of all kinds. No such condition of affairs exists in our dear old Southland. Negroes in the South are numbered among the finest mechanics, receiving the highest union wages. Cotton screwmen, longshoremen, and dock laborers of all kinds receive 30, 40, 50 and even 60 cents an hour; skilled farm hands and other laborers throughout the South are paid in like proportion. Where will you find Negroes receiving such wages in the North, or even doing such work?

"To the Negro I would say: This Southland is a gift handed down to you by tradition. It is the custom of the South to give the industrious Negro a chance. Now, if you deliberately throw away your inheritance and allow others to take your place, you will never be able to recover what you have lost or get back into the confidence of those who were once your benefactors. Don't leave your homes and go into a strange land among a strange people. Remember that the man with money is welcomed anywhere; but the man without money is better off at home. EDWARD HOLT."

A MORAL WAVE ON IN NEW ORLEANS.

There seems to be a moral wave on in New Orleans. The Item says it arose as a consequence of a falling out among certain citizens over the question as to whether one or two race tracks should be operated in the city. The first daily to open up definitely concerning the bad moral conditions here was The American, but now all the papers are having something to say on the right side of the issue. And on Monday night, January 15, a mass meeting of citizens estimated at between 300 and 400 was held in the lower auditorium of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and vigorous addresses were made by Dr. S. H. Werlein, Miss Jean Gordon, Mr. Solomon Wolff, Mr. S. A. Montgomery, and others. At this meeting a committee of twenty-five was named, with power to select twenty-five additional members, for the purpose of formulating plans for the future. It is stated that another meeting is due to be held on Tuesday night, January 23, and it has been said that in this campaign for reform the entire State may be appealed to for assistance.

Perhaps the most surprising thing in this whole movement is the apparently favorable attitude of the city papers, and particularly The Daily States, Mr. Robert Ewing's paper, toward it. The last named journal is very emphatic in its insistence that the time has come to demand that a more wholesome moral condition shall exist in New Orleans. From its issue of January 16, we take the following:

"We take it that the whole community is agreed that the cabaret must go, that the Gay-Shattuck law must be rigidly enforced, that a ruthless crusade must be made against immoral houses which lie outside the segregated district, that all night permits for saloons in residential sections must be withdrawn, that the Sunday saloon must show respect for the law, and that there must be an earnest attempt to lessen the dangers which surround the youth of the city. These reforms must be undertaken and we are sure they are going to be undertaken; and in effecting them the city administration will have behind it the support of every element of the community except, of course, those who are going to be hurt by them."

The clock of opportunity seems at last to have struck for really doing something toward "cleaning up" the Crescent City. We hope that this undertaking will be pressed with zeal and wisdom before there is any waning of the present sentiment for reform in any quarter. This is an occasion when all the moral forces of New Orleans ought to be up and doing.

A VOICE FROM KENTUCKY.

In an editorial on Methodist unification in The Central Methodist (Lexington, Ky.) of January 11, Rev. W. A. Swift, who ardently hopes to see the two Episcopal Methodisms brought together, says: "The greatest question no doubt will be the colored Church question. We believe our Church is unanimous on the matter of the Negro being in a separate Church organization. We have never known a Southern Methodist who would be willing for the colored people to be mixed up with the white membership. We are a unit at this point. We believe that God approves of our attitude in the matter. The Negro has no better friend in the world than the M. E. Church, South. We love the Negro. We wish him well. No people has done, or will do more for him when it comes to the test. than Southern Methodists. There is more real love for the white man by the Negro race in the heart of the South than anywhere else in the world. We know what we are talking about from personal experience."

We are glad to see this utterance, coming, as it does, from the border. Our Southern Methodist brethren in States where the white population is largely in the majority ought not to lose sight of the situation in commonwealths farther to the South, where conditions with reference to the race problem are very different. Southern Methodists should not stand for any form of union that would cause embarrassment and division in their own ranks. They who view this great question simply from a local standpoint are making a serious, and what may prove to be a very disastrous mistake. The interests of the whole Church should he carefully weighed before one reaches a conclusion concerning the various aspects of this momentous issue.

ANOTHER WHOLESOME DECISION.

On January 15 the Supreme Court of the United States in passing upon the notorious case of Diggs and Caminetti, which had been appealed to that tribunal from a California court, decided that the Federal White Slave Law applied not only to cases of women carried from one State to another for immoral pecuniary traffic, but also to cases in which immoral private escapades are the end in view. This is a wholesomo decision, which will tend toward the promoton of public morals. The United States Supreme Court is delivering some telling blows against vice these days. This opinion, following so soon the one upholding the constitutionality of the Webh-Kenyon Law, makes an excellent showing for our highest judicial tribunal, which is vested with so much power. Such decisions cannot hut command for it increasing respect.

There is one thing more that we feel moved to say in this connection: Why is it when men are punished for such immoral conduct, as certainly they ought to be, that women who are of age are allowed to go free? Are they not morally responsible, and are they not also guilty? Indeed, it is quite posible that in some instances they may be more to blame than the men involved. Except in the cases of young and inexperienced girls, it seems to us that both offenders merit punishment. There is, it seems to us, a rather striking incongruity in this law at this time when we are hearing so much of the equality of the two sexes.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. Paul Foster, of Opelousas, La., is recovering from a serious operation at the Presbyterian Hospital, this city. He is reported to be doing nicely.

Mr. J. E. W. Bridges and two daughters, of St. Helena Parish, La., came to New Orleans on a visit last week, and honored the Advocate office with a call last Saturday morning.

Miss Marie Louise Smith, of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Mr. E. A. Spessard, of the same city, were united in marriage on Jan. 2, 1917. Mr. and Mrs. Spessard will make their home at Marquette, Mich. We extend greetings.

Rev. T. M. Brownlee, Commissioner for Grenada College, states that he will spend the first weeks of the year working within the territory of the Greenville and Winona Districts. Brother Brownlee was scheduled to spend last Sunday in Greenville.

Rev. W. M. Williams, of Collins, Miss., sends the Advocate a list of 5 new and renewal subscriptions and states that he is endeavoring to put the Advocate in the home of every Methodist family on his charge. Such determination is indeed commendable.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brewer of Black Hawk, Miss., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Annie Atchison, to Mr. H. L. Tucker, the ceremony to take place Jan. 29, at the family residence. The Editor of the Advocate wishes much happiness and prosperity for the couple.

The minutes of the North Mississippi Conference session held at Winona, Nov. 29-Dec. 4, are upon our desk. The booklet is printed on good paper, is of practical size, and well arranged. A fine picture of Bishop Murrah appears as a frontispiece and adds to the attractiveness of the volume. Rev. J. R. Countiss is the capable editor.

Rev. J. J. Baird is making progress at Ripley, Miss. He writes, in connection with other things, as follows: "We are fairly into the work here and many things give promise of a good year. We have been kindly received, and were graciously remembered during the Christmas season." We bespeak for Brother Baird much success in the Lord's work.

Mr. Watson J. Morris, of Wesson, Miss., in renewing his subscription, says: "I enjoy the Advocate very much. Our new pastor, Rev. J. W. Thompson, is hard at work and is fast endearing himself to the people. We are hoping and praying for a good year in all lines of Church work. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, preached for us a great sermon last Sunday."

Rev. L. L. Roberts, our pastor at Hazlehurst, Miss.,,in a business letter to this office says: "We have been very kindly received by the good people of Hazlehurst, of all denominations, and the citizenship as a whole has made us feel welcome. The Methodist people here are showing, in a very substantial way, that they know how to take care of the preacher and his family. We are delighted with the situation."

Miss Aune Blanche Childress, of Lexington, Miss., and Mr. Fletcher Black Enochs, of Fernwood, Miss., were married at the First Methodist Church of Lexington on Jan. 17, by Rev. B. P. Jaco, the pastor. The attendants were Messrs. W. K. Gwin, W. O. Barrett, W. I. Pickens and T. E. Barr. This popular young couple will make their future home at Fernwood, where Mr. Enochs is general manager of the Fernwood Lumber Co.

Rev. Henry T. Young, the efficient Louisiana Conference evangelist, is now engaged in a meeting at Jena, La., which is in the pastoral charge of Rev. J. O. Bennett. Brother Young's services are engaged from this time until the first of July with the exception of about three weeks. Those desiring him to hold meetings should write him at once. The Advocate appreciates Brother Young's co-operation in extending its circulation.

Mrs. Esther Jane Jones, at the age of 87 years, passed away on January 17, at Lorman, Miss. Sister Jones was a true Christian and had been a member of the Methodist Church since childhood. She was the mother of Dr. B. F. Jones, of Moss Point, Miss., and of Mrs. W. B. Lewis; she was the grandmother of Rev. B. F. Lewis and Rev. W. H. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference. A suitable memoir will he published in the Advocate later.

"Through the help of friends in the First Methodist Church, of Shreveport, Mr. George Avery, who has been in the evangelistic field as gospel song leader and pastors' assistant, is now located at Donaldsonville, La., as lay helper for our Church in that part of our South Louisiana mission field. Brother Avery is a finished musician, both vocal and instrumental; he is a fine Christian character, and was trained for effective work in the Moody Bible Institute, of Chicago."

Last Saturday Mrs. L. B. Barrentine, of Itta Bena, Miss., was an appreciated visitor at the Advocate office. She will probably be in the Crescent City until March 1, or at least until after Mardi Gras. She is stopping with her aunt, Mrs. S. E. Blackwell, at 834 St. Charles Street. Mrs. Barrentine and her esteemed father, Mr. J. H. Moore, are en route to make a tour of California. Sister Barrentine speaks in highest terms of her pastor, Rev. W. S. Shipman, and of her presiding elder, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb; and also expresses her fondness for the Advocate, of which she is a constant reader, and which has come to her father's home from the time of her earliest recollections, and even before.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, writes: "Attendance at the College holds up well. We have never had a finer spirit among the student body, either for work or for loyalty to the school. Brother Brownlee has entered enthusiastically upon his work and has made a good beginning. He makes friends readily and impresses the general public with his manly bearing and worth. I am pleased with the reports given of the meeting of the Commission on Unification. Every day that they discuss the matters at issue in a brotherly spirit brings nearer the goal to which I believe the Heavenly Father would lead us. Let the negotiations proceed and let the fruit ripen."

Rev. J. W. Dorman, our pastor at Water Valley, Miss., writes under date of Jan. 22: "On the 16th inst. Miss Helen Lawshe, the daughter of W. S. and Mrs. E. A. Lawshe, died at their country home three miles east of Water Valley, Miss. She was a consistent Christian and loved her Church and Savior devotedly. She suffered a long and patient illness, and gave up life here, on her twenty-fourth birthday, for life on the other side. Her friends here will mourn her departure, but her friends and loved ones over there are rejoicing at her home-coming. On the 17th inst. this beloved young woman was laid to rest by the writer and her friends under the ice-covered earth in the cemetery at Water Valley. May the Heavenly Father deal tenderly with all who are bereaved by this occurrence."

We have received the following message from Dr. W. F. McMurry, of Louisville, Ky., our General Church Extension Secretary, which we take the liberty of passing on: "I commend to you my good friend, Dr. U. G. Foote, whom Bishop Hoss has appointed to the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans. Dr. Foote is a Kentuckian and has done good work in the Kentucky and Louisville Conferences. He also had a pastorate or two in Missouri, and has lately been at the Greenleaf Memorial Church, of Roanoke, Va. You will find him a good preacher, and no mean poet, and an all-round good fellow, worthy of confidence. Mrs. Foote is a Missourian, which gives me special interest in her. You will find her to be a gracious, attractive woman, interested in all good things." Echoes which have reached our office are to the effect that Dr. and Mrs. Foote are measuring up to Dr. McMurry's high commendation in the Crescent City.

AD CLERUM.

(From the Bible Champion.)

The benediction, as given in the last verse of Second Corinthians, is: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all." Not infrequently, brethren, some of them entitled to write the insignia of three scholastic degrees (A.B., A.M., D.D.) after their names, make an objectionable addition to it and say, "communion and fellowship of the Holy Ghost."

Why objectionable? Because it is non-scriptural. The words communion and fellowship never appear in such conjunctive connection in the Bible. And there is a reason.

The noun "communion" translates in the New Testament the Greek word "koinonia," and that is the only Greek word it does translate. The noun "fellowship" translates the very same Greek word, and it is the only substantive it does translate except once, where it renders the Greek noun "metoche" (2 Cor. vi. 14).

Scripturally, then, commnnion and fellowship, as thus appears, mean precisely the same thing, and therefore they should not be used together. Who would say "commnnion and communion?" and that is what is said, as to substance of meaning, when the terms communion and fellowship are used together in the benediction. To use them thus is—besides being non-scriptural—to commit the rhetorical crime of tautology, which, says Genung in his "Practical Rhetoric," page 165, "generally betokens carelessness or poverty of thought."—William H. Bates.

OVERORGANIZATION.

We have so many organizations in the Church to-day that it would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to keep track of them. The fact is we are organized to death. We can not propose any work in the Church but what some one will at once suggest another society, commission or board, and then want to he at the head of it; and, if it is a General Conference job, have an office in ono of our large cities, travel the country over, take up the time of our Annual Conference, telling stories, and how to do things they never had been able to do themselves, and getting on the programme of every convention and dress parado that is gotten up. There is so much of this that wo wonder what the Church itself is good for. There is always danger to proper General Conference organizations of getting top-heavy by reason of big salaries, and into bad or nnworthy and unqualified hands, through church politics. I am sure we have twice as many General Conference organizations and highly-paid officials as we ought to have.—Eastern Methodist.

Turn Hair Dark With Sage Tea

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular, because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A loving friend, Mrs. ELDREDY, passed from this earth to the bright beyond. This blooming flower has folded here below, but we hope that it lives above in Christ not to die. I visited this sister while she was on earth and she stated that she wanted the Lord to come and quietly take her away. She was ready and willing to go, but did not want to die a painful death. Oh, how much comfort do we find in our sister's words. She was ready and willing to go, but wanted to go quietly. May God do as he sees fit!

A friend,
Miss BELLE JONES.

G. HARRISON BUTLER was born in Amite County, Miss., during May, 1843, and departed this life on Dec. 26, 1916. He had rented his place and was living at the time of his death with his son, Dr. Butler, at McCall, Miss. He had been a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South, at Adams for a number of years. He was a friend to the young folks, as well as to the old ones. They all loved him, for he always carried sunshine with him. One of our preachers said at the obsequies that Brother Butler's words of encouragement to him when he first started out as a minister had been a great inspiration to him. Brothers T. H. King and Edward Coker, of the Mississippi Conference, assisted the writer in conducting the funeral service. Having known him from childhood, each bore testimony of his Christian life. Brother King stated that when a mere lad Brother Butler's prayers made a lasting impression upon his youthful mind which lingers with him still. The deceased leaves a wife, several children, and a large number of friends to mourn his going. May the loved ones meet him in the beautiful beyond! His pastor,

R. H. BARR.

SAMUEL H. VINSON was born in South Carolina on Oct. 15, 1832, and departed this life Sept. 15, 1916. He was married to Miss Mary Ann Ammons on March 31, 1864. He served a period of four years in the Civil War. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church in about the year 1866. He was faithful to the Church and Sunday school while rearing his family. He served as steward a number of years, performing his part well. When God called, with a strong faith in Christ, he went home to glory, leaving a dear wife, 9 children, 47 grandchildren, and 2 great-grandchildren to follow after him. The writer was never his pastor, but I have known much of him, as three of his noble daughters are devoted members of my church, and as two or more of the last years of his life were spent on an invalid's chair in their homes, and it was our privilege to visit him often. We held prayer by his bedside a number of times, and in conversation he repeatedly told us that he was ready to go, and was waiting on God. He manifested a faith and patience that were worthy to be emulated. We feel that we are a better man for having known him. His life is a great heritage for all. We are happy to say to his loved ones, grieve not as those who have no hope, but accept his God as your God, perform your part in life well, resting confidently in the hope that when he calls the rest home, there will be a happy family reunited around the throne of God.

T. B. WINSTEAD.

REBECCA JOANNA NARVELL, who was the daughter of James and Rebecca Narvell, was born in Union County on October 26, 1868, and died on December 26, 1916. In June 1886 she was married to J. W. Manning. Mrs. Manning was converted at fifteen years of age. She was the mother of thirteen children, seven of whom are now living. One of Mrs. Manning's joys was to have the pleasure to entertain those who love God. Her heart and her home were always wide open to her pastors. She was like Mary of Bethany—no one ever entered her home or sat at her table without her breaking the alabaster box of loving ministrations and happy hospitality. She was not counted among those women who longed to loom large in the limelight of the public eye. She was content to fulfill the humble and heroic mission of daughter, sister, wife, and mother in the home circle. While she was much alive to the signs of the times and took a deep interest in the great outside world round about her, her supreme delight was her home. Her tireless devotion to husband and children was beautiful and sublime. No duty was too great, no task too heavy, if it brought to them some comfort and happiness. She was one of those home-makers and home-keepers who always seem to know just what to do to keep the atmosphere of the home ideal. Mrs. Manning was a member of the Methodist Church at Ingomar. I commend the bereaved family to God, who alone can sustain and keep them during this sad hour. Her remains were laid to rest in Myrtle Cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Board of Stewards of the Forest Methodist Church, South.)

Whereas, death has removed from our midst our beloved brother, George G. Beaman, and we, the Board of Stewards of the Forest Church, desire to put on record a testimony of our appreciation of his Christian character and of his many noble virtues; and

Whereas, not only in the business of the Church did he demonstrate the Christian virtues, but also by his liberality, his regular attendance upon the services of the sanctuary, his cheerful countenance, his earnest prayers and cordial greetings, he did much to advance the Kingdom of Christ in our midst and to commend religion to the world; therefore, be it resolved, by the Board of Stewards of the Forest Methodist Church, South:

1. That his life has been an inspiration to us to follow more closely in the way of Him whom he loved to honor.

2. That the Church has lost one of its best officials, and Forest one of its best citizens.

3. That we have sustained an irreparable loss, and we do earnestly tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved wife and sisters, respectfully claiming the privilege of mingling our sorrow with theirs in their bereavement.

4. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Board; that they be published in the local papers and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that a copy be sent to the family of our late brother.

Signed: W. D. Cook, J. R. Mitchell, Joe H. Beeman, Committee.

ECKMAN LABORATORY W. Seventh St. Philadelphia

THE HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT.

Dear Dr. Meek: "Something is doing" in this important section of the North Mississippi Conference. Anyway, an effort is being made to plan closely for the starting upon the business of "getting ready to begin preparations" for the work of the year. "Preparation" is the word—later translated "preparedness." The inadequate must be an unknown quantity in rendering a "worth while" service—good expressions, all of them clad with much meaning and not yet obsolete.

The District Institute for Ministers and Laymen convened at Water Valley, January 10-11. The District Stewards and quarterly meetings for this town were also in session at the same time, all of which were right well attended and "pulled off" in kinship with the style of a cyclonic whirlwind, which made needful no doubt that each preacher and layman ask the question, "Where am I at?" after hitting the ground en route to his home or charge. Rev. James H. Felts, of the District, is a "storm center" or nothing. When up he moves along and evidently was in fairly good kelter at the late meeting of 36 hours. Discussions were indulged and questoins propounded. Moreover, prayers and songs were in evidence and two full-fledged sermons were delivered; also two quarterly conferences of 30 minutes each were conducted and intensely three hours' work by the District Stewards. Many district items were brought forward for consideration. Revival work was eloquently set forth, and financial plans and pastoral visiting were learnedly remarked upon, and how to reach in the best form the needy sections of the entire district territory awakened many statements and light-giving addresses.

Meantime, the manager of the Methodist Orphanage, at Jackson, Miss., appeared and kept amazingly to his line of things, in view of the prevailing question shots and constant tide of gatling discussions. The Rev. J. R. Countiss, College President, finished at night with a fully prepared address on "Christian Education," impressively delivered. So much so, that across the passing Institute occasion were written the words: "Make great the Christian College for the best present safety, and for future distinguished service." The purpose of Grenada College is to be sufficiently fine in faculty and in fixtures to meet the needs of the most aspiring and to fill the demands of the most fastidious.

Plans are good things, supported by the "sufficiency which is of Him," and "many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased." Best plans often need adjustment under differing conditions and "Saul's armor" was an embarrassment to David.

OUR GAINS FOR 1916.

The staatistical record of our Church for 1916, as compiled by the editor of the "Southern Methodist Handbook," shows that the year was one of substantial gains for our Methodism.

Our Church has 7507 traveling preachers, including all clerical members of Annual Conferences and preachers on trial, but not including supplies. This total represents a gain of 67 for the year. There are 5313 local preachers, an increase of 50. The lay membership, including local preachers, is 2,154,307, an increase of 52,242. The membership gain was not so large as in 1915, but well above the average for recent years, the percentage of gain being nearly two and a half. We have 150,125 Sunday school officers and teachers and 1,774,573 Sunday school scholars. The total Sunday school enrollment, 1,924,698, represents an increase of 80,380. The number of Epworth League members is 135,278, a gain of 2215 for the year.

The financial statistics show gains in every item reported. We paid for Bishops, $72,600 (increase, $2201); for presiding elders, $672,428 (increase, $33,238); for pastors, $5,090,846 (increase, $192,425); for Conference claimants, $318,677 (increase $24,416); for foreign, home, and Conference missions, on assessments and on special, $991,010 (increase, $38,425); for Church extension, $228,048 (increase $18,707); for education, $302,028 (increase, $45,068); for American Bible Society, $21,611 (increase, $2499). Houses of worship are valued at $60,908,581 (increase, $1,858,380), and parsonages are valued at $11,754,132 (increase, $333,836).—Methodist News Bureau.

To Prevent Old Age Coming Too Soon!

(BY L. H. SMITH, M. D.)

Toxic poisons in the blood are thrown out by the kidneys. The kidneys act as filters for such poisons. If we wish to prevent old age coming too soon and increase our chances for a long life, we should drink plenty of pure water and take a little Anuric.

When suffering from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, the simple way to overcome these disorders is merely to obtain a little Anuric from your nearest druggist and you will quickly notice the grand results. You will find it many times more potent than lithia, and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

A BAD WRECK—of the constitution may follow in the track of a disordered system, due to impure blood or inactive liver. Don't run the risk! Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all disorders and affections due to impure blood or inactive liver. The germs of disease circulate through the blood; the liver is the filter which permits the germs to enter or not. The liver active, and the blood pure, and you escape disease.

When you're debilitated, and your weight below a healthy standard, you regain health and strength, by using the "Discovery." It builds up the body.

Sold in Tablet or Liquid form. If your dealer does not have it, send 50 cts. for the Tablets. Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sunday School

GULF DIVISION SECRETARIES CONFER.

There convened in Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., at 2:45 p.m., January 9, the first regular mid-year meeting of the Conference Sunday school Field Secretaries of the Gulf Division, and from that hour until noon of the 11th they were a busy "bunch" of fellows. The following were present: Rev. S. U. Turnipseed, Alabama Conference; Rev. C. Wolford, North Alabama Conference; Rev. J. L. Neill, Mississippi Conference; Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, North Mississippi Conference; Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, Louisiana Conference; A. L. Dietrich, Divisional Secretary. Rev. H. F. Tolle, the genial chairman of the Sunday School Board of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. John C. Chambers, a member of the Board of the same Conference, were also present and helped by their suggestions and interest. Rev. C. N. Baker, of the Little Rock Conference, was the only absentee.

Sunday school work from A to Z was thoroughly discussed from the Field Secretary's standpoint, and many notes taken by all present. Many plans were discussed and some adopted, all having for their purpose both increased efficiency on the part of the Field Secretaries and the building up of the Sunday school work of our Church throughout the Gulf Division. Steps were taken that will tend to unify our work in several particulars.

The one public meeting was on Wednesday evening, January 10, when short addresses were made as follows: "Spoke Timber and Human Souls," by Brother Gladney; "To-morrow in Today," by Brother Turnipseed; "The Teachless Teacher," by Brother Wolford; "Romanism's Blight," by Brother Breithaupt; "The Hub of Southern Methodism," by Brother Neill. Splendid music was furnished by the choir of Capitol Street Church under the direction of Brother Hoover.

Thursday morning a visit was made to Millsaps College and chapel exercises were given into the hands of the visitors. Brother Turnispeed made the address to the student body, after prayer by Brother Breithaupt and Scripture reading by Brother Wolford.

Wednesday night, Prof. Harrell showed some of us the wonders of the heavens through the fine telescope in the college observatory, which courtesy was greatly appreciated.

Turnipseed's predictions as to red-and-blue printing, Wolford's fondness for Mrs. Dietrich's candy, Gladney's tendency to "take a nap," Breithaupt's ability to swallow things, and Neill's boy running away from the teachiess teacher, all afforded a little of that nonsense which someone has said was good for the best of men.

It was decided that the mid-year meeting idea was a good one and should be repeated next year. Brother Turnipseed "captured by storm" the meeting for Montgomery, Ala.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Brother Lewis, pastor of Capitol Street Church, and his people, and to Dr. Henry, of Galloway Memorial Church, for their generous hospitality in entertaining and caring for us while there. We all carried away pleasant recollections and a feeling that we'd like to go back.

THE PLACE OF "OUR PLAN OF ORGANIZATION FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK" IN METHODISM.

I wish only space enough for a few paragraphs concerning the plans of the Sunday school leaders of our Church for furthering the work of the Church in this department.

From the very beginning Methodism has depended on organization as a medium through which to make herself a power in the evangelization of the world, and she has developed the genius for organization in many a man. She has not fostered organization for itself alone, but always because by means of it she was enabled to accomplish things that otherwise she could not. Organization has been added from time to time as its need became manifest and a field for its usefulness developed.

She was the first denomination that officially recognized the Sunday school as entitled to a place in the regular work of the Church and provided for the organization of local Sunday schools. She has fostered local organization until now Chapter VII, Sections 3, 4, and 5, of our Discipline (edition of 1914), furnishes about as complete and effective a plan as any Church has for its local Sunday school.

In Section 2 of the same chapter will be found the provision of our law as to the Conference Sunday school organization, and in Section 1 the law as to the General Sunday School Board.

It will be observed that there is nothing between the Conference organization and the local school, while in other departments of our Church work provision has been made for organization in the presiding elders' districts. The district is recognized in our series of Conferences (Church, Quarterly, District, Annual, and General), in the Epworth League, in the Woman's Mission Society, in Laymen's Activities, etc. Until recently there was no provision for a district Sunday school organization, but during the past two or three years, under the inspiration of the General Board and in conformity with plans formulated by it, all over the Church there has been going on the organization of presiding elders' districts, until last July when the General Board met at Lake Junaluska, N. C., one hundred districts were reported as organized according to the General Board's plans.

The district organization is subordinate to the Conference Board and affords a direct channel of communication between the Board and local schools in each district, and according to present plans puts six volunteer workers at the command of the Conference Board in each district for specific Methodist Sunday school work.

The district organization consists of a chairman, a secretary-treasurer, and four district superintendents—elementary, home department, teacher-training, and Wesley Bible class. (I understand that the General Mission Board is going to ask that a superintendent of missions be added, making seven workers for each district.) Provision is made for a district executive committee consisting of the officers just mentioned, with the members of the Conference Sunday School Board residing in the district, of which committee the presidng eider is chairman, ex-officio. This plan of district organization not only makes our Sunday school scheme connectional like all our other departments of work, but gives it authoritative connection and control.

The plan further contemplates an annual distrct Sunday school institute at which the Sunday school work of our Church shall be magnified and workers helped to greater effectiveness, and the officers of the district organization elected and installed.

Experience is teaching that an effective district organization is a great help to the Conference Board, and from these few paragraphs I think it is made plain how the plan is simply the filling in of a link that has been lacking in our Church's chain of Sunday school organization.

Herbs Smoked in Pipe or Cigarette Relieve Catarrh.

Write for a Free Trial Package.

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted forty years to the treatment of Catarrh, is the originator of a certain combination of medical herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. The smoke-vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As the disease is carried into these passages with the air you breathe, so the antiseptic, healing vapor of this Remedy is carried with the breath directly to the affected parts.

This simple, practical method applies the medicine where sprays, douches, ointments, etc., cannot possibly go. Its effect is soothing and healing, and is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit forming drugs. It is pleasant to use, and not sickening to those who have never smoked. No matter how severe or long standing your case may be, we want to show you what our Remedy will do.

To prove the beneficial, pleasant effect, The Blosser Company, 704 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga., will mail absolutely free to any sufferer, a sample that will verify their claims by actual test. This free package contains a pipe, some of the Remedy for smoking and also some of our medical cigarettes. If you wish to continue the treatment, it will cost only one dollar for a month's supply for the pipe, or a box containing one hundred cigarettes. We pay postage.

If you are a sufferer from Catarrh, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness, or if subject to frequent colds, send your name and address at once by postal card or letter for the free package, and a copy of our illustrated booklet.

Watch the Baby!

If he is fretful, restless and out of sorts, you can trace the cause to his stomach and liver. If the bowels do not act regularly there is a possible danger of serious illness. Constipation, if allowed to continue, may produce self-poisoning or auto-intoxication, and this condition should be promptly rectified. The best general tonic for the baby or for the older folks is Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator, a purely vegetable compound. It contains no Calomel or other injurious drugs. Highly recommended for babies and growing children. It excites and invigorates sluggish livers and puts you on your feet again. Buy a bottle and keep it handy. Price 50c. For sale by the best druggists. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever and the grip, is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid, there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.

Never Put a Croupy Child to Bed Without Giving a Dose of Foley's Honey and Tar

Mothers know it stops croup because it cuts the thick choking mucus, clears the throat of phlegm, stops the hoarse metallic cough, eases the difficult breathing, then quiet sleep.

Mrs. T. Neureuer, Eau Claire, Wis., writes: "Foleys Honey and Tar completely cured my boy of a very severe attack of croup. We know from experience that it is a wonderful remedy for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough."

SELF SURRENDER.

Teach us, good Lord, to serve Thee as Thou deservest; to give and not to count the cost; to fight and not to heed the wounds; to toil and not to seek for rest; to labor and not to ask for any reward, save that of knowing that we do Thy will.—Ignatius Loyola.

Skin Diseases

such as Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter, Itch, Acne, etc., are caused by parasites. To properly treat these diseases, you must kill the parasites. Tetterine is extensively prescribed by the best physicians because it kills these parasitic germs, thereby putting an end to skin troubles. It is a fragrant salve and is absolutely harmless. Ask your druggist for it. 50c a box. By mail from SHUPTRINE COMPANY, SAVANNAH, GA.

Christ reveals Himself to all His servants in the measure of their desire after Him.—Alex. McLaren.

DAVID MORTON: A BIOGRAPHY.

Rev. J. A. Kern, D.D., Professor of Christian Institutions and Service, Randolph-Macon College, Virginia, writes as follows:

"My sincere thanks for David Morton—A Biography. It was very kind of you to think of me as you did. I had the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with Dr. Morton, and from the first he won my confidence and affection. The book is as good a piece of literary work, I think, as Bishop Hoss has ever done, and his subject was worthy of the best."

The Executive Committee of the Board of Church Extension instructed the office last summer to present a copy of this volume to every pastor in the church who secured his Church Extension collection in full. Many have sent in the cards showing Church Extension collections in full, and have received the book. This note is to advise any entitled to the volume, under the proposition of the Executive Committee, and who have not received it, that a line to this office advising that the Church Extension collection was paid in full, will secure it.

Corresponding Secretary.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

THE TRUE FOLLOWER OF CHRIST.

Again and again Jesus urged upon those who listened to him to "follow" him. This was to be a sure mark of true discipleship. And it is so still. The men who follow Christ have a right to the name Christian—and they alone. And yet this following may be marred by being too literal. We do not think it would be wise for the Christian of to-day to use the scourge of knotted cords to cleanse the temple, and it would not be a mark of superior sanctity if he were to fast for forty days, and we do not think that faith would justify him in attempting to walk upon the sea, or to raise the dead. The following of Christ should not be too literal; and yet it should be a genuine and earnest attempt to reproduce the Christ-life in our generation; and the secret of success lies in the humility, self-surrender and trust with which we aim to discover and secure the mind which was in Christ. If Christ be our model, our lives cannot but be noble. The Christ-life is the life of love.—Unidentified.

Cleanliness.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." We are too prone to think that "cleanliness" refers only to the exterior of our bodies. But unless your bowels are kept open and your liver active, you cannot expect to keep your body clean. The perspiration through skin pores is forced to carry off more than its share of the body's impurities. Do not allow constipation to poison you. Cleanse your entire system with Van Lax, which contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant to the taste and produces pleasant results. For sale by the best dealers everywhere. In bottles—price 50c. Manufactured by the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

THE FATHERHOOD OF GOD.

The remedy against death is God; He caused us to live; He implanted in our hearts this mysterious terror; but why did He? He did it that we might learn the more to trust Him as being ever present with us; as being around us; sustaining us, taking us, as it were, in His arms—the arms of a loving Father.—Capes.

ATTENTION, WOMEN!

While we have the habit of writing notices, we deem it a good time to insert a very important one. We hope you will take it in the spirit in which it is written and profit thereby.

At the top of our column you will notice these words: "All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above." Some of our women have overlooked this of late and have been sending matter direct to Dr. Meek. We can understand why they do it, thinking to reach the Advocate earlier; but in almost every instance Dr. Meek mails the same to us. His duties are already heavy and we are sure none of our women are willing to add to them. Twice this week he has had to mail copy to us. Try to remember in the future to send it direct to Gloster.

Sometimes Dr. Meek has published articles sent to him, but always in another part of the paper. He is only allowed so much space and it is scarcely fair to him to infringe upon his space when we have our own. We are confident that it is thoughtlessness on the part of our women and feel sure they will need no other reminder.

HARVEST DAY AT NATCHITOCHES, LA.

Harvest Day was observed on December 1 by the Woman's Missionary Society at the Methodist Church.

This day originated in the hearts of some faithful leaders of the West Texas Conference who set aside a special day toward the close of the year for bringing in of all funds and obligations. This effort was so successful, the observance of Harvest Day has become the practice of all missionary societies in this Church.

In Natchitoches, a large gathering enjoyed the program and beautiful decorations. There was a great profusion of autumn tints and harvest fruits so arranged as to blend into a bright and striking harvest picture.

The program was opened with a song, "Work for the Night is Coming." This was followed by a fitting devotional on the Lord's parable of the harvest of wheat and tares, by Miss Loreen Hargrove. Mrs. L. C. McVoy, the President, then gave a brief but inspiring account of the harvest of the missionary societies throughout the world, after years of loving toil and sacrifice. She emphasized the wonderful increase in the harvest in the last few years, showing that there had been greater giving and laboring and therefore a greater harvest of human souls.

This was followed by a song, "Bringing in the Sheaves." Ten incidents were then given by different ones, relating very inspiring results of Christian labor done by those working under the auspices of missionary societies. Miss Margaret Stewart then recited very feelingly "The Bank of Heaven," showing what great deposits were being made there by sympathetic tears, kind words, and helping hands.

Mrs. Jones gave many convincing reasons why every woman should be a member of the Missionary Society. The program was concluded with a song, "Shall I Empty-Handed Be?"

CHINESE GIFTS TO McTYEIRE.

A remarkable evidence of the appreciation in which the Chinese hold our missionary institution is found in the many liberal gifts made to the McTyeire School, Shanghai, by Chinese friends. In the list of donors given below will be found some of the best-known names in China: President Li Yuan Hung, 1000 taels; Dr. Wu Ting Fang, former Minister to the United States, 1000 taels; Mr. Tang Shao Yi, ex-Premier, 1000 taels; Chinese friends, $2000; promised, $4000; McTyeire students, $5000. (A tael is fifty ounces of silver, and the Chinese dollar is worth about fifty cents.)

With such loyalty as this on the part of the Chinese, surely the women of Southern Methodism will supply all that is needed to unbind the feet of this institution, that it may go forward unhampered in its high ministry to the womanhood of China.—Mrs. S. S. Harris, in The Voice.

"MY" STEWARDSHIP.

Not "our stewardship," but "mine." Stewardship in general is often presented and considered. What is needed is that each of us shall get alone with God and think over his own personal stewardship.

Here is a work to be done for which Christ gave himself—the redemption of the world. He has commanded his followers, every one of his followers, me among them, to "Go into all the world" (all the world, at home and abroad), "and preach the gospel to every creature."

Some can go and others can send them. He has entrusted his silver and gold and cattle to his people to do that sending. All that I have or am able to earn is his. I am only a steward for the rightful use of what he has entrusted to me.

How am I exercising my stewardship?—Selected.

NOTES FROM GLOSTER.

We have only attended a "call" meeting of this auxiliary, but we were impressed with its "liveness" and earnestness of purpose. There is a membership of fifteen, which is splendid when you take into consideration that there are about 34 families in the entire congregation. These 15 women have their hearts set on gaining 5 more members. About that number were promised during the campaign for new members, and they are not going to stop until they win them.

There are 12 subscribers to the Missionary Voice. Isn't that a splendid record? And doesn't it explain the cause for their being so alive and enthusiastic on missions?

The officers are a band of consecrated, conscientious women, who will ever strive to keep the Master's work first in their hearts and lives. Dear Sister Cammack is the President, and missionary joy and enthusiasm emanate from her very presence. No prospective member can escape her watchful eye. Our secretary, Mrs. J. E. Brown, is a little woman who "does things," but in such a sweet, tactful way. We wish we had more space to devote to these notes—but you are sure to hear from us again.

We deem it a sweet privilege to be permitted to cast our lot in with these women and help them work for the cause so dear to our heart, as well as to theirs.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast, and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y. — "For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation." — Mrs. JOHN A. KOENIG, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

From the Field

Caseyville, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We arrived at Caseyville on Dec. 22 and found a nice supper prepared for us by the ladies of the community. We are delighted with our new work. The people are certainly good to us. They are sending in fresh meat by the shoulder. Do you wonder that they have won our hearts? The work is in fairly good shape. We are praying for and expecting God to do great things for us this year. Our camp meeting will embrace the fifth Sunday in July and the first Sunday in August. The workers will be announced later.

Doctor, you are giving us a great paper. I hear people everywhere I go talking about what a good paper you are putting out. On with the good work! We are going to look after its interests on our charge.—W. W. Nelson, P. C.

Lumberton, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We reached our new pastorate on Dec. 29. The good people of Lumberton received us kindly and have shown us many thoughtful attentions since our arrival. We serve a loyal and generous people. Their enviable record is that they have endeared themselves to all the pastors who have served them. My predecessor, Rev. W. B. Jones, is greatly beloved by these people, whom he served for a full quadrennium. And other former pastors are still mentioned in terms of endearment. The year begins well with us. A finer body of men than the official board of this charge would be hard to find anywhere. At the first meeting of the stewards for the new year, the Conference assessments were provided for in a few minutes, thus relieving the pastor of the burden of collecting the where. At the first meeting of the pastor's salary was arranged. If an auspicious beginning is a reliable forecast, we are on the way to a fruitful year in our new field.—J. A. Moore, P. C.

Ringgold Charge (La. Conf.)

Dear Dr. Meek: Since I have not made any report of my work for some time, will you allow me a little space in your valuable paper to express my appreciation of the many good things that the Master has blessed me with? I am serving this work for the second year. I wish you might come over and see my church folks. They are "just the best." One of my congregations called me to a special service on Thanksgiving day, and filled my Ford car with all I could bring home. There were fruit cakes, syrup, meat, potatoes, and many other things—too great in number to name. I have made one round on the charge. All of my people were glad to have me returned, and I certainly was glad to get back. My congregations are increasing all the time. I don't say this to boast. I have a most excellent Board of Stewards. They look after the finances of the church (not slothful in business, but serving the Lord). Well, Christmas came on, and what do you think? Old St. Nick gave the preacher a fine overcoat and many valuable presents were given the lady of the parsonage and the children—such as shoes, dresses, candy, nuts, and dolls. Now I trust none of my brethren will become jealous of me and my work. I am living in Canaan. Praise the Lord! My prayer is that God may give me strength to do the work of a faithful servant. I was made glad last year when I made out my report and found I had added 78 members to the Church. May I ask the brethren to pray for me, that I may reach the 100 mark this year? Well, brethren, I am serving as a supply, but thank God I enjoy the work as well as some of my brethren who are farther up the line. My motto for 1917 is, Lord, help me that I may help others.—J. F. Dring.

OUR HOLLY SPRINGS "TEAM."

Dear Advocate: Holly Springs can now boast of the best "team" in the North Mississippi Conference in the persons of Presiding Elder J. H. Feits and our pastor, Rev. E. R. Smoot. The "make-up" of these two men is similar. They are both brainy, consecrated, full of life and vim, and in every way modern and up-to-date. Brother Feits was largely our pastor, along with Brother Lott, during dear Dr. Henderson's long illness. We therefore knew what we had in him. But Brother Smoot was untried here. But his very first sermon put him on his feet. His subject was that old theme, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." His was one of the most charming and touching presentations of the subject that this writer has ever listened to. One thought alone in that sermon was sufficient to stir his congregation. That thought was this: That God employed a number of persons to write the Bible; that heaven, we are told, is full of angels; that it took a number of good and great men to establish the Church on this earth. Then why was it that he gave just One Person, his Son, to ransom and save the world? The pathetic answer was that God gave ALL he had, and could therefore give no more. That he gave his "only" Son. His congregation was perceptibly moved as Brother Smoot so tenderly touched on this point. We have another asset, too, that must not be overlooked. These two godly men are signally blessed in their companions. I have often thought that it is a difficult place to fill to be a Methodist itinerant preacher's wife. But Sisters Felts and Smoot are not only consecrated but take a lively interest in all Church work. They are indeed "helpmeets" for their noble husbands. So, you can not be surprised when Holly Springs challenges the entire Conference for a better "working team" than we now have. May God continue to bless them! W. A. BELK.

Holly Springs, Miss.

Glass of Salts Cleans Kidneys

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Raising Cotton Cheap

TWO BALES PER ACRE

"On one and a half acres we raised last season 1500 pounds lint cotton, or two bales per acre. We used 400 pounds Meridian Home Mixture per acre. We made an average of nearly a bale per acre on 35 acres with 300 pounds of fertilizer. This is ordinary piney wood land." J. P. & J. M. Johnson, Quitman, Miss.

Meridian Good on Corn, Cotton and Truck

"I have been using Meridian Fertilizers with success on truck for 8 years. This year I used it on corn and cotton with the following results: 200 pounds of fertilizers doubled the yield of both corn and cotton, and I got a good yield of the latter notwithstanding the boll weevil." Sam E. Acker, Dialville, Texas.

700 Per cent. Profit

"I used Meridian Fertilizers at the rate of 275 pounds per acre on land that would probably have produced one-third of a bale per acre. I made 15 bales on 19 acres. At eight cents for cotton the fertilizer investment figures out about 700 percent profit." G. B. Williams, Sykes, Miss.

NOTES FROM THE JACKSON DISTRICT.

Dr. W. G. Henry, our pastor at Galloway Memorial, reports the reception of 32 into his church since Conference, 22 of them on profession of faith.

Rev. W. H. Lewis and his flock at Capitol Street held an interesting watch-night service on the night of December 31. Rev. J. L. Neill preached at 7:30 on "The Spirit of Methodism." Following him, W. E. Morse gave a talk on the "Unification of Methodism." The Epworth League had charge of the hour from 10 to 11 o'clock; and the last hour of the old year was spent in personal testimony and prayer. At 12 o'clock, about 75 met the pastor at the altar for re-consecration of their lives to God and the Church. Fully 300 attended the services of the night, and 100 or more remained to the close. It was an interesting and helpful service throughout.

Jackson has become the home of quite a number of our prominent preachers. Besides the presiding elder and resident pastors of the four churches, it is the home of Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College; Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner of Emory University; Rev. M. M. Black, Commissioner of Millsaps College; Rev. J. B. Randolph, Superintendent of the Methodist Orphans' Home; Rev. J. L. Neill, Sunday School and Missionary Field Secretary for the Mississippi Conference, and three of our honored men on the retired list, Revs. H. P. Lewis and R. Bradly, of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. S. M. Thames, of the North Mississippi Conference.

At the district stewards' meeting held on the 8th, the salary of the presiding elder was fixed at $2400. Provision was made to furnish the district parsonage by levying an assessment of $240. We have one of the best district parsonages in the Conference, and it is kept in repair and properly looked after by the district stewards with a sense of real pride.

Preaching for results at every service, and early collections, are two of the wise suggestions of our "Beloved" to all the preachers of the district.

Rev. A. S. Oliver, of the Eden charge, brought his district steward to the district stewards' meeting in his Ford. One delightful feature of the district stewards' meeting every year is the bountiful spread provided. This year the ladies of Capitol Street Church furnished and served the dinner in the district parsonage.

Our new "Beloved" is entirely at home in his new position. He directs the affairs of the district with an experienced hand, and we all are glad that Rev. J. M. Morse is our presiding elder.

"Isom" has again been requested to send in notes from the Jackson District. Let the preachers and others take due notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly. ISOM.

THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT NOTES.

Watch-night was observed by the Methodists of Hattiesburg. The service was held at the Main Street Church, being conducted by Rev. W. B. Jones. It was an enjoyable occasion—spiritual and profitable. As usual, the preachers talked too much and the laymen not enough. Will the preachers ever give the laymen a fair chance at things?

Rev. W. B. Jones has moved in with his family. He, as presiding elder, is in the saddle, with the reins in his hands. Look out for something to happen. He has preached at all three churches in town. The people speak well of his sermons.

The district stewards met here on December 16. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, the attendance was good, and the business was done well. The presiding elder's salary was fixed at $2400. In connection with this meeting, the pastors held a conference, which will most likely bear good fruit in the work of the district. T. W. Adams was chosen to keep the Advocate public informed of the happenings in this territory.

Rev. P. D. Hardin is in clover at Main Street Church. He is a fine fit there. He will have a good year. His salary has been raised. Good! May many more do likewise with their pastors.

Rev. W. A. Terry was returned to Broad Street. Of course, there was nothing else to do. If Bishop Murrah had moved Terry, he and Broad Street would have seceded. They have a well organized, well developed, and well established mutual admiration society over there. It is delightful. Terry is a happy man, and he has good cause to be.

Adams says he had rather be the pastor of Court Street Church than to be pastor of any other church in the Conference, and he says that Court Street is tickled almost to death to have him reappointed as their pastor. There now! If anybody should doubt it let him come and investigate. Pastor and people are so delighted to be together another year that they have repainted the church and the parsonage. If the enthusiasm doesn't subside pretty soon they will paint everything, all around and about.

Charlie Downer is located at Petal. He has made a fine impression. His people are expecting great things of him. CharHe will not disappoint them.

Editorial

"Perchance in heaven some day to me
Some blessed saint will come, and say,
'All hail, beloved! but for thee
My soul to death had fallen a prey.'
And oh, what rapture in the thought,
One soul to glory to have brought!"

* * *

Back of the shining face is the radiant heart.

The door of opportunity stands open before every Christian. And in most cases it is in his own community.

A current weekly has the following heading for an editorial: "Let the Police Light Shine." It is dim enough in many municipalities to justify such an exhortation.

Whether New Orleans is "the most wicked city in the world," is a question there is little profit in debating. It is far too immoral, as are also all other large cities. The thing to do is to get busy and make it better. There is certainly abundant room for improvement.

* * *

Dr. J. H. Jowett, in his "Yale Lectures," represents a minister, as he looked back over his past life, as saying: "I have not failed to study; I have not failed to visit; I have not failed to write and meditate; but I have failed to pray." What a mistake it is for any preacher to neglect this mighty source of strength and help in his own spiritual life and in his work! Possibly herein lies the explanation of many a fruitless ministry.

* * *

The great need of sinful men is to have their souls quickened and strengthened by the power of the Holy Spirit. To bring them into touch with this Divine Power is the great mission of the Church. This is the hardest work that Christians have to do—but it must be done. No sort of reformatory or cultural process can be substituted for it. A genuine revival, awakening the consciences of men, leading to repentance and regeneration, and bringing a strength to resist evil, is the one true hope of the Church and the world to-day.

At a recent Annual Conference we had occasion to speak to a well educated and gifted young minister concerning two or three agencies for worthy interests which had been offered him. He said in reply, "I am resolved to let nothing take me from the pastorate." Without meaning to disparage others who have responded to the Church's call to labor in behalf of special enterprises, we must say that this young man's statement profoundly impressed us. There is no greater work in the Church than that of saving and shepherding immortal souls. To be a really efficient pastor is an ambition lofty enough for any man. And to acquire such an efficiency in a high degree one can well afford to exert to their utmost all the energies of one's body, brain, and heart.

THE BASIS OF PRAYER NOT ANOMALOUS.

The philosophy of prayer has engaged much attention within recent decades. The discovery of the extent to which law reigns in the physical realm, along with the view that God is all-loving, omniscient, and unchangeable, has disposed some to try to restrict the benefits of praying to a kind of subjective influence upon the petitioner. That there is such an influence in it is not to be denied, but the contention that the effect of prayer stops with that is out of harmony with the teaching of the Scriptures concerning the power and results of intercession. Such a theory is wholly inadequate to account for the outcome of earnest praying in behalf of others—an exercise in which Christians are exhorted in God's Word to engage, and which has ever been regarded by the followers of Jesus as having accomplished great things toward the upbuilding of the Divine Kingdom on the earth.

As a matter of fact, the foreknowledge and goodness of God furnish quite as good a reason for a person to sit down with folded hands, and wait for him with his omnipotence to do all that needs to be done, as it does for one to close one's lips and refuse to pray because of a feeling that Infinite Wisdom and Love will do their utmost for men, anyway. Professor Fosdick, in his book, "The Meaning of Prayer," touches upon this point in a manner so illuminating that we quote a portion of his utterance here, hoping that it may prove helpful to our readers:

"Now if God has left some things contingent on man's thinking and working, why may he not have left some things contingent on man's praying? The testimony of great souls is a clear affirmative to this: some things never without thinking; some things never without working; some things never without praying. Prayer is one of the three forms of man's co-operation with God. The fact, therefore, that God is all-wise and all-good is no reason for abandoning thought and work. At their best, none of them is an endeavor to get anything against the will of God, and all or them alike are necessary to make the will of God dominant in human life. Who would dream of saying, God is all-wise, he knows best; he is all-good and will give the best; why, therefore, should I either think or work? But that is just as sensible as to say, If God is good, why should I pray? We pray for the same reason that we work and think, because only so can the wise and good God get things done which he wants done."

A NOTABLE ADDRESS.

In the Athenaeum, in this city, last Sunday afternoon at 2:30, a great audience assembled to hear Hon. W. J. Bryan discuss the subject of prohibition. Not only was every seat in the large auditorium taken, but standing room was at a premium, and many went away, not being able to get where they could hear the speakers, or even see the platform. The attendance was estimated as ranging around 3000, notwithstanding the fact that it was raining and that the weather was quite disagreeable. The meeting was called to order by Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, who introduced Dr. P. A Baker, of Westerville, Ohio, the President of the National League. Dr. Baker made a few brief remarks and gave an opportunity to those present to make an offering for the maintenance of the work of the Anti-Saloon League. State Senator Delos Johnson, of Washington Parish, then introduced Mr. Bryan in a happy speech, and when the distinguished visitor stepped forward on the platform he was given a most enthusiastic reception.

Mr. Bryan spoke for an hour and twenty minutes, holding the close attention of the great throng from his opening sentence to the close of his impressive address. His utterance was a powerful and convincing arraignment of the liquor traffic, being perhaps the most effective prohibition speech ever delivered in New Orleans. Within our knowledge no other advocate of temperance reform has ever been given such a hearing in the Crescent City, and that the orator's sentiments found a responsive echo in many hearts was attested by the manner in which he was repeatedly cheered. It was a great day for the cause of prohibition in this Southern stronghold of the accursed liquor traffic.

Mr. Bryan has had a long and distinguished career as an American publicist and statesman and has contributed largely to the promotion of the welfare of the American people; but, in our opinion, he has never rendered them a nobler and more needed service than that which he is now performing by endeavoring to arouse the moral conscience of the Nation against the nefarious liquor business. He is an optimist as to the outcome of the present struggle to overthrow it, and confidently expects to see the white flag of prohibition wave over the entire country in the near future.

The United States has probably never had a political leader of national note who was so sound on the great moral issues or who has been so ready to champion them from the platform and in the public prints as this famous son of Nebraska. As a great Christian layman his place is alongside the majestic and lion-hearted Gladstone, whose light shone throughout the world in the last century.

The Commercial Appeal, published in Memphis, Tenn., where there is at present much hospital enthusiasm, says: "Give us a hospital that people of moderate means can patronize. Twenty-five dollars a week for board; $25 for a nurse; $20 for a nurse's board, with doctor's bill and drug charges added, put a hospital out of the reach of people who need it sorely—those whose homes do not permit the best care of invalids." This is quite a suggestive appeal. Church hospitals must in some way manage to match the splendid spirit of humanitarianism and charity that is being shown by the great State and city institutions of this kind, if they would command public approval. The poor and needy were ever uppermost in the thought of Christ, and those who claim to represent him should be like-minded.

FATHER'S TALKIN' NOW.

By The Bentztown Bard.

Somewhere in most folk's memory is a scene
Of old home places, simple as could be,
With twilight falling, and with festive mien
The little group around a parent's knee.
And then the children, maybe, still so young,
Starting to prattle, while with line-creased brow
The mother, pointing finger, with soft tongue
Cried: "Silence, children; father's talkin' now!"

Ah, all the world meant to them of life's truth,
Its wonder and its magic and its glow,
Was father's word—some memory of his youth,
Some tale of high adventure long ago.
And when he spoke, 'twere sacrilege to mar
His story of his lesson—for 'twas then
We heard the message that would take us far
On life's hard journey to the deeds of men.

I wonder if it will not some day be
The same with all folk—grown-ups well as small—
When time hath gathered us around His knee—
The Father whose great word is more than all;
And there, in reverence, in the quiet places,
The twilight gathering, will we not, somehow,
Hear mothering voices—as we lift glad faces—
Say: "Listen, children, Father's talking now!"

—Baltimore Sun.

A TWO-FOLD NEED.

We need to realize the largeness of a small work as well as the smallness of a great work, in order that, on the one hand, we may do little things grandly, and, on the other, grand things humbly. —Bishop Brent.

NOT THE END.

When I go down to my grave, I can say, "I have finished my day's work," but I cannot say, "I have finished my life." My day's work will begin the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare; it closes with the twilight to open with the dawn.—Victor Hugo.

NOT AS A PRINCE, BUT AS A SINNER.

It is recorded that when the father of the late Queen Victoria, the Duke of Kent, lay dying, he expressed some anxiety about his soul. His doctor endeavored to comfort him by reminding him of how admirably he had deported himself in the conspicuous position in which he had been placed in the world. But the duke checked him, saying, "No, friend; if I am to be saved it is not as a prince, but as a sinner."—The Presbyterian.

ONLY SEEMING.

We talk of a "cloudy sky," but in reality there is no such thing. The sky is always blue, the sun is always shining. The clouds are not the sky any more than the curtain is the window. So God is always the same. He never changes. Clouds may sweep between us and Him and obscure our vision, but He is where He always is, waiting to be gracious and ready to stretch forth a helping hand.—Canadian Churchman.

YE ARE THE BRANCHES.

Last night I heard a wonderful talk based on these familiar words, "Ye are the branches," and I want to pass the central thought in it on to you, if I can. Draw in your mind a picture of Christ saying to the twelve, "Ye are the branches." Each man of them different—one timid and reserved; one impulsive and impatient; two called "Sons of Thunder;" one gentle and loving as a woman; and so on. And yet Christ said to them, "Ye are my branches," which meant, "I want to come to fruit in you—I want to live in you and bear fruit." Will you take this thought for one of your helps? Feel Jesus standing in front of you and saying, "You are my branch and I want to come to fruit in you," and then watch the fruit that is gathered from you by your co-workers in the parish church, in the auxiliary, by your husband, children, sisters, friends, servants, as the case may be. Will you do this?—Southern Churchman.

A STATEMENT FROM THE COMMISSIONERS OF EMORY UNIVERSITY.

In response to the call of the Chancellor, the Commissioners of Emory University met at 9:30 a. m., on January 18, in the Wesley Memorial Church, Atlanta, Ga., with the Chancellor, Bishop W. A. Candler, in the chair.

The following Commissioners were present: Rev. Robert Selby, whose field is the State of Mississippi and whose objective is $50,000 for the Lamar School of Law; Dr. J. S. Frazer of Alabama, who is leading the campaign in Alabama and Florida for buildings; Rev. C. C. Jarrell, of the North Georgia Conference, and Rev. J. A. Harmon, of the South Georgia Conference, who are working for the University in Georgia; Rev. E. M. Harrell, of the Tennessee Conference; Rev. W. J. Mecoy, of the Memphis Conference; Rev. S. B. Vaught, of the Holston Conference, and Dr. J. H. Young, from the Kentucky and Louisville Conferences. The four last named Commissioners are at work on a joint undertaking to raise $200,000, half of which is to go to a great memorial building to be named for Bishop H. N. McTyeire, and half to a great loan fund for the benefit of needy students. Dr. W. Asbury Christian, recently appointed in Virginia, is leading the campaign in the "Old Dominion" for a $50,000 endowment of the Chair of Missions in the Theological Department. Rev. Lee T. Mann, who has undertaken the work in North Carolina, did not reach the meeting.

In nearly every part of the territory east of the Mississippi River a Commissioner is now engaged. The campaign for Emory University is thus fully begun, and the Commissioners were called together to sound the note, "Forward," and to plan for the successful prosecution of this important movement.

The Chancellor raised the question whether the Church really wanted a great university and called on the Commissioners to make an answer. Some of these men had been at work no longer than a month and a half or two months, and others had been engaged a year and a half or two years. They had touched all parts of the Church. The Chancellor said, "Be frank; let us know the truth." Every man showed what was in his heart, and the hearts of all were made to burn as man after man told of difficulties overcome, the awakening of the Church as the facts were made known to our people, the success achieved and the victory that lay just ahead, and all agreed with one accord that the Church wanted and would have a university, and that "the Lord has led us into this work, and that He will lead us through."

A committee composed of J. S. Frazer, Chairman; C. C. Jarrell, Secretary; S. B. Vaught, and W. Asbury Christian, was appointed to prepare a statement reporting the proceedings and result of the meeting, together with an outline of the University's progress and prospects. This statement is herewith sent out by the Commissioners as an account of their labors and a bare sketch of the plan of campaign.

Just before the close of the morning session, the Hon. Asa G. Candler, Mayor of Atlanta, appeared and greeted the body. He assured the Commissioners that his remarks were not the sort of formal address that he was so often called on to make. He said, "You are in a great undertaking. The Church believes you are the men to carry it on. Atlanta is glad to have you, because Atlanta is greatly interested in Emory University and is proud to have such an institution in her midst. You men are the servants of the Church, who is our Mother, and of God, who is our Father. We can not fail when he works in us and with us."

The Commissioners were invited to take luncheon at "Winship Hall," on the Campus, and to inspect the grounds and buildings of the University. Upon reaching the campus they viewed with delighted eyes the picturesque grounds, with the three charming plateaus as if shaped by an Almighty hand to bear the three great groups of buildings; they gazed with growing appreciation upon the four marble buildings, nobly classic in proportions and marvelously beautiful in coloring. They could hardly leave off in their praises of the splendid building which is the home of the Candler School of Theology. When they stood in the chapel of this building, there was something akin to awe in their admiration of the gentle majesty of its beauty, which has in it an inspiration to feelings of mystery, as if California red-wood, Georgia marble, and columns high and lifted up had somehow conspired to speak together the praises of Him in whose honor it is built.

The Commissioners realized that Mr. Asa G. Candler had spoken the truth when he said, "The foundations have been laid for a great University," and that the Chancellor had studied the situation thoroughly when he declared that "it will take a minimum of $5,000,000 to put the University on its feet," with a fair promise of a growing and glorious future as added gifts shall come to it and expanding usefulness shall write its name deep in the heart of the Church. The Commissioners are glad to note that more than half of this amount is in hand, and that the campaign for funds has been already so successful as to promise the remainder at an early day. But this will be only the beginning. The end no man can see. This University will be a "Century plant;" its bloom no one of us may behold, except as we see it now by the eyes of faith, or shall see it later with those who watch the progress of the Kingdom from the upper world.

The sum of $5,000,000 for a beginning may seem to some too large an amount to ask. But this figure is really small when compared with the wealthy institutions of the North and West. The South ought to have, and must have, at least one university as strong as any in the United States, and the Methodists can provide it. With an initial foundation of $5,000,000, other large amounts would be speedily added to it, and far sooner than many suppose our brightest hopes for such a university would be realized.

The Southern people face the finest opportunity they have ever had to "get on the educational map" of the nation. Over a million Methodists look to the professional and post-gradnate departments of this University as the crown of their educational system. The South of to-day is richer than the Nation of yesterday. The disasters which swept her endowments away, prostrated her colleges, and deprived a generation of noble men of college training and university opportunities are more than half a century in the past. She sees that dark period through a mist of tender memories, and its sharp cries are dulled in the din of a hundred industries. The Southern people are to-day a people of wealth and power, with a cheering political outlook and a promising economic future.

But the good things of the present can not be safeguarded, nor the better things of the future secured, without Christian institutions of learning. By these only can be preserved the fine elements of that type of civilization that made our forefathers great, and led our fathers through the darkest period that any people ever passed without ceasing to exist. The South can not maintain and improve this civilization without the strongest and most Christian institutions of learning.

To make education secular is "to put a rifle in the hands of a savage;" it is but half an education with the better half left out; it is a crime to teach a child to read unless we teach him to read that which is noble and exalting.

Christian colleges alone can no longer hold our firing-line. They must have the support of Christian universities as impregnable strongholds. We are able now to pass as a people into that ruling class of those who have such universities.

There is no greater benevolence than Christian education; there is no larger need in the South to-day than for a great Christian university; there is no greater force to build it than the Southern Methodist Church; and no greater challenge has ever come to the men of our Church than the opportunity of this hour.

The University has already received one of the largest, if not the largest, gifts ever made by a Southern man, in his life-time, to a single cause; a great Church, stirred to the depth of her soul, has willed that the Institution shall be; and a wealthy city has given it more than $500,000 and proudly sets Emory as the crown-jewel in its coronet.

The hour is now at hand, and far above the voice of mere patriotism, noble as that is; above the call of the Church, sacred as that is, the voice of the Master calls and says: "Do this in remembrance of me."

THE UNIFICATION COMMISSION.

Dear Doctor Mcek: In view of the fact that certain newspapers, North and South, are publishing rather full and specific accounts of what is supposed to have been done at the late meeting of the Commissioners on the Unification of Methodism, and, in view of the further fact that these communications do not appear to me to be in all respects accurate, I beg the privilege of saying a few words.

It was determined by the Joint Commission at the very outset, and I think very properly so, that nothing should be given out for publication until definite affirmative conclusions had been reached. Any other policy would have defeated from the start the very purpose for which the Commission was chosen. It may be true, as alleged, that the Commissioners needed the presence of editors and others to interpret their action to the general public, but if so, they were simply not competent to occupy their places, and should never have been appointed. More than this, what reason is there for supposing that the editors themselves would have needed no interpreters? The notion that this arrangement for secrecy was a device of the Southern Bishops lacks foundation in truth. It assumes that these five men, who were not themselves united on the subject, were able to control the judgment of their forty-five colleagues as to the manner of conducting the negotiations in which they were engaged.

Nothing was adopted—not one thing that could be nailed down for certain. Even the most enthusiastic unionists must have had some realization of the difficulties by which they were confronted—difficulties that are not dreams, but realities, and that can not be blindly ignored by either Church. This much I venture to say without censuring anybody, or digging up any unpleasant history.

May I humbly suggest that those among us who are calling everybody to prayer for specific results might do better to allow God a somewhat freer hand in controlling the course of affairs? Is it not at least conceivable that His wisdom is greater than ours, and may look to the execution of His ends by other methods than we might adopt? The people who are so dead sure of themselves stand at least a chance of sometimes making mistakes.

Nothing could have been more beautiful than the spirit that prevailed in the Commission. With very slight exceptions, everybody seemed perfectly willing to exhibit that last and highest test of liberality, namely, to allow every one to do his own thinking without calling in question his perfect sincerity. The little folks who are clamoring that their opinions shall be accepted as final for everybody, without room for dissent or difference, would not have felt at home in that company of broad-minded gentlemen, who know the value of unity, and are willing to give almost anything to get it except liberty. THE CURSE OF STRONG DRINK.

By Rev. C. Wesley Baley.

The greatest curse that can come to any people is the curse of intemperance. This curse has the most blighting effect of anything in the world upon the ideals and destiny of any people, nation, or country. The people who become addicted to intemperance sooner or later lose the high ideals that should characterize the public life of any community. They come to look upon morals as a secondary matter and revenue as the thing that is important. The souls of men are placed in the balances and weighed against the almighty dollar, with the advantage given to the dollar. The plea that we need the revenue derived from the sale of intoxicating drinks for the support of our public schools, is equivalent to saying that revenue is worth more than the souls of men. The public school system that has to stand on the price of blood should and ought to fall. It would be far better for our children to grow up in ignorance than to be dependent upon such a source for the money with which they are educated.

Strong drink has caused the downfall of governments and nations in the past, and will doubtless cause the downfall of nations in the future. No nation can depend upon intemperance for its support and hope to stand. Babylon, with her power and splendor, had her downfall through intemperance. She could boast of the splendors of her court and kingdom and the prowess of her armies, yet, through intemperance, she fell. Nebuchadnezzar had brought into subjection to Chaldea all the world of his day and time; yet, when Belshazzar, his grandson, succeeded him on the throne and began his reign with a drunken feast, Babylon fell. The glory of Chaldea was gone forever. No wonder the sacred poet has said: "Babylon is fallen to rise no more."

When we look about us, we soon realize that there are more people that have been wrecked and ruined by intemperance than by any other cause. The wrecks are to be seen on almost every hand. In the town, the village, and the country, it has done its destructive work, and homes have been wrecked and ruined. How often we meet those who say, with a sigh, "Once home was happy and pleasant before husband, father, or son began to drink." These blighted homes are to be found in all communities, and stare us in the face and are silent witnesses to the awful wreck and ruin that follow in the wake of intemperance. These wrecked homes are calling to us Christian people for remedy and the suppression of the nefarious business. Strong drink has caused the divorce evil to enter many homes and break them up and blight the lives of the children who had the right to be happy but who have been robbed of it, because we as a people allow this evil to flourish. What will we do about it? Will we sit silently by and say it is none of our business? Or will we rise up in our might and say the whiskey business must go?

The lives that have been cursed by strong drink are myriad. You meet them in almost every town and community. Many a young man has started out in life with bright prospects and the future was resplendent with promise for a useful life, and yet it has all been cut short and ruined by intemperance. The parents have looked to the boy for comfort and solace in their declining years only to be disappointed and made heartbroken by his fall. The one they hoped they could lean upon has been the source of the keenest disappointment to them. The last stay of their declining years has failed and they are left to stand alone. The loving husband and the indulgent father has become a veritable brute. The one to whom he plighted his troth in young manhood is heartbroken and sad. The children, to whom he was the embodiment of all that was noble and good, come to dread his return and hide when he draws near. No wonder one has said:

"And chained her there, 'mid want and strife,
That lowly thing—a drunkard's wife!
And stamped on childhood's brow so mild
That withering blight, the drunkard's child."

Statistics tell us that the victims of intemperance are greater than the victims of war, famine, and pestilence all combined. Great calamities have swept throughout the world and have claimed their tens of thousands. Pestilences have swept through the world and many have fallen victims to them, and men have given their lives in order to stamp some of them out, and we have called them great. Yet, the beast of intemperance stalks about over our country and claims as its victims many of our brightest stars, and we sit silently by and make but weak efforts to stamp it out. Our men and boys are going down to wreck and ruin by the hundreds of thousands each year and hearts are bleeding at every pore. What will we do about it? I thank God the day is coming, and I believe it is almost at hand, when the curse of strong drink will be driven from our country.

Intemperance has caused the dethronement of the reason of more people than any other one thing. Moreover, its history is written in blood. More homicides are traceable to it than any other thing in the world.

Therefore, these things being true, there is only one conclusion that we can reach, and that is, that the only remedy for the evil is its entire suppression. Also that there is no justification for the licensing of the business by the Federal Government, and he who favors it favors that which wrecks the homes, lives, and morals of our people. Habakkuk has said: "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him and maketh him drunken also (Hab. 2:15). Cain cried, "Am I my brother's keeper?" (Gen. 4:9), and God answered in the affirmative when He said, "The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground" (Gen. 4:10). Personal responsibility for the welfare of our brother is taught all through the Bible, and it is impossible for us to get around the fact that we are responsible for those about us. Therefore, to vote in favor of the saloon is to vote for that which will destroy our brother, and God will hold us responsible for so doing.

Church News

The figures of 1916 brought the total membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to 2,154,307. The net gain last year was 52,242.

The Central Methodist (Lexington, Ky.), a paper about the size of the New Orleans Advocate, but which uses larger type, has announced that after February 15 its subscriptions price will be $2 per annum.

Bishop James Atkins has lately been filling some engagements within the bounds of the Memphis Conference. A friend who saw him in Memphis a few days ago informs us that he was looking exceptionally well.

Mrs. Corra Harris, noted as an authoress, says: "I am a believer in infant baptism. It never hurts the child and sometimes helps the parents." We are pleased to see that there is something Methodistic that meets Mrs. Harris' approval even in a mild fashion.

The Methodists of Georgia are raising funds to construct a modern building for the Wesley Memorial Hospital, of Atlanta. They propose to make this institution one of the largest and best in the entire South.

The Baptists of Georgia have announced that they will conduct a campaign to raise $415,000 to free all of their educational institutions in that State from debt. This campaign will be under the direction of Mr. G. J. Hood, of Commerce, Ga., a banker.

In memory of his father, the late Rev. A. J. Jarrell, Rev. C. C. Jarrell has given $500 toward a lectureship in Emory University to be known as "The Jarrell Lecture Course." These lectures will be given in connection with the Candler School of Theology.

Bishop John C. Kilgo met the presiding elders of both the North Carolina Conferences in Greensboro, N. C., a few days since, in a helpful conference, and following this meeting a stirring address concerning the work of the Church was issued to the Methodists of the Old North State. Bishop Kilgo is a leader who leads.

The Editor of the Arkansas Methodist says: "In going over our (mailing) lists we discovered that in a certain district in Arkansas, out of 59 Sunday school superintendents, 36 were not taking the Conference organ. A change is needed in that district." We wonder to what extent a like situation prevails over the Church.

Rev. George S. Sexton, D.D., Secretary of the Washington City Representative Church Special Committee, and now giving his entire time to that work, has recently secured and sent in to the office of the Board of Church Extension a contribution of $20,000, which is the largest single contribution that has been made to that enterprise.

We take the following from a recent issue of the Baltimore Southern Methodist: "Our Calvary congregation, which worships at the corner of University Parkway and St. Charles Avenue, at a called meeting, after the preaching service last Sunday (January 14), unanimously decided to change the name of their church to 'Alpheus Wilson Memorial.'"

The plates of the "Life of Bishop James O. Andrew" by the late Rev. G. G. Smith, D.D., are still in existence, being in the possession of his son, Rev. Robert O. Smith, of Gainesville, Ga. In a recent letter to Mr. Smith, Bishop Candler said: "The life of Bishop Andrew was one of wide usefulness and enduring interest. In this biography the story of his wonderful life is set forth. It would be a pity for such a book to go out of print, and I trust it may not do so."

Dr. W. F. McMurry, of the Board of Church Extension, reports substantial additions to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board since the first of January, 1917, as follows: one from Kentucky, $100; one from Tennessee, $500; one from Mississippi, $5000; two from Missouri—one of $2000, and one of $9000; three from Louisiana—one of $800, one of $10,000, and one of $50,000. He also reports additional contributions arranged for amounting to $9200, which amount will be paid on the maturity of securities during the next few months.

OUR MILLSAPS COMMISSIONER.

Rev. McKendree Marvin Black, the eldest son of the late Dr. W. C. Black, of the Mississippi Conference, was born near Hazlehurst, in Copiah County, Mississippi. After having attended the public schools in several towns where his father was stationed, he spent four years at Emory College, Oxford, Georgia, from which he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1888. After teaching school two years, one year being spent at Fairview Institute, Binnsville, Miss., as Co-Principal with Rev. W. W. Moore, of the Mississippi Conference, he entered Vanderbilt University as a post-graduate student, receiving the degree of M. A. therefrom in June, 1892. Shortly afterward he was elected Head Master of the Preparatory Department of the newly founded Millsaps College, the first session of which began in September, 1892. During the two years of his connection with the College he also taught French in the College Department, the Chair of Modern Languages not then having been established. In December, 1893, he joined the Mississippi Conference, but retained his connection with the College until June, 1894, at which time he resigned his professorship in order to go into the pastorate. Among the pastorates he has served since then are: Gloster, Mayersville, Bolton. East End (Meridian), Pascagoula, Purvis, Port Gibson, Philadelphia, Second Avenue (Laurel), Broad Street (Hattiesburg), and Canton, where he has been stationed the past two years. During the year 1900 he served as assistant editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. For about ten years he has served as Secretary of his Conference Board of Missions, and several times has been appointed Conference Missionary Secretary. For the past five years he has been a member of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College.

Rev. M. M. Black, Jackson, Miss.

He has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Mary C. Vaughan, of Natchez, Miss., who died in 1904. In 1906 he married Miss Lillian Patrick, of Byron, Illinois, by whom he has one son living, namely, Warren Columbus, Jr. He has two sons and a daughter by his first wife, namely, Henry Vaughan, McKendree Marvin, Jr., and Annie Miller Black. Brother Black was appointed Commissioner of Millsaps College at the late session of the Mississippi Conference, and is now busily engaged in his new work.

A GENEROUS BENEFACTION.

We are in receipt from Dr. F. S. Parker of the letter published below, which will prove interesting to our readers. We are happy to be informed of this splendid benefaction. The letter follows:

My Dear Dr. Parker:

I have the honor to advise you, and through you the Annual Conference which you serve as Secretary, of a contribution of $50,000 made to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by a layman of our Church who resides within the bounds of your Conference, which contribution has been accepted by the Executive Committee of the Board of Church Extension, upon the condition that, beginning with the decease of the contributor, the income earned by this $50,000 loan fund "shall be paid annually to the Joint Board of Finance of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the support and maintenance of the superannuated preachers of said Conference."

This contribution, having been made to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension, will accomplish perpetually two distinct ends: first, the aiding of needy congregations in building houses of worship, by loaning them money upon such terms as will not embarrass them; second, the better support of the honored veterans of the Louisiana Conference.

It is proper for me to say in this connection that a member of the Louisnana Conference, the Rev. George S. Sexton, D.D., is entitled to much credit for directing the thought of the noble contributor to the ends herein set forth.

Yours sincerely,
W. F. McMURRY,
Corresponding Secretary.

Jan. 26, 1917.

DECLARED CONSTITUTIONAL.

The so-called "blue sky" laws of Ohio, Michigan, and South Dakota were held to be constitutional in a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court. These laws regulate the sale of securities and are designed to bar get-rich-quick schemes. They do not attempt to prohibit unwise investments, but give to the States mentioned authority, through security commissions or banking superintendents, to forbid the sale of securities which officials believe might result in the defrauding of investors. It is stated that similar laws in 26 other States will be more or less affected by this judicial opinion.

A SHORTENED DECALOQUE.

We give below the abridged form of the Ten Commandments, which a Commission, created for that purpose, submitted to the late Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, held in St. Louis, for adoption. Happily, however, this attempt to revise the Decalogue failed. We regretted to notice that this effort was spoken of approvingly, however, by some of the Northern Methodist papers. The suggested new form was as follows

I am Jahveh, thy God, who delivered thee out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

I

1. Thou shalt have no other God before me.
2. Thou shalt not make to thyself any graven image.
3. Thou shalt not idly utter the name of Jahveh, thy God.
4. Thou shalt remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.
5. Thou shalt honor thy father and thy mother.

II.

1. Thou shalt not murder.
2. Thou shalt not commit adultery.
3. Thou shalt not steal.
4. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.
5. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house.

A PERTINENT LETTER.

In view of the moral campaign which is now under way in New Orleans, the following letter is so informing and pertinent, that we think it is well worth passing on:

"New Orleans, La., Jan. 27, 1917.

"To the Editor of the Times-Picayune:

"Although the following figures have been published before I think it is quite timely that they should be brought to the public attention again. They are taken from the report made for the Citizens' League of Louisiana by Mr. H. N. Pringle, the representative of the International Reform League, during his stay here last year. When Mr. Pringle was not getting evidence at the race track he spent his time in getting photographs of the restricted district and violations of the Gay-Shattuck law, and a pitiful array he has against us.

"Here is one of the statements made by Mr. Pringle: 'We have 246 churches—176 of which are Protestant—the others Catholic. Of course this includes colored churches. We spend about $500,000 to maintain these churches. Put in contrast with these 246 churches and the $500,000 they spend, the 2200 licensed saloons (I say licensed because there seems to be some doubt if all the saloons are paying a license), which at a very low estimate average about $20 a day. This makes $44,000 a day, or the stupendous sum of $16,060,000 a year. This is one-half of the amount paid throughout the entire State for liquor.'

"This is a little over $40 a day for every man, woman, child and baby in the city of New Orleans, estimating our population at 400,000 people!

"If these estimates are true, and I know that Mr. Pringle made his investigations very carefully, is it any wonder that the liquor interests fight against closing on Sunday, for it means $44,000 every Sunday they are closed, or for the fifty-two Sundays in the year $2,288,000?

"If money talks and counts, it is easy to see why the saloons are more powerful than the churches. Which are the citizens of New Orleans more interested in? Saloons or moral surroundings for our boys and girls? If the former, say so—let us know the true sentiment of this community. If for decency, say so, and let the powers that be know that, now since the conditions are known, old New Orleans will never be caught napping again. Take as your motto:

'Who for Truth no sword uplifteth,
He for Error strikes a blow.'

"You are either standing with vice or you must stand for law enforcement—take your choice.

"JEAN M. GORDON."

TOO FAR OFF.

The recent death of Prof. Percival Lowell, director of the Lowell Observatory of Flagstaff, Arizona, reminds us of his theory that the canals on Mars are artificial, and indicate the presence of intelligent inhabitants. Had his theory been well sustained and proven to be a fact, it would have been of great interest and would have answered some interesting and wide-reaching inquiries. But his theories did not stand the test. Professor Jacoby, of Columbia University, says Lowell's telescope will not produce photographs of Mars larger than a pin-head, and these cannot be magnified more than to the sixteenth of an inch, too small to reveal the works on the surface of Mars. Professor Jacoby also shows photographs taken by the Yerkes forty-inch telescope, and which are twice as large as the Lowell photographs, that show no signs of the canals. The astronomers of standing generally have failed to endorse Lowell's theories, and they have gone with other speculations. While Prof. Lowell stuck to those observations which are within the reach of human powers, he did good work, but his attempt to reach too far off failed.

This all has a pertinent bearing upon destructive criticism of the Holy Scriptures. So long as the critics dealt with that which is properly scientific and real, they have served their cause, but when they undertook to look down forty centuries through the small telescope of their critical faculty, their photograph was too small to be of any use. When a man says he can by the aid of his own subjective powers divide a text in Genesis and tell which part came from one document and which part from another, he reports what cannot stand the test of logic, experiment or intuition, and hence it must go to the scrap-heap, and that scrap-heap is growing very rapidly to-day, with the speculations of theorists, both in literary criticism and in natural science, but the works of God and the Word of God abideth forever—The Presbyterian.

A THING TO BE GUARDED.

One line along which ungodliness shows itself in a special way to-day is in amusements. These have their place when seasoned with godliness. But amusements are like grass upon a lawn. When it is properly restrained within the bounds of the lawn and properly clipped, it lends brightness and freshness to the surroundings. But when it is allowed full growth, it becomes seedy, and gives everything the appearance of the unkempt. It spreads over the sidewalk and wets the feet in rainy weather. When it reaches the garden, it chokes everything. The craze for ungodly amusement is one of the worst enemies of the modern Church, and it threatens to choke all good. We often find fault with our parents for their strictness. But what did their strictness mean? Simply that they labored to keep us clean. We must confess that their fruit was better than ours.—The Presbyterian.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The Journal of the 103d Session of the Mississippi Annual Conference is on our table. This publication is in its usual good form, and, in addition to the proceedings of the late meeting of that body in Jackson, contains much valuable information. We appreciate the kindness of Dr. A. F. Watkins, the Secretary, in remembering the Editor and Publisher with copies of this annual.

The Annual of the Louisiana Conference has come from the press, and is being sent to our pastors throughout the State. This publication is up to its usual high standard in every respect. It was printed this year, as it has generally been, in the Advocate office. Dr. F. S. Parker, Rev. J. F. Foster, and their associates are skilled as secretaries and editors of Conference minutes.

ARKANSAS "BONE DRY."

Following the example of West Virginia, the Arkansas Legislature, now in session, passed last week a measure making it unlawful for whisky to be shipped into that State for any purpose. The bill was promptly signed by Governor Brough. It is stated that this enactment will restrict considerably the sales of intoxicants by the saloons in Monroe, La.

TENNESSEE OUTLAWS LIQUOR.

Both Houses of the Tennessee Legislature last week passed a bill to prevent totally the shipment of intoxicating liquors into that State, having been encouraged to do this by the Supreme Court decision upholding the constitutionality of the Webb-Kenyon Law. It is said that Governor Rye will sign the measure.

DECREASE IN BEER AND BREWERIES.

We take the following from the report of the United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the past year:

"The production of beer, which product cannot be used for munitions or for any purpose other than beverage purposes, decreased 1,174,586 barrels, and there was a decrease of 40 in the number of breweries."

A FATAL BLOW TO BOOZE.

The Supreme Court struck the death blow to the illegal sale of whiskey in the United States when it declared the Webb-Kenyon law to be constitutional.

It is a far-reaching opinion. Two members of the court dissented. Chief Justice White and six other members agreed that the act was in no way out of line with the Constitution of the land.

Briefly, under the Webb-Kenyon law, if a State has declared against the importation of liquor it will be unlawful to make a shipmeut of liquor into that State. In other words, one can no longer ship liquor from Kentucky into Tennessee, if the State of Tennessee has passed an act in line with the Webb-Kenyon law.

Just now we do not know that there is a law on the statute books in Tennessee supplementiug the Webb-Kenyon law, but if there is not, it is probable that the Legislature will quickly pass one. If such a law is in effect it will be unlawful from to-day on to ship liquor into Tennessee which is to be sold in violation of the law.

The liquor Interests gave the Webb-Kenyon bill a hard fight from the beginning. It has been in the Supreme Court for more than two years.

The complete affirmation of the law stunned the advocates of liquor and the enemies of prohibition.

At the same time the Supreme Court affirmed the West Virginia law, which forbids the importation of liquor into that State for any other than medicinal or sacramental purposes.

It does look as if old John Barleycorn's day in the land is about over. We are mighty close to national prohibition. John Barleycorn has fought a heavy fight for 15 years, but for the last six years he has been constantly beaten.

It now may be possible to make the drinking of liquor an unlawful act on the part of the drinker.

When the Webb-Kenyon bill was in the United States Senate its chief advocate was Senator Newell Sanders, then a member from Tennessee. Mr. Sanders brought all of his energies into play in behalf of the bill, and more to him than to any one else was the successful passage of the bill through the Senate due.

It must have been exceedingly pleasant to the Ex-Senator, who is now an active business man in Chattanooga, to know that the highest court in the world has put the seal of its approval upon the legality of the measure.—Commercial Appeal.

SOME FACTS ABOUT LLOYD-GEORGE.

When men reach pinnacles of power and responsibility before the people, there is a great interest in the history and facts which have led up to such positions. Sometimes the facts are covered up until some one acquainted with the beginnings bring them to light. The man who at this moment stands most prominently before the world is Lloyd-George, and the following facts gathered from early sources will be of interest:

"Forty years ago the puny son of a schoolmaster's widow sat of Sabbath mornings in her little cottage in Carnarvon Burg, Wales, indulging in the most delicious treat of the whole week. On the table before him was one fresh egg, and he and his brother were to share it as their Sabbath breakfast. Fresh meat was an undreamed-of luxury. This one egg was the event of seven days of poverty. The lad gloating over the thought of this extravagant fare was Lloyd-George.

"Thirty years ago a boy of Welsh Nonconformists surged into the graveyard of a chapel of the Established Church in Carnarvon Burg and dug from the 'suicide corner,' where the minister had ordered it buried, the body of a quarryman. A law had been passed, shortly before, permitting the burial of Nonconformists in Church of England cemeteries. The dying quarryman had asked to be buried beside his daughter in this pleasant English graveyard. The minister, smarting under the indignity offered the Church, had him buried in the corner reserved for those who had taken their own lives.

"A thin little lawyer superinteuded the mob that laid the man to rest beside his daughter's body. It was he who faced the trespass proceedings brought by the enraged vicar, and carried his appeal from court to court until the highest in the realm reversed the decision against him. Carnarvon Burg sent Lloyd-George to Parliament at the age of twenty-seven for this fight.

"He is a fighter from his tiny feet to his sparse, sleek hair. He has always been fighting, clear-eyed, cool-headed, bitter. His battle for the Christian burial of an humble quarryman was only a preliminary skirmish in a life that has been one long strife.

"For years after his election to Parliament he was one of the chief trials of the respectable and conservative gentlemen there seated. Within a few months after the beginning of his term of service, the mention of his name was enough to turn a supporter of the party in power to purple.

"Daring, caustic, eloquent, he was soon known to English politics as the most persistent and invincible guerrilla in the House.

"Then came war. Under its hammer in the last two years many of the former idols of Britain have cracked and crumbled. Lloyd-George was never an idol with the English people. He was radical and disturbing, and as a nation they suspected him. But he alone throughout the terrific ordeal in which the empire is being proved has neither flinched nor proved himself unworthy of the trust imposed upon him."—Presbyterian Journal.

WANT MORE "PEP" IN THE CHAPEL.

Vandy Boys Kick Against Long-Winded Noonday Speakers.

Since time immemorial, when the original Commodore laid on the counter the green goods to found the institution of learning which should henceforth bear his family name, students at Vanderbilt have suffered the tedium of "chapel" every day at noon, and, save for copious grousing among themselves on the "nine-months drought," have suffered in sileuce.

Timidity is at last thrown into the discard. The students are up in arms. They must have interesting "dope" at "chapel" or none. The fellows in the back of the room can play crackaloo and talk frat politics while the chapel speaker is holding forth, but those in front are barred, by reason of their proximity to the rostrum, from even going to sleep. One of these must be the editor of the Vanderbilt Hustler, who now lays down the law to the faculty:

"If it be true that 'brevity is the soul of wit'—and we have no less authority than old Bill Shakespeare that such is the case—the chapel orators, who have the unhappy faculty of making moments seem eons of time, certainly have no claim to the distinction of humorists," says the Hustler's editor. "Perhaps it is too much to expect humor from them. But certainly it is not too much to expect interestingness and some small degree of originality of theme and of presentment.

"These gentlemen are apparently in blissful ignorance of the fact that the genus homo, especially that species called college man, has a pronounced distaste for moralizing, and abstract discussions. Particularly is this true when his stomach is clamoring for the viands of Kissam. Unaware of this, however, the well-meaning doctors continue their out-of-date treatment, daily giving large doses in the most didactic and unpalatable form.

"The editorial board of the Hustler endures this heroic treatment in common with the majority of the students. In the welcome gloom of the balcony, crackaloo, gossip, reading and other amusements dear to the sophomore heart flourish undisturbed. But the members of the freshman, junior and senior classes, being directly under the stern eye of authority, are denied these diversions. In behalf of these sufferers, from whom even the balm of sleep is withheld, The Hustler implores the honorable faculty te furnish more variety, that indispensable 'spice of life' which has long been missing from the somnolent precincts of chapel."

(This article—headings and all—is taken from a recent issue of the Nashville Tennessean. Think of this utterance in connection with what was once a Christian institution! Alas! how is the mighty fallen.—Editor of the Advocate.)

NOW ON A CASH BASIS.

The subscription price of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for the year 1917 is $1.50 to both the people and preachers. The Publishing Committee at its recent meeting gave orders to the Publisher to discontinue all delinquent subscriptions and to place the business of the paper on a cash basis. Many of our preachers fail to observe the rule of paying in advance, and in consequence may, unless they give the matter immediate attention, have their names dropped—an embarrassment which the Publisher hopes to escape. Under the new policy instituted, the longest time that ANY delinquent subscriber can possibly be carried is three months. Brethren, please note and heed this very important statement.

BISHOP HOSS'S STATEMENT.

Influenced to do so by the many misleading public statements that have been made concerning the meeting of the Unification Commission in Baltimore, Bishop Hoss has something to say concerning that gathering in this issue of the Advocate. A part of his utterance was perhaps called forth by the following statement which appeared in a recent issue of the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate:

"On Friday morning a motion was made to admit the editors of the official Church papers, that they might be able to interpret the spirit and views of the Commission to the membership of the Church. There was considerable debate on the question. The admission of the editors was opposed by nearly, if not quite, all of the Southern Bishops, and largely in view of their opposition the motion was defeated, a number of the Northern delegates not desiring to press it when the attitude of the Southern Bishops was disclosed."

Regardless of what one may think as to the desirability of having had the Commission to sit with open doors, this pronouncement was, we think, unfortunate and without justification. Especially so, since it is largely conjectural in nature, and it is never proper to base censure upon uncertain inferences or surmises.

A good deal of fault is being found with our Southern Methodist Bishops in the press of both Northern and Southern Methodism in these exciting days. But there is little occasion for our Chief Pastors to worry about such criticisms. The great body of our preachers and people honor, love, and trust them fully. In every crisis that has confronted our Church throughout its unsurpassed history our Bishops have borne themselves in a manner that was above reproach, and it is our conviction that in more than one instance their splendid leadership was the chief agency that saved our beloved Zion from threatened disaster. The Methodism of the South owes much to its episcopacy, which is of the original type—the type for which Asbury, McKendree, and Soule stood.

A GREAT HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN.

The campaign to raise $150,000 for the Methodist Hospital at Memphis, Tenn., within the limits of that city has succeeded beyond expectation. The amount pledged up to last Saturday night (Jan. 27) was $126,641. This is said to insure the success of this commendable undertaking. The progress made is highly creditable to Rev. H. M. Ellis, the Secretary of this institution, to his associate workers, and to all concerned. The Bluff City has done nobly. If the people in the surrounding country will now do anything like what they should, the Methodist Hospital will soon be open and at work.

THE BIBLICAL REVIEW.

The January number of the Biblical Review (Quarterly) has reached us. This periodical, which is issued by the Bible Teachers' Training School, of New York City, is a very able and stimulating publication. The present number contains the following articles: "The Efficiency and Sufficiency of the Bible," by P. T. Forsyth: "The Verification of Christianity," by Louis Matthews Sweet; "The Science of Prayer," by Albert Clarke Wyckoff; "Philosophy and Life," by George Trumbull Ladd; "The Message of the Epistle to the Colossians," by Edgar Whitaker Work; "On Loving Our Enemies," by Richard Roberts; "Collateral Readings on the International Sunday School Lessons; "Literary Reviews;" "Conventions in 1917."

These discussions, so far as we have examined them, are informing and thought-provoking. At the head of the Review Department is the following statement: "Authors and publishers are requested not to send books, periodicals, or pamphlets for review. The editors prefer to select and purchase whatever is to be reviewed in these pages." We are inclined to think that this may be a wise policy. Few departments of papers and magazines are less dependable, as a rule, than those which make mention of the output of our printing-presses. As guides to the value of current publications, they are little to be trusted. More candor and accuracy in making such reviews is much needed, and if absolute freedom from any sort of obligation to authors and publishers will tend to effect this result, it is obviously a thing to be sought.

The Biblical Review, while it seeks to keep abreast of contemporaneous thought, seems to be endeavoring to be true to orthodox evangelical Christianity. It is printed on excellent paper, and this issue contains 159 pages. The price is $1 per annum.

THE NEW ORLEANS REFORM MOVEMENT.

The movement to create better moral conditions in New Orleans seems to be making headway. A second citizens' meeting was held in the Hippodrome on Tuesday night, January 23, with 1200 or 1500 persons present. Dr. S. H. Werlein presided, and a number of earnest speeches were made. It is claimed that the cabarets have been closed; several scores of disorderly houses have been ordered shut up, and the saloons kept more nearly within the limits of the law last Sunday than perhaps they have done for years. The sentiment for reform appears to be growing—even the city dailies admit this. Let the good work go on!

CHRISTIANITY'S BEST CREDENTIAL.

The dynamics of Christianity are its best apologetics. A church through which the Heavenly Father is reaching and saving and making majestic Christians of the lost, counts for more in the establishment of the Christian religion than a whole school of philosophic disputants. Wesley's work of converting wicked men and women in apostate England in the eighteenth century put the prevailing skepticism to flight in a manner that Bishop Butler's great 'Analogy" had failed to do. There can be no answer to the confronting miracle of an evil personality transformed and made pure and holy. It is only by achieving this result that the Church may hope to put her enemies to flight and to take the world for her Lord.

Few things are more needed in this age when there is so much splash and splutter than "the reign of common-sense."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. A. Battle, our brilliant young pastor at Baton Rouge, La., was quite unwell a portion of last week with la grippe. We hope that he will soon fully recover.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. J. A. Hall, our popular pastor at Greenwood, Miss., appends the following note: "Everything is going well with us here. This is a fine people and a great charge."

Brother F. A. Howell, a veteran and worthy member of our Church at Durant, Miss., says: "Rev. J. T. McCafferty, our new pastor, suits us well." Brother McCafferty has a habit of fitting any appointment to which he is assigned.

Rev. W. W. Hartsfield, of Rienzi, Miss., reports everything as pleasing. He hopes to accomplish something worth while in his new field. His plan of work embraces an effort to circulate the Advocate more largely among his parishioners.

Mrs. C. L. Graham, of Coldwater, Miss., sends us the following message: "Our Church, Sunday school, and missionary society have made a fine start for the new year. Brother H. G. Roberts is in high favor with his people. I have an increasing appreciation of the Advocate."

Rev. O. P. Armour, of Wall Hill, Miss., writes as follows: "Everything is moving along nicely in this charge. Our late quarterly conference was an excellent one. Our beloved presiding elder was at his best. All the churches were represented and the indications point to a good year in this field."

From a personal note from Dr. I. L. Peebles, of Meridian, Miss., we take the following: "I hope to do more for the Master this year than I have ever done. I completed a pamphlet on 'Hell' yesterday (Jan. 24) and forwarded my manuscript to the Publishing House. I hope to write another pamphlet on 'The Love of God' and have it ready for the press soon."

In a business note renewing his subscription to the Advocate, Rev. J. G. McGowen, of Water Valley, Miss., who is an able lawyer and one of the most useful laymen that we have in Mississippi, says: "I congratulate you on the paper that you are giving us. I read it with eagerness and relish. Your position on the question of Church unification is wise, and I heartily approve it."

Under date of January 23, Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of New Augusta, Miss., says: "We are looking forward with pleasure to the coming of our brotherly new presiding elder, Rev. W. B. Jones, to hold our first quarterly conference. The outlook in this newly formed charge is quite encouraging. The people are appreciative." Brother Ramsey's letter brought us two subscriptions to the Advocate, for which he has our thanks.

Rev. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, Miss., recently made a trip to Tupelo, Miss., where formerly he served as pastor, to visit Hon. John M. Allen, whose health, we regret to learn, has of late been very poor—so much so that he has been kept indoors most of the time. It pleases us, however, to be informed that he has seemed to be somewhat better within the past few days. Mr. Allen has many friends among the Methodist pastors of North Mississippi.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, and a number of invited guests, were scheduled to have a luncheon at the Edwards House, Jackson, Miss., at noon on Tuesday of this week, with a view to conferring concerning the proposed celebration of the 25th anniversary of the founding of Millsaps College at the close of the present session. The Editor acknowledges the reception of an invitation to attend this gathering, which, however, he found it impracticable to do.

Mrs. James Robertson, of Black Hawk, Miss., died at the home of her son, Mr. William Robertson, at Calhoun City, Miss., a few days since, and was buried at the latter place, with Rev. R. M. Evans and Rev. E. H. Rook officiating. Mrs. Robertson, who had been a widow for a number of years, was a loyal member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and an earnest, active Christian. That she was ready for the Master's summons we do not at all doubt. May the Heavenly Father graciously comfort the bereaved ones!

It has been with sincere sorrow that we have learned that Rev. W. D. McCullough has been forced by his physical condition to ask to be relieved of his charge at Shannon, Miss., which has been done. Brother McCullough was quite unwell the major portion of last year, but it was thought at Conference that he had recuperated sufficiently for him to continue in the active service; so he was given an appointment. This news of a return of his afflictions will be a source of grief to his many friends in North Mississippi. Let the brethren remember him at the throne of grace. We are informed that for the time being Brother McCullough will make his home at Shelby, Miss., where he has a married daughter.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of Dusa, Miss., is holding a successful meeting at Pocahontas, Miss.

Rev. M. W. Porter of Tucuru, Miss., is pleased with his charge and expects the year now beginning to be one of progress in the work of the Church.

Rev. Alonzo Early, our pastor at Union, Miss., speaks cheerfully of his work. This is Brother Early's first year in the Louisiana Conference. He comes to the Pelican State from Mississippi.

Rev. R. H. B. Hadney, Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, spent last week in East Mississippi in the interest of the important work committed to his hands. He is an industrious toiler.

We regret to know that Bishop E. E. Hoss Johnson City, Tenn., than whom our Church scarcely has a truer or abler man, has been indisposed with a severe cold. We trust that his illness will be of brief duration.

Our Church at Columbia, Miss., has increased its assessment for the pastor's salary from $[illegible] to $1000. Rev. W. M. Sullivan, who was assigned to this charge at the last session of the Mississippi Conference, has been well received.

A pleasant caller at our office last Friday was Rev. W. A. Jorman, pastor of the Central Baptist Church of this city. Brother Jorman, who has lately come to the Crescent City is pleased with his new field and states that he is encouraged in the outlook.

Rev. J. C. Chambers, of Newton, Miss., was in New Orleans last week, having come to be with a relative who was seeking medical advice. While here, he paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He was looking well and spoke encouragingly of his work.

Rev. L. F. Alford finds it pleasant to serve the Enterprise, Miss., charge. He has been greeted by excellent congregations at the preaching services, and the people have been uniformly kind, making him and his family feel quite at home. The present indications point to success in the work.

Our hat is off to Rev. O. W. Bradley of Tupelo, Miss., who has sent us checks to the amount of $43 for subscriptions to the Advocate since Conference. Great is Tupelo! And Brother Bradley is one of the most popular pastors who has ever served that delightful charge. Blessings on him and his people!

Rev. J. R. Jones, the capable presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, married in New Orleans a few hours last Monday, being en route home from the northern section of his district. Brother Jones stated that the work of the year is beginning encouragingly in the charges under his supervision.

Writing from Anguilla, Miss., his new home, Brother J. E. J. Ferguson says: "We have been kindly received here. The people have been most attentive to us, and the outlook is promising for a good year. We have had a fine boy to arrive in our family since our removal to this place." The Advocate extends congratulations.

We are indebted to the following friends, of whose kindness mention has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. I. T. Reames, Fayville, La., 2; Rev. M. L. Ward, Ripley Ct., N. Miss. Conf., 3; Rev. F. H. McGee, Cockrum, Miss., 2; Rev. E. M. Shaw, Isola, Miss., 1; Rev. W. L. Hoss, Jr., Homer, La., 3.

Lexington, Miss., has a community hospital—an enterprise which Rev. V. C. Curtis, now presiding elder of the Greenville District, had a large part in starting. We note that Mr. H. H. Elmore, a leading member of our Church at Lexington, is on the finance committee of this institution. In taking up this work Lexington has set a good example to other towns.

Rev. T. L. Houston gives us two subscriptions from the Bellefontaine (Miss.) charge, and in his business letter makes the following reference to his work: "We are now busy in this field. I have not yet made a complete round, owing to the inclement weather that we have had. We have been domiciled in the parsonage since December 26, and the people have been good to us."

Writing from Sardis, Miss., Mrs. H. G. Henderson orders the Advocate sent to her there. From this we infer that she will reside in Sardis for some time, at least. She keenly feels the loss of her beloved husband, Dr. Henderson, but is striving to bear bravely up under her great sorrow. May the loving Heavenly Father comfort and strengthen her and those who grieve with her!

The Editor recently spent several days in North Mississippi, giving attention to personal matters. When passing through Winona en route home, we were sorry to be told that Sister Mills, the wife of Rev. T. H. Mills, our pastor at Eupora, had been quite ill and had been brought to that city for medical treatment. We pray that she may speedily and completely recover her health

Ladies! Darken Your Gray Hair

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Miss ELIZABETH ARBUTHNOT was born on Dec. 31, 1837, and died on Dec. 11, 1916. She was a lifelong resident of St. Helena Parish, La. She was the daughter of Rev. John and Mary Ann Hodges Arbuthnot, being the fourth in a family of eleven children. She was baptized into the Methodist belief when a child and lived thereafter a life of faith and trust in God. She said several times before her death that she was ready and willing to go. She was confined to her bed for four years and eight months by a fall which left her unable to walk. This affliction was born humbly and submissively. Her true and faithful sister, Miss Martha Arbuthnot, remained at her bedside to the end. She leaves, besides her sister, many nieces and nephews not to mourn for her, but to rejoice in the blessed assurance that at a similar call they, too, shall meet her in the great beyond. In accordance with her often repeated request, she was laid to rest in the family cemetery, the funeral services being conducted by Rev. Q. R. Henry.

Q. R. HENRY.

HELEN LAWSHE, daughter of W. S. and E. A. Lawshe, was born on Jan. 16, 1893, and died on Jan. 16, 1917. Reared in a Christian home and surrounded by influences that ennoble the soul, she only knew how to be pure and sweet, and all her life she was a devoted Christian. Hers was a life of sunshine, being an inspiration to all with whom she became associated. She had a bright future, and we expected her to become a strong and useful woman, who would be a blessing to herself and to those around her. But our hopes were blighted by the great white plague which fastened its fangs upon her some eighteen months ago. After the physicians at home had done all they could for her she was carried to the mountains, but it was soon found that her case was hopeless, and therefore she was brought home to die among her loved ones. She leaves a mother, a father, one sister, and three brothers to mourn her untimely departure. She was greeted on the other shore by a sister and a brother who had preceded her there only a few years. Heaven will be made more attractive for her loved ones by her having gone on before.

On January 12, 1916, at his home in Natchitoches, La., there passed from the Church Militant to the Church Triumphant Brother ROBERT E. SMITH, a veteran soldier of Jesus Christ, at the ripe age of 79 years. In that fairer world he has joined his noble companion who preceded him just eight months into the Celestial City. Brother Smith was born in Natchitoches Parish on March 30, 1837, and had been a life-long resident of the Parish of his nativity. On April 12, 1860, he was happily married to Miss Louise Dunkleman, which union was blessed with 13 children, 10 of whom are living and who in their lives emulate the example of their saintly parents. Our earnest brother, Rev. Robt. Smith, pastor of the Simmsboro charge, is a worthy son of this noble Christian father. Brother Smith was soundly converted when a youth and was faithful to Christ throughout life. His home life was beautiful and happy and many kind words are spoken in memory of him and his noble wife by admiring friends. He was a charter member of the Natchitoches Church and his loss will be keenly felt in our midst. But we praise God for his life, and pray that the Lord may raise up among us another like him.

J. W. LEE.

EDWARD CLINTON SHINES was born seventy-four years ago near Goodman, in Holmes County, Miss., and died in Durant, Miss., on January 8, 1917. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. E. C. Shines, and three children—Mrs. Ernest Kelner, Greenville, Miss.; Mr. George Shines, Terre Haute, Ind., and Mr. Frank Shines, Brilliant, Ala. At hardly eighteen years of age Mr. Shines joined the Confederate Army. He participated in the triumphs and in the defeats incident to the soldier life of that period. At the close of the war, he returned home and set about to gain for himself a competency for life and to discharge faithfully those duties that are characteristic of every good citizen. Mr. Shines had been identified with the truck-growing and truck-shipping interests of this district from the incipiency of that business in this locality. His fair dealings endeared him to all of his business associates. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in his young manhood. As the years passed by his love for the doctrines and the polity of his Church grew stronger and stronger. The tenor of the recent terse editorials in the New Orleans Advocate on Methodist unification met in him a hearty response. They voiced his sentiments. A few days before his death he told me that his faith had been made strong in seeing so often the cause of the righteous vindicated and the works of the wicked brought to naught. He believed in the ultimate triumph of the Gospel. The people who have known him most intimately say of him what Luke said of Barnabas, "He was a good man." We shall miss him.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

At the preachers' meeting held at Sardis, Miss., on Jan. 16 and 17, at the call of the presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, attention was directed to the fact that when we were planning our program for the district conference, to be held at Hernando some time in the spring, some mention should be made of a proper observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of this gathering of our American Methodism.

Complying with a request of the meeting, we are calling the attention of the preachers and laymen who were not there to the matter, as well as to say to the other districts that it is our purpose to give some time on the program of our coming district conference for the consideration of this topic. (See article from Albert D. Betts, of South Carolina, in the Nashville Advocate of December 22.)

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Good Old Home-Made Family Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind—Easily and Cheaply Prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents and gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, be sure to ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A Great Discovery

(BY J. H. WATSON, M. D.)

Swollen hands, ankles, feet are due to a dropsical condition, often caused by disordered kidneys. Naturally when the kidneys are deranged the blood is filled with poisonous waste matter, which settles in the feet, ankles and wrists; or under the eyes in bag-like formations.

As a remedy for those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation caused by uric acid—as scalding urine, backache and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, gout, it is simply wonderful how quickly Anuric acts; the pains and stiffness rapidly disappear.

Take a glass of hot water before meals and Anuric to flush the kidneys.

Step into any drug store and ask for Anuric, many times more potent than lithia and eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar.

Sunday School

REV. E. S. LEWIS ELECTED TREASURER OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD.

Owing to the resignation of our efficient former treasurer, Rev. V. C. Curtis, since the adjournment of Conference, the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Board have unanimously selected Rev. E. S. Lewis, of Oxford, Miss., treasurer of the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference, who will from this time forward be the proper person to whom all Sunday school money, including "Children's Day" offerings and regular collections for the Conference Field Secretary, should be remitted.

Brother Curtis, who resigned as treasurer, has been the most active member of this Board since my connection with it, and I feel sure I voice the sentiment of the entire Board when I say that we shall miss his wise counsel and intense interest in Sunday school affairs, and the only compensation for his loss is the fact that we believe, as presiding elder of the Greenville District, on account of his thorough knowledge of Sunday school work, great things may be expected from him in the great Delta country; but we feel that in Brother Lewis we have selected a man who is known and loved by all the membership of our Conference and who is a worthy successor of Brother Curtis.

Now, in conclusion, let me call your attention to the fact that the Sunday School Board is now paying eight per cent interest on borrowed money with which to carry on its business, which must go on. If our strong churches would pay their Sunday school assessments during the months of January and February we would have a tidy sum saved in interest and could accomplish much good, besides the embarrassment that the officers of this Board feel in having to borrow money the first of each year. Let us follow the example of New Albany, which has this week handed in a remittance on her Conference assessment for Sunday schools.

Let the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference call on me or Brother Gladney if they know of any place where the Secretary can do good.

JAMES G. McGOWEN,
Chairman Sunday School Board.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The date of the Federation of Wesley Bible Classes for the North Mississippi Conference is June 27, 28, 29. The place will be announced soon. Ten more classes in each district by the first of May is our goal.

Rev. S. A. Brown, of Kosciusko, has recently organized three new classes, making six in his church. At least forty men in the Conference could do well within ten days if they would only believe it worth while.

After Rev. V. C. Curtiss was appointed presiding elder, it became necessary to elect a treasurer of the Sunday School Board, whereupon Rev. E. S. Lewis, of Oxford, was elected to fill this important place for the ensuing year. Brother Lewis will be glad to receive all moneys to be used by the Board in advancing the Kingdom of God in our Conference.

Rev. F. H. McGee, of Cockrum, has paid $5 on his assessment, and Rev. R. P. Neblett has paid $23, the entire assessment for his church. Others could do this well and thus keep the Board from paying interest on borrowed money.

The Sardis District preachers have accepted goals, in two items, that are double those suggested by the General Sunday School Board. They mean to add 1000 to the Sunday school rolls and win 1000 souls for Christ. This is not too many to win for our Lord. God forbid that we should wait until summer to begin this work.

Some of the preachers and laymen of the Aberdeen District, at the call of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, presiding elder, met at Okolona to take a look at conditions that confront the Church in the district and get a fresh vision of Him who has all power in heaven and in earth. Two notable addresses were given: one by Rev. J. E. Thomas on "Tithing," and one by Rev. J. M. Bradley on "The Necessity of Using a Plan in Raising Money for the Church." Brother Lipscomb is leading his men to do greater things for our Lord.

Meridian, Miss., who want to be in active work holding revivals or camp-meetings or conducting song services or leading the singing—helping in religious service any way they may be used. They are well trained, capable, refined, devout and earnest, with considerable experience. They will be a great blessing to any needing their services. I shall be glad to put them in communication with any who may need their services.

J. W. BEESON, President.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Figures at hand from the U. S. Department of Agriculture show a marked decrease in the yield of the 1916 crop. Cotton fell short of normal approximately 1,497,489 bales; Corn 411,027,000 bushels; Wheat 403,948,000 bushels; Oats 311,180,000 bushels; in fact, tobacco and sweet potatoes were the only crops to show an appreciable increase over last year's production. These figures obtain increased importance through two accompanying conditions. The European War brings added demands, while prosperity at home tends to enlarge consumption. The existing conditions offer every incentive to the farmer to increase his acreage to the utmost, and enlarge his yields. The profit on all he grows is almost assured for this year.

The Southern farmer is certainly entitled to his share of these evident increased profits in farm products, and should insure his profits by looking about him at his successful neighbor and learn his methods of success. The large prices for his products should make him try to increase his yields per acre. Better cultural methods, better seed selection, diligent and up-to-date farming, together with more liberal application of high grade fertilizers, will, without a doubt, increase the yield of the Southern farms. Our farmers should awake to the golden opportunity about them. If they do, then that "wave of prosperity," so long looked for, in some sections of the South, will flood us.

WASHINGTON TO BE "BONE DRY."

A canvass of the Washington State Legislature, which met January 8, reveals a strong and probably a controlling sentiment for the enactment of "bone dry" laws. These, however, would be subject to a referendum. That test, there is little doubt, they would stand without difficulty.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which, if not eliminated every day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood, causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter-pound of limestone phosphate at the drugstore. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at a small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present high-heel footwear is putting corns on practically every woman's feet.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

Heed the Warning If You Have a Cough!

The deep-seated cough that does not yield to ordinary treatment may lead to distressing pulmonary troubles. Or it may bring on a chronic bronchial affection. Many persons now incapacitated might have avoided such disastrous results by timely care and efficient medical treatment.

Among the latter Eckman's Alterative has an enviable record. It is a lime-bearing preparation which is easily assimilated in most instances. Where used in connection with nourishing food and proper living, it has given widespread relief.

Its freedom from poisonous or habit-forming drugs of any nature whatsoever renders it safe to try. And its content of calcium gives it tonic value. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

RHEUMATISM AND INDIGESTION.

Practically all physicians and medical writers of recent date agree that chronic rheumatism, indigestion, and dyspepsia are closely related. The cure is said to be found in the Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best natural remedy now in use, because all the digestive organs, such as Liver, Stomach, Nerves, etc. Nervous Debility and all these diseases are primary causes and all are primary to it while it is part of imperfect digestion it is impossible assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these troubles by restoring the digestive organs and perfect all, thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating through the kidneys such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection.

Dr. Irvin, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder Troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and the result has surprised me in each case, and I believe if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve nervous irritation, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Arnis of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was cured."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were cured of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. Mottam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely cured of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

"Dear Lord, whose heart beats ever close to ours:
Whom, though we see thee not, unseen we love,—
Help us to love, to earth's remotest bound,
Thy sheep, thy lambs, whom thou didst bid us feed,
That some day, when we see thee face to face
And lay our garnered sheaves before thy feet,
We may, rejoicing, thank thee most of all,
Because among the sick and prisoned ones,
Hungering and thristing in their soul's great need,
We shared the bread of life thou gavest us."

NOTICE.

The seventh annual meeting of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society will be held in Crowley on Feb. 27-March 1. The first session will be held Tuesday, Feb. 27, at 9:30 a. m., when all the delegates should be present. The meeting will close Thursday night.

Names of all delegates should be sent at once to Mrs. M. L. Hoffpauir, Crowley, La., and to the Conference President, Mrs. C. F. Niebergal, 8000 St. Charles Avenue, New Orleans.

Mrs. A. P. HOLT,
Cor. Sec.

The above notice will appear each week until the time for the meeting arrives, as we are anxious to have this annual session widely advertised so that all may know about it and a large delegation be present.

We call attention to the change in the dates set for the Louisiana meeting. The change in date was made in order that a Council worker could be present; for there is no gainsaying the fact that the presence of one of these women adds much inspiration and enthusiasm to its sessions, and seems to kindle anew our love for the work and spurs us on to greater conquests in his name.

NOTICE.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, of the North Mississippi Conference, will hold its fifth annual meeting in the First Methodist Church at West Point, Miss., on Feb. 27 to March 2. Mrs. H. R. Steele, Educational Secretary of the Council is expected.

GOOD NEWS FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

When we read that the Louisiana Conference had overpaid its pledge, we could not help voicing the wish that the Conference of our adoption—Mississippi—would pay its pledge in full. A few days ago when our corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lewis, called us up over long distance and said, "Mississippi's pledge is paid in full," we felt like shouting the good news from the very house-top so that all of our women could hear it at once. Praise God from whom all blessings flow," has been the trend of our thoughts ever since, and we know that all of our women will praise him and yet praise Him again for this great blessing which has come from Him, the "giver of all good and perfect gifts."

It is a time for rejoicing not only because we have met our obligation, but because our women loved their Heavenly Father enough to put forth sufficient effort to bring this thing to pass. It took self-sacrifice on the part of many, and it meant constant vigilance on the part of our corresponding secretary, who "neither slumbers nor sleeps" when the Lord's work calls her.

All glory and honor to this conference officer and to the others on the firing line who made it possible for her to report our pledge paid in full. It will give us fresh strength and courage to press on to greater tasks for the Master during the present year, and the harvest is ready and waiting for us. Oh, so many are waiting, waiting for the gospel of light and love! Can we longer turn a deaf ear to their pleading cries? Do not their cries ever sound in our ears and make us want to enlist every woman, young person, and child in our Mississippi Methodism in this glorious work of redeeming souls?

We have raised the amount we pledged, and what we have done one year we can do another, so that phase of the work ought to be an assured fact to us. Now let us turn our attention to interesting all those who are not laboring with us for the advancement of His Kingdom. Let us set ourselves very earnestly to win them to this work, and then we shall be able to accomplish tasks seemingly impossible, "for with God all things are possible."

WHAT ALEXANDRIA (LA.) AUXILIARY IS DOING.

Mrs. J. S. Butler, Superintendent of Study and Publicity, writes as follows: "The past year was one of the most successful in the history of the Alexandria Auxiliary. There has been a large increase in membership; all are awakened to a new sense of their responsibility, and spirituality prevails.

"The 'Week of Prayer' was observed and unusual interest was manifested. Splendid programs were given each day, and contributions were liberal. 'Harvest Day' was celebrated with an appropriate program and social meeting.

"Plans are being perfected for the new year's work, and with the society divided into twelve circles, each vying with the other in the work for our Master, and with 'Enlargement' truly as our watchword, the year 1917 promises to be even more a success than last year."

PHILANTHROPY WOULD NOT EXIST, "IF I HAD NOT COME."

We take the following extract from a sermonic outline in the 20th Century Pastor. The question, "What Then?" together with the words, "If I had not come" (John 15:22), furnish the subject for the outline. We use the subdivision dealing with the existence of philanthropy.

"If I had not come the philanthropy that is so blessed in its doings would not exist. Men were intended to be a grand brotherhood. It was intended that they love one another; and hence we talk of the philantropic affection in man; but sin so extinguished the fire of this affection that scarcely a spark of it was left amid the debris of his ruin. But when Jesus came he began the rekindling of this fire. As soon as one became his follower, it began to burn in his soul; for at once he sought the welfare of his fellowman. Jesus showed wherever he went his love for men. The spirit his example ever puts into men is that of self-sacrifice. He teaches the impossibility of being his follower and not being a lover of men. The spirit he begets in men for their fellows is that of enthusiasm for their good—not an enthusiasm that merely expresses itself in admiration for those who do self-sacrificing deeds in their behalf, but the kind that shows itself in personal effort to do them good. Jesus came to open the eyes of the blind; to give ears to the deaf; to heal the broken-hearted, and to set the captive free. His was philanthropy of the grandest character.

"Yes; but for Jesus there would not be the love that men now show for their fellowmen. What efforts are being made to heal the sick, feed the hungry, educate the ignorant, and save from sin the unsaved! Men to-day in whose hearts Jesus has kindled the fire of love for their fellows sacrifice their ease, and comfort, expend their money, risk their lives, that they may lift up their fallen fellowmen, and lead them to attain the salvation of their being in its entirety."

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. Mayme Asbach, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCasland, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. Osgood, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

COCHRANE, ALA.

Dear Brother Meek: We came back from our Annual Conference with more zeal than we ever possessed before and animated by a determination to do our utmost for the Lord on the Cochrane Circuit during the coming year. The good people of the three churches of this charge received us with open hearts, and they met us with arms laden with good things to make Christmas a time of rejoicing in the parsonage. Hams, sausage, chickens, turkeys, back-bones, spareribs, butter, handkerchiefs (silk and linen with initials), flash-lights, etc.; but I must stop. Suffice it to say that Mrs. Robertson and the children were remembered more bountifully than the "parson," and that all were made happy on Christmas night by a magnificent Christmas tree, preceded by a delightful program by the children of the Dancy Sunday school. I wish that I had space to tell of this happy occasion. These people are so good to me over here (in Alabama) that I don't let anything hinder me from giving them the best that is in me. I will give one more item, hoping that others, especially those who belong to city churches, will take the hint. One of our devoted and untiring "Mothers in Israel" has organized a "Preacher's Aid Club." One of its duties, and the one which I am fully prepared to speak of, is to visit the parsonage at least once a month laden with something for the pantry. God will surely bless these people.

Meat Cause of Kidney Trouble

Take Salts to flush Kidneys if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Coarse Hair

doesn't become you and it is as unruly as it is unbecoming. The hair should be soft and light and should hold its original luster when it is healthy. The quickest and surest way to deprive the hair of its original luster is to leave it alone to look out for itself. Each separate hair is an individual delicate structure in itself and every hair on your head, in order to contribute its share of beauty should be perfectly fed with the natural hair oil, which comprises its food. Starve your hair and, like anything else, it will die. Feed your hair with nature's hair food, "La Creole." This excellent hair food, first discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana fifty years ago and preserved by them, proved a treatment from which sprang their reputation for beautiful hair. It has since been offered the public and has served to beautify the hair of thousands of the tasteful and fastidious.

SARDIS DISTRICT.

Dear Doctor Meek: I notice in the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference two or three errors in reports from the Sardis District. The Sunday school gain was larger than the Minutes show.

The Olive Branch Circuit paid both the pastor and presiding elder in full. This is not shown in the Minutes. It paid all the collections.

The Church Extension Special was paid in full, the collections on the assessment having been supplemented.

The Sardis District stood second last year in the payment of pastors' salaries, 17 out of 20 having paid in full. It stood fourth in the payment of the Conference collections, first in the net increase in membership, and second in the number of new Wesley Bible Classes organized.

We held in Sardis, Jan. 16 and 17, a most enthusiastic district meeting. Some goals fixed for the year which we think worthy of mention are:

1. 1000 Additions on Profession of Faith.
2. All Assessments Paid in Full.
3. A Service in Every Church Every Sunday.
4. Increase of 1000 in the Sunday School Enrollment.
5. 100 New Wesley Bible Classes.
6. 30 New Teacher-training Classes.
7. A Children's Day Service in Every School.
8. Mission Special—A Circuit in China.
9. Every Board of Stewards Organized and Paying Pastor Monthly.
10. Thorough Organization of Elementary Sunday School Work.
11. Ten New Church Buildings and Sunday School Rooms to many more.
12. Two New Parsonages.
13. Four New Church Organizations.
14. Twenty New Epworth Leagues.
15. Twenty-five New Missionary Societies.
16. To Pay or Amply Provide for all old Church Debts.

This is a full program, but we believe it possible of attainment. On our knees we laid ourselves on the altar. God helping us, we shall shout victory in November. Sincerely,

J. H. HOLDER.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

Dear Advocate: On Sunday, January 21, Brothers Countiss and Brownlee were here in the interest of Grenada College. Though the weather conditions were against us, Brother Countiss had a representative crowd out to hear him at 11 o'clock. His presentation of the work being done by that institution and of the need for additional equipment for carrying forward that work upon an adequate basis, together with the clearness with which he presented the claims that Grenada College has upon all the Methodists of North Mississippi for their financial support and patronage, were happily put and were well received by his hearers.

Among other good and wholesome things uttered by Brother Countiss were words like these, "We are holding up before our pupils the ideal of getting along, and up, in the world by merit, rather than by a pull with some one already in power." When ideals like this are instilled into human hearts as the controlling principles thereof all partisan politics in Chucrh and State will be thrown to the scrap-heap and we will then have real statesmen to lead us to that political and religious liberty that Jesus came to establish on earth.

In the evening Brother Brownlee preached a good sermon to an appreciative audience. Brother Brownlee is getting into the merits of his new field of labor and shows enthusiasm for the great work to which he has been called.

We are glad to have had both of these brethren with us.

Respectfully,

J. TILLERY LEWIS.

City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron

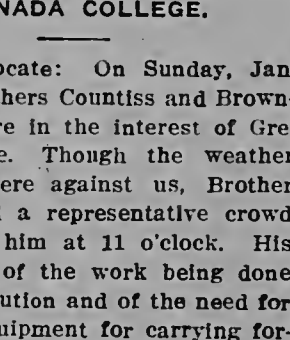
To Make Beautiful, Healthy Women and Strong Vigorous Men

NOW BEING USED BY OVER THREE MILLION PEOPLE ANNUALLY

Quickly transforms the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of weak, anaemic men and women into a perfect glow of health and beauty—Often increases the strength of delicate, nervous, run-down folks 200 per cent. in two weeks' time.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen, that a number of physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below:



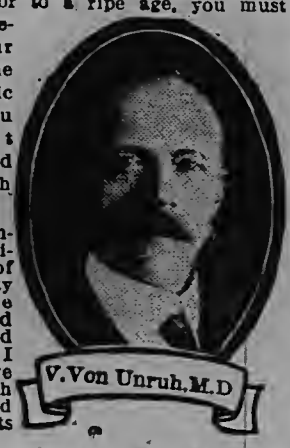
Dr. King, a New York physician and author says, 'There can be no vigorous iron men without iron.

Pallor means anaemia.

Anaemia means deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale. The flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails and they often become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies; polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn-meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked is responsible for another grave iron loss.

Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."



Dr. V. Von Unruh, Medical Director in Chief of the New York City Clinic said, "I have given Nuxated Iron a fair and prolonged trial. I have been more than pleased with the results and will continue its use."

Dr. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied both in this country and in great European Medical Institutions says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple Nuxated Iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart troubles, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than lack of iron in the blood.

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said:

"I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

Dr. James, late of the United States Public Health Service, says, "Patients in an enervated and devitalized state of health—those, for instance convalescing from protracted fevers, those suffering from a long-standing case of anaemia, all such people in my opinion, need iron. Of late, there has been brought to my attention Nuxated Iron. In practice I have found this an ideal restorative and up-building agent in these cases above mentioned."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is the most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

President Wilson says: "A court of law is not necessarily a court of justice." That was what we Methodists said when the Tennessee Supreme Court handed down its decision in the Vanderbilt University case, but we were told that it was 'anarchistic' to make such an utterance. Will our critics likewise stigmatize Mr. Wilson?

The Churches are having many celebrations these days, but it is to be feared that they are not giving heaven occasion to celebrate as frequently as in some former times. The one earthly event that most concerns our ascended Lord and the shining hosts above is the salvation of a lost soul. "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

But for the "knockers" the world would not be what it is to-day. The "knocking" of Luther brought the Reformation, and that of Wesley revived the decaying and fetid Churches of the eighteenth century. Every true prophet with whom God has blessed the world has had to find fault with the conditions of his time, and not the least of his troubles has been to endure the sneers of those who wanted things to be let alone.

Infidelity, by means of the pen and eloquence upon the platform, has been able to inflict but little damage upon Christianity; but infidelity, by means of millions of funds, has been able to swing schools from the Churches and taint and corrupt other Christian institutions. Money is a mighty power, whether it be used for good or evil. Wealth in the hands of those who do not honor Christ is to-day perhaps the most subtle and menacing agency that his Satanic Majesty has on earth, and well may the true followers of Jesus beware of it.

Love has something else to do besides speaking soft words and scattering flowers. It was love that sent Christ to the Cross on Calvary; it was love that lit "the everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," and it will be love that will banish the wicked from the realms of light in the last great day. Perfect love must stand for the maintenance of righteousness and the protection of the good and pure, and hence must combat and seek the overthrow of evil. Otherwise heaven would cease to be heaven, and the universe would be ruined.

A WORD FROM BISHOP MURRAH.

The campaign in behalf of our Hospital enterprise has excited widespread interest. Memphis has done nobly.

Under the stimulus of high motives, an indefatigable company of unselfish workers have pushed the movement with untiring zeal and perseverance. The response has been generous.

If the Conferences immediately concerned will seize and improve the opportunity, we can build an institution worthy of our great Church.

The appeal is inspiring. We should make it possible to open the Hospital in the near future that it may dispense its merciful benefactions, and thus meet the demands of an urgent and imperative need.

We had just as well understand, once for all, that there is no future for the Church that does not prosecute, vigorously and successfully, work of this kind. It is not only a legitimate, but it is a vital function of Church enterprise. To neglect this, means paralysis sooner or later in everything else. Institutions of this nature enshrine the essential spirit of the Master.

Let the way be opened for our Field Secretary everywhere. At this time give him and his helpers the right of way. W. B. MURRAH.

THE BREAK WITH GERMANY.

What had long been feared would happen has taken place, namely a rupture in the relations of our Government with that of the German Empire. After her recent unavailing efforts to secure peace upon terms highly advantageous to herself and her allies, Germany seemed to grow desperate, and on January 31 she notified the United States and all the other neutral nations of her purpose to use submarines to sink ships carrying any kind of cargoes within certain designated areas, her object being to blockade England, France, and the other countries at war with her. It can scarcely be said that this action was violative of any definite agreement that she had made with our nation, for when she consented to desist from the use of submarines in an illegal manner, nearly a year ago, she suggested that if her enemies were permitted to continue their long-range blockade of the seas, she might again bring into requisition this agency of destruction; and President Wilson admitted that her language was susceptible of this view in his final note to the Imperial Government, though declaring that our rights could not in any way be made contingent upon the course that might be pursued by other powers. The necessary effect of Germany's last communication, however, was to reopen the issue between her and our Government at the point at which it was left off last spring, when the President had explicitly affirmed that, unless she desisted from her promiscuous submarine warfare, our country would sever diplomatic relations with her. Her bold proclamation of her intention to resume and even extend that warfare placed Mr. Wilson where the only thing that he could do that was consistent and honorable was to execute his former threat and hand the German Ambassador his passports. This he has done, and in this action we do not doubt that he will have the support of an overwhelming majority of the American people.

It should not be inferred because our Government has taken this step that we are already at war with Germany. We are not, but the situation is such that the sinking of one of our ships or some other occurrence may speedily plunge us into war. The danger of such a result is very grave.

It may be asked, if England and her allies are maintaining an illegal blockade, why Germany may not likewise do so without incurring such a vigorous condemnation at the hands of our Government. The answer is that England's blockade, though illegal, is of a far less aggravating kind. It does not go to the extent of sinking the vessels of non-combatants or of destroying the lives of the citizens of neutral nations. The offense committed is less criminal, and may justly be dealt with in a different manner.

We are not sure, however, that our country would not have stood a better chance to escape embroilment in the colossal European conflict if there had been from the beginning a vigorous insistence that our legal rights of every kind should be respected by all belligerents. But we do not doubt that Mr. Wilson has been thoroughly conscientious in the policies which he has maintained, and the marked patience and forbearance that he has shown will doubtless tend to make the impression throughout the world that he has done his utmost to maintain peace and avoid war, whatever may come in the future.

We feel profoundly sorry for the German people. In our opinion, the course upon which their Government has embarked can only bring to their empire disaster and ruin. Their best chance, as we see it, was to have made peace upon the most favorable conditions that could be had when they recently raised that question. Now we expect to see as the final result of the conflict the dismemberment of Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and to a considerable extent of Germany herself, and we shall not be surprised if the closing chapters of the Kaiser's history are a repetition of the mournful last scenes in the career of the great Napoleon. No strong nation now remains neutral to intercede for the Central Powers in the crucial hour, and by the savage warfare in which they are proposing to engage they will forfeit the respect and largely the sympathy of the civilized world.

We earnestly pray that our beloved country may not find it necessary to draw the sword and enter the dreadful strife. Let the Christian people of the land unite in prayer that such a calamity may be averted.

Man was made to work. Idleness is a curse to any normal human being.

Beware of exaggeration. It is no more permissible to overstate the truth concerning religious work than it is about other matters.

THE RADIANT CONQUERORS.

By Charles Coke Woods, D.D.

These conquerors stand with swordless hands,
Brave victors of the fray—
They fought the fight in every land,
That brings the better day.

They wielded well the burnished blade,
Agleam with Gospel light;
Where wildest battle-thunders played,
They fought the bravest fight.

Strong ramparts fell and evils fled,
Where'er their bugles blew;
They left no green grass stained with red,
Nor crimson morning dew.

Let human hands these conquerors crown
With lustrous diadem,
And love's full measure of renown,
Let angels give to them.

OUR SHEPHERD.

Abandon yourself to His care and guidance, as a sheep in the care of a shepherd, and trust Him utterly. No matter though you may seem to yourself to be in the very midst of a desert with nothing green about you, inwardly or outwardly, and may think you will have to make a long journey before you can get into the green pastures, our Shepherd will turn that very place where you are into green pastures, for he has power to make a desert rejoice and blossom as a rose.—H. W. S., in The Presbyterian.

TAKE TIME TO SET THE SOUL RIGHT.

Every day from the city observatory at Madras, India, the timepieces of over nine thousand telegraph offices in the empire are set right, and the operation takes two minutes. It is worth while, so the government thinks, to stop traffic on over 72,000 miles of telegraph lines and over 287,000 miles of telegraphic wire, at least once every twenty-four hours, to correct wayward clocks and set them to the sun. If taking time to set clocks right is of such importance in an empire, which will one day crumble into dust, how much more important it is to take time to set the soul right, which is to live throughout the eternal ages!—Ida Q. Moulton.

A REAL GIFT.

The value of a gift lies not in its size. It lies not even in the worthy object or cause it is designed to help. It lies in the spirit and the motive of the giver. A gift, to have value in the sight of God, should have three things to commend it: First, it should be dedicated to the Lord for the advancement of His Kingdom, whether it be for Christian education, Christian missions, or Christian mercy. Second, it should be a recognition of man's dependence upon God for every good and perfect gift, and hence be a real thank-offering. We thank God best when we give Him what costs us something. Third, it should be a love-offering, one that springs from a heart full of love to God and to man.—The Lutheran.

WHY I MEMORIZE THE BIBLE.

I am a busy housekeeper, but every day brings tasks which employ my hands, leaving my mind idle. It is while doing these things that I learn verses from the Bible or review those already learned. The results are surprising, but there is no secret about my success, except that I have begun and kept on. Sometimes I am too tired and dull to learn, and then I wait till next day and try again.

I find that this memorizing is a good mental discipline. At first, being long unused to study, it was difficult for me to learn even one verse correctly, but with a determination to have every "and" and "the" right, I can now commit to memory accurately and rapidly. I find, too, that the constant repetition of high thoughts and noble language improves my own thought and expression, especially in prayer.

While committing the Bible to memory, cares, worries, bitter thoughts, vain regrets, morbid fancies, and all the jumble of things that lumber an unoccupied mind, are crowded out. By frequent repetition rich meanings often stand out clearly in the lines which would otherwise escape my notice. This growing familiarity with the Bible makes it ready for use in guiding my own way and helping others. How can I walk and talk with God unless I have in mind some word of his to which I can respond, or which satisfies my questions and aspirations?

Sometimes I may be deprived of reading, and then what riches I shall have in this store of Bible verses hid in my heart! Often at twilight, or in helpless hours, I say the sweet words over with a sense of comfort and companionship which otherwise I should miss. Then, besides all this, I believe that one of the great joys of heaven will consist in tracing out God's providences in the light of his word, and for that reason I can never be too familiar with the Bible.—A writer in The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

RARE DOCUMENTS GIVEN TO EMORY UNIVERSITY.

The historical collections of Emory University are very rich, and they are daily growing richer.

Recently the heirs of Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson gave to the University his parchments as a Deacon, Elder, and Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and also the parchments of his distinguished father, Rev. Norval Wilson, D. D.

It is interesting to note that Bishop Wilson was first licensed to preach under the administration of his father, and his original license is so signed. He was ordained a Deacon by Bishop Scott on the 11th day of March, 1855, and an Elder by Bishop Beverly Waugh the 8th day of March, 1857. The certificate of his ordination as a Bishop is signed by Bishops Robert Paine, George F. Pierce, H. H. Kavanaugh, H. N. McTyeire, and John C. Keener, and is dated on the 18th day of May, 1882. The parchment of his father, Dr. Norval Wilson, is signed by Bishop Enoch George and Bishop Joshua Soule; the Deacon's parchment being dated April 20, 1823, and the Elder's parchment being dated April 10, 1825.

This collection of papers contains also the certificate of the rector of Washington and Lee University conferring on Bishop Wilson the degree of LL.D.

A few days after these papers were given to the University, Miss Mary Wilkinson, a granddaughter of Bishop John C. Keener, sent to the University the papers connected with the seizing of the Southern Methodist churches in New Orleans by Bishop Ames of the Northern Methodist Church under an order of the Secretary of War, Mr. Stanton, and the order of President Andrew Johnson rescinding the order of the Secretary of War and restoring these churches to their rightful owners.

The order seizing the churches is dated Jan. 18, 1864, and was given by command of General N. P. Banks. It is as follows:

"Headquarters, Department of the Gulf.
New Orleans, January 18, 1864.

Special Orders
No. 15

In accordance with instructions, contained in a letter from the Secretary of War under date of November 30, 1863, all houses of worship within this Department, belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which a loyal minister, who has been appointed by a loyal Bishop of said Church, does not now officiate, are hereby placed at the disposal of the Reverend Bishop Ames.

Commanding Officers at the various points where such houses of worship may be located, are directed to extend to the ministers, that may be appointed by Bishop Ames to conduct Divine service in said houses of worship, all the aid, countenance, and support practicable in the execution of their Mission.

Officers of the Quartermasters and Commissary Departments are authorized and directed to furnish Bishop Ames and his Clerk with transportation and subsistence when it can be done without prejudice to the service; and all Officers will afford them courtesy, assistance and protection.

The order restoring the Churches was given through Major General E. R. S. Canby, and reads as follows:

Headquarters, Department of Louisiana.
New Orleans, La., November 13, 1865.

Revd. J. C. Kecner,

Sir:

"The Major General commanding instructs me to inform you that he received this morning the order of the President for the restoration of the church property in this city, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that he will be pleased to see you at 2 o'clock this afternoon for the purpose of making the necessary arangements for its restoration."

Notwithstanding this order, Rev. Dr. J. P. Newman of the Northern Methodist Church, continued to hold those Churches belonging to the M. E. Church, South, which had been erected for the colored members. On account of this fact Bishop John C. Keener and Mr. Samuel Henderson addressed to President Andrew Johnson the following letter:

New Orleans, 20 Nov., 1865.

His Excellency,
President A. Johnson,

Dear Sir:

In consequence of the telegram which we received from your Excellency through Mr. Stanton, dated the 10th inst., General Canby has this day ordered the restoration of all our Church property, excepting "those (houses) in use or possession of colored congregations."

This exception includes three churches in the city, worth $20,000 to $25,000, and a church membership of over 2000 souls—churches which we have built and used exclusively for the benefit of our colored people and which have been used by them for from 18 to 25 years.

The Rev. Dr. Newman, the minister who holds these churches by military occupation, claims to have converted in block, by vote of official boards, the whole 2000 members to the Methodist Church, North.

We pray your Excellency to deliver us from this stupendous proselyting of the War Department, and to again order General Canby to give us our own churches for the use of our own colored membership. We are, most respectfully,

Your obedient servants,
J. C. KEENER,
SAM. HENDERSON,
Representing the Southern Methodist Church of Louisiana and the Legal Trustees of New Orleans Churches.

Another very interesting letter in the collection is one written by Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D. to Bishop Keener, who had not then been elected a Bishop, and who was about to begin editing the New Orleans Christian Advocate. That letter is as follows:

New Orleans, Sept. 23, 1865.

My Dear Keener:

We have not got our churches yet, tho' in daily and hopeful expectation. Two weeks ago last Wednesday we sent in the papers in answer to General Canby's questions. We sent him another letter yesterday, asking the favor of a prompt reply; but we have had no answer yet.

It seems strange that the Jews, Catholics, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and everybody else except Southern Methodists, can get their churches.

Our people recovered their Churches in Nashville. The Yankees after three years got two members, one of whom has seceded.

In Vicksburg and Natchez, too, the churches have been restored, being taken back from the Northern Methodists, which is the only solution of our State.

I am quite well, and will go for my family in a day or two. I have the house just beside the church, where we lived in 1853. I have secured it for eight months for $60 a month. If we get the church, as of course we shall bye and bye, it will be quite convenient.

I have visited very extensively. Our people are of one mind. I am told the Yankee congregations are very small. They can not make headway here.

Linfield, who was here to-day, says that Parker wishes to return to the city. I hope you will be able to arrange the matter. These are trying times.

T. B. White was here a few days ago. He has no work and might be got to go to Baton Rouge. I think Linfield will not go. He must and will have a home.

Stone is here on his way to Kent, making a brief visit. He talks of farming with Ivy next year. How shall we live? Who will itinerate?

I will ask Brother Price to write you, if the order to restore the churches is given during my absence.

The city is full and it is healthy. Business is lively. Rents are enormous, that is, in currency. My congregation is very good considering rain and heat.

I have received no letter from you. Hence the "Prospectus" can not go out. Write me soon.

With love to Sister Keener and all the young folks, I am, Your brother,

J. B. WALKER.

All this history seems very strange to people now, but it is well that it should be preserved in the fire-proof library of Emory University, where the papers will be kept safely for the information of generations yet to come.

THE NEGRO MEMBERSHIP IN THE UNITED AMERICAN METHODISM.

While it was not all together unexpected, it is still to be regretted that the Joint Commission on Methodist Unification has had trouble in defining the status of the negro membership in the proposed united Church. This "hitch," with the resulting necessity for a special committee to more prayerfully deliberate on the question raised seems to have given great satisfaction to some of our Southern ministers who are opposing the union, and who seem to be depending on creating prejudice between the white and black races as one means of defeating the union proposed. But in the meantime, what is the outside world thinking of our boasted Christian doctrine of "the universal brotherhood of man," of our interpretatiou of Peter's declaration that "God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is acceptable to him?" Why should there be a "negro" problem any more than an "African," a "Chinese," a "Mexican," or an "Indian" problem? Is it because the negro was once a slave? Then what race would be exempt? Certainly not the Hebrews, of which race was Christ himself. Is it because the negro is ignorant? Then our forefathers, including "Honest Abe" Lincoln and "Old Hickory" Jackson, must be left out of our fellowship. Is the "problem" because the negro is black? Then Simon, the negro Cyrenian, who bore the cross of the Son of God, and the Ethiopian whom Philip by orders from the Holy Ghost "joined himself to" and baptized, would have been "problems" likewise. It could hardly be possible that the "hitch" in these negotiations grew out of the fact that the negro race is yet in its infancy, for all races have had to pass through the same periods of development as have the negro, and we have not broken fellowship with them. Nor could it hardly be allowed that our prejudice against the Southern negro has grown out of the fact that he has from his importation to our country served us as nurse, cook, farm and factory hand, and general burden-bearer, for wages less than most other helpers have served us; for we ourselves were once "cheap labor." But might not the "problem" have grown out of the fact that as Christians we have allowed ourselves to use the same thought and language as the men of the world in emphasizing the negro's "inferiority" as against our "superiority?" And might not we have allowed ourselves to perpetuate the animosity that was begotten in the breasts of the Southern masters from whom were taken their slaves without their consent, and the subsequent exploitation of the ex-slaves by designing and self-seeking Northern politicians? Our relations as a Church to our "brothers in black" up to this time was most cordial, he being a member of and worshiping in the same churches as we. Even allowing that the strained conditions during the days of reconstruction made it wise for our forefathers in the South to separate the negro Methodists into a Church of their own, does it follow that it were better for the Kingdom of God that the same relation should be maintained seventy years later?

In the absence of definite information, we would judge that this "hitch" in the unification negotiations would be as to whether the negro members in the united churches would be in the relation of the present negro members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, or in the relation of the members of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church to that of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. As far as we are concerned, we would unite on either of these platforms, since the Lord has blessed both of the Churches in their present relationships with their negro members; but we are not willing to allow that union should be defeated from contention as to which of these relationships should be maintained.

When once we attended an Annual Conference session of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church at which Bishop Halsey presided, we went away feeling sure that this was the best Methodist Church for negroes. But when again we attended a Conference of Methodist Episcopal negroes, at which Bishop Joyce, a white Bishop, presided, we felt just as sure that that was the best Methodist Church for negroes. In the one was developed in one generation a great leader from among his colored brethren, and he a master at leading them; but in the other was a leader of an old and developed race, trained in many years of schooling, and he, too, seemed to know the negroes as well as did the negro Bishop; and in addition the white leader brought the resources of a great and a rich Church to the help of the weaker race. And while either of these present relations with the negro Methodists would satisfy us, it would nevertheless seem to be a more progressively Christian thing, in adopting one or the other of them in uniting, for us to seek a closer fellowship with our colored members rather than to expect the Methodist Episcopal Church to break with theirs the cordial and helpful relations that they have maintained for these seventy-two and more years. For, while they have only been leading them from a distance, and have not had access to nor understood them, as have we in the South, still their colored membership is larger than is ours, and this larger membership is more than satisfied with their present relation to the Church. And while from the first we have only given our colored members a pittance of help, the Methodist Episcopal Church has all the way through nurtured theirs with the whole of its resources, both of money and of leadership. And now, in "uniting" American Methodism, would not setting apart these colored Methodists, and against their will and protest, in a sense make another division, and so be an unthought of procedure?

While we have some members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who sometimes talk about "begging to be excused" from sitting with "Mr. Negro," we rejoice that our spiritual brotherhood has become so nearly Christ-like that the airing of these prejudices and race animosities brings a feeling of shame to those who must hear such unbrotherly utterances. Even in self-seeking politicians such language is to-day soundly condemned by the vast majority of our Southern citizens, and there is certainly no place for such uncurbed prejudices in the Church of God. When reading from a Methodist minister a recent expression about to this effect, we thought of our honored Dr. J. D. Hammond, once our Secretary of Education, and who is giving his life to negro education. And we also thought of the missions to negroes by such Southern Methodists as Bishops Capers and Haygood; and of our present missionaries to Africa, and of our negro members there, and at home. And we remembered Christ's warning to those who would "offend one of these little ones who believe in me."

In this South Louisiana town, where the negroes outnumber the whites, the Roman Catholic Church has a considerable negro membership, who worship in the same church with the whites, just as did our Methodist negroes with us before the war; they are baptized by and receive the holy communion at the hands of the same priests; and yet even here, and in this familiar relation, there is no mention of a "race problem" in the Church. And the thought of there being any question as to the propriety of the negro Methodist Episcopal colored congregation, separate and distinct from the white members, seems never to have entered into the mind of even the most un-Christian civilian. Just this year this congregation received a contribution of $400 from the parent Church Extension Board, and it was a cause for universal satisfaction that these poorly-paid-toilers received this help from the treasuries of the rich church of which this colored congregation was a part to assist them in their effort to have an adequate house of worship. To be sure, this money could have been appropriated to build a high steeple for some rich white congregation, but it was given to these Southern negroes instead; and we wished that our Colored Methodist Episcopal churches might have such a Board to draw help from. While we are writing these lines, Bishop Thirkield of New Orleans is presidng over the negro Conference of which this congregation is a part in the classic city of Mansfield, La., the site of our Methodist school for girls, and if any one in this or any other of our hot-blooded Southern towns sees any impropriety in the Church as thus governed, we have not so much as heard one word from them.

We decide, therefore, that if putting all negro members into the same church relation as are those of the Methodist Episcopal Church at present is found to be the best thing to do in uniting American Methodism, we can see no reasonable objection to so doing, and we are ready for union on such a basis.

TO MY FRIENDS.

Dear Brother Meek: May I send a word of thanks and loving greetings through the Advocate to the many dear friends whose messages of sympathy, prayerful interest, and good-will told me to Touro Infirmary, where I came ten days ago for treatment. These evidences of friendship have brought comfort and good cheer; and have helped to lighten the tedium of long hours of anxious waiting and hoping for successful results. To every one who has thus ministered to me, I wish to say heartily, God bless you, and requite you with all good things. Your kindly attentions are written where every day I shall turn the leaf to read them—on the pages of loving remembrance and grateful appreciation. Cordially,

MARY GORE WYATT.

Church News

The name of the "Baptist Memorial Hospital" in Memphis, Tenn., has been changed to "The Good Samaritan Hospital." It is stated that 4000 patients were treated in this institution during the past year.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate tells of "an evangelistic 'drive'" in the St. Louis District. That is rather a militiaristic term for these pacificist times. But it matters little about terms if only right results are secured.

Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, who is well known on this side of the Atlantic, has, owing to ill health, resigned the pastorate of the Westminster Congregational Chapel, London. Dr. Morgan's breakdown is attributed to overwork.

The 1893 Class of Emory College is having a bust of Bishop Candler made, which will be placed in the Library of Emory University. Mr. George Thomas Brewster, of New York, a widely known sculptor, is now in Atlanta at work on this piece of statuary.

It is reported that Billy Sunday's son says that he has declined on behalf of his father a million dollar offer for posings for a moving-picture concern. If such an offer has been made, it is much to the credit of the famous evangelist that it has been rejected.

The Hebrew Christian Alliance of America has brought out the first number of a publication called "The Hebrew Christian Alliance Quarterly." The place of publication is Chicago (3719 W. 12th Street), and the price is 50 cents per annum. It is designed to propagate Christianity among the Jews. The initial issue is a most interesting and creditable one.

The New York Christian Advocate has announced that henceforth it will not print obituaries or death notices, needing all its space to give news concerning the doings of the living. A Church paper, to be sure, must apply most of its space to the latter purpose, but we are inclined to think it is not amiss to devote a few lines to the noble dead.

In a sermon recently preached in New Orleans, Bishop Heard of the A. M. E. Church is quoted as having said: "In America the Negro has a better chance than anywhere else on earth so far as economics are concerned, hut socially and politically he has here no chance. Within 50 years the Negroes will flock back to Africa, led by some Negro yet unborn, who will become the ruler of a vast empire in that country."

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate (Atlanta) says: "The Emory University Chapel, which is a part of the building of the Candler School of Theology, has just been finished on the University campus, and it is said by those who have knowledge of such matters to be one of the most artistic rooms to be found in any part of the world. The inside finishing is in pink marble and California redwood."

Through Secretary Lane, who was a member of the Mexican-American Joint Commission for the adjustment of troubles between the United States and Mexico, the State Department of our Government is said to have appealed to General Carranza's representatives on the Commission to use their influence against the execution of the condemned Catholic priests in the Mexican Republic. Among those sentenced to die are Archbishop Orozco and Bishop de La Moro, who are well known in the United States, and whose friends in this country have been active in their behalf.

The Churchman (New York) represents the revival spirit as still prevalent in Korea. It says: "A missionary from China recently went to Korea, and found at one mid-week prayer meeting 500, and at another 700 people. Inquiry showed that nearly all the Christians, even in country districts, could read the Bible, that half of them had a daily habit of private Bible study and prayer, that eighty per cent of them were engaged in personal evangelistic work, and that Bible-study classes were the center of everything. These classes, of which there were 1800 in one year, last for ten days. One of them enrolled 1600 men, who paid their own expenses and even a small fee to cover light and heating. Half the teaching is done by unpaid laymen. A regular course of study is followed in these classes. This work is said to lie behind the remarkable revivals of spiritual life in Korea."

TO MEET IN NEW ORLEANS.

The meeting here in April of the Woman's Council will assemble one of the most active working bodies of women in the United States. The Council administers over a million dollars worth of money belonging to the institutional work of the Church and which is secured through the efforts of women. The Council is composed of representatives from all the Missionary Societies of the Southern Methodist Church.

The women of the ten Methodist churches of New Orleans are busy making plans for this big meeting which will convene at the First Methodist Church, April 12 to 20. Miss Belle Bennett, President of the organization, will be present, as will also many other prominent officers, workers, talented speakers, missionaries and ministers. It is estimated that several thousand will attend this meeting and it is necessary to raise a thousand dollars in order to properly entertain the delegates.

Mrs. W. W. Carré, has been appointed local chairman, and last Tuesday she called together the chairmen of the twenty committtees she has named. They will in turn appoint other women to assist in the work and in a short time everything will be in working order. Mrs. Carré has had wide experience in presiding over conferences and conventions and she is well fitted for the task assigned her.

The Chairmen of the various committees are as follows: Finance Committee (whose duty it is to raise money for the expense of the meeting), Mrs. S. C. Hollingsworth, with Mrs. John Mumford as Treasurer; Mrs. W. W. Carré, Local Chairman, and Mrs. John B. Parker, President of the City Mission Board.

Hotel Committee (to secure the names and rates of hotels and boarding houses), Mrs. Lewis Clarke, Chairman of the Homes Committee. About 75 visitors to the Council, returned missionaries, deaconesses, and public speakers will be entertained.

Mrs. Elmer E. Wood, as Chairman of the Badge Committee; Mrs. I. N. Niebergal, Music; Mrs. D. Beach Carré, Exhibit; Mrs. R. H. Harper, "Council Daily;" Mrs. C. F. Niebergal, Local Program; Mrs. R. F. PRESIDING ELDERS' CONFERENCE.

The presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference met at Hattiesburg, on January 16, for the purpose of consultation, and for the purpose of adopting such policies as might seem to them to be to the best interest of the Church in the general administration of its affairs. All were present, except one, who arrived too late to be in the meeting. It was a very harmonious session, presided over by the Chairman, Rev. J. R. Jones. A full and free discussion of the affairs of the Church was had, and it is hoped that good will come out of the meeting. The next session will be held at the Seashore Camp Ground during the session of the Divinity School. It was ordered that the following items, as agreed upon by the presiding elders, be published in the Advocate:

1. That it is the sense of the meeting that at the District Conferences the 11 o'clock and the evening hours be given to the preaching of the gospel.

2. That our preachers be urged to take their collections for the Conference assessments early in the year, and that they make prompt remittances, in view of the fact that the money is needed.

3. That each presiding elder shall earnestly seek to influence each undergraduate in the various districts to attend the Seashore Divinity School during its next session.

4. That we favor a joint meeting of the presiding elders of the adjoining Conferences to be held at the Divinity School.

5. That we recommend that the Committee on Public Worship and the Annual Conference consider very carefully the advisability of devoting the evening services of the Annual Conference to the preaching of the gospel, rather than to the anniversaries of the Boards or other meetings.

W. B. JONES, Secretary.

TEN THOUSAND CONVERSIONS IN MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Let the Church make this year the greatest for spiritual power within the history of the Mississippi Conference.

Methodism was born in a revival and lives by the same method. If the power of the Holy Spirit should come upon us, how educational interests, missions and Sunday schools would prosper! The Church needs the early revival—BEGIN NOW.

No Conference was ever more blessed in the class of evangelists sent out by the Bishop than ours:

Dan E. Kelly, a cyclone of spiritual power, true, strong, brave, tender—a man filled with the Holy Spirit.

P. H. Howse, a son of thunder, true to the best ideals of Methodism, who fears nothing but sin. God has greatly blessed his work.

J. V. Bennett, a new Richmond in the field, whom to know is to love and appreciate. He has been a great success as a pastor—he will be a great success as an evangelist.

T. J. Norsworthy of the local ranks, of whom it is said that few men can preach so well. He has had marked success as an evangelist.

Kelly, Howse, Bennett, Norsworthy are "to the manor born." These brethren are our own men. They are worthy of all confidence and should have our undivided support. Invite them; stand by them. Great revivals do not come in a day. These brethren can stay as long as needed. Blessings on them and the Church we love!

Ten Thousand Converts for the year 1917.

THE GREAT SUCCESS OF THE CITY CAMPAIGN FOR THE METHODIST HOSPITAL IN MEMPHIS.

The campaign for the bospital in Memphis was a great success. More than $175,000 was secured in ten days. There is great rejoicing among those who have the cause most on their hearts.

Right royally have Memphians answered the query of many throughout the country: "What has Memphis done for the hospital?" She never had a chance till now. Her splendid response to the appeal for the hospital is a new proof of the bigness and tenderness of her heart.

The organization created by Mr. F. C. Barber of New York, director-general of the campaign, consisted of an Executive Council of eleven of the biggest business men of the city, an Advisory Committee of five of our most prominent women, with Mrs. W. B. Murrah at their head, and twenty-four teams, each composed of a captain and nine privates. Sixteen of these were of the most successful and alert business men of the city, and eight of them of leading Church and society women. They were of all creeds and shades of religious belief, but one in their sympathy for human suffering and their zeal for the institution proposing to relieve it.

For ten days this faithful band of loyal workers met for noon luncheon in the Chisca Hotel. There reports were made and brief inspirational speeches were heard.

Among the speakers who graced the occasion were Mr. Joseph Newberger, one of our big-hearted Jewish friends; Bishop Thos. F. Gailor, of the Protestant Episcopal Church; Dr. W. M. White, of the Christian Church; Dr. C. H. Williamson, of the Presbyterian Church; Mr. C. P. J. Mooney, the brilliant editor of the Commercial Appeal, and our own Bishop W. B. Murrah. These were all of one mind in appreciation of the enterprise and enthusiasm for its success.

The campaign was remarkable in many respects. On several days the supposed experts whispered their fears of a slump in the subscription totals, but they were all gloriously disappointed. No team ever reported a blank for the day and on no day did the subscriptions amount to less than $10,000. On the last day, when the break of our Government with the German Empire had caused a slump in the price of cotton of over $25 a bale, nearly $15,000 was reported.

The interest spread to other towns, and several of them, as Wayne and Forrest City, in Arkansas, and Como, Mississippi, broke into the subscription list with liberal offerings.

The newspapers of the city rendered the campaign invaluable service. Mr. Forbes, city editor of the great Commercial Appeal, an honored guest at the opening dinner, penciled on one of the cards, as the subscription for his paper, "All the publicity desired." After that the campaign was given abundant space on the first page, which was a large factor in the success of the effort.

Mr. John R. Pepper made an ideal chairman. Alert to every situation and ready with appropriate reparte, he moved the business forward with a master hand.

Memphis has met her opportunity royally. Her appreciation of the Methodist Hospital and her readiness to bear her part in its expense have been put beyond any question. Her liberality and enthusiasm flings the gauntlet at the feet of the surrounding territory with a challenge that cannot be denied—"What will you do to give suffering humanity this needed institution?"

Only cash or subscriptions can answer this challenge. Let these roll in to the headquarters office, 1025 Lamar Boulevard, without delay. Or call the Field Secretary and his assistants to assist in conducting a campaign for the Hospital in your community while interest is aroused.

H. M. ELLIS, Field Secretary.

SEVENTY YEARS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Seventy years ago this morning, January 27, in a little log cabin, with a stick and dirt chimney and rib poles for the boards, just back of grandpa's garden, in a Dutch settlement three miles North of Marion, in Perry County, Alahama, the stork left the first of eleven, a little black-eyed, black-haired, dark-skinned baby boy, weighing about eight pounds.

I do not remember what they said or did that morning, hut I am sure there were two happy souls in that cabin. I was no unwelcome baby. You see, they had more time for babies then than now, and they did not know so much, and were honest folks. If some one said, "That babe is a little off in color, do you reckon the stork has made a mistake and left him at the wrong place?" quickly my mother would have said, "Tut, tut; not a word of it; he may be a little off in color, but I am sure he is a new "Hollander," and certainly he belongs here. You look at that long, straight black hair and that pug nose, and just look over there at Mike (Mike was my father—pure as gold and brave as a lion); can't you see he is a Dutchman, every inch of him? Yes, he is a little off in color and somewhat nervous and shows his temper; but you have hurt his feelings and I dare you try that stunt on him a little later. You will apologize or there will he a rumpus all about here."

Thank God for a good mother, who always comes to the defense of her child! But for mother not many of us would be here to-day. God bless the true, good mother!

Now, Doctor, here I am at the end of seventy years, through the good providence of God, who sent me into a praying home with godly examples and a positive religious influence, which has followed me all the way and shaped my life for a better world. I am a "twice-born" man. Once in that cabin, and the next time, before I was three years old, between my father's knees while at family prayers, I was born into the kingdom of Jesus Christ, and he is my witness.

It has been a pretty steep climb all the way from that cabin out there; but here I am, thank God, and am feeling pretty well and am glad that I am living, and deep down in my heart I promise God to take a new start, and, by his grace, I will do my best.

These seventy years seem all too short, and, looking back, I wonder why I have not made a better man of myself. God has always been good to me and I do not remember when I did not love and try to serve him.

Drew, Miss. W. S. LAGRONE.

YOUR FIVE HUNDRED MUSCLES.

The five hundred muscles in the human body depend on pure and rich blood for their health and contractile energy which is the ability to labor. If they are given impure blood they become enfeebled, the step loses its elasticity, the arm its efficiency, and there is incapacity to perform the usual amount of labor.

What a great blessing Hood's Sarsaparilla has been to the many toiling thousands whose blood it has made and kept pure and rich! The Great Battle

NOTES.

The jail in Morgan County, West Virginia, has been empty for over three months. Prohibition is given the credit for this by the county authorities.

The Oregon House of Representatives passed a "bone-dry" prohibition bill on January 29, and the measure has gone to the State Senate for consideration.

The prohibition movement has become sufficiently strong in the United States for even such papers as The Independent and The Outlook to speak toleratingly of it. We rather look to see them actively supporting it before a great while.

In his recent great address in New Orleans, Mr. Bryan asked why it is that if the licensed liquor traffic is a promoter of prosperity, towns and cities in setting forth their advantages to attract immigration and new business do not tell how many saloons they have? This they never do.

There are now only four wet States in the South: Florida, Texas, Kentucky, and Louisiana. Florida has elected a prohibition Governor and Legislature and is expected to be in the "dry" column soon. Texas and Kentucky are to submit the question of State-wide prohibition to the people within the next few months, and even in Louisiana sentiment against the liquor traffic is growing rapidly. It will be a happy day for Dixie when she is completely rid of dram-shops.

A HAPPY SITUATION IN CLAY COUNTY.

We clip the following dispatch, which needs no comment, from the Memphis Commercial Appeal:

"West Point, Miss., Jan. 18.—The Clay County grand jury, empaneled this week, adjourned to-day after examining sixteen witnesses and finding one true bill. In their report to the court they said:

"'We are glad to report that crime in Clay County is almost a thing of the past. Since the last term of this court there has not been a felony committed in Clay County, so far as we can learn, save this one case we are reporting.

"'The sale of liquor is practically at an end in this county. We find the county's money duly accounted for; the jail and other public buildings are in good shape.'

"Judge T. B. Carroll complimented the county officials and said that he did not know of any county in the State making such a fine record and that it was his banner county."

MR. BRYAN'S ADDRESS.

(The following is an editorial utterance which appeared in the Times-Picayune of January 30—it shows that our leading daily recognizes that prohibition sentiment is growing in New Orleans.—Editor of Advocate.)

The large and enthusiastic reception given Mr. Bryan's prohibition address at the Athenaeum (in New Orleans) Sunday cannot fail to impress the community. With weather conditions most unfavorable and with other obstacles and competition in the way, the former Democratic candidate for the Presidency filled the large hall as it has seldom been filled before, with an attentive, interested and enthusiastic audience of our best citizens. Especially notable was the large number of women present—mainly young women—who left little doubt where they stand on the liquor question, and the number of young men who wanted to hear the prohibition side of the case was imposing.

It must now be evident to all that this issue will not "down," that all efforts to sidetrack it are futile. The question has come aggressively before the people of the world, first in Europe because of the war, and now before the people of the United States to be discussed and acted on by regulation, prohibition or otherwise. Those who believe that we in Louisiana can avoid or dodge this issue are simply deceiving themselves. We are likely to encounter the same experience as other States; we must hear the same arguments, pro and con, and we must decide, like others, what course is best for us. No man can present the prohibition side of the case more strongly than Mr. Bryan; and he has pledged all his energy to the campaign, to keep it up until liquor is ruled out of the United States. The speech in New Orleans Sunday is only one of many which he proposes to make throughout the country, for he favors national prohibition; and he finds already that over half the country is closed to the saloon.

It will be admitted by all that prohibition has made rapid strides in the last few years. Abroad prohibition has been put in force in Russia and Rumania, and limited prohibition or restriction in Great Britain and France. In this country more than half the States are now under prohibition laws and the number is increasing from year to year. The Senate has passed a prohibition law for the National Capital, and the House of Representatives has given a majority for an amendment to the Federal Constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor in the United States—it is of no avail as yet because the amendment must have a three-fourths majority of both branches of Congress; but "it is on its way" and is to be brought up again in Congress at the first opportunity. The United States Supreme Court, in a recent decision, has pronounced the leading prohibition law legal and constitutional and points out how easily prohibition States can shut out the importation of liquor, 'the bootlegger" and "blind tiger." In fine, a succession of acts, popular elections and decisions of the courts have, in the last few months, been favorable to the prohibition cause.

How does Louisiana stand in this matter? With the exception of Kentucky, Florida and Texas, it is the only Southern State where the saloon has any standing, and Texas and Florida may pass prohibitory laws during the present year. Even in Louisiana, thirty-two, or exactly half the parishes, are without saloons, under our local option law.

It is well for those who are interested directly or indirectly in the liquor business to know that there is a very strong and growing sentiment against the saloon, seeking to put it out of business, and that under the recent court decisions the laws can be made strong enough to do so. They exist by the authority of the people in any State when a majority of the voters are willing to permit it. But they will lose out even in those States where saloons are licensed if they outrage or anger public sentiment by riding rough-shod over the laws, by declaring that they will not obey this or that regulatory provision, that the Sunday law is not for them, that the Gay-Shattuck statute is an interference with their liberty as American citizens, which they will not tolerate. No person of intelligence who sees or reads what is going on can deceive himself as to the situation. He cannot fail to see that the saloon man who will not obey the law cannot get the protection the law places around him. All through the country those who are interested in the manufacture or sale of liquor appreciate greatly the situation and are sounding the warning that only by strictly supporting the law, by obeying every section of it, can they hope to protect themselves against hostile attack and restrictive or prohibitive legislation. The Bryan speech and the manner in which it was received proves that the prohibition cause has reached New Orleans and is making headway here.

A SITUATION THAT CALLS FOR ACTION.

Rev. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, Miss., President of the Board of Missions of his Conference, has sent to our pastors in North Mississippi the following letter, which deals with a matter of such importance that we are printing it, with a view to giving it as wide a circulation as we can:

"Dear Brother: In making this appeal to the pastors and people of the North Mississippi Conference, we want you to realize that the Board of Missions was never in a more desperate situation than it is now. To accomplish this we would call your attention to the necessities of the men on missions—the men who look to you through us. Here are the facts:

"There are fifteen men serving mission charges that paid less than $300 last year; seven of these men have families. There are twelve more whose charges paid less than $400; nine of these have families. There are ten others whose charges paid less than $500, and seven of these have families. In a word, there are 37 men serving missions which paid less than $500 each last year; and 23 of these men have families. This would seem to be enough, but it is not all. Twenty of these 37 men were moved at the last Conference; and, beside their poor prospect and moving expense, they are among strangers.

"The Board of Missions has exhausted its surplus in trying to take care of these mission charges during the last two years; and if these men and their families are to be saved from suffering all the pastors and churches of the Conference will have to come to the rescue at once. The first quarter's payment will be due March 15. What will you do? Is it too much to ask that every pastor read this letter to all his churches, and then after a plain statement take a collection for Home and Conference Missions? We think not. At any rate, do not put this letter aside until you have thought of these 37 men and their families with less than $500, and most of that at the end of the year. Again, what will you do about it? Send all money raised to M. T. Bynum, Webb, Miss.

"Fraternally,
"WM. L. DUREN, President,
"N. Miss. Conf. Board of Missions."

NOW ON A CASH BASIS.

The subscription price of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for the year 1917 is $1.50 to both the people and preachers. The Publishing Committee at its recent meeting gave orders to the Publisher to discontinue all delinquent subscriptions and to place the business of the paper on a cash basis. Many of our preachers fail to observe the rule of paying in advance, and in consequence may, unless they give the matter immediate attention, have their names dropped—an embarrassment which the Publisher hopes to escape. Under the new policy instituted, the longest time that ANY delinquent subscriber can possibly be carried is three months. Brethren, please note and heed this very important statement.

A BOY'S EFFORT.

I tried to write a poem
To my dog the other day,
To tell him that I loved him,
In the very nicest way.
Mamma said it was a poem—
That I had done quite well;
But papa's name is nicer,
For he called it "Doggerel."

—St. Nicholas.

"HELP A LITTLE."

The parents of little Willie were not Christians. They were respectable. His mother taught him the Lord's Prayer. She also taught him this appropriate little verse to say as he retired for the night:

"Now I lay me down to sleep——." Then the boy would repeat after his mother:

"God bless papa."

"God bless mamma."

"God bless Willie and make me a good little boy."

One evening, as he was kissing his mother goodnight, he looked up into her face and said:

"Do you pray, mamma?"

"No," darling."

"Does papa pray?"

"I never heard him pray."

"Why do you make me pray?"

"That you may be good."

"Don't you want to be good, mamma?"

"Oh, yes; I want to be good."

"Then why don't you pray, and papa pray?"

"We've gotten out of the spirit, I guess."

"Well, mamma, maybe God will hear my prayer. But don't you think you and papa are expecting too much of a little fellow like me? Do you believe that God wants me to do all the praying for this whole family? Seems to me you and papa might help me a little."

These words sank deep into the mother's heart, and it was not long before that house was a house of prayer unto the living God.—Christian Tribune.

WHERE IS MOTHER?

A little fellow came running to a neighbor's house and there were tears in his eyes and anxiety in his face as he said:

"Do you know where my mamma is? I came home from school and she is not at home."

A little girl met a friend on the street and said: "I want my mamma; have you seen her?"

A tiny tot stood at the window in charge of an older child and, poering out, said: "Why don't mamma come?"

"Where is mother?" shouts the big boy, as he dashes into the house. "Has she fixed that rip in my coat?"

"Where can mother be?" says the big girl who wants her waist all buttoned up behind.

"Where is your mother, children?" asks the husband and father, as he comes in from his work and looks about.

Is it not simply wonderful how many people want mother? Is she not the most important person, the most needed person, the busiest person in all the wide world? If she is not at home how quickly her absence is observed? If she goes out for an evening she is probably called to the 'phone and told to come home quickly, because the baby is sick, or Jack has cut his finger, or Julia has the headache, or papa is lonesome.

Mother has the only hands that can banish the pain, the only voice that will soothe to sleep, the only kiss that will heal the bruise, the only words that will settle the disputes. She is the only one who knows where every single thing is kept, and so she is in constant domand, and, if absent from home, is most sadly missed.

Little boy, little girl, big boy, big girl, I do not know just where your mother is now, but wherever she is she is ministering to you, and thinking of you, and sacrificing for you, and living for you. And if, as it must be in the case of some of you, she has gone out of the home forever, yet believe me, God is true, and as the resurrection is true, your mother, somewhere and somehow, is ministering to you.—The Presbyterian Standard.

THE VOICE OF CONSCIENCE.

By Joe Garza,
Johnson School, San Antonio, Texas.

Once I was walkiug through a park when I saw a frog. I picked up a rock and was about to let it drop ou the poor animal when somebody called me. I turned around, but seeing nobody I ran home and asked Mamma if she had called me. She said, "No."

After a while I told about what had happened to the frog. Mamma said, "That was your conscieuce telling you not to kill the poor animal."—Our Dumb Animals.

WHAT WAS IT?

One of our exchanges tells of a little girl who "fooled" her grandfather. Maybe some of our readers can try the same joke upon grandpa or grandma. This is the story:

Mr. Brompton is very clever, yet tho other day his little grand-daughter utterly confounded him.

"Grandpa," said she, "I saw something so funny running across tho kitchen floor, without legs. What do you think it was?"

Grandpa thought and thought, but at last he had to give it up.

"What was it?" he asked.

"Water!" replied the little lady, triumphantly. —The Presbyterian.

OUR FRENCH MISSION WORK.

Dear Dr. Meek: The friends of our French Mission will be glad to learn that Brother Morgan has beeu well received by our good people at Houma, where he has entered energetically upon the work in that important field. Since he has gone there the parsonage has been repapered and furnished almost throughout. Several needed improvements have also been made in the Mission Hall, which adds considerably to its appearance. Brother Morgan reports good congregations, with a Senior Epworth League in process of organization.

Rev. A. D. Martin, our missionary on Bayou Lafourche, is meeting with encouraging success at all the points where he is preaching. His chief difficulties are as follows: (1) To answer all the calls that come to him; (2) to find houses large enough to accommodate the people who come to hear him; and lastly, to keep his expenditures within the compass of the small salary which he is receiving.

Brother R. E. Martin, who was at one time a member of our Conference, is filling the position of first assistant pastor at Bourg, where we have one of tho best country churches I have ever seen. In addition to his labors there, ho has already this year established two new preaching places and is starting a new Sunday school.

As an agency for training workers for a larger field, the Epworth League at Bourg deserves special mention, as already from among its members two of our choice young men are off at school studying for the ministry, and two others as exhorters are out preaching somewhere nearly every Sunday.

Our work at Lockport, though we are still without a resident pastor there, is making steady progress. Both the Sunday school and the congregations are growing.

On the fourth Sunday in January, not including what Brother Morgan may have done at Houma, we (my assistant pastors and exhorters) held services at six different points and preached to an aggregate of 268 persons, by actual count.

We need a great many things in this field, but nothing quite so badly as some church buildings. Last year we built two; this year we should build three—one at Houma, one at Lockport, and one at Griffin, a point six miles below Lockport. [illegible] none of these points are we able to [illegible] church we should have without considerable outside help.

I know of no place where a few thousand dollars could be more profitably spent than in assisting these struggling congregations in their effort to build houses of worship.

We have not yet held any of our revivals, but have had about a dozen accessions and have baptized about an equal number of infants. Will not the readers of the Advocate remember us daily at the throne of grace? Sincerely,

MARTIN HEBERT.

French Mission, New Iberia, La.

AN HONEST MINISTRY.

There is only one thing to do, when a young man finds himself out of harmony with the doctrines of his Church. He should never hesitate, but at once enter some other Church where he can have freedom. Sometimes doubts force themselves upon us, and we can not control our belief, but we can be honest and truthful. We pride ourselves upon our orthodoxy, and, on the whole, our Church is strongly orthodox, but there are some dead flies in the ointment. It is especially incumbent upon our Church courts to examine men entering, and see that we take none of a doubtful mind.—Presbyterian Standard.

TO WAGE UNRESTRICTED NAVAL WARFARE.

Germany has announced to the world that she will undertake a vigorous and aggressive blockade of the ports of her enemies with submarine war vessels, showing little or no consideration for the merchant ships of her foes. A danger zone has been named and neutral vessels warned to keep out of it. This order of the German Government has been declared to be already in effect.

THE GOAL MORE THAN REACHED.

The ten days' campaign in the city of Memphis, Tenn., for the Methodist Hospital located there closed on Thursday, February 1, with cash and pledges in hand amounting to $175,000, which was $25,000 in excess of the $150,000 goal. The securing of this sum was a splendid achievement, and the city of Memphis and the workers who brought it to pass have every reason to be proud of it. Mr. J. H. Sherard, of Sherard, Miss., the originator of this enterprise, and Secretary Ellis, who has labored so faithfully to promote it, are reported to be happy over what has been accomplished in the Bluff City, and they have a right to be.

The plan in contemplation is to expend $250,000 in the building and equipping of this hospital. This leaves only $75,000 to be secured in its large patronizing territory outside of Memphis, and this remaining amount should be raised at the earliest day possible. The site that has been obtained for this plant is a magnificent one, embracing more than eight acres of land, and being easily accessible from all parts of the city and all the railroad depots.

The people of Memphis who have so generously aided in the consummation of this noble enterprise may feel assured that the Methodists in the Conferences that projected it highly appreciate what they have done, and that they will not soon forget their kindness and large-hearted benevolence. Our wish for the Methodist Hospital is that it may soon be opened, and that for all time to come it may unselfishly minister to suffering humanity of every faith, both from the city in which it is located and from the surrounding country.

AN APPEAL THAT SHOULD BE HEEDED.

The letter from Rev. W. L. Duren, President of the Conference Board of Missions, to the pastors of North Mississippi concerning the need of the preachers serving mission charges in that territory, which we are carrying on another page, ought certainly to produce immediate results. The ministers on these charges are true and worthy men, who went to their appointments at the command of the Church, having been assured that the Mission Board would assist in their support. That Board can do this only as the assessments levied for this purpose are paid. Shall these men and their families be allowed to suffer actual want? It would be a positive reproach to the strong congregations of North Mississippi to permit this to come to pass. We feel sure that they will not do this, if this most important matter is brought properly to their attention. Let every pastor read Brother Duren's stirring message from his pulpit, and take without delay the collection for this cause, as he has suggested.

TRYING TO OVERRIDE THE PEOPLE'S WILL.

The following press dispatch is self-explanatory:

"Austin, Tex., Feb. 2. —A proposal to submit the question of state-wide prohibition to Texas voters was defeated in the House of the State Legislature to-night by a vote of 89 to 47. Ninety-five affirmative votes would be necessary to pass the resolution. By agreement the defeated measure was spread on the journal and may thus be called up again later."

In view of the fact that a majority of the people of Texas in a legally held election have declared for the submission of the prohibition question to the voters of that State, this effort to trample under foot their will is utterly without justification. But what do the liquor interests anywhere care about the will of the people? They are ever ready to override it in any way that they can. They are unscrupulous to the last degree in their efforts to maintain the accursed liquor traffic. However, this vote is not necessarily final, and it may be that the voices of the constituencies at home will yet effect a different result. There is little probability that anything can long keep the prohibition banner from waving in triumph over the Lone Star State.

GOOD FOR NEW ORLEANS.

The following is from The Times-Picayune of last Monday, February 5:

"For the first time in many years New Orleans had almost a dry Sunday—not speaking of the weather, but from a beer and liquor standpoint. The majority of the saloons throughout the city were closed, but a number tried to keep open and proprietors and employes were arrested. Soda fountains in every section of the city did a rushing business. It was said that numerous persons winked at the operators of the fountains in an effort to get their ginger ale, sarsaparilla or some similar drink 'spiked.' Cigarettes and tobacco were at a premium, and the town generally was in Puritan garb."

We believe that this statement is true. The city has never looked so good to us as it did in its so-called "Puritan garb." May she long continue to wear it, adding to it, until many other things that are still permitted on the Sabbath, such as theaters, for instance, shall be stopped!

FADS.

A recent issue of Leslie's Weekly contained the following:

"At this particular time, more people of prominence, socially, politically and financially, are lending their names to the organization of all sorts of new associations, ostensibly for the uplift of mankind, than the records have ever shown before. In a recent instance, it was disclosed that a clergyman had successfully organized a Relief Association, but it was mainly for his own relief. He had secured the use of the names of some of the most eminent persons in the United States to back his scheme and his solicitations met with generous responses. A public protest against these increasing devices to provide a living for a bunch of shrewd promoters is heard. The busy men in our great cities whose addresses have fallen unto the hands of these promoters and who are receiving expensively engraved invitations to join in various educational, philanthropic, political and other enterprises, are beginning to rebel at the multiplicity and pertinacity of the solicitations that pour in daily. We do not wonder."

In our opinion, this utterance is quite justified by what is going on. The tendency needlessly to multiply organizations is widespread and more of them are constantly coming into existence. That such a spirit is wholesome, we do not believe. We fear that it rather indicates, so far as the Churches are concerned, a disposition to grow weary of the difficult spiritual work that the Master commissioned his disciples to do, which is largely of an individual nature, and subsitute for it some form of material activity. Do we not need to beware lest Christianity should be smothered out in an expanding Churchanity, or by the multiplying machinery of secular humanitarian movements? Less talking and parading and more doing and achieving would, we think, be more befitting the professed followers of Him who "went about doing good." There is little cause for rejoicing at the end of the year when about the only harvest gathered is a bumper crop of new means and methods.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The year's work has opened encouragingly in the Ruston District, of which Dr. J. M. Henry is the efficient presiding elder. Methodism is strong in that section of Louisiana.

Mr. Webster Millsaps Buie, of Jackson, Miss., has given $1000 to the Methodist Hospital, located in Memphis, to provide therein a memorial room in honor of the late Major R. W. Millsaps, his uncle.

In a business letter bringing us three subscriptions, Rev. W. B. Baker, of Sherman, Miss., appends the following note: "All is moving along well here. I think that we are going to have a successful year."

Brother J. D. Ireland, of Selma, Miss., remits for the renewal of his subscription and gives us in his letter a commendatory message, for which he has our thanks. May the blessings of heaven be showered upon his pathway!

Rev. W. W. Graves, of Rolling Fork, Miss., says: "Our reception here was a right royal one. These Delta people know how to do things on a big scale. Our congregations are fine, and the outlook is very promising for a good year."

Rev. W. A. Bowlin, our pastor at Cedar Bluff, Miss., reports as follows: "My charge is in good shape. The people are hopeful and are very considerate of their pastor. I am planning and praying for advancement along all lines."

Brother J. M. Moore, of Greenwood, La., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, takes time to commend it, and express his approval of the Editor's views on the question of Methodist unification. We appreciate his kindly words.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Pleasant Hill, La., thus refers to his beginning in his new field: "We have received a royal welcome throughout our charge. Our people are continuing to remember us in a substantial way. We are expecting a fruitful year."

Through the courtesy of Messrs. Smith & Lamar, a copy of the Southern Methodist Handbook for 1917 is on our desk. It is in its usual form and contains much new matter that is of interest. It should have a wide circulation among our people. The price is 25 cents.

Rev. R. T. Nolen states that the work has started off well on the Blodgett (Miss.) charge, of which he is pastor. He is already presenting the claims of the Advocate in his new field and sending in subscriptions. He is a friend of our paper who never fails to take care of its interests.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptiosn sent in within the past few days: Rev. W. M. Sullivan, Columbia, Miss., 2; Rev. J. W. Thompson, Wesson, Miss., 3; Rev. M. L. White, Homewood, Miss., 2.

Rev. J. L. Decell, who is one of the most promising young ministers in the Mississippi Conference, has entered hopefully upon his work at Centenary Church, McComb. He has called for a list of our subscribers at that place, and will endeavor to circulate the Advocate more largely in the homes of his people.

Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, after spending some ten days in New Orleans, left for their home at Booneville, Miss., Thursday of last week. Sister Wyatt seemed to be greatly improved by the medical treatment received here. The Editor was much refreshed by his all-too brief association with these esteemed friends.

From a personal letter from Dr. I. W. Cooper we extract the following: "Leggett and Crisler have captured Brookhaven, Miss. A great year is before us. The new church in Brookhaven is a delight. It will remain as a monument to the work of our friend, Rev. J. M. Morse. Whitworth College has an enrollment of 220."

A note from Sister T. H. Morris, written from Chicago, orders the Advocate sent to Brother Morris in that city, at 910 W. 76th Street. She states that he has been very ill and that it requires all her time to see after the treatment that he is taking. We hope to have soon better news concerning this stricken servant of the Master.

Read the gratifying statement concerning "The Methodist Hospital" from the pen of Rev. H. M. Ellis, which appears on Page 5. It did not reach our office until Tuesday of this week, but such is its importance that we held things up to get it in this number of the Advocate. Now is the time for the Methodists of the two Mississippi Conferences to rally to the aid of this most worthy enterprise.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell informs us of the death of Mr. J. D. Smith, a leading and most useful member of our Church at Indianola, Miss., of which we greatly regret to hear. Brother Mitchell's notice reaches us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but will appear next week. We pray that the sorrowing ones may be in the Master's gracious keeping.

Rev. R. H. Harper, the gifted young pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans, has received 14 members since the Annual Conference. This growing congregation will probably make during the year an effort to wipe out completely the debt on its attractive house of worship. With this incumbrance out of the way, this church would likely move forward to larger things.

From the Bulletin of St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, we take the following: "On January 15 Rev. J. L. Sutton, of the Orphan Boys' Home, preached to our junior congregation. He brought a real message and held the attention of the children in an unusual way. Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, gave a talk on the same Sabbath at our evening Italian service."

Dr. J. W. Beeson has announced that Rev. J. M. Glenn, presiding elder of the Macon District of the South Georgia Conference, will conduct the spring revival at Meridian College, March 9-19. Dr. Beeson says: "We should be delighted to have any ministers or other friends who may find it convenient to do so to attend these services. We especially ask the praying people everywhere to pray for this revival."

Dr. S. A. Steel, the eloquent pastor of our First Church at Shreveport, La., says that he is growing strong by using his ax and hoe. Obviously Dr. Steel knows what is good for one who leads the life of a student, as he has long done. That pastor is wise who does not neglect to take a sufficiency of physical exercise to keep his body vigorous and healthful. Brain and brawn cannot be divorced without unhappy results.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, was in New Orleans last week and looked in on us at the Advocate office. He reported things to be progressing well in the institution of which he is the capable official head. The Methodists of Louisiana have cause to feel gratified at the record that this excellent plant is making. We know of none that we believe to be better managed.

Brother J. O. Bennett, our pastor at Jena, La., writes that the revival meeting which had been in progress at that place for some days has closed. The results were most gratifying. There were more than a hundred conversions and 29 persons united with the Methodist Church. The preaching was done by Rev. H. T. Young, Conference evangelist of the Louisiana Conference. Brother Bennett's statement concerning this meeting will be published next week.

The January Bulletin of St. Mark's Hall, this city, has reached us. It shows that the capable workers in charge of that mission are continuing to infuse life and energy into its various departments. The number of visits made was 276; and the number received was 401. Three hundred and four patients were treated at the clinic, and 356 prescriptions were filled. On Sunday, January 7, 15 members were taken into the Church, most of them coming from the Sunday school.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, our resourceful pastor at West Point, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for 9 subscriptions to the Advocate. He is serving a choice charge, and is making therein full proof of his ministry. Most of the names on his list were quite familiar to the Editor, and awakened in his heart somewhat of a feeling of homesickness to be again among the members of this flock of former years. May the blessings of the Lord be upon them and their labors for the Master!

The Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will meet in our First Church in this city, April 12-20. This will bring many of the leading women of Southern Methodism to New Orleans, and nothing possible will be left undone to make their stay here a pleasant one and to contribute to the success of their meeting. A statement concerning the arrangements that are being made for this notable gathering from the pen of Mrs. George S. Brown appears elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.

Rev. J. H. Felts, the leader of our forces in the Holly Springs (Miss.) District, is showing commendable enterprise and activity in his work. Following the Preachers' Institute and District Stewards' Meeting recently held in Water Valley, he had a thousand copies of a bulletin giving echoes of these gatherings struck off, and he is now scattering these over the territory under his supervision. Such a sowing of seed cannot fail to yield gracious results. When a presiding elder thus plans and works, things in his district are certain to go forward.

We have learned with sincere sorrow of the death of Mr. M. R. Gadberry, of Black Hawk, Miss., which occurred at his home last week, after a brief illness. He was a well known citizen of the southwest section of Carroll County and was held in esteem by all who knew him. He had been from his youth a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He left to mourn his departure a wife, a son, several daughters, and a brother and sister. We extend sympathy to these bereaved ones, and pray that the Heavenly Father may comfort and sustain them in this trying hour.

Rev. M. M. Black, Commissioner for Millsaps College, writes: "I am meeting with encouraging success in the campaign for a new dormitory. The honor of making the first subscription belongs to Rev J. L. Neill, Sunday School Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, who has pledged $100. Brother Neill is an alumnus of Millsaps College. Brother James Hand, a generous-hearted layman of Purvis, Miss., has recently subscribed $1000 to this enterprise." We are glad to have this good news from Brother Black. There are thousands in Mississippi who ought to give without delay to this deserving cause.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Drew, Miss., has lately suffered from an attack of the grippe, but has, we are happy to state, about recovered from it. He reports that he finds his work very pleasant and that his church is growing. As will be seen from his communication in this issue of the Advocate, Brother Lagrone recently celebrated his seventieth birthday. He does not at all wish to hide the calendar from sight, however, as he is still strong and quite as effective as any man in his Conference. We should like to have his record behind us and his prospect ahead of us. May he long be spared to serve and bless the Church!

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., writes: "I am sending off to the treasurers of our several boards all the benevolent assessments made upon the Fernwood charge for the current year, each one being paid in full. The pastor and presiding elder were also paid for three months at the first quarterly conference. On Sunday, January 28, Rev. J. T. Leggett, our new presiding elder, was with us for the first time this year. At the morning hour he edified and inspired our people with a strong discourse on 'The Divinity of Christ;' and at the evening service he made an earnest appeal for a general advance along all lines of work during the year, especially in the work of the Sunday school. I predict that the Sunday school cause in the Brookhaven District will take on increased interest under Brother Leggett's capable leadership."

Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, writes: "I am glad to say that I have been most kindly received where I have gone in the Hatiesburg district, and that the work has started off well and is encouraging. Despite the adverse conditions, due to the storm last July, the churches are rallying to the support of their pastors, and at no point has there been a lowering of the assessment for ministerial support. On the contrary, in most of the charges the assessments for this purpose have been increased. Lucedale, under the leadership of Brother Greenway, asked to be made a station, and this has been done. A nice sum was provided for his support. The stewards assumed responsibility for the entire budget, and they have promised to raise every dollar of the assessments. We are expecting great revivals throughout the district."

Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, sends us a card which reads as follows: "Up to this date eight quarterly conferences have been held. Some made substantial increases in the assessments for their pastors. A good proportion of the Coldwater congregation have agreed to tithe their incomes. A number of persons elsewhere in the district are also doing this. Como will give $1200 to the Methodist Hospital in Memphis; nearly $500 was raised there on quarterage at the first quarterly conference. Tyro Circuit is nearing $1000 for the Hospital. A fine spirit prevails and good work is being done throughout the district." We thank Brother Holder for this excellent postal card report. We wish that more of our presiding elders would follow his example and send us like brief summaries of what is being accomplished in their fields.

"VOCATION DAY."

The Mississippi Annual Conference set apart the fourth Sunday in February as Vocation Day. The day is to be observed as follows:

1. The annual sermon called for by the Discipline on the call to preach is to be preached.

2. The Sunday schools are requested to properly observe the day.

3. A special collection for the assistance of young men preparing for the ministry is to be taken and forwarded to Mr. W. M. Bulow, Treasurer of the Conference Board of Education.

4. The proper distribution of literature on all the questions involved in these vital matters is to be attended to. The literature will be sent free to those writing for it by the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training, Board of Education, M. E. Church, South, Atlanta, Ga.

This is the second of our Calendar Days, Hospital Day being the first ordered by the last session of the Mississippi Conference. If the order of the Conference is carried out the observance of these days will mean a great deal to the future of our Church.

W. H. LEWIS,
President Board of Education.

N. B. HARMON, Secretary.

THE PASTOR-ELECT OF CITY TEMPLE, LONDON.

The City Temple of London, after the resignation of Rev. R. J. Campbell, called Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, of the Universalist Church of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. He declined, but the City Temple renewed the call with much heartiness and urgency, and Mr. Newton has accepted.

Mr. Newton is a young man about forty years old. He comes of a most worthy and godly Southern ancestry, from whom he has inherited a fine physique and a brilliant mind. His people were Baptists, and his mother was a most refined and devout woman of literary culture. He had all the advantages of godly home training, to which influence he attributes his turning toward the ministry. He had the benefits of a sound theological training at the Baptist Seminary in Louisville, Ky. Yet after all this, he turned his back upon the faith revealed from heaven, "once delivered to the saints," and has sought the material for his religion from his own consciousness, and therefore has substituted the subjective for the objective, and mystical speculation for open evidence. Mr. Newton therefore starts into City Temple with the qualities of a modern mystic. We can only wait for the development of his course. His teachings will doubtless be derived largely from a study of biographies, and Christ will stand in the first place as a man, but never as his God. There is nothing new in the course which this brilliant and attractive young man has chosen. The literary world has ever been a cloud without rain, a promise without fulfillment. He is a wandering star which has lost its orbit. But the meteor, while giving a brilliant flash, is sure to collide, and the collisions means injury to others and its own destruction. This is not a subject for criticism, but for sorrow, as one views the wreckage of other bright lights. As one considers the brilliant but disappointing career of his predecessor, he can only hope that in answer to the prayers of his good mother, Mr. Newton may yet be led back to his true place in the divinely appointed orbit in which he may shine more and more unto the perfect day.—The Presbyterian.

I WILL NE'ER AGAIN PASS THIS WAY.

Sallie Martin Buckle.

To-day has gone, I was not kind,
But then I said, "Oh, never mind,
To-morrow when I pass this way
I'll have a pleasant word to say!

"I'll cheer a pilgrim on the road,
And help the weary bear his load
To-morrow, when I pass this way;
I only thought of self to-day."

And then a voice seemed to say:
"You ne'er again will pass this way.
For in the morn, when you awake,
There'll be another path to take."

Now, as I watch the daylight die,
Comes from my heart this bitter cry:
"I only thought of self to-day,
And ne'er again I'll pass this way!"

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known down-town druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

On Jan. 21, 1917, at 2:55 p. m., Sister ELIZA BASS left us for her home above. She was in her 80th year. She was the mother of ten children, all of whom were present at her funeral. She was the daughter of Wyatt and Matilda Mathis. She was the widow of J. J. Bass. Three of her sons are Methodist preachers—W. D. Bass, evangelist; John H. Bass, of the Memphis Conference, and Samuel Bass, a local preacher and a member of the First Methodist Church at Corinth. The funeral was held from the Bass home in Corinth, being attended hy a host of friends. Rev. D. L. Cogdell, assisted by Revs. J. E. Cunningham, J. R. James, and A. L. Davenport, conducted the services. A noble, good woman has gone from us. May the children and grandchildren follow her example as she requested!

D. L. COGDELL.

Mrs. LOUISA C. BARNWELL, the daughter of William and Sarah Fletcher, was born in the Dead Lake community on June 23, 1852, and died on December 17, 1916. She was taken sick in April, hut partly recovered from this attack and became ill in August. She suffered very much during the last three months of her life. When asked hy the writer if death would not be a relief to her, she said, "Yes; it would mean mother and heaven to me." She was a memher of the Red Hill Methodist Church for nearly 40 years, and attended services there even after she was taken with her last illness. A few days hefore her death, she was carried to the home of her hrother at McHenry, Miss., and when she died her hody was laid to rest in the cemetery there. The funeral, which took place during the Annual Conference, was conducted hy Rev. Oscar Bowen, a Baptist minister and an old friend of the family. She went to sleep twenty-six hours before death came, and on Sunday afternoon quietly and peacefully went to meet her mother, who had gone on 56 years before. She leaves one hrother and three sisters.

HER YOUNGEST SISTER.

Mrs. LOUISE R. WIER, after many weeks' illness, died at 9 o'clock on Wednesday evening, Nov. 1, 1916, at her home in Yazoo City. The Yazoo Sentinel of November 4 published a heautiful tribute to the life and character of our departed sister. From this trihute, and from information given hy her daughter, Miss Ethel Wier, we have had good help in the preparation of this brief memoir of Mrs. L. R. Wier. She was the daughter of Dr. Edwin N. Thompson and Nancy Margaret Rencher. She was horn on June 6, 1852, at Eutaw, Ala., and was married in October, 1868, to the late Dahney Stuart Wier, of Enterprise, Miss., a brother beloved of this writer. About eight years after their marriage they moved to Yazoo City, says the Sentinel, where their home had heen since, until each one passed away. Mrs. Wier possessed many excellent qualities. She was a loving mother to her children, an ideal wife to her devoted hushand, and a true friend. She was the mother of ten children, nine of whom are still living. Her daughter, Miss Ethel Wier, was in Chicago studying her chosen profession, music, during the first two weeks of her mother's illness. Returning home, she was as a ministering angel to her mother until the end came. Mrs. Bogard, the youngest daughter, with her little child, was present to help in loving care for her mother. My sister, Mrs. L. R. Wier, was a member of the Methodist Church—I know not how long; perhaps since her early years. In the early part of her sickness she said she would not "get up again," and later on she mentioned the obituary she wished written. She suffered much at times, during her illness, and was occasionally delirious. But in her lucid states of mind she was cheerful, bright, and hopeful. About ten days before she died, speaking of her intense sufferings, she expressed the hope that God would take her, rather than that she should live and suffer as she had suffered. "When I think," writes Ethel, "of how she suffered and how brave and cheerful she was, I feel that it is a sin to want her back in this world where there is so much suffering; and I know that her suffering is ended. 'We do not sorrow as those who have no hope.'" The funeral service was conducted on Thursday afternoon by her former pastor, Rev. P. D. Hardin, of the Mississippi Conference. Her body was laid to rest in the city cemetery heneath a profusion of heautiful beautiful flowers, near the sleeping dust of her beloved husband.

2. That we extend to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy, and pray that God's grace may he sufficient and that his Spirit comfort them in this sad hour.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparahle softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application douhles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf rohs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

A FRENCH VIEW.

The Temps, in France, "where wine has solved the problem," has this to say: "Untouched by the almost universal ruin, the seller of alcohol is continuing to serve out the poison which is undermining the race. Side by side with the horrors of war we suffer the horrors of alcohol. During war time undoubtedly the sole use of alcohol should be for the manufacture of explosives. Let us send this poison over to the enemy's lines in the shape of shells. We shall then save France while killing her enemies."

AFTER TWENTY-ONE YEARS.

Dear Dr. Meek: At the adjournment of the last session of the Louisiana Conference, I was appointed pastor of the Rayville charge, the name as it now stands in the minutes being "Rayville and Delhi." On December 8, 1916, my wife and I left Shreveport at 3:30 p. m. via the V. S. & P. Railroad for Rayville, a distance of 118 miles. We reached our destination about 7 p. m. and were met at the station by some of our members, two of whom came in an "auto" prepared to convey us to the parsonage, where we found the house lighted, and a fire burning, which was indeed appreciated, because of the biting cold. Just twenty-one years had passed, since at the termination of my former pastorate in the nineties. I left Rayville on December 8 and returned on December 8, twenty-one years later. When I was pastor before, we lived at Girard, the following appointments at that time constituting the circuit: Rayville, Girard, Little Creek, and Union. Many changes have taken place during this period. The town has built up wonderfully, and change is evident on every hand. Then, there was only one business house constructed of brick; now there are upwards of twenty, and the frame buildings have taken on a more substantial and permanent appearance. These material changes indicate growth and material development, and are always stimulated by enterprising people. Our little city also has electric lights and a water system, adding much to the convenience and comfort of its citizens. While these changes have taken place in material things, as great changes have also occurred in Church affairs. The church roll is very different from that of twenty one years ago. Many of the old guard have "crossed the flood" and others are in the very act of crossing. The church has advanced along many lines, but still there is room for greater advancement. One great arm of church service that has come into being since 1895 is a splendid Woman's Missionary Society. Its members have accomplished much, and are planning for greater achievements. In several ways these good women of Rayville are the "power behind the throne." Amen! During my four years' pastorate in the nineties we worshiped in the lower story of the Masonic Hall, where at least two other denominations worshiped when they had preaching. For a long while I had the field all to myself, or practically so. I came very near saying it was my privilege to do all the marrying, burying, and baptizing for this part of the country. But the last, I did not do for every church. I buried many and performed twenty-four marriage ceremonies during my stay. We now have a reasonably comfortable church, and a good, roomy parsonage, with an abundance of fine land, on which I hope to grow some fine vegetables. This piece of land looks good to me as for the last two years my garden plot has been very much "circumscribed." If our membership grows with the growth of the town within the next few years, we shall have to enlarge or rebuild the church. The people are exceedingly kind to us and seem to appreciate our presence among them, and I assure you that we appreciate the privilege of serving them. We are expecting a successful year.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

OVER 800% PROFIT

Looks unreasonable; but a fact nevertheless.

Mr. Smith Holloway, Bassfield, Miss., in a bad season like 1915 raised 2 bales to the acre by using Meridian Fertilizer where he had previously raised only a half bale to the acre without fertilizer. He used the famous Meridian Home Mixture.

Statement of profit from the use of our fertilizers.

Yield without Meridian Fertilizer	934-lbs. Lint
Yield with Meridian Fertilizer	3,150-lbs. Lint
Gain from use of our Fertilizer	2,207-lbs. Lint

This was sold at 12c a pound making a profit of $264.84 from the use of $27.00 worth of fertilizer. This leaves the seed to take care of the picking and leaves a net profit of $237.84 on the fertilizer investment which is over 800 per cent profit.

It costs nearly as much to raise a poor crop as it does to raise a good crop. Your land if properly fertilized will produce vastly more than it produces without fertilization.

The best farmers in the Gulf States know that Meridian Fertilizers give the best results, because they are best suited to the crops in this section. One-fourth of all the fertilizers used in the territory in which we operate is the Red Bag kind.

"Look for the RED BAG on back of every sack."

LOUISIANA NOTES.

Nearly everywhere I go I am asked, "Why have a Wesley Bible Class Federation?" The best way to answer that question is to give a comparative statement from Mr. J. M. Way, Field Secretary for the Atlantic Division. There are ten Conferences in this division, as follows: North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Baltimore, Upper South Carolina, North Georgia, Western Virginia, South Georgia, Western North Carolina, and Virginia. These Conferences have a total of 3124 Wesley Bible Classes, and the three Conferences having formed Conference Federations, viz., South Carolina, North Carolina, and Florida, have 1698 of the 3124 in the ten Conferences; or, in other words, the three Federations have 54 per cent of the organized classes in the TEN CONFERENCES.

Louisiana has at least 10,000 Methodists who are old enough, and any one of whom is competent enough, to do some kind of work for Jesus. The General Sunday School Board and the General Conference have made splendid provision for enlisting our Methodists of workable age through Sunday school legislation. It is not for us to make legislation; it is simply up to us (using the language of the street) to get our people who are old enough and good enough, and if not good enough to interest them in getting good enough, to get busy in backing up the work of the pastor, Sunday school officers, and teachers, and other official boards of the Church in the work, which is only partly done because of the fact that so many are idle who ought to be actively at work. This matter of enlisting many who are idle to-day will get a tremendous "boost" in the Wesley Bible Class Federation, which is set for March 14, 15, and 16 in Alexandria, La. The speakers have been secured, and we are told by those who have participated in these Federations in other Conferences that Louisiana has one of the strongest programs from the standpoint of speakers that has been gotten together so far. The date is certainly ideal, and the location is in the center of the State, giving the delegates as a whole the minimum of mileage to reach the Federation from all sections of the State.

If your class is organized, be sure to be here and get more light; if it is not organized, come on and get a vision; then go home and put the class on the map by organizing and getting into the State-wide plan that we are perfecting for the Louisiana Bible Classes. If you think no good can come from a Federation, "Come and see." We want you in Alexandria, La., on this occasion and you will be the loser, your Sunday school will be the loser, your community will be the loser, if it is possible for you to be present and hear these strong men of God discuss matters which pertain to the advancement of his Kingdom and you fail to be here.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SISTERHOOD.

A special meeting of the Sisterhood was held in the Galloway Memorial Church in the city of Jackson during the late session of the Mississippi Conference, the kind invitation of the members of that congregation to all the ministers' wives of the Conference to be their guests during the session having brought together an unusual number of them. On the afternoon of December 16, the body assembled in the Sunday school room of the church with Mrs. C. B. Galloway in the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. B. W. Lewis, of Utica. Mrs. Galloway then gave an inspiring talk on the life of the preacher's wife drawn from her own experience, and an explanation of the organization, its history and object, was given in entertaining manner by Mrs. W. H. LaPrade. A constitution prepared by Mrs. T. B. Holloman was then offered for adoption as follows: At a meeting of a number of preachers' wives of the Mississippi Conference, held in the auditorium of the Capitol Street Church, of Jackson, Miss., on May 1, 1912, it was resolved to organize an association to be known as the Mississippi Conference Sisterhood:

Section 1. The obect of this organization shall be the cultivation of a better acquaintance, a closer companionship, and greater helpfulness among the wives of the preachers of this Conference.

Section 2. All wives and widows of preachers shall be entitled to membership.

Section 3. The officers shall be a Chairman, a Vice Chairman, and a Secretary-Treasurer.

Section 4. There shall be an annual meeting of the Society, subject to the call of the chairman.

Section 5. Whenever two or more members shall meet during the year they may hold an ad interim meeting, and shall send a report of said meeting to the Secretary.

After minor amendments, the proposed constitution was adopted. A policy for 1917 prepared by a committee, of which Mrs. B. F. Lewis was chairman and Mrs. W. W. Hopper was secretary, was offered and adopted, and a copy ordered sent to each pastor's wife in the Conference.

The following officers were elected to serve for the year 1917: Chairman, Mrs. C. B. Galloway; Vice Chairman, Mrs. T. B. Holloman; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. B. W. Lewis.

The Secretary was instructed to send a brief of the minutes of this meeting, including the constitution, to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

The meeting adjourned, to meet at the call of the Chairman.

Mrs. T. B. HOLLOMAN,
Secretary.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER!

It's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drugstore but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Don't Cough Until Weak

Foley's Honey and Tar

HELPS COUGHS QUICKLY

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR takes right hold of an obstinate cough and gives quick relief.

It puts a healing coating on the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages. It stops the tickling, loosens and raises phlegm easily. It is just splendid for bronchial and la grippe coughs and tight, wheezy breathing.

Mrs. W. S. Bailey, Lancaster, Ky., coughed almost continuously day and night, until she took Foley's Honey and Tar. After taking half a bottle, her cough began to slow up, and seven bottles entirely cured her cough.

In the Treatment of Tuberculosis remember that first aid to relief is found in abundance of fresh air—day and night—freedom from over-exertion and pure food.

Attention to these matters should do much to arrest the progress of he malady, but in many cases there is need for extra help. Where Nature has to work with a weakened body her power is limited.

Under such circumstances, try Eckman's Alterative, which has been used with large benefit by many sufferers. In numerous cases it has helped to bring about recovery. Also it has been successful in treating asthma and bronchial troubles.

And since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, its use is not attended with danger. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

The owner of a large plantation in Mississippi, where the fine figs grow, is giving away a few five-acre tracts. The only condition is that figs be planted. "In general, prosperity does not promote piety, but in some cases it does. Here and there are men and women whose delight is in making money for the furtherance of the gospel. The more they make the more they give and the happier they become. There are others, however, who strive to make money and when they succeed they consume it on their own lusts. Their prosperity is their peril."

Laugh When People Step On Your Feet

Try this yourself then pass it along to others.
It works!

Ouch! ? ! ? ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn stops soreness at once, and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callous from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels.

NOTICE.

Wednesday, February 21, 1917, has been set apart by the Council of Women for Home Missions for observance as a day for Special Prayer for Home Missions. All of the denominations affiliated with the Council are requested to observe this season of prayer for the work, deaconesses, and home missionaries of this country. It will be a day when women's missionary societies all over the United States will be praying that this country may be God's country.

A special program has been prepared, so that each society may follow the same line of study and supplication. Order this program from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Where practicable it is suggested that the societies of the various churches and denominations hold this season of prayer together. Let all our societies bring our home mission problems and needs before our Father in united supplication.

No collections are to be taken—the day is to be spent in the study of our needs and in supplication.

Don't Forget: February 21, Day of Prayer for Home Missions. Order program from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

REPORT OF THE BILOXI WESLEY HOUSE FOR 1916.

The Master has blessed us throughout our work; Christ has been our door of many, many blessings—our light along the pathway of 1916.

Miss Joana Lueth came to be with us on September 1. Mrs. Elizabeth Pettis opened the Day Nursery on September 4. We did not resume class work until October 1. There were some changes made here. We had not planned to reopen the night school, but the demand was so great that Miss Lueth opened the school two nights a week. She has an enrollment of 34. The nursery has not been as large in numbers this year as last. This is due to the lack of work. Since September we have had 17. Our average attendance for the entire year is 28.

The kindergarten has increased until our circle takes in half of the chapel space. There are from 30 to 40 bright and happy little ones every day. There were 54 happy little ones gathered around our kindergarten Christmas tree, and great was their joy when they took a present home for mother and held in the other hand a box of candy. It was really Christmas. They sang and talked of the star and Jesus, and carried the message to loved ones.

The sewing class of older girls numbers ten. It would give you the greatest pleasure to see them cutting, basting, and sewing on the machine—each a little mother to sew for brothers and sisters in the home.

The Sunday school has an enrollment of 123. Our highest attendance was 105. There are 16 in the Bible class, 40 on the Cradle Roll; and from 20 to 30 attending the Beginners' class. This year, adult and child have learned the books of the Bible, each one working with equal zest and enthusiasm.

Our Sunday evening services are conducted by the preacher in charge. We have had special song services by a choir made up of the young people of the community. The attendance of the people is splendid; they are so interested in the gospel message and enjoy the singing of the songs of praise. It seems to be an incentive to a higher life and coming closer to the Master. On Sunday afternoon the young people gather in our chapel to sing the gospel songs. Here 20 young people sing and hear a message which they otherwise perhaps would never hear in any other way. They never tire and always regret when the time comes to close.

Our missionary society has done a splendid work. We are neither a "Home" nor a "Foreign" missionary society. We are missionary, because one of our women said, "We want a part in sending the gospel to both mission fields." We observed the "Week of Prayer" and carried out the program prepared by the Council. We had services every night, for our people had to work during the day. We scarcely had room for the people, and the interest was inspiring. Our offering was $13.20. Each woman earned her Easter offering to buy song books for our chapel, the amount raised being $20. Our study class this year will take up "Studies in the Gospel of St. John."

The club and class work has "measured up" valiantly. We are so proud of our 34 pupils in the night school; so happy to see the seed of ambition sprouting—one pupil even bringing her nickels to us to save in order that she may go to one of our Church schools next year.

In the sewing school we have enrolled 73 little girls, with 54 in average attendance. The work is carefully graded and the "E's" will be exhibited. So there is a great deal of expectancy among the lively youngsters. They each remembered "mother" at Christmas time with a little gift made by their own little fingers; and when it came to writing a love letter to mamma—well, it was great! They were enough to warm any tired woman's heart.

The Girls' Worth While Club has for its aim "development for the purpose of service." We have a class in physical culture; also a "handy" class, in making new or remodeling old garments or hats. Besides our good times, we have talks on such subjects as will help us grow into the women we want to be—beauty, simplicity, common sense, not forgetting the crowning grace, spirituality. It means much to the worker who is so privileged as to get next to the heart of these dear girls.

A vote of thanks is due the missionary societies who sent the boxes for our Supply Store. Garments were sold or given to about 75 women and their families, the money being used as a relief fund. We purchased a fine new blackboard for our night school with supply store money. Many families are touched through this little, insignicant department of "Old Clothes."

There have been about 1000 people brought into the camps this year. Point Cadet is truly cosmopolitan in its many nationalities. There has been a great lack of work due to the destroying of the oysters in the July storm. Consequently there has been a great deal of suffering and sickness. Wesley House has been a haven for the ones with wounds and ills. Here they receive temporary relief and then are sent either to a physician or a hospital.

God has blessed us, and as we continue to grow we can look back and see the hand of the Master throughout the way, leading us in the paths which are the right paths—the way of Jesus Christ our Lord.

Miss MARY L. HASLER, Head Resident.
Miss JOANA LUETH, Deaconess.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. Such warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

South Manafield, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have made two rounds and already see some improvement in the manner in which the work of this charge is being carried forward. The Sunday schools at both places are growing in attendance in spite of bad weather. Our assistant has organized a Junior League with thirty members. I find that there is work to do. The Board of Stewards of the First Church has supplomented our salary by $150, as usual. The College has a full attendance and is doing good work. Brother Bobbitt is in high favor. Our presiding elder is on the move and tugs" with the boys. We will begin soon on a church building at Naborton. —F. J. McCoy.

Rienzi, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Well, we have moved and gotten down to hard work at last. Mrs. Love, my wife, was forced to go to a hospital on November 15 last. She had to undergo a very serious operation and was compelled to remain there until December 20. Her former excellent health is fast returning now. You can not realize how thankful we all are for this great blessing. God's tender mercy has helped us and we can say, "Praise the Lord for his blessings," for we not only feel but know to our own satisfaction that God has watched over us. We have been hindered in our work a good deal this year on account of sickness and bad weather, but we are planning to go forward from now on and to put forth our very best efforts. The year promises to be one of progress, though no one can tell what the future has in store. We are hoping and praying for a great year, but as this is a new charge, formed from other charges, it is going to be some little time before everything is moving along as well as we could wish. The greater part of the field is largely undeveloped. Nevertheless, there are great possibilities here for the cause of our Church and Christ. All that the people need is a great awakening along some lines.—G. B. Love, P. C.

JOY OF DOING.

The joy of living is in the joy of doing. We do not express ourselves in words but in deeds. Words are mindless if either the speaker or the hearer have no action or reaction to the meaning for which the word is a sign. So it is with any other sign. Appearances are nothing unless the meaning is mutual and true to both lives.—C. M. S.

If You Suffer From Catarrh

don't make the fatal mistake of regarding it as a trifling matter. Authorities agree that Catarrh is an infection of the blood. Consequently, sprays, salves and lotions can afford only temporary relief, because they do not reach the source of the disease,—the blood. When you depend on these temporary remedies alone your case is likely to grow steadily worse until it becomes chronic and possibly affects the lungs.

But even if the infection does not go this far, the continuous dripping of mucous in the throat, the constant spitting and hawking and evil odor of the breath will not only cause misery to you, but will make your presence obnoxious to others. S. S. S., which has been the standard blood medicine for fifty years, will relieve your catarrh, because it will purify your blood and relieve it of the accumulated poisons. S. S. S. contains no mineral or habit-forming drugs. S. S. S. is on sale at all druggists and the advice of our medical department is at your disposal, free of charge. The New Method

BY L. W. BOWER, M. D.)

Backache of any kind is often caused by kidney disorder, which means that the kidneys are not working properly Poisonous matter and uric acid accumulate within the body in great abundance over-working the sick kidneys, hence the congestion of blood causes backache In the same manner as a similar congestion in the head causes headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish, irritable, have spots appearing before the eyes, bags under the lids, and lack ambition to do things.

The latest and most effective means of overcoming this trouble, is to eat sparingly of meat, drink plenty water between meals and take a single Anuric tablet before each meal for a while.

Simply ask your favorite druggist for Anuric. If you have lumbago, rheumatism, gout, dropsy, begin immediately with this novel treatment.

LOSS OF POWER and vital force follow loss of flesh, or emaciation. These come from impoverished blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery enriches the blood, stops the waste of strength and tissue, and builds up healthy flesh Thin, pale, puny and scrofulous children are made plump, rosy and robust by the "Discovery." They like it too.

In recovering from "Grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other wasting diseases, it speedily and surely invigorates and builds up the whole system. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, rouses every organ into natural action, and brings back health and strength.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy.

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT STEWARDS' MEETING.

Pursuant to the call of the presiding elder, the district stewards of the Port Gibson District, Mississippi Annual Conference, met in the Port Gibson Female College parlor on Tuesday morning, January 16, 1917. Five district stewards and thirteen pastors were present. The southern part of the district was well represented, but only one preacher came from the northern part of the district. The rest were "snow-bound," ice-bound, or mud-bound. The angel of the Crawford Street Methodist Church in Vicksburg reported by telephone that no one not accustomed to skating could travel the streets of the "Hill City" that day without being in danger of any kind of accident ranging from a sprained ankle to a broken neck. The weather was very inclement, and the streets and roads were very slippery; so I think it was very commendable indeed in those who came to brave the cold, mud, and ice, and no censure should attach to the action of those who stayed at home. The presiding elder, Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, true to his usual custom, had drafted a working plan to present to the stewards, which simplified and expedited matters a good deal. The presiding elder's salary was fixed at $2200. This and the assessments ordered by the Annual Conference were ordered to be distributed among the several charges of the district on the percentage basis. Hon. M. M. Satterfield, the efficient District Lay Leader, was present, and addressed the meeting on "Lay Activities." At twelve o'clock luncheon, provided for by the ladies, was served in the College dining-room, after which the preachers and stewards met in conference again to discuss plans for the work of the year.

HEADACHES AND OTHER ACHES AND PAINS.

Pain keeps the thoughts of the sufferer continuously on the ailment that is that causing the pain, and in this way it acts to retard recovery.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are their own best advertisers. The wonderful degree of success that they have met with for more than 25 years has been entirely due to their efficiency.

Users are willing to concede that these pills do all that is claimed for them. That is, they promptly relieve headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatic pains, monthly pains, and almost every other kind of ache or pain and do this without any bad after-effects.

And if the sufferer finds rest from the pain that weakens the mind and harrasses the nerves pending treatment for the cause of the pain he certainly should be satisfied.

Furthermore, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do not constipate, do not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects when taken as directed.

If you suffer from any ache or pain you will not be out any money to try these pills. Go to your druggist and purchase one box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Use them as directed and if the results are not satisfactory return the empty package to the druggist and he will immediately return you your money. No questions will be asked. You are the judge of the merits of these pills. Could anything be fairer than this?

Former U. S. Senator Mason

Pioneer in Pure Food and Drugs Legislation, Father of Rural Free Delivery Systen

Takes Nuxated Iron

to obtain renewed strength, power and endurance after the hardest fought political campaign of his life in which he was elected Congressman from the State of Illinois. The results he obtained from taking Nuxated Iron were so surprising that

SENATOR MASON NOW SAYS

Nuxated Iron should be made known to every nervous, run down, anaemic man, woman and child.

Opinion of Dr. Howard James, late of United States Public Health Service who has prescribed and thoroughly tested Nuxated Iron in his own private practice.

WHAT SENATOR MASON SAYS:

"I have often said I would never recommend medicine of any kind. I believe that the doctor's place. However, after the hardest political campaign of my life, without a chance for a vacation, I had been starting to court every morning with that horrible tired feeling one cannot describe. I was advised to try Nuxated Iron. As a pioneer in the pure food and drug legislation, I was at first loath to try an advertised remedy, but after advising with one of my medical friends, I gave it a test. The results have been so beneficial in my own case I made up my mind to let my friends know about it, and you are at liberty to publish this statement if you so desire. I am now sixty-five years of age, and I feel that a remedy which will build up the strength and increase the power of endurance of a man of my age should be known to every nervous, run-down anemic man, woman and child."

Senator Mason's statement in regard to Nuxated Iron was shown to several physicians who were requested to give their opinions thereon.

Dr. Howard James, late of the United States Public Health Service, said:

"Senator Mason is to be commended on handing out this statement on Nuxated Iron for public print. There are thousands of men and women who need a strength and blood-builder, but do not know what to take. There is nothing like organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to give increased strength, snap, vigor, and staying power. It enriches the blood, brings roses to the cheeks of women and is an unfailing source of renewed vitality, endurance and power for men who burn up too rapidly their nervous energy in the strenuous strain of the great business competition of the day!"

Dr. King, a New York physician and author, said: "I heartily endorse Senator Mason's statement in regard to Nuxated Iron. There can be no vigorous iron men without iron. Pallor means anemia. Anemia means iron deficiency. The akin of anemic men and women is pale; the flesh flabby; the muscles lack tone; the brain fags and the memory fails and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy.

In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn-meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked are responsible for another grave iron loss.

Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron—Nuxated Iron—just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. Saner, a Boston physician who has studied abroad in great European Medical Institutions said: "Senator Mason is right. As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders.

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking organic iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next, take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said:

"I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is the most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

From the Congressional Directory published by the United States Government—"Wm. E. Mason, Senator from Illinois was elected to the 50th Congress in 1887, to the 51st Congress in 1891—defeated for the 52nd Congress in 1892—Elected Senator to the 55th Congress 1897 to 1903."

Senator Mason is now Congressman-Elect from the State of Illinois.

Senator Mason's championship of Pure Food and Drugs legislation, his fight for the rural free delivery system, and his strong advocacy of all bills favoring labor and the rights of the masses as against trusts and combines, made him a national figure at Washington and endeared him to the hearts of the working man and the great masses of people throughout the United States. Senator Mason has the distinction of being one of the really big men of the nation. His strong endorsement of Nuxated Iron must convince any intelligent thinking reader that it must be a preparation of very great merit and one which the Senator feels is bound to be of great value to the masses of people everywhere, otherwise he could not afford to lend his name to it especially after his strong advocacy of pure food and drugs legislation.

Since Nuxated Iron has obtained such an enormous sale—over three million people using it annually—other iron preparations are often recommended as a substitute for it. The reader should remember that there is a vast difference between ordinary metallic iron and the organic iron contained in Nuxated Iron, therefore always insist on having Nuxated Iron as recommended by Dr. Howard James, late of the United States Public Health Service; Dr. Schuyler C. Jacques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, and other physicians. In this connection Dr Howard Jamessays:

"Iron to be of the slightest value to the human system must be in a combination which may be easily assimilated. In the case of metallic salts of iron, iron acetate, etc., it is very doubtful if sufficient actual iron can be taken up and incorporated into the blood to be of any service, especially in view of the disadvantages entailed by its corrosive action upon the stomach and the damaging effect upon the dental enamel. When, however, we deal with iron in organic combination, such for instance as albuminate, or, better still, Nuxated Iron, a far different story is told. We will observe no destructive action upon the teeth; no corrosive effect upon the stomach. The iron is readily assimilated into the blood and quickly makes its presence felt in increased vigor, snap and staying power."

DR. BLAKE ON METHODIST UNIFICATION.

In a public address delivered in Boston, Mass., a few days ago, the Rev. Edgar Blake, D.D., who is connected with the Sunday School Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and who is a member of the Joint Commission on Unification, discussed at great length the various problems growing out of the movement to unite in one ecclesiastical organization the two episcopal Methodisms of the United States. This extended utterance was published in full in Zion's Herald of January 31, covering four and a half pages of that journal. Emanating from Dr. Blake, who is said to be one of the most brotherly and conservative Northern men on the Commission, this deliverance is of more than usual interest, and, but for its extreme length, we should be glad to reproduce it in its entirety. Beiug unable, however, to do this, it is our purpose in this and the next issue of the Advocate to consider to some extent what this distinguished Northern leader conceives to be the chief difficulties in the way of the consummation of the effort now going on to unite the Church, North, and the Church, South. Thero are, as every thinking Methodist knows, a number of obstacles to be removed; but the two that are generally conceded to be the most perplexing are the number and arrangement of the Regional Conferences and the status of the Negroes in the proposed reorganized Church. Reversing Dr. Blake's order of dealing with these two phases of the unification problem, we will first note what he has to say concerning the latter, leaving his statements concerning the former for examination next week.

After pronouncing the question as to what to do with the Negroes the most difficult thing to be determined in the union negotiations, Dr. Blake proceeds to set forth and discuss the several suggestions pertaining to it that have been made. He argues against the position of the Church, South, that the Negroes should be placed in a separate Church, holding fraternal relations with the reorganized Church, but frankly concedes that there are reasons that must be reckoned with why it would hardly be possible to place the colored brethren in a Regional Conference, with full representation in the General Conference; and, following this, he proceeds to unfold what he terms a possible solution of the problem. He says:

"The logic of the situation would seem to be that the Negro should be organized into a racial Regional Conference, with the largest possible control of the affairs of his own jurisdiction and with a limited representation in the General Conference on the same basis as other missionary jurisdictions.

"But, after all, the question is not, What is the logic of the situation? but, What is best for the Negro himself? What will secure for him the largest measure of free initiative and the fullest opportunity for self-development, for no race can come to its best except by the free use of its own powers? What will secure for the Negro the largest measure of sympathy and support for his efforts and enterprises? Whatever will contribute most to the Negro's own future—determine those things and your procedure is determined for you. They will fix his rightful place in the Church.

"A Solution.

"Personally, I am of the opinion that no group of men ever had a finer opportunity to do a great thing for themselves, for others and for the kingdom of Christ than has our colored constituency. Suppose they should say, 'We recognize the embarrassment in the way of the union of the two Methodisms and we are willing to do our part to relieve it. We do not want to leave the Church. We want to remain a part of it. But, brethren, give us a Regional Conference of our own, with the same powers as other Regional Conferences. Let us elect our own Bishops and control our own local affairs as other Regional Conferences do. Give us a representation upon the connectional boards and societies of the Church, safeguard our powers and privileges by constitutional provision and we will not ask to sit in your General Conference to legislate for you.'

"With such a declaration the greatest obstacle to union would vanish at once. Inside of a day the two commissions could agree on other fundamental issues and the reunion of Methodism would be assured.

"Both Churches would rise up and say, 'Blessed.' They would give the Negro sympathy and a support that he has never had. Six million of white folks would put themselves behind his enterprises. There would be an outpouring of money for his schools, his churches and his ministry such as he has never known. A new day would dawn in racial co-operation and it would be the brightest and best day that the Negro has known since his birth of freedom. On the other hand, should unification fail because of the Negro, the effect upon him and his interests will be most unfortunate."

Dr. Blake is certainly to be commended for the admirable spirit shown in the foregoing paragraphs, and, indeed, for that matter, throughout his whole address. He evinces a recognition of the vexing race problem, as it is viewed from the Southern standpoint, such as is by no means common to men reared and living in the North. But candor compels us to say that the Doctor has, in our opinion, fallen far short of providing a solution for this perplexing feature of the unification problem. We will not presume to speak for the Church, North, though we have our notion as to how his suggestions are likely to be received by Northern Methodists generally; but, as we see it, the Church, South, could not at all afford to agree to his proposals, for the following reasons:

1. His plan would leave the Negroes now in the Methodist Episcopal Church IN the reorganized Church, grouping them "in a Regional Conference with the same powers as other Regional Conferences," except as to representation in the General Conference. This would be an almost complete surrender of the historic position that has been held by our Church—a position thoroughly approved by a majority of the Southern people and which is in accord with that of the Southern Baptist Church, the other great denomination in the South.

2. It would give them "representation upon the connectional boards and societies of the Church," safeguarded by constitutional provisions. As is well known, some of these boards, as that of Missions, for instance, exercise very large powers. If Southern men are not willing to sit with colored delegates in a General Conference, they would not be apt to be any more inclined to do so in the great administrative bodies of the Church, which would wield a vast influence. The principle of social equality involved is precisely the same in both cases. Let it be noted that Dr. Blake would give the colored brethren the same legal rights on these boards as the whites, and presumably they would participate in all their deliberations—in matters pertaining to the white Regional Conferences as well as their own—and possibly hold the balance of power in them.

3. Having gathered the Negroes in the Northern Church into a Regional Conference, Dr. Blake apparently would have the reunited Church to expend vast sums of money upon them. Such an arrangement Southern Methodists could not agree to with the Colored Methodist Church, which they set off and to which they are under special obligations, left out in the cold. Dr. Blake does not say one word about this Church; and even if it should be suggested that it, too, should be brought into the proposed colored Regional Conference, another grave question arises—for who knows whether the members of that Church would be willing thus to sacrifice its autonomy and identity?

4. Under Dr. Blake's scheme for white Regional Conferences (which it is our purpose to discuss next week), this arrangement for the colored Methodists on the various boards would likely insure a form of instruction for them typed by the North—a propaganda as to their rights and privileges which would be at war with the State governments and social order of the South. This, in reality, is the most serious danger in having the Church, South, to unite with the Church, North. While the teaching now being done among the Negroes by the Methodist Episcopal Church is of this character, its sphere of operation in the South is at present too restricted for it to amount to much; but to bring a large percentage of the colored population of the Southern States under such tuition—to open our pulpits and Conference platforms to such a preachment, in addition to the bureau and secretarial work that such a plan would open the way for—would in all probability lead to serious consequences in the course of a few decades. It is not simply the maintenance of white supremacy for which we are concerned; the safety of the black population of this section is quite as much involved. The welfare of the Negro in the Southern States depends absolutely upon his complete renunciation of every hope of social intermingling with the white people and upon his keeping out of politics. Any influence that would lead him in a direction contrary to this is but luring him into trouble. If the North should kindle such aspirations in his breast, and he should ever attempt their realization, she would be utterly unable to protect him in the tragedies that would follow. If the Northern

MY FAITH.

By "Subscriber."

Some day—I know not how nor when—
The time will come when I must say
"Farewell" to all below; and then
My mortal frame shall pass away;
My spirit, too, will take its flight,
And soar beyond to a world unknown—
Either to endless day or night,
To heavenly rest or hell's dark gloom.

But this I know: if I but will
To choose the way that God doth make,
His promises He will fulfill,
Nor ere will He my soul forsake;
And as He lengthens out my days,
He strength will give for all my needs
And fill my heart with love and praise,
And keep me from unrighteous deeds.

Then help me, Lord, each fleeting hour
To trust in Thee, and Thee alone,
For grace, and strength and light and pow'r
To lead me safely to Thy throne;
And, as I there behold Thy face,
Naught of merit, Lord, would I claim,
But say a sinner saved by grace—
"Redeemed by the blood of the Lamb."

FOR YOU.

All that He endured was for the love of your soul: for you he left heaven, for you he lived, for you he died. One motive, and one alone, will explain the unsparing self-sacrifice of his passion. He is the victim of his own love; he has given that than which he can give nothing more—himself.—S. W. Skeffington.

THE HELP NEEDED.

How often it is difficult to be wisely charitable, to do good without multiplying the sources of evil. To give alms is nothing unless you give thought also. It is written, not "blessed is he that feedeth the poor," but "Blessed is he that considereth the poor." A little thought and a little kindness are often worth more than a great deal of money.—Ruskin.

WILL YOU BE AMONG THEM?

"Then shall the King say unto them on His right hand." What will he say? "Come." They are to be welcomed into an unspeakable intimacy with the unveiled Lord in His glory. "Come, ye blessed." They are to share the inconceivable blessedness of Christ and to find their delight in the river of pleasures. "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom." They are to inherit the kingdom, because they are kings and queens; they are endowed with radiant royalty of character; they are regal in the power of their affections, and regal, too, in the power of the purity with which they can see God. "He hath made them kings and priests unto God."—The London Christian World.

SALVATION BECOMES INCREASINGLY DIFFICULT.

Nothing is more certain than that we are moving toward fixedness of character. In the days of childhood it is not difficult to turn the stream of life. The child mind is easily influenced. The child himself finds it as easy, or nearly so, to go one way as it is the other. But with advancing years all this is changed. The young man entering upon the activities of mature years does not change his thoughts and purposes so easily as he did in childhood, and in mature years a change is still more difficult. In old age it is very rare that even the gospel changes character. We do not question the power of Christ to do so, but there is a lack of flexibility in the man that makes it unusual. The point is reached somewhere after which no change takes place.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

Freedom is not the right to do as you please, but the liberty to do as you ought.—George Eliot.

ST. PAUL AS A ROMAN CITIZEN.

Dear Doctor Meek: On one occasion when St. Paul was arrested in the City of Jerusalem he turned to the centurion and asked him if it was lawful to scourge a man who was a Roman and uncondemned. The centurion said to the chief captain, "Take care what thou doest, for the man is a Roman. The chief captain came and said unto Paul, "Tell me, art thou a Roman?" He said, "Yea." The captain said, "With a great sum obtained I this freedom;" and Paul said, "But I was born free."

It is an interesting subject indeed to carry this back into classic history and find just what it was to be a Roman citizen—to learn something of all the privileges of a free-born Roman citizen. There were three ways to become a Roman citizen: (1) to be born free; (2) to have the right bestowed as a reward for service rendered to the government; (3) by paying a large sum into the public treasury. The first was probably the most honorable way and carried with it all the rights and privileges without reserve.

What was implied by being free-born? It came about in this way: The heads of the ancient gens at Rome who constituted the Senate were called 'Patres,' or fathers. All the members of these were called 'Patricians.' These 'Patricians' formed the hereditary nobility of the earlier Roman State. They alone possessed the free rights and privileges of Roman citizenship. Whether the father, grandfather, or great-grandfather of Saul of Tarsus was a Roman Patrician is a question we can not answer, but that Saul of Tarsus was of noble lineage no one can doubt—otherwise he could not have been free-born.

The rights of a Roman citizen were divided, first, into private rights and, second, into public, or political, rights. The chief private rights were two, namely, the right of trade, Jus Commercii, and the right of marriage, Jus Connubii. The right of trade or commerce was the right to acquire and hold and bequeathe property, both personal and real. According to the forms of the Roman law, the right of marriage was the right of contracting a free and religious marriage. Such marriages could take place in early Rome only between Patricians. This right and privilege St. Paul never enjoyed. All the rest he did. The chief public, or political, rights of a Roman citizen were the right of voting in public assemblies, Jus Suffragii, the right of holding office, Jus Honorum, and the right of appeal from a lower to a higher court, Jus Prorocationis. These rights taken together constituted the most highly valued rights and prerogatives of a Roman citizen. Saul of Tarsus had the right of trade. He was a tentmaker, which trade was no doubt very profitable to him all through life. When he was an old man he spoke of how he labored at his trade that he might not only support himself, but contribute to the support of the less fortunate. We next find Saul of Tarsus exercising the privilege of a Roman citizen in casting his vote in the City of Jerusalem to inflict capital punishment upon Stephen and other Christian martyrs. We next find him exercising the privileges of Roman citizenship, filling the office of high sheriff, which office devolved upon him the task of stamping from the face of the earth the name of Jesus Christ. This probably was the most miserable failure Saul of Tarsus ever made. This was one time that he undertook the impossible. The combined powers of Romanism and Judaism were powerless to do that. Once, and only once, did the Roman citizenship of Saul of Tarsus fail him after he had made a faithful effort. But, after all, probably he was not to blame for his failure.

The next and last time we find him exercising the privileges of Roman citizenship was long years after he had ceased to be Saul of Tarsus and was known throughout the world as the Apostle Paul to the Gentiles. The occurrence is recorded in the 25th chapter of The Acts. He appealed from a lower to a higher court. There was just one other privilege of a Roman citizen that came to him at his last moment on earth. He died by decapitation and not by any lingering torture. Nero was an awful tyrant. He delighted in human punishment; but he could not inflict upon St. Paul anything which would cause him to linger one moment in bodily pain. So far as I know, St. Paul was the only Apostle of Jesus who enjoyed the full privileges of Roman citizenship. Christ himself did not have such privileges, otherwise he could not have been pinioned upon a Roman cross for three hours.

Buena Vista, Miss.

TO MY PREACHER.

By a Twicer.

I am what Gladstone called a "twicer." That is, I attend public worship both morning and evening. Whatever you preach and however, I shall be there as a matter of principle and privilege. That is a duty—unless deharred by a higher duty—I owe to you, to Christ and to the community. But you have certain duties to me. I cannot attend any other church but yours, for it is also mine. For hetter or for worse you have me for that hour. A great preacher is over the way, but my duty lies with my own church and to stand by my own preacher. It is you or nobody. It is an hour filled with inspiration, instruction, uplift, with larger views and noble thoughts, or it is not. If it is not, you have robbed me of my hour. The singing was a blessing, the prayer helped me, the Scripture was the bread of life, but hymn, prayer and Bible I could have had in my own home. But if your sermon was a failure there is no reparation, no compensation. Therefore a word to you.

You will agree with me that there is a great deal of poor preaching. In fact, it is a wonder to me that people attend church as well as they do. The loyalty of the dear saints who go faithfully Sunday after Sunday all their lifetime, who almost never hear a sermon such as the preacher ought to give, is as noble as it is pathetic. What is, then, the common fault of sermons?

First, their sameness. That is, the sermons which any one man gives are too much alike, and they are also too much like the sermons which other preachers give. Second, they are commonplace. They lack freshness and originality. Third, they are tame. They have no clarion message, no lighting up with heavenly fire, no invigorating challenge to the conscience. Fourth, they are timid. The preacher is afraid of his gospel, or of his hearers, or of his popularity. He stands not as a fearless prophet of God, but as a conventional filler of his hour. Fifth, they are uninforming. While he is not a schoolmaster the preacher is a teacher, and every hearer should go away knowing much more than when he came. These are common faults of the average sermon, though there are others.

Your sermons show you are not an earnest student of the Bible. That is an inexcusable fault. I have not time to study the Bible—you have. To that you are called and you should show me not what the Bible says, but what it means and explain it to me in a large, living and fruitful way. I expect you to throw light on it from philology, archaeology, exploration, human experience, and of course from the books of its scientific expounders. If you are not an expert in the Bible, or at least if you do not toil day and night to make yourself an expert, you are cheating your people and should be ashamed to look them in the face. Then I am misled by contrary voices and your sermons give me no light. My Baptist neighbor told me I did wrong to have my child baptized; my Christian Science, to send for a doctor when he was sick; my Episcopalian, not to have him confirmed in his church; my Universalist told me not to be anxious for his conversion, as everybody was going to be saved, and my Unitarian and liberal Congregationalist that all the fundamental beliefs in which I intended to bring him up had been outgrown long ago. These and other voices confuse me, and you, my guide, are silent. You either do not know where the truth is on these and other questions or you do not take the trouble to find out, and in either case you are unworthy of your position. Your thin and vanishing sermons, forgotten in half an hour, need blood and substance, and they would find them if you would give two hours a day to the study of the Bible, two to the study of Christian doctrine, and two to the study of Christian history—this last that you may know the ever new guises in which old error clothes itself. If you need a special stimulus preach an exegetical sermon once a month, a doctrinal, a historical, a moral (on some virtue or sin), and a social or reform sermon with about the same frequency.

Your sermons are flabby and intellectually weak and pale. How many books do you read through in a year? How many hours a day do you wrestle with great subjects or great books? While you should be friendly with all men, with an open hand or a kind greeting to every man, woman and child in our parish, don't loaf at the corner grocery, but save every spare minute for study. Don't buy a new overcoat next winter, but a new encyclopaedia, a new Bible dictionary, a series of new commentaries on the Bible. Pour your reading into your sermons. Illuminate them with light from all quarters, from science, art, language, literature, history, biography, etc. Study the great preachers and find out their secret. Take notes of your reading, observation, meditation, etc., so that you can use these notes later for sermons. You sin against every hearer unless you strive with all your might to be the very greatest preacher, the most interesting, suggestive, informing that you possibly can be—full of the knowledge of the Bible, history, science, with an enthusiasm for truth of doctrine, for every noble reform and social amelioration—unless in short you are a master of your craft and a prophet of God. Remembor, while I am listening to you—and you expect me to listen to you—I can hear no one else, and therefore so preach that I shall desire to hear no one else.—New York Christian Advocate.

CHEERING MESSAGES OF THE NEW YEAR.

Rev. W. W. Pinson, D.D.

It is wonderful what an effect a short message in a letter may have on one's nerves. It may help to tone them to a note of courage and of joy through the whole day, or it may strike a discordant note that will jar through the whole day. Happily, we do not receive at the Board of Missions many of the latter type, and when we do we have no disposition to pass them on. The following are some of the messages that have come to us in the last few days and that are worthy of being repeated, and the best of it is this type of message is mutiplying. We could give the names, but these letters were written by men who do not their alms to be seen of men and would not appreciate having their deeds heralded.

A gentleman who has for some time been supporting a missionary of his own, wrote a few days ago:

"I am sending you $500 for the first half of the year on the support of my missionary in China. I want to support another missionary or build a church at a cost of $800 or $1000 and will be glad to receive a suggestion as to what place or what missionary you can give me."

The suggestion was given him and we have already received his reply in which he says:

"I received your letter and report of missionary work in China and was glad to hear about it. Enclosed find check for $1000 for sending out a new missionary as suggested by you."

A young man who is prospering in business and keeping a clear vision for the work of the Kingdom, makes this proposition:

"I wish to give $1500 to some object in the foreign field and will ask you to suggest where it can be placed to meet the greatest need and do the greatest amount of good."

The suggestion was promptly mado and we have no doubt the $1500 will be forthcoming.

The following letter is the result of the purpose of the writer, which has been cherished for sometime, to secure a farm and deed it to the Board of Missions so that the proceeds may go to the perpetual support of a missionary in the foreign field. The writer of this letter has been for a long time supporting his own missionary and wishes to make sure of the perpetuation of that good work after he passes from the scene of action.

"I can safely say that I have my land purchased for the gift I am going to make—about 200 acres; * * * the land is as fine as any in our county and will be worth $150 per acre when I get it in good shape. I paid $87.50 per acre for it. The location and land is all O. K. I feel it was in answer to my prayers that the Lord let the man sell to me. I told him why I wanted it and all say it was a bargain at that price."

One of our constant and liberal contributors writes as follows:

"I am enclosing check for $2000 to be applied to the work in Korea in which I am interested. I rejoice to hear of your progress last year."

The Virginia Conference Board of Missions, with the Presiding Elders in council in their Mid-year meeting, resolved unanimously to increase their foreign missionary offering $25,000 this year. This is in addition to the splendid record that Conference has made in paying more than 200 per cent on its missionary assessment of $26,000. They have already made a good beginning on this $25,000 advance by sending in a number of new Specials ranging from $1200 down to $100.

The South Georgia Conference Board of Missions is undertaking to raise $16,000 through tho Sunday schools for tho building of a church in Shanghai, China, in memory of the life and service of Dr. Young J. Allen. The proposition is meeting with universal approval, and the Sunday schools are taking hold of it throughout the Conference, and those in charge write that it will be an easy thing to do.

The increase in income from Regular Specials last year was 35 per cent over that of the year before. The indications are that it will be still greater in 1917. We have one thousand Specials being carried by as many churches and individuals. It is not hard to imagine that out of the remaining 16,000 churches there are one thousand others that are just as able, and under proper guidance would be just as willing to carry a Special as those already maintaining them. A great service can be done by helping us to get the other one thousand in line for advance.

EDUCATION DAYS IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

I wish to call the immediate attention of pastors, Sunday school superintendents and others interested to the appointment of Education days in the Sunday school, to be observed in tho early spring. The General Sunday School Board has designated "the first Sunday in March, or as near thereto as practicable," as "College Day," to awaken interest in our colleges and universities among the young people of our Sunday schools. This is a very timely and important movement, which should result in a closer connection between our Sunday schools and our other educational institutions. In fact, our Sunday schools should be made to become recruiting grounds for patronage for our Church colleges, much as the State public schools become feeders to the State institutions of higher learning. This College Day furnishes the opportunity for bringing the information before our young people. It is announced that the Sunday School Magazine for March will give a program for this day. In addition, I understand that Dr. Wynn and President Bobbitt are preparing definite information about our Conference colleges to be furnished those interested. I would suggest that this information be secured and that the pastor or superintendent, or some suitable person appointed for the purpose, present the facts about our schools to each Sunday [illegible] in the State on the day appointed.

The Conferences west of the Mississippi River and tributary to Southern Methodist University have also set apart a Sunday at about the same time, "the second Sunday in March, or as near thereto as practicable," as "Religious Education Day," to be observed in the interest of the Theological Department of Southern Methodist University. At that time it is proposed to take a special offering in all our Sunday schools for the purpose of raising $30,000, which is necessary to complete the endowment of a Chair of Religious Pedagogy and Sunday Schools in that University. Such a chair for the training of future pastors for modern Sunday school work is immensely important. Our Conference Sunday School Board has endorsed the plan above indicated, and asked, in addition to the collection from our Sunday schools, that the pastors of the Conference preach on that Sunday on Religious Education and let the open collections of the congregations go to the fund for the S. M. U. chair above mentioned. I trust that every charge in Louisiana will follow the plans indicated, doing specifically two things: give to our Sunday schools, in an effective way, information and commendation in reference to our colleges and our university; and take the offering for the endowment of the chair at Southern Methodist University. It may be best to unite these two special days in one, on one of the Sundays in March, but by all means see that these two ends are carried out.

TOURO'S EXCELLENT RECORD.

The Touro Infirmary of this city treated 32,971 patients during the year 1916, an average of 527 a day. Of these, 25,995 were treated in the free clinic and 6976 were treated in the main hospital. The number of operations performed was 5019, and the death rate, excluding moribund cases, was 3.51 per cent. The following are the larger donations to the institution reported during the year: $50,000 by Mr. J. K. Newman, for the Rebecca Newman Free Clinic; $50,000 by Mrs. Henry Newman, for the Henry Newman Maternity Hospital; $50,000 by Mr. Eugene W. Mente, for the new Free Ward Building, and $10,000 by Mr. E. V. Benjamin, for a site for the last-named structure.

DR. BLAKE ON METHODIST UNIFICATION.

Methodists desire to confer social equality and the full measure of political rights upon the colored people of the united States, they should seek to carry them to the North and do this—they can never do it in the South.

This is no mere vagary in which we are indulging—no imaginary bugaboo that we are conjuring up. We know the struggles through which the ablest Statesmen of the South passed in finding a legal way to vest the governments of the States of this section securely in the hands of the white people. It was not until 1890 that that great Mississippian, Senator J. Z. George, blazed out the path for doing this in the Constitutional Convention held at Jackson, Miss., and defended the work of his hands in the United States Senate in a manner which put all who attacked it to flight, and which demonstrated that in what he had done for the white people of Mississippi he had kept within the limits of the Federal Constitution. Nearly all the other Southern States have since followed along the way that Senator George led, and peace and quiet now prevail between the two races throughout our entire Southland. The Northern Methodists do not believe in Constitutions like that of Mississippi; they do not believe in race segregation and what they call "Jim crow" cars; they look upon the Negro as stripped of his rights and oppressed in the South. The Northern Methodist Church is the most political Church in the United States except the Roman Catholic. Lincoln's birthday, for instance, has just passed, and practically every paper that it issued last week has come to our table loaded with pictures and fulsome eulogies of him. They call him the first American, and some have pronounced him the greatest Christian that our country has produced, though he did not even belong to the Church. They apparently feel that the emancipated Negro is largely their ward, and that they must struggle to give him his fancied political and social rights. (We do not mean by the foregoing reference to him that Mr. Lincoln was not an able, patriotic, and sincere man. But why should a Church of Christ, which is supposed to concern itself with spiritual things, canonize him and annually make an ado over him such as it makes no other man who has figured in American history? Let Southern Methodists ask themselves what the significance of such a course is.)

The Northern Methodists may hold these views if they wish. This is a free country and they have a right to do so; but if the Southern Methodist Church should concur in the propagation of such views, either directly or indirectly, she would erect an insurmountable barrier between herself and the white people of the South, and would doubtless soon cease to be one of the influential Churches of this section. There are tens, and probably hundreds, of thousands of Methodists who would not remain in a Church that would stand for such a policy, and we do not hesitate to say that we are one of them. We know too well what is involved in such a course to be beguiled into a servile acquiescence in it by siren songs setting forth the imaginary glories of union. We have sat on the gallery of Senator George's home, Cotesworth, near Carrollton, Miss., too often and heard him discuss the great dangers of the race problem and utter warnings as to the future, to be blind to the perils which now confront our beloved Southern Methodism and the South. With all due respect to the members of our Joint Commission, we do not believe that there is a man on it, either from the North or from the South, who for far-seeing vision and constructive statesmanship is the equal of the grand old Commoner, whose fame was national and of whom Senator Platt, of Connecticut, said: "If he had lived in the time of John C. Calhoun, of the two he would have been considered the abler exponent of States' rights." As for our part, we cannot turn away from the counsels of such a leader—great alike in head and in heart—to follow the ecclesiastical doctrinaires who are so loud in their asseverations that there is little or no peril in the conditions existing in the South and that we need have no special concern about them.

5. Such a colored Regional Conference as Dr. Blake has suggested would, in the very nature of the case, most likely be temporary. The colored people could not be expected to be indefinitely contented with disfranchisement in the Church; nor could the Northerners, without a complete change of their principles, be expected to look with favor upon this as a permament arrangement. Accepting Dr. Blake's statement that the Negroes are now in a large sense "dependent," being fit subjects for missionary endeavor, would not a race that is making such progress, as all admit that the colored race in the United States is now doing, become decreasingly so? To try to treat a race as if its work were of a missionary character after it had passed from that stage would be a makeshift and a pretense. So the probabilities are that, having been dragged half-way toward the full recognition of the colored Methodists in the same organization by Dr. Blake's compromise arrangement, we should later be dragged the whole way. It behooves Southern Methodists, being far outnumbered by the members of the Church that they are being asked to unite with, and having in a considerable portion of their territory the most delicate and menacing problem that now confronts any people on the face of the earth, to ponder long and well the following editorial utterance of Zion's Herald, in its issue of January 10: "Of course, questions may be raised as to why this care about minorities and majorities in a reunited Church. FOR A TIME this is of the utmost importance. The day will come when THE WELDING WILL BE SO COMPLETE that none will think of sections." If we are to have unification, it is incumbent upon Southern Methodists to see that all the safeguards upon which they are to depend in the future are permanently and indestructibly fixed. The truth is, it is in just such half-way and unmaintainable measures as Dr. Blake has brought forward that our greatest danger lies.

It is our conviction that the Doctor would have contributed more toward the success of the unification movement if, instead of advocating the mixed-up arrangement outlined in his address, he had appealed to the colored members of his denomination to consent to be placed in a separate Church—the relation which more than three-fourths of the Negro Methodists of the United States already sustain, and in which as Christians they have achieved by far the largest measure of success.

General Pershing's headquarters are now at El Paso, Texas, and the United States troops that have been in Mexico are being scattered along the border to guard it. It was on March 15, 1916, that these forces were ordered to pursue and punish the Mexican bandits who had raided the town of Columbus.

There was also a large increase in the shipments of stock to New Orleans and other markets.

At a meeting of the American Medical Association in Chicago last week, Dr. W. S. Carter, Dean of the Medical Department of the University of Texas, located at Galveston, was elected President. However, this program is to be passed by the session of the Association in 1918, not having yet been finally adopted.

The Mississippi Game Law was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of that State on February 5. The court did not pass on the question of the constitutionality of the Initiative and Referendum Amendment, which has been before it for some time. There is a report current that the judges are equally divided as to whether the requirements of the Constitution have been properly met in the adoption of this amendment, and it is said that if it is allowed to stand, there will probably be no extra session of the Legislature called to enact a "bone dry" prohibition law, as an election to have the people settle the question would almost surely follow, which would be troublesome and expensive. Under the Mississippi Referendum Act, 6000 or 7000 voters can force the submission of any law enacted by the Legislature to the people.

OUR GRENADA COLLEGE COMMISSIONER.

Thomas Mason Brownlee, son of Alfred Murrah and Mary Houston Brownlee, was born and reared at Potts Camp, Miss., where he was graduated from the high school, later completing the course at Dumas Collegiate Institute. His parents were devout members of the Methodist Church and he was converted and joined the Church with them at the age of fourteen. He was licensed to preach and joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1902, serving Atlanta Circuit one year, Okolona Circuit two years, Shannon (where he built a church) two years, and Brooksville two years. During his pastorate the Okolona Circuit probably made the best report in its history, showing up well in all lines and paying 123 per cent on the benevolences. In 1908 he was transferred to the Texas Conference and stationed at Krosse, where he completely remodeled the church. He was next sent to Grace Church, Houston, and found his congregation very much divided and worshiping in a small frame building. He left them in a magnificent $50,000 structure and ranking as one of the leading congregations of the Conference. Since he returned to the North Mississippi Conference, he has served Arcola and Hollandale, Indianola, and Belzoni, leaving at the latter place a subscription sufficient to guarantee the erection of a church when he was appointed Commissioner for Grenada College in December last.

He is a close student, making careful preparation for his pulpit work, and a diligent and popular pastor. He puts his whole soul into the work committed to his care and moves along well-laid plans toward success. He has entered actively and zealously upon his work for Grenada College and has up to date secured pledges for $2000, of which $1200 comes from his last pastoral charge, Belzoni. This plucky little band showed their loyalty and zeal for a good cause by putting themselves in line with the leading appointments of the Conference in their liberality toward the College. Brother Brownlee is determined that the Methodist young women of North Mississippi shall have the very best advantages in their own Church school and has set his heart on seeing a new building go up this year. The preachers have been uniformly kind and courteous in opening the way for his coming, and the people have listened willingly to his forceful statements of the condition and needs of the College.

LOCAL COMMITTEES PREPARE FOR MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The women of the ten Methodist churches of New Orleans are organized into twenty committees, working actively on the plans for the meeting here early in April of the Woman's Missionary Council of he Methodist Church, South. The Council consists of representatives of all the foreign and local missionary workers of the Methodist women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The annual meeting this year will begin April 12 and last through April 20 and will be held at the First Methodist Church.

On Wednesday, Feb. 7, the various committees met at First Church and made plans for the meeting. The Finance Committee had already been at work and in a few moments had raised about $130. The Publicity Committee reported all the papers willing to publish news of the Council.

Luncheon will be served every day at the Church during the Council meeting, the delegates being entertained, and all others wishing lunch can purchase it there.

The last session of the Council was held in Atlanta, and there were about 3000 people in attendance.

Many distinguished women will be in attendance this year. Women from all parts of the United States and missionaries from foreign countries will take part in the exercises and 40 conferences will be represented, with two delegates to the conference.

Mrs. W. W. Carre, local chairman, has called another meeting of the Methodist women of the city on Tuesday, Feb. 27th, at St. Mark's Hall at 3:30 p. m.

CORNER-STONE LAID AT CLARKSDALE.

Dear Dr. Meek: Sunday and Monday, Feb. 4 and 5, were red letter days in the history of Clarksdale Methodism. Bishop Murrah was present and preached in the opera house on Sunday morning to an overflowing congregation, and again in the evening to a large audience. He was at his best and his sermons made a profound impression on all who heard him. On Monday morning, at 10 o'clock, notwithstanding the biting cold, a large number of the leading people of the city assembled to witness the ceremonies of the laying of the corner-stone of the new church building, in which he officiated. This progressive and growing congregation is to be congratulated on the success of this enterprise. The building and fixtures will cost about $65,000. They expect to have it completed and open for worship by June 1, 1917.

This success is largely due to the wise planning and diligent work of the popular pastor, Rev. R. O. Brown. He is in fine favor with the people and they follow his leadership. They expressed their appreciation in the quarterly conference held Monday evening by raising his salary to $2000 by a unanimous vote. It is indeed pleasant to visit a charge where such harmony prevails.

Quite a number of other buildings are being planned in the district, of which I will write you later. V. C. CURTIS.

The Great Battle

NOTES.

Captain J. A. Day, a well known resident of Alaska, declares that it was the men, not the women, who carried that territory for prohibition. It went "dry" by a vote of about two to one.

Up to this date (February 8), the Grand Jury of Orleans Parish has indicted 194 saloonkeepers for violations of the Sunday closing and Gay-Shattuck laws—chiefly for infracting the former.

Hon. Philander C. Knox, former Secretary of State, who was recently elected United States Senator from Pennsylvania, is quoted as having declared prohibition for the Nation to be a winning issue.

Both houses of the Indiana Legislature have passed State-wide prohibition measures. That passed by the Senate is for "bone-dry" prohibition. The lower House enactment, though stringent, did not go that far; but as it was passed by a vote of three to one it is thought that the two bodies will have little difficulty in getting together. (Since the foregoing was written, an agreement has been reached and the Governor has signed the bill that was passed. The State will be dry after April 2, 1918).

In enumerating the causes of the rapid growth of prohibition in the United States, the New Orleans Item says: "Above all, however, is the growing opposition to the liquor interests everywhere, because of their persistent violations of law, their interference in politics, and the forming of alliances with bosses, corporations, and special interests, being always arrayed against the welfare of the people and needed reforms." This is a pretty severe indictment, but it is fully deserved.

A QUESTION.

If you saw a young man on the top of a precipice with a rope around his neck and found that some one down below was pulling that rope in an effort to pull the young man over the precipice to his destruction, what would you do? The natural impulse of any right-minded man would be to snip the rope so as to save the young man's life. Many a young man has about his neck a rope that is drawing him hard toward ruin. It is the temptation to indulge in strong drink. The liquor dealer is down below trying to pull him down. Are you going to stand and see it done? Or will you use your every power to destroy this traffic?—Presbyterian of the South.

A QUEER KIND OF REFORMATION.

The brewers have reformed this year as they do every year. They stand for "regulation and a decent trade" and yet at this very moment the officers of the Model License League, the leading brewers of the country and the entire liquor trade from top to bottom is straining its crooked soul to prevent the enactment of a law, the only effect of which would be to limit the liquor trade to licensed, regulated channels. Guilty of every crime, with beggared women clinging to its skirts, with its lips rich with the marrow of children, this trade walks the aisles of Congress lashing the backs of its prostitute few.—Methodist Board of Temperance.

RIDICULOUS.

"The mail order channel for supplying liquor * * * floods a commonwealth or a county with far more liquor than has ever been sold through local retailers."—T. M. Gilmore, President National Model License League, Beer Advocate and Brewery Henchman.

This statement is true:

If the parcels post is greater in its tonnage than the freight train—

If the bottle is bigger than the barrel—

If the cubic contents of the suitcase is greater than the cubic contents of the freight car—

If the jug, hid in the corner of the hayloft, is more spacious than the reservoir of the brewery or the distillery—

If a hole in the wall down a distant back alley somewhere, known only to the initiated, is more desirable for the marketing of grog than a gilded palace on a central business corner in the heart of the city, through whose swinging doors the thousands daily go.—The National Enquirer.

SOME IMPORTANT FEATURES OF THE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The preacher or layman who does not study or who reads triflingly and refuses or neglects to put himself where he can learn the best from recognized leaders of the Church stops growing and ceases to be an efficient leader or an intelligent instructor of God's people.

The Seashore Divinity School offers to all—both preacher and layman—the inspiration resulting from touch with great and successful men, the encouragement to habits of study, the temptation to know and to buy the best and most helpful books, and the stimulus which comes from doing original thinking.

The Post-Graduate Course of Study is comprehensive enough to interest and quicken the pulse of the preacher who is lacking in his early training, as well as the college graduate. The certificates given on compieting this course are worth striving for. We urge upon all our brethren to order and study with us this year: "Bury's Student's History of Greece," by Dr. Everett Kimball; "An Introduction to Philosophy," by Geo. Stuart Fullerton; "The Story of Our Bible," by Rev. H. B. Hunting, "Ivanhoe," by Sir Walter Scott; and "Macbeth," by Shakespeare.

Three prizes, of $25, $15, and $10, are offered for the first, second, and third best papers, or essays, of not less than three thousand nor more than five thousand words on, "How to increase the Efficiency of the Country Church." This is a live subject for live men. Are you one of them? Take off your coats, brethren, and get into the game and play it hard and play it well. Any one contributing the annual fee of $2.50 is eligible to the contest.

In addition to the program, with its magnificent corps of instructors and speakers already announced, Dr. John W. Shackford, of the Department of Sunday School Teacher-training, will discuss practical Sunday school methods and issues one hour each day during the session. This part of the program alone should be so attractive to all those interested in Sunday school work that they could not stay away. Can you afford not to take advantage of this superior opportunity? It is a challenge to the best that is in you.

The devotional half-hour, to be conducted every morning at 6 o'clock by Rev. L. W. Chalker, of the Alabama Conference, is intended to enrich and tone up the spiritual life while you are tarrying by the Gulf. Miss Joe Ellis, of Memphis, Tenn., an accomplished musician and Christian young woman, will have charge of the music for these devotional meetings and also for all public services during the session.

Every preacher, superintendent, teacher, and worker in the Sunday school who desires his or her life to count for more should be present during the entire session. Can you afford not to be, occupying, as you do, a place of leadership in the great Methodist Church?

May we not, at this point, make an earnest appeal to those laymen who have in their hands a large share of the Lord's goods to see to it that their pastors are supplied with the funds to take advantage of this helpful outing and period of study which promises such large returns to the Church in better prepared men? You can do it; you ought to do it; will you do it? It will do you good, and we are sure you are going to do it.

Every Sunday school within reach of the Divinity School should select its best men and women and send them. It would be a paying proposition, returning dividends in bigger men and women, with better methods, capable of more effective work and with an enthusiasm which would give a forward movement in every department. Try it and see your school grow.

We are sure you are not going to forget the time. The session will be on Tuesday evening, June 26th, at 8 o'clock, and will close with the morning service, Thursday, July 5.

Yours for a bigger man for a bigger service,

CHAS. W. CRISLER,
President Seashore Divinity School.

Brookhaven, Miss.

FROM A LAYMAN.

Dear Brother Meek: In the New Orleans Christian Advocate of December 21, I read with much interest and with surprise the article entitled, "Where Our Conferences Stand." I noted that the Denver Conference had contributed to ministerial support $526 per capita, and to missions 70 cents per capita, thus placing that Conference fifth in the column. I noticed, furthermore, that all Conferences paying a larger percentage were Western Conferences. To one acquainted with the class of individuals who constitute the Southern Methodist Church, such a showing would seem impossible. Colorado Springs is one of the integral parts that go to make up the Denver District, and in our community every third family has the care of a tubercular. With this large additional expense added to the family expense, it necessarily makes money matters more stringent. It demonstrates, however, the loyal support given, even though this great calamity is ever present. And, further, it seems to indicate that illness is a great factor in stimulating Christians to duty.

May I make another suggestion? Many Southern Methodists come West without knowing that a Southern Methodist Church is mantained in Colorado Springs. Six years of close relation with our church shows that only one member in eight is directed to our church when leaving the State of his nativity.

It is a sad and regrettable fact that the responsibility for the failure of most congregations to make a better financial showing rests upon our ministry. One editorial a year in every Methodist journal urging the minisry to do its duty would perhaps do more than all else to put the Church on a better financial basis.

Fraternally,

RUBY'S OLD RED DRESS.

"Come, Ruhy," said Mrs. Ward to her little daughter, "the rain last night ripened the blackberries on Lone Pine hill, and I want you and Roy to gather as many of them as you can."

"Oh, goody, goody!" cried Ruby, dancing round. "Where's my sunbonnet and basket?"

"You'll have to take more than one hasket," said her mother from the pantry. "It's going to be a pretty good day's work to fill all the things I shall give you. Now you run and change your dress. Put on that old red one."

"Why do I have to change my dress?" asked Ruhy. "That old red thing is ragged, and, hesides, it's too short."

"Well, what if it is," answered her mother. "it's good enough to pick berries in. Run along now and do as mother tells you. You won't be ready hy the time Roy is, and I want you to hurry so as to cross the track before the eight o'clock passenger comes along."

"All aboard!" shouted Roy, as he rattled up with his little express wagon. His mother gave him the baskets and pails and went to look after Ruby, who stood pouting by the room window.

"Why, Ruby Ward!" said her mother, "do you want your hrother to go alone to pick berries?"

"No, mamma," walled Ruby, tugging at her buttons. Mamma pinned the curley hrown hair into a "knob" on top of her little girl's head, gave her a waterproof cape, for fear it should rain, and some old stocking legs to keep the fat little arms from sunburn and scratches.

At last they were ready, and so eager wero they that they ran nearly all the way up a hill, and then, after a short rest, Roy proposed that they coast down. Baskets and pails were tied fast to the wagon, and, with Roy as steerman, they fairly flew down the slope and across the track at the base of old Lono Pine, where the huge tree that had given the hill its name lay prostrate, shattered by lightning.

A large boulder, dislodged by the fallen tree, had plowed its way down the hillside and with the broken tree-top lay across the track, just beyond a sharp curve.

"I helieve that loud clap of thunder wo heard last night busted the old pine," said Roy. "Hark!" he exclaimed, listening. There's the whistle for Burnham's Station. In ten minutes she'll be down here and go smash!"

The boy knelt beside the boulder and squinted over it at the track beyond.

"No, sir, Ruby!" he exclaimed, "the engineer can't ever see this in time to stop 'er."

"Oh, Ruby, your dress!" he cried, and, seizing the garment in hoth hands, he fairly toro it from his astonished sister, and was off with it, leaving her standing with hare neck and arms.

Ruby drew the wagon into the shade of some roadside bushes, put on the cape, and scrambled up to a point from which she could see her brother and the advancing train.

Now she could see the hlack smoke, now tho engine, and now it was on the down grade: and there was Roy, hravely waving his tattered signal.

Ruhy's heart heat wildly as the great hlack thing drew near and came to a halt just as it reached Lone Pine curve. How the engineer thanked Roy again and again! And how the passengers cheered when they saw the boy!

The track was soon cleared, and the train, after cautiously feeling its way over the damaged places, sped on and away.

It was not so easy, after this excitement, for the two children to settle down to steady work; but they did work, and so well that they returned in time for supper with every dish full.

The story of their adventure had gone before them, so that they missed the joy of its first telling, but their proud family gave them a warm greeting. Mother had some specially nice tea-cakes for supper, while father beamed down upon his little son and asked him if he was not afraid when the engine came down upon him.

"'Fraid? No, sir," said Roy. "Did the engineer think I acted 'fraid?"

"No," answered his father, smiling; "he said that you seemed quite cool."

"Anyway," remarked Ruby, between mouthfuls, "I'm glad I minded mamma and wore my old red dress."—Sunday School Times.

GOOD PRACTICE.

Gertrude Hockridge.

Bessie is ten years old. She lives in the country where Methodists are numerous. Her father engaged to pilot the new pastor in finding the members of his new flock, returning to Bessie's home for dinner. Before starting out on the afternoon visits the pastor desired a word of prayer. The family knelt while the visitor dedicated the new year and its new conditions to God. When the day was finished, and the pastor had been driven to the parsonage, and his escort had returned home, Bessie said:

"Papa, does our minister pray everywhere he goes like he did here at our house?"

"He did to-day," said her father.

"Well," said Bessie, "I think it must he good practice for him."

The child's conclusion was good from more than one view-point, and is suggestive for both pastors and people.—Western Christian Advocate.

THE LITTLE ERRAND GIRL.

Hester loved to do errands for her mother, and have her call her a faithful servant when she did them well. One day she had been talking with her mother about God, when she quickly raised her head, with a bright look in her eyes, and said: "Why, mother, then God is sending us on errands all the time. I am his little errand girl, too."

"Yes, dear; he has given us errands to do, and plenty of time to do them, in a Book written full to show us how. Every day we can tell him how we try to do them, and ask him to help us; so when he calls us, we will run to meet him and give him our account."

"I like that," the child said, nestling back in her comfortable seat; "I like to be God's little errand girl."—Child's Gem.

"JESUS SHINES IN HERE."

A pastor went one cold day in Novemher to visit a poor young girl kept at home by a lame hip.

The room was on the north side of a bleak house. It was not a pleasant prospect without, nor was there much that was pleasant or cheerful within. Poor girl! What a cheerless life she has of it, I thought, as I saw how she was situated; and I immediately thought what a pity it was her room was on the north side of the house.

"You never have any sun," I said; "not a ray comes in at these windows. That I call a misfortune. Sunshine is everything; I love the sun."

"Oh," she answered with a sweet smile, "my sun pours in at every window and even through the cracks." I am sure I looked surprised. "The Sun of Righteousness," she said softly—"Jesus. He shines in here and makes everything bright to me." I could not douht her. She looked happier than any one I had seen for many a day. Yes! Jesus shining in at the window can make any spot heautiful and any home happy.—The Lutheran.

A PLACE FOR ME.

Use me, God, in Thy great harvest field,
Which stretcheth far and wide like a wide sea;
The gatherers are so few, I fear the precious yield
Will suffer loss. Oh, find a place for me.

A place where best the strength I have will tell.
It may be one the other rollers shun,
Be it a wide or narrow place, 'tis well,
So that the work it holds be only done.

—Christian Rossetti.

THE TIME IS NOW.

It is a terrible thing to be wrecked in full sight of a harbor: it will be infinitely more terrible to be lost when in full view of the Cross and not far from heaven. My friend, you may be saved, and saved at once, if you will. Salvation is perfectly sure, if you seek it in the right time and the right way. The time is now, and the way is to turn from the sin of trusting yourself, and trust the Lord Jesus Christ and obey Him. There is only one harbor, and your soul is not in it yet.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

NOW ON A CASH BASIS.

The subscription price of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for the year 1917 is $1.50 to both the people and preachers. The Publishing Committee at its recent meeting gave orders to the Publisher to discontinue all delinquent subscriptions and to place the business of the paper on a cash basis. Many of our preachers fail to observe the rule of paying in advance, and in consequence may, unless they give the matter immediate attention, have their names dropped—an embarrassment which the Publisher hopes to escape. Under the new policy instituted, the longest time that ANY delinquent subscriber can possibly be carried is three months. Brethren, please note and heed this very important statement.

Editorial

THE THING OF FIRST IMPORTANCE.

The Christian's first and highest duty is to abide in Christ. Everything depends upon this: his spiritual life, his growth, his fruitfulness. If this connection be broken, nothing else can take its place. Such a person may still hold position in the Church and labor after a fashion and seem to accomplish good, but he cannot be a really vital force in bringing men into the Kingdom. The dead cannot lead the way to life; they who themselves have lost contact with the Master may not hope to be successful in linking others to Him in a saving relation. A ministry that is spiritually alive is the only truly efficient ministry. This point outweighs all else: learning, eloquence, personal magnetism, social influence, etc. In seeking preachers, teachers, and workers, this is the thing upon which the Church should place the chief emphasis. Her failure to do this is largely responsible for the worldliness which to-day is paralyzing her energies and for her distressing barrenness in bearing sons and daughters unto the Lord. Are you consciously "abiding" in Jesus? This is ever the great question for His professed disciples. United with Him, the poorest are rich; and apart from Him, the richest in other things are poor. He is the Pearl of Great Price, whom one can well afford to give all else to possess.

THE PUBLIC RECEPTION OF MEMBERS.

The following suggestive utterance, by Dr. George Summey, the brilliant editor of the Presbyterian Journal, of this city, is quite as good for Methodists as it is for Presbyterians; so we give it a place on our editorial page:

"It is a distinct advantage to make the act of coming into the Church impressive and serious. The simple announcement of the names of new members appeals very little to either the great body of the church that hears it in a perfunctory way from the pulpit or the new members themselves who have been received. It is too cold and formal and unmeaning. It makes no great line of demarcation in the believer's life. It makes practically no appeal to the spirit of fellowship in the church. Those churches which have practiced the custom of publicly receiving new believers and of publicly giving them the hand of fellowship have found the custom most wholesome in its results. Many apply it even to those who come in by letter from other churches. In these cases it is made an occasion of renewed consecration as well as of introduction and welcome. The service in all receptions, whether of members coming on profession or by letter, should, of course, be made entirely simple, not pretentious or ornate, and, as far as possible, calculated to impress upon the entire congregation as well as the newcomers the beauty and joy of acknowledging Christ. If more attention were paid to this matter of reception it might give pause to the ease with which members drop out and disappear. The great army of migratory and 'trunk' Christians would be lessened."

A CANDID UTTERANCE.

Recently the New York Presbytery of the Northern Presbyterian Church, which within recent years has won notoriety by licensing graduates of Union Theological Seminary who denied the virgin birth of Christ and held other equally as heretical views, or worse, declared for the uniting of their denomination with the Southern Presbyterians. In discussing this action, The Presbyterian Standard of Charlotte, N. C., one of the most ably edited religious weeklies in the country, among other things, says:

"We have been always opposed to organic union on the ground of expediency. We earnestly believe that the two Churches will work better and respect each other more if they remain separate. We have no sectional feelings in the matter, but, on the other hand, we admire the Northern Church in many respects, and believe that, with the exception of a few progressives, they are as orthodox as we are.

"The two sections think differently, and their ideas are different, and while apart, they can get on in harmony; together they would be constantly clashing.

"If this union movement be confined to the New York Presbytery we shall lose no sleep over it, because we have no fears that the union-loving brethren among us will take to any movement originating with a Presbytery that is constantly shocking our ideas of doctrinal soundness. They will 'fear the Greeks, even bearing gifts.'"

This utterance is straightforward and to the point. It seems that in all the Churches the "liberals" in theology are the most ardent clamorers for union, without much regard for terms. Perhaps this is because they do not consider any tenets or principles as of sufficient importance to stand for, apart from others. In the famous Evanston (Illinois) Conference on Methodist union a good deal was said about the new statement of faith that is to follow in the wake of unification. This is one of the things in the background that Southern Methodists need to beware of. Indeed, the doctrinal aspect of the Methodist union movement is one of its most serious and important features. We expect to turn the light on at this point in the near future much more fully than has yet been done.

SHOULD KEEP THEM BUSY.

When an Annual Conference sets men apart as Conference evangelists, the fair assumption is that it has work for them to do, and that it expects them to be kept busy. Otherwise, to give ministers such assignments would be an injustice both to them and the Master's cause. It is incumbent upon the Conference Evangelistic Committee, the presiding elders, and the pastors in the Conference designating such workers to open the way for them to exercise their gifts in the salvation of souls and in the strengthening and building up of the Church. The following are our Conference evangelists in the Advocate's patronizing territory: The Louisiana Conference, Rev. H. T. Young, Jena, La.; the Mississippi Conference, Rev. Dan E. Kelly, Hattiesburg, Miss., and Rev. J. V. Bennett, Monticello, Miss.; North Mississippi Conference, Rev. J. A. Bowen, Tupelo, Miss., and Rev. J. H. Bell, Columbus, Miss.

Now is the time to make engagements with these brethren for meetings. It is a great mistake to postpone all revival efforts until the spring and summer. Sin and Satan are working now, and so should the Master's servants be. Why not write one of your Conference evangelists at once and start a series of evangelistic services at the earliest date possible? These specialists can come to you much better now than they can at a later date, when there will be many demands made upon them.

BILLY SUNDAY A GREAT PREACHER.

A correspondent in a contemporary publication, in discussing Billy Sunday's work in his recent meeting in Boston, Mass., thus refers to him as a preacher:

"Our concluding word is brief, and is this: No one familiar with sermonic literature, and the art of sermon-building, and the delivery of sermons, can deny that William Sunday is a great preacher—one of the greatest this country has produced. And any clergyman in Boston—we do not care where he is or where he preaches, at West End or South End—who thinks himself so high up that he can look down upon William Sunday as a preacher has lost his latitude and longitude. William Sunday can give such clergymen the odds two or three times over and in effectiveness beat them every one every time."

The writer is correct. The best hunter is the man who bags the most game. And the best preacher is the one who gets results. Scholarly philosophizing in the pulpit is not preaching in the true sense; neither are eloquent and entertaining deliverances which interest audiences, but which lead none to repentance and regeneration, or holier living. Perhaps there would be fewer dead churches if ministers generally would revise their standards as to what it takes to constitute good preaching.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. D. Watson, of Pine Grove, La., thus refers to the situation in his field: "My churches are working with a progressive spirit, and we feel hopeful of good results during the year."

Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, writes: "Dr. W. H. La Prade, of Gulfport, Miss., has been selected to hold the camp-meeting at the Seashore Campground next July. You may say this in the Advocate."

Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, says: "We have finished the first half of the session with great satisfaction, and, with fair business conditions, we should enter upon a new era in the history of the College next fall."

In a business communication to our office, Rev. W. J. Ferguson, pastor of the Fifth Street M. E. Church, South, of Meridian, Miss., says: "We have been very cordially received by the members of this church, and the year promises to be a fruitful one."

Mr. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., who is one of the leading laymen of the North Mississippi Conference, spent several days in New Orleans last week, having come to the city to buy goods. While here, he was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Meek.

Rev. C. C. Miller, of Lake Providence, La., continues to make full proof of his call to the ministry in his present field. He is one of the most cultured and capable men in the Louisiana Conference. No interest of the Church lags where his hand is on the helm.

Dr. T. J. Bailey, State Superintendent of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League, and an honored minister of the Southern Baptist Church, has been engaged by the Anti-Saloon League to write a history of prohibition in Mississippi. We dare say that Dr. Bailey will do this work well.

Rev. H. W. Bowman is setting a good pace for his co-workers in the Baton Rouge District. He has made an excellent record in the presiding eldership during the past three years, and the fourth year of his quadrennium in his present field promises to measure fully up to the previous standard which he has set.

Rev. J. S. Rutledge, of Longville, La., writes: "Everything seems to be progressing well in this charge. The good ladies have succeeded in getting a house for us and furnishing it. Among other things that we found there, was a $35 heater; so we are fixed up for the winter. We have also had a nice 'pounding' given us."

Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Columbus (Miss.) District, sounds an optimistic note concerning the work in the fine territory under his supervision. He says: "The charges generally are in good condition, and I am confidently expecting that a better record than that of last year will be made, because of the hopeful spirit of the preachers and people."

On a card ordering the address of his Advocate changed, Chaplain J. A. Randolph, of the United States Army, says: "We got back into the United States on February 5, after having been nearly eleven months in Mexico. I should be glad to hear from any of my friends in Mississippi or elsewhere." Brother Randolph's address is, "Chaplain of 2d Regiment Engineers, El Paso, Texas.

The New Orleans District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held in the Louisiana Avenue Church, this city, March 6, 7, and 8.

Keep in mind the date of the Wesley Bible Class Federation of the Louisiana Conference—March 14 to 16. Let all the Sunday school workers in the State co-operate with Brother Breithaupt in making this occasion one long to be remembered.

The work is making good headway in the Epworth Methodist Church of this city, of which Rev. C. M. Morris is the capable pastor. This congregation has a notably strong layman in the person of Mr. Paul Renshaw, who takes a deep interest in all of its affairs.

Rev. James L. Cady, of Clinton, La., sends the Advocate the following message: "We have made one round on our work and we found everything in good shape." Brother Cady is not neglecting to press the claims of the Advocate among the many demands that are being made upon him.

Rev. J. F. Campbell, of Benton, Miss., sends us several subscriptions, and in his business letter makes the following reference to his work: "Our second year on this charge has begun well, and the outlook is encouraging. We are serving a good people, and they are helpful to their pastor."

Dr. S. H. Werlein is preaching to large and interested audiences at our First Church in this city. Perhaps no minister in New Orleans is contributing as much inspiration to the civic reform movement that is now on here as Dr. Werlein. His influence in its behalf is being widely felt.

The St. Helena Echo, published at Greensburg, La., says: "Rev. R. V. Fulton, who is now at Pineville, La., writes that he has been kindly received, that his work has opened up nicely, and that he is much pleased with his new field." The Echo, which is an excellent parish paper, is edited and published by Brother W. T. Holland.

Rev. C. H. Strait has apprised us of the regrettable death of Miss Laura Gates, of Johns, Miss., one of the most faithful Christians in his charge. The date of her demise was not given. We are sorry to learn of this sad occurrence, and our heart goes out in sympathy to those who have been stricken by it. May the Heavenly Father uphold and comfort them!

The following friends, of whom mention has not been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in since the last issue of the Advocate: Rev. E. C. Gunn, East End Church, Meridian, Miss., 3; Rev. C. T. Floyd, Holcomb, Miss., 2; Rev. J. W. Chisolm, Silver Creek, Miss., 2; Rev. J. W. Dorman, Water Valley, Miss., 4; Rev. J. G. Sloane, Haynesville, La., 3.

From a business letter from Brother M. K. Scruggs, of Shaw, Miss., we take the following: "Shaw was made a station at the last Annual Conference, and Rev. W. C. Galceran, our pastor, is doing his best to promote the Master's cause in this community." The people of this progressive little city are fortunate in having Brother Galceran as their spiritual leader.

Rev. J. N. Nabors, of Potts Camp, Miss., has our thanks for six subscriptions to the Advocate. In his business letter, Brother Nabors inserts the following note: "I am well pleased with the way that my fourth year has opened on this charge, and I hope to make it the best year of my quadrennium. In the person of Rev. J. H. Felts, our presiding elder, this district has a fine leader."

We have learned with sorrow of the death of Mrs. Florence Sparkman Holladay, the wife of Dr. R. L. Holladay, which occurred at the family home at Cooksville, Miss., after an extended illness, on January 16, 1917. A memoir of this esteemed Christian woman is in hand and will appear next week, having reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

We were pleased to receive a few days ago a communication from Brother W. H. Emorson, and to learn that he and his consecrated wife are well and still happy in the Master's work. They now reside at Greenwood, Miss. It was the Editor's good fortune to come in contact with this choice Christian couple when they were members of his congregation at Starkville, Miss., some years ago.

Rev. A. J. Beasley, of Houlka, Miss., writes: "I have been warmly received and the prospects for a successful year in my work were never more flattering. I am serving a good people and am delighted with the outlook for doing good in my new field. I congratulate you on the paper that you are giving us." Brother Beasley's letter brought us 2 subscriptions to the Advocate, for which he has our thanks.

Those who mail us communications as late as Saturday or Monday, with the request, "Please get this in the next issue of the Advocate," certainly can have no idea of the amount of copy that we receive and of the pressure that is upon us for space. Getting into the Advocate these days, unless it be matter of urgent necessity, is pretty apt to be a waiting process. We could easily use twice the space that is at our disposal.

From a letter from Rev. J. M. Morse, the popular leader of our forces in the Capital District of Mississippi, we extract the following: "The brethren are all hard at work, and the people are responding to their calls. Rev. G. G. Yeager, of Fannin, leads in nearly all reports. He is in great favor with his people." We thank Brother Morse for an invitation to attend his district conference, which will meet at Madison, April 24.

Rev. J. H. Bell, the consecrated and effective Conference evangelist of the North Mississippi Conference, has some open dates for meetings in the immediate future. Any pastor would do well to write him and engage him in a revival at once. He may not be available at a later time. We think that many of the churches in our larger towns and cities would do well to hold their evangelistic services in the winter and early spring.

Brother T. S. Randle, of the Louisiana Conference, who, with his family, is residing at Yoakum, Texas, writes: "I enjoy the Advocate. It comes as a weekly visitor from our home Conference, and we are much interested in the accounts of what is happening there. We hope to come to Louisiana in the spring and enjoy associating with our old friends for a while. My health is still improving and I am indulging the hope of being able to do some preaching next year."

We have received from Sister Morris, the wife of Rev. T. H. Morris, a letter for publication, which reached us too late for it to appear in this number of the Advocate, but which we will permit our readers to see next week. Brother Morris' many friends will be pleased to know that Mrs. Morris writes hopefully of his condition. Her address is 910 W. 76th Street, Chicago, Ill., and she would be pleased to hear from any of her friends who may choose to write to her.

The many Mississippi friends of Dr. M. O. Shivers will read with interest his article, which appears on page 6 of this issue of the Advocate. Dr. Shivers was formerly one of the leading physicians at Greenville, Miss., but because of ill health he found it necessary to move West. His present home is Colorado Springs, Colo., where he has built up an excellent medical practice. We infer from his letter that he is still a Southern Methodist in sentiment, notwithstanding the Western atmosphere about him.

At the recent meeting of the Executive Committee of Millsaps College in Jackson, Miss., Rev. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, Miss., was placed on the Committee to raise funds for placing an oil painting of Bishop Murrah in the College Chapel, in lieu of Mr. J. D. Barbee, resigned. The other member of this Committee is Mr. W. M. Buie, of Jackson, Miss. This is an undertaking that should be carried forward without delay. Persons desiring to contribute to this cause may send remittances to either member of this Committee.

Sister S. M. Thames, of Jackson, Miss., writes us as follows: "Mr. Thames has been a 'shut-in' for three weeks and a great sufferer from the effects of a fall which resulted in severe sprains and bruises and a fracture of his right arm just below the shoulder. He is, however, improving slowly and hopes to be out again when the weather becomes warmer. He sends love to you and his many other friends in Mississippi. We are enjoying a visit from Mrs. J. F. Evans, of Tupelo, Miss., who has long been one of our devoted friends." We greatly regret to learn of Brother Thames' accident and we pray that he may completely recover in the near future.

From Talisheek, La., Mrs. J. S. Parker writes: "After my terrible accident on the night of Dec. 31 at the Touro Infirmary, New Orleans, where I had taken my daughter, there followed days and nights of pain and suffering until two weeks ago, when I was brought here to my daughter, Mrs. D. B. Houer. I am yet unable to walk. I am trying to be patient, but my life hitherto has been singularly free from accident and pain, which makes my present affliction harder to bear. Give this message to my friends and pray that I may soon be restored to my dear home at Hattiesburg, Miss." It is with sorrow that we have learned of the misfortune that has overtaken this choice servant of the Master, and we earnestly hope that she may soon fully recover.

"WHY I AM NOT A BAPTIST" will be mailed direct to your church members and friends. Simply send names and addresses, and 10 cents per copy, 25 cents for three. Makes Methodists loyal and the way of the proselyter hard. Address P. O. Lowrey, Donaldsonville, La.

MISSIONARY "SPECIALS" AND THE HOME MISSION ASSESSMENT.

The assessments made against the various Conferences of Southern Methodism do not come up to the amount of the expense of the General Board in carrying forward this important branch of our church work. The additional expense is met through "Specials."

Our General Board has adopted the plan of "Specials" because of their desire to get our people to support this great cause from the view point of their recognition of the imperative importance of this work in the advancement of the Kingdom of God upon earth, rather than let them be satisfied with the minimum amount of the assessments made against the Conferences for the support of Missions.

In order to raise up a generation of Methodists who have the vision of world-wide evangelization, our Board asks that each Sunday school pledge a certain amount as a special for missions, the same to be used this year in China. According to the law of our Discipline, one Sunday in each month should be set apart as Missionary Day in our Sunday schools. The collections for that day are expected to be used for Missions, independent of the assessment made against the charge. Please let all our pastors see to it that "Missionary Day" is observed in each Sunday school and that the money so raised is sent to the General Board and not used to help pay the assessment for missions against the charge.

Home Mission Assessment.

Brother Duren, the president of the Board of Missions of the North Mississippi Conference, has just sent out an appeal in behalf of our brethren who are laboring in the mission fields of our own Conference. In that appeal he states the following facts:

There are 15 men serving mission charges that paid less than $300 last year—7 of these men have families. There are 12 more whose charges paid less than $400—nine of these have families. There are 10 others whose charges paid less than $500—and 7 of these have families. To sum up, there are 37 men serving missions which paid less than $500 each last year, and 23 of these men have families. This would seem to be enough, but it is not all. Twenty of these 37 men were moved at the last Conference; and, besides their poor prospects and moving expenses, they are among strangers.

The first quarter's pay for these brethren will be due March 15. If our pastors will call the attention of their congregations to the facts stated above I am sure our people will gladly pay their Home Mission assessments early in the year and thus enable our Conference Board of Missions to meet its obligations to these brethren.

Fraternally,
J. TILLERY LEWIS,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

THE PATH TO PROGRESS.

The solution of our religious problems is not going to be found mainly in the study of methods. It is our opinion that this study is being rather overdone. It is true that the way we go about a thing has much to do with the success or failure of it, but it is not the fundamental thing. If we should strive more earnestly for a deeper religious life—if, as preachers and people, our first concern should be more consistently for a closer walk with God—it is our conviction that the work of the Church in every department of its life would advance more rapidly.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

On Nov. 19, 1916, Mr. JAMES WARD received his summons to the home eternal. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ward, and was born on April 10, 1882. He was married to Miss Clara Bishop on May 4, 1916. He leaves his wife and one child and a host of relatives to mourn his death. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church at the age of 26. His only regret in dying was leaving his little daughter. His death was a shock to the whole community and was lamented by all who knew him. His friends and fellow-Christians unite in saying, "Well done, good and faithful servant." May God bless, comfort, and sustain his grief-stricken wife and his splendid little daughter, Mable Cora. Beloved, "sorrow not even as others which have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him."

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, whose love and wisdom are unquestioned by the faithful, has seen fit to call one of our beloved members, Mrs. J. O. Gunn, to that home above, and

Whereas, she was a useful and appreciated member of our Society, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, as members of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Starkville, Miss., deeply deplore the death of our sister, who had been faithful and ever ready to do what she could. Mrs. Gunn was quiet and gentle in her manner, and, although for many months a constant sufferer, she never murmured nor complained, but accepted what came in the spirit of "Thy will be done."

2. That we, as members of this society, bow in humble submission to the will of the Father, believing that He doeth all things well. Our hearts are saddened by her removal, but we shall cherish her memory among us as one who cherished the truest ideals of life.

3. That we believe the Master's call found her ready, and, while we will never again on earth meet her pleasant face and feel her hearty handclasp, we rejoice in the hope of meeting her again in the home of the blest.

"Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle's fought, the victory won—
Enter thy Master's joy."

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one spread upon our minutes, and one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Mrs. C. B. Buntin, Mrs. J. C. McCreight, Mrs. A. B. Harrington.

SEASHORE GLEANINGS.

Brother Evans has reached his new field of labor and has favorably impressed his people, as the increase in salary testifies.

Brother Moore is also in charge of his new field and has convinced his people that there is one more (Moore) man engaged in church work.

We hear very encouraging reports also from the Columbia charge—salary increased, splendid interest manifested, pastor and people satisfied.

With the new life that Gulfport is taking on, due to the Centennial, the building of the new mill, and the gradual increase in shipping interests, Doctor La Prade is kept very busy. The outlook for the year is very encouraging.

Encouraging and interesting news comes to us occasionally from various points over the district, such as the increasing of salaries for 1917 of some three or four of the pastors, and new life manifested by the official boards in several of our charges.

There came to us in a very direct, though peculiar manner, the news that the Americus charge is building a new parsonage. Knowing that Brother John L. Carter is a single man, we cannot help but wonder 'why' this building this year. We will not press the inquiry, but fall back on the old saying that time will tell.

Word comes to us that Brother Dan E. Kelly, our Conference evangelist, started a meeting in Wiggins on the last day of January to continue for some two weeks. We do not know, but we would be surprised if Brother Kelly did not warm them up, even in this cold weather, and we are praying for great results in the meeting.

A happier appointment could not have been made by the Bishop than the sending of Brother John R. Jones, our presiding elder, back for the second year. It is a marvel to us all that he was able to accomplish in the face of the storm and extreme conditions the work that he did, and, judging from the success of last year, we will have a better year in 1917, as he is more familiar with the needs and conditions of the district, understands his men better, and, as he himself has said, is getting more religious year after year.

Among other things that he is planing for the new year, we have heard of four institutes to be held—possibly during the month of March—which institutes, including one day and night session, are to be conducted by the presiding elder, assisted by the pastors and laymen conveniently situated to the several institutes. Possibly one of these institutes will be held in Lumberton, one may be held in Wiggins, one in Bay St. Louis, and the fourth probably in Ocean Springs. I am sure that great good will come from these institutes, as it divides the responsibility and work of the district between the pastors and laymen, will create added interest, and in many cases new interest in the work entrusted to these leaders of the Church.

Praying that God will abundantly bless and use the presiding elder, all of the pastors and their splendid helpers during this year, I close.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day a glass of hot water with a tablespoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter-pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

STONEWALL ANDERSON.

NOTES FROM ST. LOUIS.

At the November election the proposition to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in Missouri was defeated only by the large opposition vote of St. Louis.

During this winter there has been an unprecedented amount of crime in the city. The temperance people attribute this to the fact that the control of he liquor interests in the election was so manifest as to invite thieves and toughs to the city. The number of arrests in the city as reported by the police department for the year was 40,000, which was several thousand less than the year before. This is charged to the corruption of the police department.

The churches are outwardly quite active. This is the age of methods and of experts. The old adage, "Where there's a will there's a way," is no more relied on. We are not giving so much attention to kindling the central fires of devotion as they used to do in efforts to promote revivals. Dr. Luther E. Todd, presiding elder of the St. Louis District, is in no wise to be discounted for lack of zeal, or industry, or plans, and the feeling of the preachers is, I think, that he is a wise leader. The one-to-win-one movement, as it has been exploited throughout the Church, is justly regarded as his scheme for a general revival. The method is to enlist all who will, to undertake the work of soliciting their acquaintances to join the Church. There has been a good deal of criticism, to the effect that there seems to be little in the movement but persuading people to unite with the Church. The work of the Church, it is trusted, will lead them into a vital spiritual experience. It surely ought to do so, and yet there are many among us who do not see that vital spiritual experience is the center from which we are working, or the focus toward which we tend. We see that the Church is enjoying large material prosperity. There are many reasons to persuade ourselves that such material prosperity is an evidence of intelligent devotion to the Master's cause and His favor upon that devotion. Yet, a Christian Science Church, or a Mormon Church, would take to itself the same flattering unction as the argument of outward prosperity. My conviction is that the Church, just now, needs prophets rather than critics. Granting proper spiritual motives and experiences, the one-to-win-one plan of campaign seems to be the Church's normal activity. Perhaps the method may, by its suggestion of the need of divine guidance, do something to secure this essential need. I have observed that a Church of three or four hundred members where prayer meetings are attended by no more than twenty, does nothing in a one-to-win-one campaign. There are no soul winners whom the pastor can enlist in the service. They are the best people who undertake the work, and they are better after having done the work.

As to the effectiveness of the method in building up the Church, it has not yet been fairly tested. The method has been worked on the St. Louis District for the past three years, in most of the churches. Four years ago, that is in 1913, before the method was tried, our minutes show 1572 added to the Church. Last year—1916—the additions were 1454, which was less than the year before the method was adopted. The two intervening years show additions, 2375 and 2172. The old saying, "You can't burn the woods twice," may apply here. If the Church has made a careful canvass of its territory this year, it could not be expected to reap as large a harvest the next year.

We are constantly keeping in view our numerical gain as the criterion of prosperity. By calculations taken from a wide field, and tested at different times, I think I am authorized to say that we must, on an average, receive into the Church, year by year, by profession and otherwise, additions equal to one-eighth of our entire membership, or suffer decline in numbers. A method of work which would secure a gross yearly increase of but one-eighth more than our present rate would double our net yearly gain.

Why Take Risks?

Many cases of gangrene and blood poison result from the neglect of small sores, cuts, bruises, skin abrasions, etc. Numerous deaths occur from blood poison due to infection of slight wounds. Whether the wound is painful or not, treat it immediately with Gray's Ointment which, for ninety-six years, has been an indispensible family remedy. It allays pain, heals the wound and frees you from all danger of troublesome after-effects. It is invaluable for treating abrasions and eruptions of the skin, boils, ulcers, burns, bruises, cuts, sores, etc. Mrs. N. E. Coleman, Mt. Jackson, Va., writes: "I have used it in my family for 15 years and have not found any ointment equal to it." Only 25c a box at druggists. For FREE sample, write to W. F. SHREVEPORT ITEMS.

The Methodist ministers of Shreveport met recently and organized a Preachers' Meeting. All the Methodist preachers of the city and vicinity are members. They meet on the first and third Wednesdays at 10 a. m. in the pastor's office of the First Church. The first meeting was with Rev. C. D. Atkinson, at the district parsonage. C. D. Atkinson was chosen president, L. N. Hoffpauir, Vice-President, and H. W. Ledbetter, Secretary and Treasurer. This meting was followed by a delightful social hour and a good dinner. They live well at the district parsonage.

The first reguiar meeting was held at the First Church, Feb. 7. Present: Vice-President L. N. Hoffpauir, R. H. Wynn, President of Centennary College, S. J. Davies, W. W. Drake, and J. L. Foster. In the absence of the President, L. N. Hoffpauir took the chair. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. S. J. Davies. J. L. Foster was secretary for the meeting in the absence of H. W. Ledbetter. Reports were called for from the preachers. Dr. Wynn reported that things were going on finely at Centenary College. They have a small but splendid body of students and are doing excellent work. There has been some sickness among the faculty, but he had valued assistance from Brother Foster, who now resides at the College. Dr. Davies reported a good outlook at Cedar Grove. He has a Bible class of Belgians and a growing Sunday school. Brother Drake said Noel Memorial was starting off finely. Most of his Conference collections are already provided for, and an optimistic spirit pervades the whole church. Rev. J. L. Foster reported the unavoidable suspension of some of his work in the country on account of the bad condition of the roads; but was full of hope for his work. Dr. Steel said everything was moving on well at the First Church. S. A. Steel was elected reporter for the meeting, and was instructed to furnish notes to the press.

PALPITATION AND OTHER DISORDERS OF THE HEART.

Weak hearts are exceedingly common. Directly you are conscious of the fact that you have a heart, it means that your heart is not acting normally and that it needs attention.

Every time your heart misses a beat its efficiency is lessened.

Heart trouble, taken in its early stages, may not be difficult to relieve; but the more the treatment is delayed the harder it is to obtain permanent relief. If there is the slightest symptom to show that your heart is weak or diseased you should not delay taking treatment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment has been the popular choice for more than twenty years. It has stood the test of time in a manner that forbids any doubt as to its efficiency. People who praised this remedy twenty years ago still believe in it and are only too glad to state that the trouble has never returned.

Any of these symptoms may indicate heart trouble: Shortness of Breath, Fluttering or Palpitation; Choking Sensation; Irregular Pulse; Weak or Hungry Spells, Swelling of Feet or Ankles, Pain under the Left Shoulder Blade.

If you notice any of these symptoms get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment. You risk nothing, for if the first bottle fails to benefit you, you have only to return the empty bottle to your druggist and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Sunday School

WESLEY BIBLE CLASS FEDERATION.

The meeting of the Louisiana Wesley Bible Classes at Alexandria, La., on March 14, 15, and 16, promises to be the biggest thing that has happened in the Methodist circles of Louisiana in a long time. Already hosts of royal Methodists are promising Secretary Breithaupt and his assistant, Miss Richardson, to be there for the meeting, and the program features are taking shape.

Bishop Atkins, without donbt the strongest Sunday school advocate in our ranks to-day and one of the stanchest friends the Wesley Bible Class has, is the leading feature on the program. The Bishop is down for two addresses, and those who know Bishop Atkins feel no uncertainty as to the greatness of the utterances he will make on this occasion.

Dr. George R. Stnart, one of the greatest platform men in the whole United States, and whose sermons are listened to twice every Sunday by congregations which fill to the fullest capacity our large First Church, Birmingham, Ala., will also probably make two addresses—and persons who miss hearing Dr. Stuart will miss a fortune.

Dr. S. A. Steel, our deservedly popular pastor at First Church, Shreveport, La., who has fittingly graced many of the finest and largest pulpits in the land, and who has performed a great service for Methodism, will deliver an address on the Bible which has been pronounced by competent jndges to be a masterpiece. Every Wesley Bible Class worker in Louisiana onght to hear Dr. Steel's address.

Dr. Chas. D. Bulla, the popular Superintendent of the Wesley Bible Class Department of our Church, will be on hand to lend delightful flavor to the whole feast. Come and hear his wit, feel his hnmor, and see his smile—one of those Wesley Bible Class smiles that won't come off.

Rev. Emmett Hightower, of Texas, the Field Secretary for the Southwestern Division, under our General Sunday School Board, is also to be on the program, and Mr. Hightower's experience in Wesley Federation work in Texas makes him a valuable addition to our program. Come to Alexandria for March 14, 15, and 16, and let Brother Hightower give you one of those genuine Texas Wesley Bible Class handshakes.

No, the ladies are not left out. From the foregoing it might seem to be a gathering of "Dr.'s," but the best part of the Wesley Bible Class world is the female part, and our Wesley Class sisters have a most worthy and capable representative in Mrs. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans, who will have a place that will add great value to the program.

Wesley Bible Classes are missionary bands in the best sense of the word, and the mission side of the work will be ably presented by Rev. N. E. Joyner, our consecrated and zealous pastor at Lake Charles, La.

This is only a part of the program—for it is not entirely made up yet—and from it the reader can readily see that no place in Louisiana is so distant bnt that it will be well worth while to travel to Alexandria for the three days, March 14, 15, and 16; exercises begin on the afternoon of the 14th and close at noon of the 16th.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten yon up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if yon take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

You can try these three excellent remedies for only 5c.

A GREAT LOSS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I send you a notice concerning the death of one of the best men in the Methodist Church at Indianola, Miss. He was thoroughly consecrated to the service of the Church. Pastors all found him so. He was a steward and was always interested in every department of Church work. He was also one of our best business men. The whole community feels the loss. He had been in bad health for some time, and had found it necessary to go to a hospital in New Orleans for an operation. It was performed, and they at first thought that he would get well, but he died there and the body was brought home for burial. A large number of people attended his funeral. Brother Smith was 61 years old. He had been an active member of the Church for 40 years, having served it in every way possible. We will greatly miss him. We are thankful that he leaves a very fine family. Mrs. Smith is a devoted church worker. We expect good things from his son. His son-in-law is now superintendent of the Sunday school. In fact, all of his family are useful members of the Church.

His pastor, J. H. MITCHELL.

PATIENCE.

Patience is the guardian of faith, the preserver of peace, the cherisher of love, the teacher of humility. Patience governs the flesh, strengthens the spirit, sweetens the temper, stifles anger, extinguishes envy, subdues pride; she bridles the tongue, refrains the hand, tramples upon temptations, endures persecution, consummates martyrdom. Patience produces unity in the Church, loyalty in the State, harmony in families and societies; she comforts the poor, and moderates the rich; she makes us humble in prosperity, cheerful in adversity, unmoved by calamity and reproach; she teaches us to forgive those who have injured us, and to be the first in asking forgiveness of those we have injured; she delights the faithful, and invites the unbelieving; she adorns the woman, and improves the man; is loved in a child, praised in a young man, admired in an old man; she is beautiful in either sex and in every age.—Bishop Horne.

STOPS TOBACCO HABIT.

Elder's Sanitarium, located at 513 Main St., St. Louis, Mo., has published a book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days.

As they are distributing this book free, any one wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.

"Whatever we do, whatever we give, whatever we are, there is more we ought to do, more we ought to give, and more we ought to be.—Canon Barnett.

The tendency to persevere, to persist in spite of hindrances, discouragements, and impossibilities: it is this that in all things distinguishes the strong soul from the weak.—Carlyle.

THE MOST DIFFICULT THING IN THE WORLD.

Years ago I was riding through Ohio with a very distinguished jurist, a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. I was a very young man, and still had my enthusiasms with me. I had not reached the point where I was too foolish to ask large questions. I turned to him and said: "Judge, tell me what is the most important and most difficult thing in the world." He smiled, and I smiled. At last he said: "That is a large question, but I will answer it. The most important and most difficult thing in the world is to make the mind and spirit of Jesus prevail in the world."—Eugene A. Noble.

It Works! Try It

Tells how to loosen a sore, tender corn so it lifts out without pain.

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the ether discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT NOTES.

The Presiding Elders' Council met here at Hattiesburg on Jan. 16. All the "Elders" were present except Rev. Geo. H. Thompson. He missed the train and got in too late for the business. The "secret caucus" has not leaked. It is wonderful how secretive and wise-looking some presiding elders can be. To the "outs" it looks ominous. Those who have been "in" know of the simplicity and harmlessness of the thing.

The Hattiesburg Woman's Missionary Union, comprising the Petal, Broad Street, Main Street, and Court Street Auxiliaries, met at Court Street Church on the fifth Monday, Jan. 29, at 3 o'clock p. m. The meeting was largely attended and was full of life. Mrs. H. O. Siebe, President of the Court Street Auxillary, presided over the meeting with ease and becoming dignity. The pastors of the four charges represented were in attendance. Refreshments and a social half-hour were greatly enjoyed by all.

Jones and Hardin have upset the equanimity of the Hattiesburg ministry. They came in cars, and now we who have no autos are up against it. Ministerial "upper tens" are the go now. Terry seems to be nervous, but Adams says he will walk along at the same old pace. He says he knows from more than sixty years' experience that walking is inexpensive and safe. He has never had to pay a gasoline bill; has never had the tires of his feet to "blowout," nor had to take his feet to a shop for repairs. He says the Lord gave him feet to walk with, and he is going to keep to the Lord's plan.

The Cause of Gray Hair.

Hair grows gray by reason of the same cause which produces dwarfed, yellow stalks of corn instead of strong, dark green growthy stalks—lack of nutrition. Hair, like the crops of the field, must be fed, either naturally from the scalp as the stalk of corn is fed from the soil, or artificial hair food may be applied as fertilizer is applied to the soil to enrich it. Unless your hair is supplied with natural oil—the food on which it subsists—you may expect it to cease its flourishing and lose its natural luster, color and beauty. The hair must have food on which to live. Don't neglect it or it will lose its luster, become stiff and coarse and eventually gray. Begin now and prevent the appearance of age by using a natural hair oil, "La Creole." It will keep the hair soft, fluffy and beautiful. Ask your dealer and if he can't supply you send $1.00 to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn., for a trial bottle.

The Hattiesburg District Conference will be held at Purvis, opening on May 15. The last district meeting held there was in May, 1892; Rev. Jno. A. Ellis was the presiding elder. Almost every member of that body has died. Jno. A. McLeod and T. W. Adams are the only surviving members, according to the memory of this scribe. Some of the strong men of the Mississippi Conference were there. They were: Jno. A. Ellis, H. D. Howell, C. A. Powell, J. S. Parker, M. H. Moore, and others. Brother Ellis was in very poor health and put matters towards the close of the meeting in the hands of T. W. Adams, who played presiding elder by preaching a big (?) sermon at 11 o'clock Sunday. Bro. McLeod says that that was the best district conference he ever attended. The strange thing about it is that McLeod doesn't remember Adams' big sermon. Too bad!

Rev. W. B. Alsworth was received with open arms by his splendid people at Richton upon his return to them. They are going to have a stir this year at Richton, the like of which has never been seen there. "Will" Alsworth is the fellow to stir things.

The situation at Magee is a happy one. Carter and his people are happy to be together another year. The prospects are good for a successful year.

Jolly is delighted at being returned to Seminary, and is just as happy as a fellow can be without a wife. Some girl is missing a mighty good man for a husband by Jolly remaining in "single blessedness." Adams says that if Court Street will give him a month's vacation he will undertake to marry off Jolly.

OLD PRESCRIPTION FOR WEAK KIDNEYS

A medicinal preparation like Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, that has real curative value, almost sells itself. Like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is a physician's prescription. It has been tested for years and has brought results to countless numbers who have suffered.

The success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder diseases, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

Do not suffer. Get a bottle of Swamp-Root from any druggist now. Start treatment to-day.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate.—Adv.

To-day's darkness blots not out yesterday's light, and in the depth of winter it is oftentimes pleasant to remember the summer glory; and so the uses of darkness are sometimes to make men value the light.—G. Dawson.

What is LAX-FOS?

LAX-FOS is an Improved Cascara, (a tonic laxative), pleasant to take. In LAX-FOS the Cascara is improved by the addition of certain harmless chemicals which increase the efficiency of the Cascara, making it better than ordinary Cascara. WHEN HEARTS ARE BROKEN.

It is impossible for us to do all that we would like to do for a friend who distrusts us. We can do most for those who trust us most. We can do all that is in our power for one who trusts us wholly. So it is that God Himself is prevented from doing all that He longs to do for any child of His who does not trust Him wholly. Is your heart broken by some sorrow, and do you long to have it healed? Then remember that "God will accept a broken heart, but he must have all the pieces." To withhold one tiny piece is to distrust Him—and we cannot know the wonders of His healing love as He longs to make it known. But the moment we give Him all, God gives us all. We may have nothing but a sadly broken, shattered life to offer Him; that does not hinder Him at all if only He may have all the wreckage. Then, as He withheld nothing of Himself on the Cross for our sakes, so He will withhold nothing of Himself now as our healing, our holiness, our life.—Sunday School Times.

THE END OF EDUCATION.

Dr. Francis Peabody, of Harvard, said in his "Religion of An Educated Man": "The end of education is not information, but inspiration; not facts, rules, tables, but insight, initiative, grasp, growth, character, power." If this be education, how unwise the kindergarten method with older pupils, the present-pleasure process, the line-of-least-resistance idea, so prevalent and applied to all departments of study. Strength is produced only by discipline. It is from the "severe studies" that real education is to be expected.—Christian Intelligencer.

Don't Let a Cold Get a Good Start

The way to check a cold is to fight it from the first. Even the worst maladies often are easily conquered if attacked early enough. Colds may leads to asthma, bronchial troubles and pulmonary affections. In the treatment of these one of the first needs is to build up body resistance.

Eckman's Alterative often has assisted in such upbuilding. As a treatment for the troubles named, it has been used for more than twenty years. And in many instances it has effected lasting relief.

As with any other medicine, it should be regarded only as a first aid to right care and hygienic living—and a safe one. For it contains no narcotics, opiates or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

NOTICE.

Wednesday, February 21, 1917, has been set apart by the Council of Women for Home Missions for observance as a day for Special Prayer for Home Missions. All of the denominations affiliated with the Council are requested to observe this season of prayer for the work, deaconesses, and home missionaries of this country. It will be a day when women's missionary societies all over the United States will be praying that this country may be God's country.

A special program has been prepared, so that each society may follow the same line of study and supplication. Order this program from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Where practicable it is suggested that the societies of the various churches and denominations hold this season of prayer together. Let all our societies bring our home mission problems and needs before our Father in united supplication.

No collections are to be taken—the day is to be spent in the study of our needs and in supplication.

Don't forget: February 21, Day of Prayer for Home Missions. Order program from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI REPORTS PLEDGE IN FULL.

Miss Dunstan, Corresponding Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference Society, wries: "You will be glad to know that your other constituent, the North Mississippi Conference, will report its pledge in full. We pledged $4500 and have raised over $4700."

In addition to this information, Miss Dunstan tells of the wonderful results of their Membership Campaign. "We have added 2385 members, 702 of whom came through old auxiliaries and 1683 through 101 new auxiliaries."

Like the prophet Isaiah of old, it can be truly said of these women that they set their faces like flint and they knew that they would not be ashamed. Had they not heard the voice of God saying, "Call unto me and I will answer thee and show thee great and mighty things which thou knowest not?" When we call fervently upon the Lord, he always hears and he shows us great and mighty things. This Conference has indeed had its efforts blessed abundantly and can take its place among the conferences that have accomplished a work of which they need not to be ashamed.

Our three Conferences have fulfilled their vows unto the Lord, and we know we are not the only ones, for we heard the other day that one of the Texas Conference Societies had done the same. Will it not be a halleluiah time when the Council meets and so many Conferences report such a decided advance in their work? Such a concerted movement on the part of our women proves that they are anxious that "all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of God."

May we be able to breathe as a prayer the words of the hymn:

"Great God, whose universal sway
The known and unknown worlds obey;
Now give the kingdom to thy Son,
Extend His power, exalt His throne."

I OWE MY HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Washington Park, Ill.—"I am the mother of four children and have suffered with female trouble, backache, nervous spells and the blues. My children's loud talking and romping would make me so nervous I could just tear everything to pieces and I would ache all over and feel so sick that I would not want anyone to talk to me at times. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills restored me to health and I want to thank you for the good they have done me. I have had quite a bit of trouble and worry but it does not affect my youthful looks. My friends say 'Why do you look so young and well?' I owe it all to the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. ROBT. STOPIEL, Moore Avenue, Washington Park, Illinois.

We wish every woman who suffers from female troubles, nervousness, backache or the blues could see the letters written by women made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have any symptom about which you would like to know write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free of charge.

The Southern Farmers' Guide to Profitable Planting

We feel mighty happy to be able to offer this handsome new catalogue to every Southern farmer. It's the fifty-third book in a series that we've been issuing for 27 years, the contents of which have been so truthful, so interesting and so instructive that we have hardly been able to supply all the calls for them for the last few years.

And we're not only happy but also proud to submit to the South this brand new Hastings' Catalogue for Spring, 1917, because it's honestly and truthfully useful.

Its outside cover is beautifully done in rich colors,—is handsome enough to be framed. Its inside one hundred pages not only explain why Hastings' Seeds are always fresh, clean and especially adapted to Southern conditions, but are also chuck-full of valuable suggestions and interesting illustrations.

We'd like to send this book free to every progressive farmer in the Southern states. Write us for YOUR copy NOW, while you're thinking of it.

Olive Branch, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please allow me space enough in the Advocate to call attention to the error in the statistical report of the Mt. Pleasant charge, Holly Springs District, North Mlssissippl Conference. The minutes show that the charge did not pay anythlng to the Sunday School Secretary. The charge paid everything in full, and then a little more. The mistake is an oversight of mine, and the statistical secretaries are not responsible for it. There is no place in the report for it and I failed to fill in the blank space. I can show returned check if necessary.—W. S. Selman.

Strongs, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: The first quarterly conference for this charge was held on Wednesday, Jan. 31. Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, our new presiding elder, was present and presided over the conference with dignity and like one who was an old hand at the job. He made a very favorable lmpression upon the people here. Mrs. Lipscomb came with him and I think that she outstripped Brother Lipscomb in the lmpression that she made on our people. The people were delighted with Sister Lipscomb's visit and she will always find a hearty welcome awaiting her at any time that she may come this way. The quarterly conference was a very profitable occasion, and the reports from both Prairie and Strongs were encouraging. The prospects are really good for a successful year in the work of the Church. I think that we will be able to make some progress here during the next twelve months. I am in hopes that I may be able to report everything in full at the Annual Conference this fall.—C. Wesley Baley, P. C.

Jena, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed one of the most successful meetings that Jena has ever witnessed. There were more than 100 conversions and 29 persons joined the Methodist Church. Others will join the Baptist Church. Many in the church were revived and pledged themselves to a better life. Brother H. T. Young, our Conference Evangelist, did the preaching. He is a strong gospel preacher and God honored his preaching. Brother Jack Brokaw led the singing. These brethren make a fine team. Any pastor would be fortunate to secure their services in a meeting. People came through rain and ice to hear the message that the evangelist brought them. Christians of all denominations joined in the meeting and were greatly blessed. A young peoples' prayer meeting was organized and promises to be a great blessing. We have received 33 members into the Church since Conference. We thank God and take courage. Pray for us.—J. O. Bennett, P. C.

Hattiesburg Circuit (Miss. Conf.)

Dear Dr. Meek: Bright prospects confront us on this charge. We have completed the first round, and have made a reasonably good start on what we are planning for and expecting to be a most profitable year, both spiritually and materially. At the seven appointments a cordial welcome was given me and the initial services were entered into with a noticeable degree of spiritual fervor. Half of our time is given to Petal, a progressive suburb of the "Hub" City, just across Leaf River. A substantial and well designed new church stands as a credit to Methodism and the enthusiastic workers here, who are responsible for its erection. We hope to have it dedicated this year. We anticipate with pleasure having our brotherly presiding elder, Rev. W. B. Jones, with us February 10 and 11. This is the occasion of our first quarterly conference. Brother Dan Kelly is scheduled to assist us in a campaign against sin, and for the spiritual quickening of the Church, about the middle of February. As this charge is in its infant stage, no regular parsonage has yet been provided. However, we are occupying a rented cottage for the present. Last Tuesday night evidence of the interest of our kind and thoughtful people in their pastor and his family was manifested in a substantial, old-time "pounding." After a delightful social hour, concluded with prayer, we felt that the ties of Christian love had been woven closer between the pastor and people as we separated.—Charles E. Downer, Pastor.

WARNING TO FARMERS.

The extreme scarcity of cars constitutes quite a problem to the farmers and the fertilizer manufacturer. Usually farmers are in the habit of ordering fertilizers a short time before they are ready to haul them or put them into the ground. That is impracticable this year. Those farmers who are late in ordering their fertilizers probably will be forced to plant without any fertilizer. The fertilizer factories are able to ship promptly, but the railroads are not able to supply the cars promptly. Hence it is a matter of extremest importance that farmers get in their orders as far in advance as possible if they would avoid disappointment in delivery of their fertilizer supplies. It is not an unusual thing for shipments to be delayed for weeks owing to the inability to get cars. Many cities have been facing coal famines, having only one or two days' supply of coal on hand owing to the car shortage, and this car shortage applies to all classes of cars. Hence every wise farmer will place his fertilizer orders as early as possible giving the fertilizer factories opportunity to ship whenever they can get the cars to make the shipments.

One of the sure preventions of a spiritual collapse is to pay closer attention to the outward acts when we find the temptation to distrust God assailing us. The prayer engaged in reluctantly may be the very thing necessary to fortify our position. Devout customs, persevered in during periods of apathy, are often bridges across the torrent.—Rev. W. C. Roberts.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness and bladder irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

TO LIVE LONG!

A recipe given by a famous physician for long life was: "Keep the kidneys in good order! Try to eliminate thru the skin and intestines the poisons that otherwise clog the kidneys. Avoid eating meat as much as possible; avoid too much salt, alcohol, tea. Try a milk and vegetable diet. Drink plenty of water, and exercise so you sweat—the skin helps to eliminate the toxic poisons and uric acid."

For those past middle life, for those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation, as backache, scalding "water," or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, "rusty" joints, stiffness, get Anuric at the drug store. This is a wonderful eliminator of uric acid and was discovered by Dr. Pierce of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. If your druggist does not keep it send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial package and you will find that it is many times more potent than lithia and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar

NOTHING STANDS AS HIGH, as a remedy for every womanly ailment, as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's the only medicine for women certain in its effects.

"Favorite Prescription" is an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and a complete cure for all the functional derangements, painful disorders, and chronic weaknesses peculiar to the sex.

For young girls just entering womanhood; for women at the critical time; nursing mothers; and every woman who is "run-down," tired or overworked—it is a special, safe, and certain help.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels, Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

How to preserve health and beauty is told in Doctor Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It is free. Send Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., four dimes, or stamps, to cover wrapping and mailing.

CHURCH NEWS ITEMS.

Seven hundred and fifty-one pastoral charges of our Church are served this year by supplies.

The date of the meeting of the Baltimore Conference has been changed by Bishop Hoss from March 21 to March 28.

Of the 3917 persons added to the Church last year on profession of faith in the charges of the Western North Carolina Conference, 3559 came from the Sunday school.

Rev. J. E. Godbey, D.D., of Kirkwood, Mo., has sent to the School of Theology of Emory University a very fine picture of John Wesley. It is a copy of the last picture of Mr. Wesley and was brought over by direction of Bishop Asbury. This picture has hung over the desk of Dr. Godbey for thirty years and was a gift to him from a Northern Methodist friend. It is a valuable contribution to the large collection of Wesley pictures already in possession of the University.

COMMENDING REV. J. S. PURCELL.

Whereas the Rev. J. S. Purcell while President of the Mississippi Conference Training School for the past two and a half years wrought so faithfully and effectively in our midst in behalf of the church and community at large; and whereas he devoted himself especially to raising the standard of efficiency in school work, and under his administration the Waldo Moore Literary Society has attained a high degree of success, largely due to his efforts;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Waldo Moore Literary Society that we do hereby express our appreciation of the service rendered by him while among us.

Be it further resolved, that we commend him to the people with whom he has gone to labor.

Resolved, lastly, hat a copy of these resolutions be sent to Rev. J. S. Purcell, a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy spread upon the minutes of the Society.

Signed: B. H. Williams, Brunner M. Hunt, L. Clegg, Committee.

Adopted by the Society Jan. 19, 1917.

OUR MISTAKES.

Sometimes they entail very serious consequences, do they not? Even though we had no bad intention when we made them, they have a perverse way of overlooking that absence of wrong motive, and keep on dogging our steps long after we think we ought to have escaped them. Of course, that fact ought to teach us the necessity for greater care and wisdom. A sensible man ought to take his mistakes somewhat seriously, and let them instruct him for the future. But one of the most serious mistakes we can make in life is to take our mistakes too seriously. If we are guilty of that folly then our mistakes cease to be helpful factors in our lives, and become drags and fetters, checking and hampering us at every hand. In thinking of our mistakes and their sometimes serious consequences it is well to remember that there are great reconstructive and recreative forces at work in life that are very actively on the side of the man who is determined to improve upon a bad or foolish past. And that brings hope, no matter how great the mistakes have been.—Christian Guardian.

THE BETTER WAY.

You will find it less easy to uproot faults than to choke them by gaining virtues. Do not think of your faults; still less of others' faults; in every person who comes near you look for what is good and strong; honor that, rejoice in it; and, as you can, try to imitate it; and your faults will drop off, like dead leaves, when their time comes.—Ruskin.

VALUE OF A GOOD BOOK.

He who loves a book will never want a faithful friend, a wholesome counselor, a cheerful companion, an effectual comforter, as by reading, writing, and thinking one may innocently divert and pleasantly entertain himself in all weather, so in all fortunes.—Barrow.

Often reflect upon thyself, and observe what company is with thy heart. We may know by the noise in the school that the master is not there; much of the misrule in our bosom arises from the neglect of visiting our hearts.—Gurnall.

Freckles—

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho peels off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking, and, of course, has no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY, 22, 1917. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

BRILLIANT, BUT NOT SCRIPTURAL.

In The Outlook of February 14, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has an article under the caption, "The Dawn and Sunrise of History," which is notably brilliant, and which is a fine illustration of the extraordinary versatility of that distinguished American citizen. It is largely a review of a recent work from the pen of Professor James Henry Breasted, the well known Orientalist and Egyptologist of Chicago University, entitled "Ancient Times: a History of the Early World." Perhaps the most striking thing in the Ex-President's entertaining dissertation is the implicit faith that he exhibits in the statements and deductions of the archaeologists; indeed, he seems to swallow in toto and without the least misgivings all their reasonings and conclusions. Note, for instance, the following passage: "We now know that the prehistory of man, during the period that he had become clearly human but before he had reached the lower levels of civilization or had learned to leave written records, covered a period of certainly two hundred thousand years, and probably twice as long." (Italics ours.)

This quotation clearly shows that Mr. Roosevelt is an evolutionist, and rather indicates that he does not believe the first chapters of Genesis to be historical, though the evidence that he holds the latter view is not so conclusive as that he adheres to the former. It must be said to his credit, however, that he locates the dawn of history about where the Scriptures place man in the beginning of his career. He says: "The historic record opens along the lower Nile, and along the lower Euphrates, in the flat plain—the Plain of Shinar—through which the Euphrates and Tigris enter the Persian Gulf. The latter region can conveniently, although not quite accurately, be known as Mesopotamania—its civilization later included the region to which this term may with narrower propriety be restricted. * * * The country at the mouth of the Euphrates and Tigris is part of what Mr. Breasted has christened the Fertile Crescent, which stretches in a curve from Palestine through Syria, into Mesopotamia, with barren highlands to the north and sheer desert to the South."

It is a great mistake to think that large credulity is restricted to the ignorant. Sir Oliver Lodge, the eminent English scientist, is a Spiritualist, and has lately written a volume telling of conversations that he has had with a son who was killed in battle in France several months ago. And here we have perhaps the most widely known citizen of our Republic writing of a pre-human man as if there were no doubt that such a creature had once existed—this, too, when the missing link yet remains to be produced. And the difference between two hundred thousand and four hundred thousand years would seem to leave a pretty wide gap of uncertainty. It probably would hardly be saying too much to affirm that all men are excessively credulous in some direction. The tendency in this materialistic age is to accept readily anything that science has to say, however miraculous, while decrying all that is supernatural in religion.

We would not be understood from the foregoing as relegating Mr. Roosevelt to the class of skeptics. He is a member of the Dutch Reformed Church and an avowed Christian; but, while conceding him many excellent qualities, we scarcely think that he is an orthodox and safe religious teacher. Possibly the Harvard atmosphere has left its taint upon him. However, we should scarcely be justified in criticising him too severely while we have Methodist College presidents and professors who set forth from public platforms the evolution theory of the origin of the human race, rather than the Scriptural account of how mankind came into being.

The following declaration of Mr. Roosevelt in the course of his discussion is thoroughly characteristic: "But the curse of every ancient civilization was that its men in the end became unable to fight. Materialism, luxury, safety, even sometimes almost modern sentimentality, weakened the fiber of each civilized race in turn; each became in the end a nation of pacifists, and then each was trodden under foot by some ruder people that had kept that virile fighting power the lack of which makes all other virtues useless, and sometimes even harmful."

We agree with the Ex-President that wealth and luxury by enervating the peoples of the past and robbing them of the more robust and nobler virtues paved the way for their decline and downfall; but we do not like the suggestion that fighting is necessary to the maintenance of the virility of a nation's citizenship. We believe it is quite possible for a people, by simple living and by addressing themselves to large and unselfish tasks for the common good, to retain the stronger and more sterling qualities of manhood and womanhood without a resort to arms and the shedding of blood. We are not by any means a peace-at-any-price man, and we have no sort of doubt that there is such a thing as justifiable warfare; but we cannot accept the view that war is a necessity and that it is the only preservative of a civilization from decay. It is our conviction that Christianity, rightly understood and truly lived, will keep a population clean and strong and forceful, as nothing else can do.

SELF-CONTROL.

There is no more valuable element in the make-up of personality than self-control. It is a source of strength that is almost beyond measurement. Some one has called it the charioteer of the soul, guiding its possesser along the safe road, when deflections would bring disaster, and possibly ruin. The lack of it has been the cause of the downfall of many of the mightiest spirits that the race has produced. It was this that cut short the career of Alexander the Great, led Mark Antony to a suicide's grave, and sent Napoleon to the surf-beaten shores of St. Helena. Failures and wrecks due to the absence of self-control may in this day be seen on every side. Blessed is the man who amid excitement, confusion, and perturbing provocations, can keep himself in hand! The Christian religion tends to develop this splendid faculty, but it is by no means possessed by all Christians. Elijah could scarcely be said to be master of himself when under the juniper tree; nor could the apostles amid the last scenes in the earthly life of our Lord. But Jesus himself, our great Exemplar, was never upset by anything that happened in his stormy and tragic career. Self-mastery in the highest degree ever characterized him. This is a virtue for which every disciple of Christ, by prayer, watchfulness, and the aid of the Holy Spirit, should unceasingly strive. A poet thus impressively sets forth the power and achievments of self-control:

I saw an angel with majestic mien
And radiant brow, and smile divinely sweet.
Strong human passions writhed beneath his feet;
There, too, expired those coward faults which screen
Themselves behind inheritance, and lean
On dead men for their strength and think it meet—
All, all lay prostrate, owning their defeat.

Then to the spirit with the eyes serene
I cried aloud, in wonder and in awe:
"O mighty one, who art thou that thy glance
Can circumvent heredity—cheat chance,
And conquer nature? What thine occult law?
Art thou incarnate Force—the over-soul?"
The angel answered: "I am Self-control."

A NEW IDEAL PROPOSED.

The question has been asked, "Does Southern Methodism desire to become a province?" It might be better to be "a province," than not to be at all. But a Church that extends over half the vast American Republic, that has projected its work into China, Korea, Japan, Africa, Mexico, and South America, and which is steadily widening the sphere of its operations, is a pretty good-sized province—one that we scarcely need to be ashamed of. Majestic ministers, quite as large in every respect as any that we have now, have lived and labored without the bounds of Southern Methodism without finding themselves straitened within its limits.

There has been but one denomination that has had anything like a world dominion—the Roman Catholic—and behold its past record and what it has "BECOME!" Such talk is new among Methodists, especially among those of the South; and we trust that it will not hold the stage long. The Churches in every nation should as soon as possible be made self-supporting and self-governing; and this is the principle for which we have hitherto stood, and for which it is to be hoped we shall continue to stand. The most hateful thing about Rome is its foreign government, seeking to control from the Vatican in Italy far-away peoples in other lands. John Wesley said, "The world is my parish," and he wanted Christ proclaimed to men everywhere, but he indulged in no dream of a world-wide ecclesiasticism. His course toward the Methodists in the United States furnishes ample proof of the correctness of this statement.

THE FATHER.

A. E. L. A.M.

Not the way I dear Father can I go
This is the path that Thou wouldst have me choose
That dark valley that turns stream is true.
That rocky steep is mine.' I must refuse

Child of My love, have I not carefully
Been leading thee for this dear work of Mine?
Hast rejoicing given is on this mountain side
No shout nor singing I as well as thine.

Thou canst not see My walk, but soon shalt find
That dark valley is where will flowers most sweet
And strength by paths I will reveal to thee
And that dark stream prove nearest heart thy feet.

Father, humble me. Let Thy wondrous love
Subdue this wayward and rebellious heart.
Teach me to do Thy will, obedient prove
And with rejoicing take a dear my part.

—Southern Churchman.

THE PRAYER.

It is true prayer when one turns his heart inside upside down and pours out its contents at the feet of Christ. "Ye people, pour out your heart before Him. God is a refuge for us." "Pour out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord."—F. B. Meyer.

OUR DAILY TASK.

Men often complain that they have little time for nurturing the higher spiritual life and that all of their daily associations combine to lead them away from God. Dr. W. L. Watkinson says: "In our daily tasks lying as they do among the realities and not the dreams of life, we witness for Christ. * * * Heaven appoints our place and work better than we could choose. It is one of the primary ends of His providence.' Our safety lies not in changing the daily associations, but in changing them into higher opportunities. We are not to be overcome of evil, but to overcome evil with good. Regret not the associations which are so distasteful to you, but determine to become salt and light like your blessed Master. It is not alone in the cloister that we grow in grace, but also out in the world of sin when in humility and fidelity we represent our Master.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

THE PATIENCE OF FAITH.

Faith is able to wait with patience. Delay need be a "resistance" and an "evidence" to the Paul's great words it does not need to fret or chafe under delay. John Wesley said of himself that he was "always in haste but never in a hurry." This was because he was a man of profound faith. He believed in God. He believed in man. He believed in himself. It is the man who does really not believe in himself or others or God who can never "possess his soul in patience." He has such small faith in nature's necessary processes that he must forestall what the pot boil. He doubts the validity of kindness hence he continually overexamines it. He is never quite willing to let God "keep" that which he has "committed unto him." His counterpart is the man who believeth and who, "believing," does not need to "make haste." Of course, there is no time to lose, but there is still less time to worry.—George Clarke Peck.

MINISTERIAL INFLUENCE.

There is a difference between a social influence in a minister of the gospel and a moral influence. Social influence gives popularity, but moral influence is seen in the regeneration of lives. Social influence is often won at the expense of moral influence. Compromise of principle for the sake of praise is the price many men pay for popularity. It is even yet well to "remember the words of the Lord Jesus," "Beware when all men speak well of you." But how many ministers would by men whom they could not reprove. They despise them when they become foes. There are days when the true will of God leads to take a resolute stand against a tide of popular favor. Let the Lord in Israel, the ones of us do not like the taste of humble pie be not either.—The Methodist Protestant.

THE NEGRO MEMBERS IN THE UNITED AMERICAN METHODISM.

Dear Brother West: In the Advocate of February 1 is an article by Rev. F. G. Lowrey on the Negro problem now before the Church for solution. The problem is to determine "the status of the Negro membership in the proposed united Church." As we have no Negro members in our Church, the problem is not ours to solve. The trouble is with the brethren in North. They have more than a hundred of a million, with all the rights and privileges of white brethren. They are on an equality in every department of the Church—legislative, executive and judicial. This applies to both men and women. They are all over everywhere and all the same except in social life, and even there the "color line" in a few instances is not personized. No wonder our Northern brethren are troubled, not to say embarrassed when they come to consider the matter of unification with the Church, South.

Brother Lowrey thinks the Negro should be no barrier to unification. He says nothing in the Negro is known but a misdemeanor. The whole sense of the article indicates a preference for "unification first" rather than unification and that the Negro should not stand in the way. I mean no offense by this statement. I am so impressed, and the impression depreciates the value of his article.

In solving the problem Brother Lowrey would be satisfied with one of five things. He would be pleased to see the Negroes set off to themselves and have their affairs administered by their own Bishops and other officers, as he once witnessed in the Annual Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. All of us would be satisfied by such an arrangement. It would be a vindication of the wisdom of our fathers, who, in 1866, did the best possible for our colored members, not by turning them loose, but by forming them into an independent jurisdiction, a step we have never had occasion to regret. Or Brother Lowrey would be satisfied to see the Negroes remain in the Church just as they are and have at their head "a leader with of an old and developed race" as he once saw under the administration of Bishop Joyce. Brother Lowrey prefers the latter plan, but unfortunately, there is no chance for it. If our Oklahoma plan is adopted the Negroes will form a separate and independent Church. If the Saratoga plan is successful they will be organized into one of the Jurisdictional Conferences and elect their own leaders. They would be sure to elect men or women of their own race.

"By Methodists coming together and be one—Negroes and all others—is charged to "prejudice" and "animosity." I dismiss without comment the charge that Southern Methodists cherish enmity towards the Negroes. We do not hate them. The charge of prejudice cannot be disposed of so summarily. And for I hope that our General Conference will not act without reason when it proposes to put the Negroes in a separate and independent jurisdiction. The Conference had both reasons and a precedent. The reasons were not stated. It was not necessary to do so. Everybody, including Brother Lowrey knows what they are. It was not because the Negroes were once slaves, nor because they are black and ignorant, nor yet because they are in their infancy. These are drawbacks and necessarily handicap the race; but the real reason is race-inferiority. The Negro is not the equal of the white man.

No matter what the status of the Negro, legal, intellectual or moral, our lawmakers well know that race consciousness, or race instinct, as fully developed in the black man as in the white man, had to be reckoned with in proposing any scheme of unification. The question did not involve the relation of the Negro to the Lord Jesus Christ. That has settled so far as Southern Methodists are concerned, long before the Methodists of the North felt themselves called to take him into their fraternal fold.

Race consciousness always alive and acknowledged, is more pronounced today than ever. Circumstances have emphasized it. "Freedom and equality" were slogans with the Negroes immediately after the War between the States, and those in authority proceeded to arm them with every available emblem and implement of liberty. They put the ballot in their hands, gave them free access to liquor, sent them to the Legislature, and put them in the halls of Congress. And what was not "nominated in the bond," they assumed. What was the result? Let the many black pages of history tell the story—I cannot. Wise men, North and South, saw the mistake of making voting citizens of such a mass of ignorance and deplored it. Dr. Edgar Blake, Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Sunday Schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a member of the Commission on Unification, says in Zion's Herald of January 31: "There are many friends of the Negro who believe that that act of enfranchisement was one of the greatest mistakes the government ever made in dealing with the Negro." Dr. Blake further says: "Our Church gave him full representation in the General Conference, but it is very doubtful if it would do it now if it were facing the question again." How does that sound? Spoken in Boston, too! In making these utterances, Dr. Blake does not say, why. The most of us know.

The idea of race consciousness is not confined to the obscure and uninformed. It is maintained by men in high places. Our own Bishop E. D. Mouzon, in the Christian Advocate (Nashville) of Feb. 9, thus speaks: "Recognition must be given to race consciousness. Everywhere we hear it. Great peoples and lesser peoples are insisting upon it all over the world. Race consciousness is from God and cannot be ignored or overridden. Racial integrity must be preserved in America for the protection of the Negro as well as for the protection of the white man." Bishop Mouzon was discussing unification. Without attempting to interpret the Bishop's words I venture to say that if he does not mean that it is best for the Negroes to be put in a separate jurisdiction, I do not know what he means.

Speaking of the organization of the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church into a Regional Jurisdiction," with equal representation in the General Conference with other Regional Conferences, Dr. Blake, above quoted, has this to say: "We are face to face with social conditions in the South that cannot be ignored. Racial lines are sharply defined and cannot be lightly moved aside by saying that such ought not to be. It is a condition that we face, and not a theory. It is a part of the problem that we cannot escape. And it should be borne in mind that these conditions are not confined to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The color line is more closely drawn in churches of our own denomination in the South than in the churches of our sister denomination. * * * And, further, this racial condition is not confined to the South. It is becoming increasingly acute in the North. A Negro cannot make a purchase in the largest dry goods store in Chicago. * * * I am not justifying this condition. I am stating it as part of the problem that we have to face."

Dr. Blake is right. Conditions brought about by race consciousness cannot be ignored. We must simply meet them and act accordingly. Nor is it unchristian to recognize them. A man is none the less a Christian because he worships in his own house and in his own way, and makes laws for his own government. He is unchristian when he denies to others the privileges he enjoys and the rights he claims for himself. Brother Lowrey's reference to the beauty of unity as exhibited by the blending of the races in the Roman Catholic Church in his home town is worthless as an illustration. In view of the fact that in the Roman Catholic Church the laity have no voice in Church government. The priest, himself, who ministers to these colored members has no voice. Rome is an absolute monarchy with as submissive subjects as ever lived. Notwithstanding, if the church at Donaldsonville had put over it a colored priest, Brother Lowrey would see something besides unity and submission. The reference to the colored Conference held by Bishop Thirkield "in the classic city of Mansfield, La., the site of our Methodist (South) school for girls," is worse than useless. This is a free land, and Bishop Thirkield and his Conference, if invited, had a perfect right to go there. (One wholly unacquainted with conditions, reading Brother Lowrey's words, would infer that the Conference was accorded the freedom of the city, had access to the houses of the people, and the welcome of the college girls.) That nobody saw any "impropriety in the Church as thus governed" is not surprising. It was not the business of the citizens of Mansfield. They did not stop to inquire. But we dare say the Methodists of Mansfield will make it their business if the Commissioners on Unification endeavor to force Negroes on Southern Methodists as lawmakers.

I do not hate the Negro. I would not throw a straw in his way to heaven. I would not even hesitate to worship with him, as I have done scores and scores of times in the long ago. But a change of circumstances has come. We can no longer worship as we did. This change of circumstances does not demand that I assist in placing him in a position where he can join with men of like notions with himself in making laws for my government. And I am not going to do it!

Nashville, Tenn. J. W. BOSWELL.

A DUAL WAR CRY.

Rev. W. W. Pinson, D. D.

"Lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes." Isa. 54:2.

Had Isaiah written but yesterday, he might have written this jubilant message of enlargement for the Advocate family. This is the prophetic message for the hour. Shall we not hear it and heed it and gird our loins for advance?

A distinguished Belgian said to an American audience a few months ago: "Don't pity us; pity yourselves. You are only growing rich out of the war—only growing rich." Is it possible that, amid the ashes of their physical desolation, they can justly pity our more terrible spiritual desolation?

The Europeans are learning the lesson of self-forgetting service at a terrible cost. Their treasure, their sons, their luxuries they freely lay on the altar of war. They even consent to limit their necessities to a war basis. More money is spent for war by a single nation in one day than all America gave last year for foreign missions. More young men followed the flag to the trenches from Cambridge and Oxford alone than are asked for to evangelize the world.

Last year we Southern Methodists did not give for foreign missions more than one sixtieth of our share of the profits on our trade with foreign countries alone. There is no coin small enough to measure the average weekly giving of a Methodist to send the Gospel to the heathen.

Our greatest danger is not war. It is lust of gold and love of luxury.

This is the canker that will eat out every noble and heroic trait and leave but the lying semblance of manhood.

The dual war-cry of the Kingdom is a call to pray and a call to the sacrificial life. Only so can we drive our stakes deeper at home and lengthen our cords abroad. Can we hear this war-cry amid the jingle of our dollars?

Is it irreverent to say that God is pounding at the doors of American churches and that he will not be turned away? He will wake a heart cry sooner or later. It may be of reverent and filial intercession, tremulous with love and holy trust; or it may be a wail, sharp and bitter with the agony of despair. But He will not be put off.

What are we going to do about it? That is what we want to ask ourselves over and over during the "Week of Prayer," which our Board of Missions asks us to observe April 1-8 next.

Under the shadow of the cross and in the splendor of the resurrection, we want to take stock of our souls and uncover our consciences at the mercy seat. We shall listen to Him who said, "Go ye into all the world," as he asks a reason why we have not gone.

Two million Methodists have it in their power to say whether the thin battle line shall be pushed out to further victories or whether it must fight on in a deadlock with heathenism, and to answer whether eager volunteers shall go to the front or stay at home.

We will decide whether the hearts of those who hold the forlorn posts shall sink with hope deferred, or break forth into singing as they greet the new recruits.

A relief corps of twenty new men is needed at the front to help set the line in motion for new frontiers. We will join to pray—this, first and middle and last—and to give for advance, or we will count our gains and gorge our lust for pleasure in the shadow of a world tragedy.

A thin line of missionaries, poorly equipped, face 40,000,000 of heathen. They wait for reinforcement and the word to advance. Shall two millions of prosperous and contented Methodists refuse the poor response of twenty men? We are to answer this during our Easter Week of Prayer.

Our Christ has the world on His heart. Shall we not stand with Him on Olivet in the Easter glory and take the world—the lost and groaning world—on our hearts, and learn anew the lesson of intercession?

SISTER MARY BROWN.

Dear Advocate: I wish to write a little about the life of Sister Mary Brown, the mother of two of our preachers, Rev. R. O. Brown, of Clarksdale, and Rev. S. A. Brown, of Kosciusko. I do not feel inclined to write the usual or ordinary obituary, for the reason that her life was not an ordinary one—in fact, her spirit and Christian life were so far above the usual, that I feel wholly unfitted for the task of speaking of one so far advanced in spiritual things.

Sister Brown was the daughter of that distinguished Methodist preacher, Rev. Geo. Shaeffer. She was born in Columbus, Miss., on May 23, 1843, and on July 14, 1864, was married to Mr. Stephen A. Brown. Her father, the Rev. Geo. Shaeffer, was one of the most beloved preachers in our Conference. There are those still living who remember him in his prime, when he was not only loved by thousands, but was a preacher of righteousness of unusual power and eloquence. When Sister Brown was married, her husband had two sons and one daughter by a former marriage; they were Mr. O. P. Brown, of Columbus, Miss., Rev. R. O. Brown, our present pastor at Clarksdale, Miss., and Mrs. W. B. Vaughan (Luey), who lives near Columbus. There were three girls and two boys born of his second marriage: Mrs. H. C. Pilkinton and Mrs. J. U. Tate, of Mayhew, Miss., and Mrs. John Beale, of Greenwood, Miss. The two boys were George S., who died a number of years ago, and Rev. S. A. Brown, our gifted pastor at Kosciusko, Miss.

Since the death of her husband, years ago, Sister Brown has lived with her children most of the time. I would especially call attention to the deep, genuine, triumphant, abiding nature of her spiritual life. The blind man who received his sight from our Lord said, "Jesus Christ opened mine eyes." Of her, it may be said, "Jesus Christ made her gentle in all her life." I do not remember to have ever been in her presence that I did not feel the refining influence of her Christian gentleness. She believed with all her heart in the power of prayer, and the world will never know how much of her time was spent in prayer for its salvation. And the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference will never know how deeply she loved them, or how much she prayed for them. The space allotted will not permit me to say what ought to be said of such a life as hers. If we can understand it, and it is difficult to do, let us bear in mind that every Methodist preacher has lost a friend; every lost soul an earthly advocate, and Mississippi one of the choicest, purest, and most richly endowed of all her daughters. She died in Greenwood the day before our Conference met in Winona, last December. We buried her in Mayhew the following day. Let the children who miss her so sorely bear in mind that God and the angels know how to take good care of such a mother until the Second Coming of our Lord and Christ.

New Albany, Miss. S. L. POPE.

SOME OF BROTHER LOWREY'S LACKS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just read the article of Rev. P. O. Lowrey, in the Advocate of Feb. 8, and in at least one respect I am most happy to agree with him, namely, that he writes "in the absence of definite information." As a matter of fact, the scope of his misinformation is even wider than he is willing to confess. From what source did he learn that Simon who carried the Lord's Cross was a Negro? He asserts it as a matter beyond dispute. Will he be good enough to tell us why he thinks so? The mere fact that Simon was a resident of the Greek Colony of Cyrene in the north of Africa no more makes him a Negro than the residence of Oom Paul Kruger, and other Dutchmen, Frenchmen, and Englishmen in the South of Africa made Negroes out of them. In simple truth, Simon was a Jew, who had come up from Cyrene to Jerusalem to worship. There were so many such Jews that it became necessary for them to have a special synagogue at Jerusalem. There is not a single circumstance that would lead an intelligent man to say that Simon was a Negro—not one. And does Brother Lowrey undertake to deny that there are Japanese problems and Chinese problems? If he does, it is simply because he does not know what he is talking about. Certainly no man agrees with him who has visited China and Japan and made a careful investigation on the ground. May I say that when a man lacks "definite information" on any particular subject he has manifestly a providential call to keep silent about it? Very respectfully,

A REVIEW OF DR. BLAKE'S ARTICLE ON THE UNIFICATION OF AMERICAN METHODISM.

(This utterance appeared in the Southwestern Christian Advocate of February 15, one of the official organs of the Northern Methodist Church. It was written by Dr. Robert E. Jones, the editor, who is one of the leading colored ministers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a member of the Joint Commission on Unification. It will be remembered that we copied an extract from Dr. Blake's address pertaining to the Negro aspect of the unification problem in our issue of last week.—Editor N. O. Advocate.)

We could have wished that the discussion of all points of difficulty in the approach to organic union had been delayed for a while. We believe a delay would have been conducive to the movement under way. The subject, however, is now up in all of its phases, and lest there be a crystallization of sentiment which shall jeopardize the interests of one-tenth of the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, it is best that we have a frank discussion. Moreover, the silence on the part of the colored people may be misinterpreted. It certainly may leave room for concluding that we have no set convictions on this whole question of organic union. Without our choosing, and certainly not to onr liking, we have been made the crux of the approach to a unified Church.

We Desire Union.

We have not encountered among our people, anywhere, sentiment, antagonistic to union. We are to the man in favor of a union that would safeguard our self-respect and that which wonld not require us to relinquish onr constitutional rights in the Church and our divine rights in the Kingdom of God. We know at the same time that a union of Methodist forces, North and South, would retard for half a centnry or more our progress for full and equal rights within the Chnrch of our choice in America. We constitute one-tenth of the membership of our Church, to which we have given a fnll measure of loyalty and devotion. We are perfectly willing to stick a peg in our progress and mark time. We are unwilling, however, to make a step backward.

We repeat, we favor union. We need it for what seems to be America's providential program for the world. The moment America breaks the shell of her provincialism she will be ready for world leadership. America has been growing during the recent years for this task. Not many years ago the United States presented in its statistics the Chinese, Japanese, and Negro peoples, under our flag, under the general heading of "Colored." Japan forced the issue and has become "white," without raising the social qnestion or the question of the intermixture of the races. America cannot be the schoolmaster of the world with its narrow and self-conceited prejudices. We cannot teach France religion if we withhold the right hand of fellowship from any race. France has in her army to-day six hundred thousand Negro soldiers, some of whom wear shoulder straps. We need a union of Methodist forces for the sake of Methodism's world-wide program. We think we comprehend all the fundamental reasons for union, but we want a church "of the people, for the people, and by the people." We are absolutely sure that there will be a reunion of the Methodist forces; if not to-day, to-morrow.

An Important Contribution.

Dr. Blake's address is an important contribution to the discussion of the question of organic union in that it frankly approaches nearly all the difficulties involved. It is unusually clear. The propositions are all in the open. It is an able address and coming as it does from one of the foremost men of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a recognized leader, a member of four General Conferences, the Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Sunday Schools and a member of the Joint Commission on the Unification of American Methodism—it is of unusual significance. We propose to be as frank as Dr. Blake has been, for we shall not approach anything like a satisfactory and permanent agreement if we are not frank.

Slavery a Memory.

In the discussion of preliminary facts, Dr. Blake calls attention to the fact, which we should never forget, that the Churches were once one. He further says that "the issue that divided the Church has disappeared, slavery having been dead for half a century and there is nothing to divide the present generation of Methodists but a memory." There is a controversy as to whether the Church was divided on slavery. But we accept the inference of Dr. Blake that it was. Slavery is dead and the white and the colored people have made great progress, for which we are devoutly thankful. But slavery has many lineal, legitimate and logical descendants (or fruits), the family marks of which are so plain that they cannot be denied. The legitimate heirs of slavery insist on destroying the fundamental principles of freedom as applied to the Negro, hence we have many phases of the old question that are just as entangling and difficult as was slavery. The position and condition of the Negro and the attitude toward him in slavery was logical and in the code of slavery was correct. But the position and condition of the Negro and the attitude toward him in freedom (in a democracy, shall we say in a Christian (?) democracy?) is not correct. Slavery may be a memory but its fruits of disfranchisement, segregation, lack of school facilities, lynching, intimidation, unfair court decisions, aloofness on the part of the Christian Church and the like, fearfully remind us of the once reigning king. Slavery and its relation to the Negro was logical. It segregated him and kept him in his place and reduced him to chattel and disavowed that he was a man. But this same position cannot obtain in the days of freedom—in a wide-open democracy. Here is where the trouble comes in. Oh, for a leader of the Lincoln type who is big enongh and brave enough to treat the Negro fair and at the same time preserve every legitimate claim of civilization, North and South!

A World Church.

Dr. Blake, in his address, says that he does not "want to see the time come when the Methodist Episcopal Church shall cease to be a world enterprise;" that it was a mistake to grant the Japanese an independent relation. We have not been able to reconcile the contention for a world-church and the methods suggested for operating the world-church. Is it to be, according to Dr. Blake's plan, a world-church in which all races of the world shall participate, or is it to be a white church of America, controlling religious affairs of that part of the world that wills to come under? Is this the Church seeking ecclesiastical world imperialism? If so, it is a peril. We are heartily in favor of a world-church, a church that is big enough to include all the world. Not a church to govern the world, but to include the world. The biggest part of the world to-day is not the white part of it; it is the colored part of it. The colored part is not the biggest in intelligence, in leadership, and in constructive force, but it is the biggest part in numbers, in souls to be saved and in the opportunities for the extension of the Kingdom. If there is any blame to be attached, and if there is any embarrassment because of the existence of so many colored peoples, who are objectionable to the white minority, do not blame these poor people who are not responsible for their presence in the world; blame the Creator of men. He made them.

Discusses Colored Men's Relations Frankly.

Dr. Blake admits that "the colored membership is as much a part of the Methodist Episcopal Church as any group of our membership and possesses the same rights and privileges." It is the irresistible logic of this fact that brings on the difficulty. The Doctor is opposed to an independent relation of the Negro because he is incapable of handling large financial problems. He must not forget that the Negroes have $55,000,000 invested in church property, all of which was accumulated and is securely handled by the colored people except the percentage held in trust by the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Negroes control and manage four or five denominations that carry forward large educational programs and foreign missionary work in various parts of the world. Next to our own story of the development of a Book Concern stands the building of the National Baptist Publishing House at Nashville, Tennessee, the result of the constructive leadership of a Negro. We simply throw this in parenthetically because Dr. Blake pulls down so hard upon "racial immaturity." He says in discussing our representation on a parity in the General Conference that many friends think that it was the greatest blunder the Government ever made in dealing with the Negro when it enfranchised him. There was no mistake at all in enfranchising the Negro. Mistakes were made during the reconstruction period, but the mistakes were not because the Negro was enfranchised. Had he not been enfranchised at that time, we would have written caste in the American Constitution and it would have been years before the Negro would have been made a citizen. The Doctor says it is doubtful if the Church, facing the question, would now give the Negro full representation in the General Conference. It would do so or it would have no Negroes in the Church. Doctor Blake favors the holding of the Negro in the Methodist Episcopal Church, but he would not grant him parity representation in the General Conference. He would have him have some such relation as would be accorded to the foreign Conferences. He puts the foreign membership and the Negro membership in this country on the same basis. He says the reasons for not giving the foreign Conferences the same ratio of representation as the white American Conferences are, first, "The limited membership," and, second, "The cost is practically prohibitive." There is no doubt that the Negro membership would be as large as one or more of the proposed Regional Conferences. On the matter of expense, it costs the Church $33,050 to bring 56 foreign delegates to the General Conference. Toward meeting this expense the foreign Conferences contributed $2887.93. It cost the Church approximately $10,000 to bring to the General Conference at Saratoga Springs 90 Negro delegates and toward this amount these Negro Conferences contributed $6734.55. Both in numbers and the matter of cost, the comparison falls flat. The Negro is a part of the home Church. We are beneficiaries, it is true. So are a number of other Conferences beneficiaries. We spend as much on our white Conferences in the South as is spent on the Negro Conferences. Would we offer them the same relation as is now proposed for the Negro? We are sending missionary money to New England. Would we reduce its representation in proportion to the money we are sending into that section?

A Suggested Solution.

Dr. Blake suggests a little speech for the Negro to commit to memory, rise before the Church, make a very low bow (it would be better if on his knees), declaim the speech, make another bow and take his seat. This is the speech:

"We recognize the embarrassment in the way of the union of the two Methodisms and we are willing to do our part to relieve it. We do not want to leave the Church. We want to remain a part of it. But, brethren, give us a Regional Conference of our own, with the same powers as other Regional Conferences. Let us elect our own Bishops and control our own local affairs, as other Regional Conferences do. Give us a representation upon the connectional boards and societies of the Church, safeguard our powers and privileges by constitutional provision, and we will not ask to sit in your General Conference to legislate for you."

We might just as well be frank. We will do no such thing, not until the crack of doom. Dr. Blake says if we make this speech (Negro graphophone) the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would rise up and call us blessed. We would not want the blessing of a church that would accept such an attitude, much less a church that would demand it. But what of our children? They would curse the ground upon which we walked and disown our name. For us to surrender our right in the General Conference and then to permit others to transact such business for us as Dr. Blake proposes for the General Conference would certainly make us unworthy of a place in the General Conference. The Doctor should have gone one step further and asked us to relinquish our right to vote on all questions which would be sent down by the General Conference for approval or for non-approval by the Lay Electoral Conferences

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

and the Annual Conferences. This would be surrender, gone mad. Abraham Lincoln once said: "No man is good enough to govern another man without the other man's consent." And then, too, we would reluctantly place all our interests in the hands of another race. However good their intent may be, we are too familiar with the attitude of the strong nations of Europe toward the weaker, for this.

But all too much is being made of the legislative power of the proposed re-organized Church. In the General Conference of the re-organized Church we will not legislate upon civic, political or social matters. We will legislate purely upon things spiritual, things that concern the Kingdom of God. If the Gospel cannot bring us to this, can it ultimately save the world?

Moreover, the re-organized Church cannot lag behind the Ecumenical Conference, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, the Congregational Churches of America, the Southern Sociological Congress and a dozen other movements we might mention. The Negro enjoys membership in these bodies on a parity with any other race.

Is This a Threat?

If we make the little speech which Dr. Blake has composed for us, he says the Church will give large sums of money for our schools, our churches and our ministry such as never have been known before. We have a very fine example of what a Church will do for a people when they are isolated in the actual contributions of the Church, South, to their foster child, the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. It is not human nature to provide for dependents when they are far removed. While we are devoutly grateful for all that the Church has done and is doing for the uplift of our people, and whatever the future may hold for us, we will always love her for past favors—nevertheless, the offer of positions and monetary considerations give us no concern. These are not of sufficient consequence to cause us to surrender our manhood. Dr. Blake says if we do not make the speech and "unification fails, the effect upon the Negro and his interests in the Church will be most unfortunate." He reiterates this statement, saying: "If the union should now fail because of the presence of the colored membership, it would mean a severe blow to their interests in the Methodist Episcopal Church." This leads us to say that there are two kinds of philanthropy, one that is given with the hope of developing those we seek to help in the largest possible way; the other is a species of bribery or slavery that develops weaklings and often reminds the beneficiary that "you wear our collar and, therefore, you must do as we suggest." The latter method of helping the Negro is the way of some of our would-be friends, and in this way they are continually sapping the manhood out of the race, and they are the first to shout "immature race" and "baby race." The method forces an almost impossible task on the leaders of the race to bring the rank and file up to real manhood. But back to the point. If our interests are to be threatened, if the helping hand of a strong brother is to be withdrawn, if we are to sell ourselves, the sooner we know it the better. The great Abraham Lincoln issued a proclamation once, which was later ratified by two-thirds of the Union, that made it forever impossible for any man or set of men to purchase other men. The Negro is not on the auction block. He is not for sale. He cannot be bought.

The Question in the Large.

We will vote for every proposition for organic union that does not seek to destroy manhood rights and then we will leave it to history as to who is responsible for the failure of unification. In God's name, we sincerely trust that there will be no defeat, but that there shall be an early cementing of our great American Methodism. The Negro must not be asked to give up all. There are others who could give up some of their prejudices and then it would not be necessary for any one to give up manhood rights.

This is a large question. Dealing with supreme courts and Regional Conferences is an entirely different matter from that of dealing with a segment of humanity. Supreme courts and Regional Conferences are human contrivances, to be altered, set aside, abolished as human needs demand. They have no soul to save; no God-given rights to protect. The greatest difficulty in the way of union admittedly is the Negro, but unfortunately, this great difficulty cannot easily be brushed aside. This difficulty is a human being, God-made, God-placed, God-owned, with certain inalienable rights in our common country and in the world and most of all in the Church of Jesus Christ. We can revise courts and conferences to suit our whims, our social prejudices, but we cannot reverse human rights "to suit." If the question of the comfort and convenience of the 350,000 Negroes in the Methodist Episcopal Church were alone involved it would be an entirely different matter. We are a part of a race that is contending for a status in this nation and in the world. As the Methodist Episcopal Church goes, so will go the nation. As the American nation goes, so will the world go. The eyes of the world are upon the 350,000 Negroes in the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have been placed in this critical and strategic position through no planning of their own. The serious situation of to-day, they did not make it and it is not of their choice. But for them to surrender now is to bring the condemnation of their kith and kin in this country and throughout the world. If the Negroes in the Methodist Episcopal Church lowered their status it might be a small matter, but by so doing they would lower the status of other races similarly situated throughout the world. Shall they do it?

The world is watching America and American Methodism. To quote the words of the late Booker T. Washington, that master of his time in race relationship: "The whole world is looking to the United States to set the example in the solution of racial problems so far as concerns the relationship between black man and white man. There is scarcely a country in Europe that in some way is not concerned with the destiny of the black, brown, or yellow people. This is especially true regarding black races in Africa. These European countries are studying our policy toward black people in the United States, and what is done here in a very large degree is likely to influence the treatment of our race throughout the world."

The Rights of the Kingdom.

Dr. Blake, in his closing remarks, asks the question: "After all, are not personal rights greater than the interests of a race? Has not the Kingdom of Christ rights also?" This query is something of a blasphemy on the Kingdom of Christ. Is the Kingdom of Christ to be lily white? And are we to write over the door of the Kingdom, "For whites only?" That is not an unfamiliar sign to the writer. We have seen it frequently. We have opposed lily whitism in other matters and why should we not oppose lily whitism in the Church? If this propaganda succeeds we ought to label our Bible "For whites only," and then we somehow think our Christ would hurry up His second coming to earth to drive into shame those who misinterpreted both His spirit and His Word. He would have us be brethren. He would have us be one. For there is no respect of persons in the Kingdom of Christ.

ARE YOU GOING TO ALEXANDRIA, MARCH 14?

If possible I would like to meet all the Wesley Bible Class people of Louisiana at Alexandria on March 14, when the organized classes of Methodism in Louisiana gather there for the first annual Federation meeting, and which will last through the 15th and until noon of the 16th. And in order to influence some to go if possible I want to spread out before you in more detail than I have heretofore the splendid feast that is being prepared for that occasion.

At 2:30 on the afternoon of the 14th, at the First Methodist Church, Rev. H. N. Brown, the Chairman of the Conference Sunday School Board, will call the meeting to order and ask Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, to lead the 15-minute devotional. We will, of course, want to know at the outset what we are there for, and Rev. C. D. Bulla, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn., Superintendent of the Wesley Bible Class department of our church, upon whom the General Conference has placed the duty and responsibility of forming these Federations, will tell us, in a twenty-minute address, just what we are there for. His address will be followed by the forming of a temporary organization to serve until a permanent one can be formed at a later session. Rev. Emmett Hightower, the stalwart Texas Field Secretary for the Southwest Division, will give us a thirty-minute discussion of "The Relation of the Wesley Class to the Community," and I can assure you in advance that Brother Emmett knows what he will be talking about. The Wesley Classes are thoroughly Methodistic and participate in all forms of Methodist church activity, including missionary work, and this afternoon's program includes a half-hour discussion of "The Wesley Class and Missions" by Rev. N. E. Joyner, of Lake Charles, a former missionary in Mexico and now Missionary Secretary of the Louisiana Conference. Like Brother Hightower, Brother Joyner will be talking out of a full acquaintance with his subject. The last course of this afternoon's feast is a thirty-minute address on a most important and interesting phase of our work, "The Wesley Class and Evangelism," and Rev. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the Ruston District, has been asked to talk on this subject, and if you know Brother Henry you know that he can do it.

The second session, on the evening of Wednesday, March 14, will open at 7:30, with devotionals conducted by Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the district that will entertain the first Federation meeting. Brief addresses—of welcome, by Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, and of response, by Chairman Brown—will be followed by Bishop Atkins, of Waynesville, N. C., with a powerful address on "Some Underlying Principles of the Wesley Bible Class Movement." And no loyal Louisiana Wesley Bible Class man or woman who can possibly get to Alexandria can afford to miss this soul-stirring message of our learned Bishop.

The third session will begin at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, March 15, with Rev. C. D. Atkinson, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, in charge of devotionals. Then for twenty minutes Mr. T. W. Holloman, superintendent of our Sunday school at Alexandria and Treasurer of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board, will discuss the question, "How Can the Wesley Bible Class Help the Superintendent?" and I wish every one of the 343 Methodist superintendents in Louisiana could hear Brother Holloman on this occasion. Bishop Atkins will then give us another of his strong utterances, the subject of which has not been furnished me. He will be followed by Brother Hightower's discussion of "The Wesley Bible Class and Teacher-Training." The last address of this session will be that on "The Bible" by Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D., pastor of First Methodist Church, Shreveport. This address is a masterpiece and to hear it will repay all it may cost to attend the meeting. The morning session will be closed by a "Round Table for Officers and Committees," conducted by Dr. Bulla.

The fourth session will open at 2:30 on Thursday afternoon with devotionals in charge of Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, and an address of twenty minutes on "The Wesley Bible Class in the Country," by Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, the efficient and tireless Sunday school Field Secretary for the Louisiana Conference. Then come two simultaneous conferences for forty-five minutes—one led by Rev. W. H. Coleman, pastor-host of the Federation meeting, for the consideration of the subject, "The Teaching of Adult Classes;" and a second, led by Mr. W. A. McKennon, Chairman of our District Sunday School organization for the Shreveport District, for the discussion of "The Teaching of Intermediate and Senior Classes." Then we will all assemble in one body again and listen to a most interesting feature of the program as different persons tell us "What Some Bible Classes Are Doing."

The fifth session will begin at 7:30 Thursday evening, March 15, with Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, conducting the devotional exercises. The Methodist Church has no human ally more faithful or dependable than her Conference papers, and Wesley Bible Classes are everywhere urged to give faithful support to them. In line with that policy we have set aside twenty minutes of this evening's session for the presentation of the subject, "The Wesley Bible Class and the New Orleans Christian Advocate," and have asked Dr. Meek, who so ably edits this great church paper, to discuss that subject for us himself or furnish a substitute to discuss it for him. Rev. George R. Stuart, D.D., who is preaching to overcrowded houses every Sunday in Birmingham, Ala., will deliver this evening's principal address, using as his subject, "Fellowship." By all means come to this evening's session.

The sixth and last session will open at 9:00 o'clock on Friday morning, the 16th, the devotionals being conducted by Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe District. At 9:15 Mrs. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans, will tell us "What Women's Classes Can Do For Girls," and at 9:35 "What Men's Classes Can Do For Boys" will be told us by Mr. C. O. Beauchamp, of Shreveport. Then at 9:55 Dr. Stuart will again address us, this time using as a subject "Service," and all Wesley Bible Class folks are interested in that. Following the Doctor's address, there will be an "Open Parliament" in charge of the writer, when we will consider briefly several lines of Wesley Bible Class activity. After this, we will effect a permanent organization, listen to some committee reports, and start the Louisiana Conference Wesley Bible Class Federation off on its first year of life and usefulness. The closing words of the meeting will be spoken by Dr. Bulla, who can do it so appropriately and effectively.

After reading this attractive menu, you see it was no idle claim I made that this was a most delightful feast that was being prepared for Louisiana Methodism. And my last word is one of earnest advice: If you can possibly get to Alexandria for this meeting, GO.

The Great Battle

NOTES.

It is stated that 85 per cent of the area of the United States is now under prohibition. This area contains 62 1-2 per cent of the Nation's population.

Prohibition sentiment is making itself increasingly felt all over the State of New York. Even in New York City the whiskey forces are beginning to realize that a battle is on.

The Hon. John M. Parker, of New Orleans, is quoted as having made at a meeting in the interest of the Progressive Party, heid in Atlanta last week, the following declaration: "We should advocate national prohibition, to bring about efficiency, the removal of temptation from those unable to resist it, and to do away with the participation of the liquor interests in politics." This sounds very differently from some of the utterances made by Mr. Parker when he was running for the Governorship of Louisiana about a year ago. Still, we are glad to welcome him into the prohibition ranks. The gate that opens into the right way should never be closed to anyone.

NO SPECIAL SESSION IN MISSISSIPPI.

Governor Bilbo has issued an address to the people of Mississippi announcing that he will not call a special session of the Legislature to enact a "bone dry" prohibition law, because under the Referendum Amendment to the State Constitution 6000 voters could precipitate an election, and such a petition would suspend the operation of the law until after the vote of the people had been taken. The Mississippi Legislature will meet, anyway, next January, and Governor Bilbo says that if the Referendum Amendment is to remain as part of the State Constitution, he will insist upon having a prohibition amendment also incorporated therein. This, we think, would undoubtedly he a wise step. The Governor states that between 80 and 90 per cent of the State Senators and Legislators had, in their communications to him, declared themselves to be in favor of "hone dry" legislation. As these are the same men who will meet in the Legislature next January, it seems to be assured that Mississippi will bar liquor shipments completely, and that the liquor dealers of New Orleans will be stripped of their large patronage from that quarter.

DRYING OUT RAPIDLY.

Two more States have swung into the dry column. Two weeks ago the Legislature of Indiana passed a bill prohibiting the manufacture and sale of all intoxicants except for medicinal, sacramental, scientific and industrial purposes. The lower house voted 70 for the bill and 28 against it; and the Senate's vote stood 38 for and 11 against. The bill goes into effect April 2, 1918. While the bill was pending before the Legislature the brewers of Indiana issued a lengthy statement endeavoring to show that the proposed law would destroy $28,000,000 worth of property now used in the liquor business, but the legislature, nothing daunted, put the bill through in a whirl.

On February 1st, the legislature of Utah passed a bill prohibiting the importation, manufacture, sale and possession of liquor except pure alcohol and sacramental wine, to be sold as the Governor may prescribe. In the House the vote stood 41 to 1; and in the Senate the vote was solid for the "bone-dry" law. By the same vote Congress was memorialized to submit to the States the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States to prohibit the sale, manufacture, transportation, importation and exportation of intoxicating liquors. That splendid Jew, Governor Bamberger, was glad to affix his signature to the Bill.

While the Legislatures of these States were putting through the above legislation, the Congress of the United States was busy giving the Territory of Alaska "bone-dry" prohibition, in accordance with the desire of the people of that Territory, as expressed at the polls last November.

Nearly 7000 retail and more than 700 wholesale liquor dealers went permanently out of business during the year 1916; while 30 distilleries, 40 breweries, and 29 rectifiers shut up shop.

The number of retail liquor dealers who paid taxes last year was 5751 less than for the previous year, and beer dealers fell off 1024.

Three years ago last January there were only 9 dry States; to-day there are 25, as follows: Maine, Kansas, North Dakota, Georgia, Oklahoma, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia, Virginia, Colorado, Indiana, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Alabama, Arkansas, Iowa, Idaho, South Carolina, Utah, Michigan, Montana, Nebraska, and South Dakota, with Alaska thrown in for good measure. In all, there are 48 States in the Union. One more than one-half of all the States are dry.

If prohibition advances for the next three years as it has for the three-year period just closed, the Nation will go dry automatically; and there is every encouragement to believe it will quicken its pace.

THE CAMPAIGN FOR THE NEW DORMITORY.

It is gratifying to note how rapidly interest is growing in the movement to build a $60,000 dormitory at Millsaps College. The Commissioner for the College recently spent Sunday and Monday at Fernwood, where he met with royal treatment at the hands of pastor and people. The official board of the Fernwood church was courteous enough to appoint a committee of two to assist the Commissioner in his canvass, and hence it is not to be wondered at that he met with fine success. That princely layman, Mr. P. H. Enochs, led off with a subscription of $1000, and others subscribed liberal amounts, bringing the total for Fernwood to $1315. If our churches generally would manifest a similar spirit of co-operation, it would not be many months before the new dormitory would be in process of erection. Brother W. H. Saunders, the diligent and capable pastor at Fernwood, is greatly beloved by his flock, and is meeting with splendid success.

Here at the Capital City, where the work and influence of Millsaps College are so well known and appreciated, we are in the midst of a campaign to raise $30,000 in ten days, and there is every prospect of success. Mr. Webster Buie, Treasurer of the Board of Trustees, who is a nephew of the lamented Major R. W. Millsaps, has pledged $10,000 in advance, his gift being conditioned upon the raising of a total of $30,000 by the city of Jackson. Eight teams of ten each, composed of the best business men of Jackson, and two teams of ladies—making in all one hundred volunteer workers—have been organized, and the solicitation of subscriptions will begin next Monday, February 19. The campaign is being conducted by Rev. Andrew E. Clement, of Nashville, Tenn., Commissioner of Hospitals, assisted by the Commissioner for Millsaps. Great enthusiasm is already being generated, and we are expecting great things to happen. Let fervent prayer be made by the friends of the College throughout the State in behalf of this undertaking.

M. M. BLACK, Commissioner.

The Baptists of this State are prosecuting a campagn to raise $40,000 for the erection of a boys' dormitory at Louisiana College.

Bishop James Atkins has lately been lending a helping hand to the campaign that is being conducted in Florida in behalf of Southern College.

Miss Belle Bennett, President of the Woman's Missionary Council, who has been in the Orient last fall, was expected to arrive in San Francisco, on her way home, on February 12.

The Baccalaureate Sermon of the Greensboro (N. C.) College for Women will be preached on May 20 by Bishop J. C. Kilgo, and the Annual Address will be delivered by Governor Thomas W. Bickett on May 22.

Bishop Collins Denny has requested the presiding elders of the Alabama Conference to meet at Montgomery on February 22, and those of the North Alabama Conference to meet him in Birmingham on February 23.

It is stated that the Washington City Representative Southern Methodist Church will be constructed of Georgia marble. Dr. G. S. Sexton is quoted as having said that he hopes to see this structure completed by the meeting of the General Conference in May, 1918.

The income of the Northern Presbyterian Church for foreign missions has increased from $500,328 in 1876, to $2,287,398 during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1916. This denomination is now engaged in raising $1,000,000 extra for the purpose of strengthening and extending its missionary activities.

A contemporary says: "The faculty of Wesleyan University (Methodist Episcopal), Middletown, Conn., has voted to place a course of military training in the curriculum, under the General order of the War Department, which provides for a reserve officers' training corps."

From the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, we take the following: "Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., has sent to the library of Emory University a copy of 'Le Grand Dictionaire Historique Ou Le Melange Curieux de L'Histoire Sacree et Profane,' etc., published in Paris in 1740. This is certainly a rare treasure."

The Midland Methodist says: "Bishop and Mrs. W. B. Murrah received informally the Methodist pastors of Memphis and their wives at their new home, 1615 Central Avenue, Memphis, on January 25. The hearty welcome extended made all the guests feel very much 'at home.'" Bishop Murrah is now in Cuba, where he was due to open the Cuban Conference on Feb. 13.

Dr. W. L. Watkinson, the distinguished British Wesleyan minister, whose health has not been good for some time and who was forced to undergo surgical treatment, is now reported to be recovering. The works of Dr. Watkinson have been widely read on this side of the Atlantic, and his many admirers will be pleased to know that there is a prospect of his regaining his health.

Oft in the leaves of some old, old book
  Some message sweet is found,
That takes us back to other years,
  When hearts were wont to bound
With youthful fire and youthful love.
  And, as we dream of days gone by,
Of friends we once held dear,
  A tinge of sadness often comes,
And oft we shed a tear
  For those who've passed to realms above.

Some playmate of our childhood years
  Now treads the road to fame;
Another in his quiet way
  But strives to keep his name
Untainted with iniquity;
  Perhaps some one with whom we played
Now fills a drunkard's grave,
  And one looks out through iron bars—
Had not the power his honor and his liberty to save.

And yet, when on some faded page,
  We find their names inscribed
Beneath some line of childish verse—
  By childish wit devised
(God bless the girls and boys').
  We do not think how good or bad
Their later years have been;
  We only think of childhood days
And how we loved them then,
  When love was life and life was joy!

NOT THE BEST OF IT.

"Grandpa," said Fred, "don't you want to see my new knife?"

"I think you showed it to me last week," said his grandfather.

"No; this is another. The one I showed you then only had two blades. This one has four, and a nail file besides."

"That looks like a good knife," said grandfather, examining it.

"That's what it is. It's tiptop steel and not a bit damaged except a nick in the smallest blade and that little crack in the horn on the handle. But the best part of it is how I came by it. It really scarcely cost me anything."

"There are few things in this world we get for nothing," remarked grandfather. "We pay the price in some way."

"Well, the price I paid for this was small, and you'll say so when I tell you the whole story. First, I had a gimlet with the point broken off. Little Jack Deems wanted it because he's fond of working with tools, and the little goose didn't know enough to see the point was damaged. He wanted it, and wanted to trade me a knife for it, for his uncle had given him a new one and he was willing to let the old one go. It wasn't much of a knife, but it was worth twice as much as the gimlet."

"So you traded?"

"Oh, not even, grandpa," said Fred, with a laugh. "I'm a little too sharp for that. As he was so anxious about it, I told him I'd do it for five cents to boot. And he did it. Why," Fred laughed louder, "he could almost buy a gimlet for five cents."

"Is this the knife?"

"Oh, no! I haven't finished the story. This was Rob Hill's knife. I've wanted it for ever so long, for I do like a four-bladed knife. I happened to know that Rob was pretty hard up for money. He couldn't go over to the Fourth of July celebration at Radnor with the rest of the boys because he couldn't get hold of a quarter to pay his fare. So I offered to trade knives with him and give him a quarter to boot. He hated to, but he wanted to go, so he gave in. This," Fred snapped the blade, "is worth at least a quarter more than I gave for it. So, you see, I've got the best of it in both my trades."

"I don't know about that," said grandpa, gravely.

"Why, haven't I been telling you exactly how it was?"

"Yes, but it hurts me to think of your paying such a price for your knife."

Fred's face fell. "I wonder if I could have got it for less? Perhaps he would have taken twenty cents, or fifteen. But it's no use trying to undo it now, for we both said 'done.'"

"I don't think you take in my meaning, my boy," said grandfather, gently. "You tell me that you believe that you got more than the worth of your gimlet from Jack."

"Yes, five cents, and a better value in the knife."

"And that this knife is worth more than you gave for it?"

"Of course, grandpa; I always get the best of it in any trade."

"Then you got a quarter's worth of Rob and five cents and more from Jack without their getting any equivalent. Did you say to them, 'I know that what I am getting is worth the most?'"

"That would be queer kind of trading," said Fred with a laugh. "I tried my best to make them think they were getting the best of it."

"Was that true?"

"Ho! You take such a serious view of it, grandpa," said Fred.

"What do they call it," went on the old gentleman, without noticing the remark, "when one person takes from another something for which he does not give a fair and honest price?"

"Why—grandpa," Fred hesitated a little, still attempting a laugh, "they call it—trading."

"But what is it? What is its real name?"

"Well, I suppose that depends on how you look at it," said Fred, a little unwillingly.

"Yes, on how you have been told to look at it when you think seriously of it. One name for such transactions is cheating. An ugly word, isn't it? Another name is still uglier, but we won't apply it here, for I know that through your love of a trade you have allowed yourself to do things of which you have failed to see the true significance. Now, my boy, when it appears that you have sacrificed truth, honor and modesty for your knife, I think you have paid too high a price for it."

Color rose to Fred's face. "Then it seems I haven't got the best of it, after all," he said, slowly.—Canadian Churchman.

NAMING THE BABY.

Did you ever try to think of a name for a tiny little baby? It was hard work, because no name seemed half as nice as baby, and you were so afraid it would not suit when the baby grew to be big.

Many people of foreign countries have a regular way to select the baby's name, and perhaps it saves some worry.

A Hindu baby is named when twelve days old, and usually by the mother. Sometimes the father wishes for another name than that selected by the mother. In that case two lamps are placed over the two names, and the name over which the lamp burns the brighter is the one given to the child.

In the Egyptian family the parents choose a name for their baby by lighting three wax candles; to each of these they give a name, one of the three always belonging to some deified personage. The candle that burns the longest bestows the name upon the baby.

The children of the Ainus, a people living in Northern Japan, do not receive their names until they are five years old. It is the father who then chooses the name by which the child is afterward to be called.

The Chinese give their boy babies a name in addition to their surnames, and they must call themselves by these names until they are twenty years old. At that age the father gives his son a new name.

The Chinese care so little for their girl babies that they do not give them a baby name, but just call them Number One, Number Two, Number Three, Number Four, and so on, according to their birth.

In Russia, when a baby is baptized, the priest shaves the top of the baby's head in the form of a cross. The godfather gathers the soft downy hair together and mixes it with drippings from a candle into a tiny ball. This is dropped in the baptismal font, and if it sinks, the parents believe the baby will die within a year; if it floats, every one is happy.—Union Gospel News.

A BELGIAN APOSTLE.

The Rev. Henri Anet, B.D., LL.D., of Brussels, who is a distinguished scholar and fluent English speaker, is in the United States under the auspices of the American Huguenot Committee. This man of God bears a relationship of peculiar tenderness and interest to the Southern Methodist Church. He is its official representative in all negotiations with the Belgian government affecting our Congo Mission. He encouraged and facilitated in every way possible the issuance by his Government of necessary concessions to our Church and extended personal hospitality to Bishop Lambuth and myself when visiting Brussels in outfitting the Congo party. During the studies in Brussels of our first missionaries to the Congo he bestowed upon them many courtesies and kindnesses. Without his personal interest and assistance it would have been exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to have opened under such favorable circumstances our mission in the Congo. The whole of Southern Methodism should know of his share in this work and should appreciate his unselfish service cheerfully rendered without charge.

Every phase of Doctor Anet's personal experience and public service commends him to our love and confidence. He springs from a sturdy stock of pastors and missionaries. His family has been directly associated with the evangelization of Belgium during the last seventy-five years. Born near Liege, Dr. Anet has worked for fifteen years as a missionary in Belgium, and is now a chaplain in the Belgian Army. In 1911 he made an extensive exploration of the Belgian Congo, which led to the formation of the Belgian Congo Mission. He tarried in Belgium several months after the Germans occupied that country. He was present at the surrender of Brussels, visited Rheims and the French first line trenches in September, 1916. He has seen the battlefields and desolate places of Belgium. Last autumn he was on duty on the Belgian battle front in Flanders and held personal interviews with King Albert and others high in authority. The king delivered to him an important message that will be heard with interest by all American Christians.

Dr. Anet is soon to visit the South, asking aid for the Protestant churches in Belgium and France. By far the largest part of the home missionary work in France and Belgium is under the direction of the Franco-Belgian Committee, which is represented by their delegate, the Rev. Dr. Henri Anet. We therefore address an earnest appeal to Southern Methodists, who enjoy the blessings and prosperity of peace, on behalf of the churches which are sorely tried by the war. We would also make bold to appeal to the ministers of our Church, asking them to provide Dr. Anet with an opportunity of placing before their congregations the claims of his people. Suggestions with that object in view or invitations for specific dates should be addressed to him at Room 612, 105 East 22d Street, New York City.

Editorial

AN EXPLANATION.

In order to carry this week Dr. Robert E. Jones' utterance reviewing Dr. Blake's address ou Methodist Unification, we have decided to let our discussion of Dr. Blake's proposed Regional Conference adjustment go over until the next issue of the Advocate. We have deemed it wise to publish Dr. Jones' able editorial first, because the status of the Negroes in the suggested reunited Church is the phase of the unification issue that is now figuring most prominently in the Church press, though we do not concede it to be by any means the only problem of large importance to be solved before the two Churches can come together.

Dr. Jones, who is the Editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate (New Orleans), the official organ maintained by the Northern Methodist Church for its Negro membership, is one of the ablest and most influential colored ministers in that denomination. He has received two or three times a large vote for the office of Bishop, and is a member of the present Joint Commission on Methodist Unification. What he says is, therefore, entitled to considerable weight—there is probably no man living who has more right to speak for the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church than has he; and we trust that every reader of the Advocate will peruse carefully his earnest pronouncement.

We scarcely need to state that we do not agree with Dr. Jones in many things that he says; but we cannot but admire the manly manner in which he has refused to weigh principle against suggested financial gain in the effort to come to conclusions concerning the position and rights of the Negroes in the proposed reorganized Church. There are things that are of incomparably more value than money, and, in taking this ground in the discussion, Dr. Jones has evinced a spirit that is certain to command for him the respect of all high-minded men. Professing to regard the Negroes in the light that it does, for the Methodist Episcopal Church to adopt Dr. Blake's scheme of placing its Negro communicants in a disfranchised, missionary relation and continue it indefinitely, would be both inconsistent and anomalous. It seems to us that the colored members of the Church, North, would earn a much larger measure of self-respect by insisting upon having given to them the proportion of Church property that is due them and setting up an entirely separate organization, than by consenting to such an arrangement as this. However, it is up to them to determine their own course, since they cannot be forced out of the Northern Methodist Church, and we shall see what we shall see.

A GREAT DICTIONARY.

Webster's Dictionary has long held a high place among the American people, and has rendered them a service perhaps unequaled by any other lexicon of the English language. It became exceedingly popular many decades ago, and the successive editions of it have kept abreast with the march of human knowledge and have won much praise from competent scholars. The latest output in this splendid series of publications is "Webster's New International Dictionary," the immediate predecessor of which was "Webster's International Dictionary" of 1890, with the Supplement added in 1900. This great volume has been in preparation for many years, and for the past six years a large staff of carefully selected editors have labored diligently to perfect it. It is not merely a new edition of an old work, enlarging and improving it; it is "a thorough reconstruction, embodying proved and established principles, together with the results of the widest, the most recent, and most analytical lexicographic research." It contains 2700 pages, 400,000 vocabulary terms, over 6000 illustrations, and many colored plates. Many new words have been added, definitions in many instances have been improved, and the arrangement of matter differs considerably from any preceding edition. It is the only dictionary that has the "Divided Page," the words less frequently used being placed in a section marked off at the bottom. This is a most helpful arrangement. This publication was awarded the Grand Prize given for the best dictionary at the late Panama-Pacific Exposition, at San Francisco.

By the issuance of this volume, the G. & C. Merriam Company have brought the American public under a large debt of obligation to them. Though we have other English lexicons that we appreciate, we could not at all get along without Webster's. For etymology in particular, in our opinion, it stands unrivaled. And of Webster's dictionaries, it is needful to have the latest at hand—a book of this kind must be frequently altered and added to, if it is kept up to date. "Webster's New International" ought to be in every school library and every intelligent home. We heartily and unreservedly commend it to all of the Advocate's readers. Write the G. and C. Merriam Company, Springfield, Mass., for specimen pages of this notable publication and any other information desired concerning it.

A TASK FOR AMERICA.

We are not convinced that the United States should involve herself in the complex affairs of the Old World to the extent of going to war, if necessary, to maintain certain policies abroad; but we think she should undoubtedly use her vast influence, exerted in a peaceful way, to give assistance wherever it is needed on the globe. Being the richest and most resourceful of the nations, and now in constant contact with practically all of the peoples of the earth, this is, in our opinion, a duty that we have no right to shirk. This mightiest of all the Powers cannot justify a course of seeking to exist for itself alone. Tasks of vast proportions are inviting its tremendous energies from many directions. Mr. Gardiner L. Harding, a 1910-graduate of Harvard University, who has been in China for several years, and who is said to be in the confidence of Dr. Sen and thoroughly informed as to Chinese social and political conditions, in a recent public address in Boston thus referred to the great opportunity that is before our country to lending a helping hand to this largest nation of the Orient, in which affairs are so unsettled and uncertain:

"In China another economic world cockpit is very distinctly beginning to appear. This vast, unmilitary nation, emerging into the adolescence of modern government, is the greatest storehouse of virgin economic energy still remaining on the globe's face. Its coal and iron are sufficient to last the world for one thousand years at the present rate of consumption.

"China is drifting steadily toward the wretched and tragic goal of final destruction: but, like Turkey, it will take its revenge by being the fulcrum of an international rivalry as bitter as the stakes are large. America can arrest this deadly drift by encouragement of the Chinese toward the rehabilitation of their country."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"Things are moving on nicely with us." So writes Rev. M. E. Scott, of Marietta, Miss., in a letter bringing us 4 subscriptions to the Advocate. We wish him a large measure of success in his field.

Professor G. L. Harrell, of Millsaps College, says: "Things are moving on well with us. The second term has started with some additions to the roll of students; we now have over 200 in the college proper."

This issue of the Advocate has been brought out amid the many interruptions incident to the Mardi Gras festivities. This will explain to our subscribers why our paper has been later than usual in reaching them this week.

Mr. R. B. Davis, of Houston, Texas, a son of Rev. R. A. Davis, one of the esteemed superannuates of the Louisiana Conference, is in New Orleans, being the guest of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Crichlow, who reside at 924 Lowerline Street.

In the communication from Dr. M. O. Shivers, which was printed on page 6 of last week's Advocate, he was made to say that the Denver Conference contributed "$526 per capita for ministerial support." This, of course was an error; it should have been $5.26 per capita.

Married—At the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Robertson, in Jones County, Miss., near Bethel Church, Miss Anise Robertson and Mr. Marvin Duke, of near Eminence, Miss., Rev. W. M. Williams, of Collins, Miss., officiating. We extend congratulations.

Mr. Marvin K. Miller, the author of the poem, "Autographs," carried on our "Home Circle" page this week, is a young minister attending Millsaps College. We published some verses of his, entitled "An Evening Reverie," some months ago, which elicited much favorable comment.

Bishop Hoss has written Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, that he will be in New Orleans, March 4-8. This includes a Sunday and the period that the New Orleans District Conference will be in session at the Louisiana Avenue Church, of this city.

Our diligent pastor at Vaiden, Miss., Rev. H. M. Young, has our thanks for several subscriptions from his good charge. We regret to learn that Brother Young has been ill with la grippe and unable to meet some of his engagements; but we are pleased to know that he is now convalescent.

Brother F. A. Howell, an esteemed layman of Durant, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for 8 subscriptions from his community. We highly appreciate the interest that Brother Howell continually shows in the circulation of the Advocate. Would that our paper had more such friends!

We were sorry to learn that Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, La., has had illness in his home for the past few days, Sister Battle and her babe having both been sick with la grippe. We hope that these stricken ones will soon recover. Mrs. Schuessler, of Alabama, Sister Battle's mother, is now with her in Baton Rouge.

A note from Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of Booneville, Miss., states that Sister Wyatt is getting on nicely since her surgical treatment for a facial trouble at the hands of Dr. Matas, in this city some two or three weeks ago, being wholly free from pain. We are gratified to have this good news from this gifted and faithful servant of the Master.

Rev. G. A. Baker, of Lougtown, Miss., writes: "Our work is moving forward in an encouraging manner. Our first quarterly conference was held on February 10, and it was an enthusiastic meeting. The pastor's salary was raised $300; and both the pastor and presiding elder were paid up to date. The people have been unusually kind to us."

Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, writes us as follows: "Please announce that the meeting of the district stewards of this district will be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Lafayette, La., on March 1 at 11 o'clock a. m." Brother May is fast getting his work in hand in his new field, and the outlook is for a year of progress.

The following friends, of whose kindness mention has not been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate sent in since the last issue of our paper: Rev. J. F. Foster, Shreveport, La., 2; Rev. A. M. Bennett, Tyro, Miss., 2; Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., Homer, La., 6; Rev. J. E. Rutledge, Vaughan, Miss., 2; Rev. W. M. Williams, Collins, Miss., 3.

The statement concerning the Louisiana Evangelistic Campaign, by Rev. J. G. Snelling, which appears in this number of the Advocate, is incomplete. Brother Snelling's communication came too late for us to print the whole of it this week, our columns being already very much crowded. The entire statement will be published in our issue of March 1.

Rev. R. M. Evans, our consecrated pastor at Calhoun City, Miss., under date of Feb. 16, writes: "Brother T. H. Lipscomb, our new presiding elder, was with us last Sunday and Monday. He preached an interesting sermon at the evening hour on the Sabbath, and held a businesslike Conference on Monday morning. He made a good impression. We are hopeful of a good year in this charge."

A note from Rev. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Greenville (Miss.) District, informs us that the Greenville District Conference will be held at Lula, Miss., March 27-29. Brother Curtis also says: "The work of the district seems to be in excellent condition. Things are moving on without friction, and four-fifths of the charges are making better progress than they have in any preceding year."

Mr. D. W. Heidelberg, a leading lawyer at Shubuta, Miss., sends us $1.50 to renew the subscription of Mr. J. E. Rainwater, adding the following statement: "I am sending the Advocate to Mr. Rainwater as a prize for good attendance upon my Sunday school class, this being the third or fourth year that he has annually won it." We trust that Brother Rainwater will find the Advocate interesting and helpful to him.

The Southern Baptist Convention will be held in New Orleans in May. This is one of the greatest Church organizations in the United States, and it is certain to bring to the Crescent City a large and splendid gathering of Christian workers, who will be given a hearty welcome by all the Protestant denominations here. We have not a little admiration for the Southern Baptists, who are achieving much for the Master's cause.

Rev. A. F. Moore writes us as follows: "Please announce that my post-office address is Fulton, Miss., instead of Dorsey, as is indicated in the North Mississippi Conference Minutes. We have some good people in this charge, but many of them are embarrassed financially at present because of the crop failure last year." Brother Moore assures us that he will look after the interests of the Advocate in his present field, as it has been his habit to do wherever he has labored.

It is a splendid offer which Mr. Webster Millsaps Buie, of Jackson, Miss., a nephew of the late Major R. W. Millsaps, has made, to give $10,000 to the fund for the proposed new dormitory on the Millsaps College campus, on the condition that the citizens of Jackson will add $20,000 to that amount. Surely the Methodists and other friends of Millsaps College in the Capital City of the State will be quick to measure up to these terms, after which the Methodists of Mississippi will be asked to increase the sum to $60,000.

On the occasion of the first quarterly conference of our First Church at Baton Rouge, prior to the business session, the Ladies' Aid Society gave the officials a most enjoyable banquet. Col. I. D. Wall acted as toastmaster, and a number of interesting brief speeches were made. In the subsequent business session plans were discussed for the building of a new church in the Istrouma addition, in the northern part of the city. The Istrouma Land Company has donated a lot to the Methodists as a site for this contemplated new house of worship.

Brother S. T. Jackson, writing from Oak Grove, La., informs us of the death of Rev. Thomas B. Renau, which occurred at Oak Grove on January 11, 1917, at the advanced age of 90 years. Owing to the very crowded condition of our columns this week, we have been forced to let Brother Jackson's statement concerning the demise of this worthy servant of the Master wait until our next issue for publication. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that Divine grace may solace and sustain them in their sorrow.

Writing from Long Beach, Miss., Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, one of the honored veterans of the North Mississippi Conference, says: "We have had a long move to the Gulf Coast, and I am trying to adjust myself to the situation. I feel lonely and sad to sit still and see the soldiers active in the Master's service pass by, but I still trust in the Lord and wait on him." Brother O'Bryant has a bright record behind him, and we doubt not that his path will shine more and more unto the perfect day. We thank him for kindly words concerning the Advocate.

In renewing her subscription to the Advocate and that of Mrs. H. L. Sutherland (a name that awakens most pleasant memories), Sister J. W. Mason, of Benoit, Miss., appends in her letter the following note: "Mr. Mason passed his 81st birthday on January 14, 1917; but one seeing him would not think that he is near that old. Our pastor, Brother Wroten, and his good wife grow on us each day; they are doing a good work." Brother and Sister Mason have long been among the choicest members of our Church in the Mississippi Delta, and their names are graven on the hearts of many of the North Mississippi preachers.

Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., of Bienville, La., sends us the following note: "Mr. U. S. Harris, a pioneer citizen of Bienville Parish, died at his home near Salina, La., on Feb. 6, 1917, aged 68 years. He was a lifelong member of the Methodist Church, a great Sunday school worker, and a faithful steward, being always in his place and ready for some work for the Master. He will be greatly missed in his home, his church, and his community; but we feel sure that when the summons came, all was well." We extend to the bereaved relatives our heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to Him who alone can give comfort at such a time.

From a letter from Mrs. E. T. Clark, of Cleveland, Miss., we extract the following: "Rev. T. M. Bradley seems to be the right man in the right place here. No minister and his wife who have come to us have more completely won the hearts of our people than have Mr. and Mrs. Bradley. We think that the contract for our new church will soon be let and that actual work upon it will be begun in the early spring." Cleveland is one of the county-seats of Bolivar County—the greatest agricultural county in Mississippi—and it has the promise of a very bright future. We should have there a modern house of worship, equipped for the best methods of work, as doubtless we soon shall.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Drew, Miss., is in New Orleans at this writing, being the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lagrone, his son and daughter-in-law, at their residence at 7931 Birch Street. It was the Editor's pleasure on last Sunday afternoon to be present at the time when Brother Lagrone impressively baptized his infant granddaughter, Frances Elizabeth Lagrone, the child of his host and hostess. This beautiful babe is also the granddaughter of Mrs. Mary (Hamilton) Herbert, of Belzoni, Miss., and a great-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton, who in the years agone were well known in Carroll and Holmes Counties, Mississippi. May a kindly Providence ever watch over this little one!

We have a letter from Miss Mary Emma Roane, of Houston, Miss., renewing the family's subscription to the Advocate. This correspondent was a small girl when the Editor was pastor at West Point, Miss., some years ago, and we can scarcely realize that she has become a young lady. How time flies! She refers to the death of her great-hearted father, who was an official in our church at the time that he died, and of our presence with the family in their great sorrow. We have not forgotten Brother Roane; nor shall we ever do so. To have had his friendship was one of the rare privileges that have come to us in life. May the blessings of God be on the loved ones he left behind, who yet miss him and cherish his memory!

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, and Rev. W. E. Thomas, pastor of our Church at Summit, Miss., passed through New Orleans on Saturday, Feb. 10, on their way to Cuba, where they expected to attend the Cuban Mission Conference. This is not Dr. Cooper's first visit to Cuba; he has been there two or three times before in company with Bishop Candler. Indeed, it has been his habit for some years to give the Cuban Methodist preachers and the Bishop holding their Conference an annual dinner, whether able to be present himself or not; and the Cuban brethren have to come to feel that he is in a large sense one of them. Brother Thomas' flock showed their high appreciation of him by giving him the funds to make this trip and permitting him to be absent for the time that it will keep him away. They will, however, likely be profited by this in the end, as he will doubtless come back refreshed and strengthened for his pastoral labors among them.

Having reason to believe that possibly his application for appointment to the Federal Judgship of the Western Louisiana District was helping to defer the selection of a man for this position by Attorney-General McReynolds and President Wilson, and feeling that the public service demands the filling of this vacancy with as little delay as possible, Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., in a letter to the authorities at Washington last week withdrew his name from consideration. This was a generous and high-minded act upon the part of Judge White and is worthy of commendation; but we regret that circumstances were such as to lead him to take this step. No man has been mentioned in connection with this responsible place who would adorn it more than Judge White, and we had hoped that the authorities would have the good judgment to select him for it. It is regrettable that so much politics comes into play in naming judges for the Federal Bench. It is not creditable to the Nation to have it so.

PREACHER WANTED.

Wanted, an unmarried preacher for a country circuit in the New Orleans District. Apply to Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder, 1127 Fern Street, New Orleans, La.

EVANGELISM IN LOUISIANA.

March.

The time has come for the execution of our Conference Plan for a Concerted District Revival throughout our State.

The last week in February was set aside for a week of prayer for this very important work of winning souls; we hope every preacher in the Conference will call his people to prayer, during this week.

New Orleans opens the Campaign the first of March; and Rev. W. W. Holmes writes that most of the Churches in his district are co-operating in the plan. He also states that the months' effort will wind up with a union revival at First Church, New Orleans, led by Rev. D. L. Coale, evangelist.

April.

April, one of our most beautiful months, has been selected for the Lafayette District. We know that Brother May will leave no stone unturned, and we will watch for the good news we expect from the pastors in the Lafayette District.

J. G. SNELLING.

THREE DAYS OF GRACE—HOW SHALL WE USE THEM?

I refer to College Day, Vocation Day, and Decision Day. The General Sunday School Board provides for observing College Day in all our Sunday schools on the first Sunday in March and provides in the Workers' Council for March a program. This Board also provides in a similar way for Vocation and Decision Day on the first Sunday in April. Our Conference Board of Education provided that we have Vocation Day on the second Sunday in April which is Easter Day, for which another special program is proposed. Now, we must not get confused and fail to get the gracious benefits to be derived from the careful observance of these special days. Let each pastor and Sunday school superintendent work out a plan by which each may have full use. It has been suggested to our college presidents that pictures of the buildings and suitable literature as to the college, from each of our Conference schools be furnished each church or Sunday school for distribution on College Day. It certainly would be well also to secure from the General Board of Education a generous supply of Educational Cathechisms, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4; also of tracts, "Why Should Girls Go to College?" "Why Should a Boy Go to College?," and "The Church School," for distribution, not only among the young people, but among the church members. There are ideas in these tracts with which some preachers are not very familiar.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Mrs. HATTIE MAY FARMER, wife of R. L. Farmer, departed this life Feb. 8, 1917. She gave her heart to God when she was quite young and was loved for her quiet, godly life. As a schoolgirl she was respected and loved as the peacemaker, and as a woman she carried sunshine and peace wherever she went. She was formerly Miss Burnham, of Harpervllie, where she spent most of her life. She is survived by three sisters, five brothers, her mother, and her husband. Her death was most tragic, being caused by being struck by a fast-moving passenger train while on her way to the depot to catch the train. She lived in great pain for six days, when the angels came and closed her eyes in peace. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor in the Newton Methodist Church, of which she was a devoted and consistent member. Rev. J. D. West, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church, a long and loving friend; Rev. R. L. Simmons, D.D., President of Clarke Memorial College and for a long time pastor of Mrs. Farmer's family, paid touching tributes to the life and character of our departed sister. Rev. W. L. Linfield, presiding elder of the Newton District; Rev. J. L. Robinson, pastor of the First Baptist Church and her pastor took part in the services. The body was carried to Harperville for interment. Wonderfully beautiful flowers attested the loving esteem in which her friends held her. May the comfort of God, who alone can comfort us in our trying hours, be the comfort and consolation of those whom she leaves behind!

Rev. J. C. CHAMBERS.

GEORGIA ANN DEMOSS, who was the daughter of George and Margaret Demoss, was born in Haynesville, Claiborne Parish, La., on September 2, 1861, and died on January 21, 1917. In December, 1878, she was married to W. B. McKinney. Mrs. McKinney united with the M. E. Church, South, at Rocky Mount, Bossier Parish, in 1883, at the age of 22. Three years ago she became a charter member of the M. E. Church, South, of Hosston, Caddo Parish. She was the mother of nine children, three of whom preceded her to the great beyond—one infant daughter, and two youthful sons.

Hers was an unusual family, in that the remaining six children—four sons and two daughters—were married and living within a few yards of their parents. Her health had been failing for the last few years, yet she tried to do her part as a wife and mother in the home. Although her suffering was prolonged and intense, she never murmured. Her patience was worthy of emulation. Her condition was such that she was prevented from attending church only at rare intervals, but she studied her Bible and communed with God in her home. She was kind and good to all with whom she came in contact, being always cheerful and thoughtful of the happiness and comfort of others. Her devotion to her husband, children, and grandchildren was beautiful to behold. She realized that the end was near and told her family good-by, admonishing them to meet her in heaven, five days before her soul took its flight. Besides her husband and children, she leaves three brothers and two sisters and many friends to mourn her going. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Dear bereaved ones, we point you to Him who can wipe away all tears. "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." Where the human face shone in its gentle grace, the face of Christ now looks upon you in its divine yearning. Take thy troubles to the Savior; take them there in earnest prayer, and say in the words of this beautiful hymn:

"Farewell mother, farewell mother,
Thou hast loved us long and well;
How we miss thee, none can tell,
God is with thee—all is well."

One Who Lover Her,

BEULAH KIZER HOLDER was born on March 17, 1875, in Tate County, Miss., and died on Dec. 26, 1916, in Sardis, Miss. She was the daughter of T. D. and Laura Kizer and the fifth child in a large family. She professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, in childhood at Harmony, ten miles west of Senatobia, where she was born and lived until she was grown. She was married to Rev. J. H. Holder on Nov. 20, 1898, just a few weeks before Brother Holder was admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference. She became his true helpmeet, from the beginning, in all that a good wife can mean to the life of a husband in the Methodist itinerancy. She, with Brother Holder, attended the University of Mississippi during the years 1903-6 to prepare more thoroughly for their life-work. Sister Holder truly gave her life to the cause of Christ and to the Church. Indeed, her life was a sacrifice on the altar of her Church. Had she not worked so hard she might have been spared to her family many years longer. The writer was her pastor before she was married and had a humble part in training her in religious work. In the Harmony Church, we had a company of young men and young women who were ready and willing to follow the pastor's lead. It was an inspiration to see the spiritual growth in Miss Beulah. Though timid and modest, she readily took hold of any character of church work that we called on her to do. She became most helpful and efficient in revival work, in public prayer, in song service, and in promoting the missionary interests of the Church. She enjoyed a great experience. The note of triumph was in all her religious activities. Hers was a religion of joy and gladness, but the intensity of her spirit led her in her various activities beyond the strength of her body.

She was a great mother. God blessed her with three girls. Pauline, the oldest, is 14; Jamie is 9, and Elizabeth is 7 years old. Theirs was a happy preacher's home. Love abounded in all purity and there was devotion in their home. When it was discovered that she was breaking down, Brother Holder carried her to the mountains of North Carolina and put her under the treatment and care of the best skill available. She remained in the mountains about 18 months. For a time she seemed to improve rapidly. She came home only a few weeks before Conference at Winona. She appeared to be doing fairly well. Brother Holder, the presiding elder of the Sardis District, was put under the unusual and unnatural strain of caring for his district work and an invalid wife just before Conference. On his return from Conference, he found Sister Holder apparently declining fast. Brother Holder made only one trip out on his district before the end came, on the next day after Christmas. Sister Holder had a vision in a dream three years ago. It was so vivid that she never could dismiss its meaning. She revealed it to her husband. In her vision her mother came from heaven for her. She begged her mother to let her remain awhile. The mother said, "Well, I will come again for you in three years." A day or two before the end, she said to Brother Holder the three years are about up. Her testimonies before going were beautiful. She leaves her husband, precious little ones, and many relatives, with a host of friends, to mourn their loss. May our good Father above keep the sorrowing ones in his care until they all meet in heaven!

THE MINISTER AT SIXTY-FIVE.

The Carnegie Foundation has planned to have the pension of college professors begin at age 65. It is found that is the age at which most ministers retire from active service. Their need at that age is a fund for the purchase of a home or a life pension. This provision is made by a popular Endowment policy maturing at age 65 with a life income as one settlement option and issued by the Methodist Ministers' Relief Insurance and Trust Association of Boston, Mass. —Adv.

IS IT NECESSARY? WHY?

In looking over the last Minutes of the Louisiana Conference and making a comparison with the Minutes of 1915, we have noted some interesting things with reference to the appointments. We find the following facts:

In 1915 we find there were 85 men moved, and 63 who did not; in 1916 there were 84 moves, and 63 who did not. Of this number, 43 men moved both years. The smallest number of moves both years were in the New Orleans District, and the largest number in the Shreveport—17 and 16 respectively in the latter.

Basing the average on what it has cost me to move a short distance, we figure the annual cost to each of these men at $50. Now, the average salary for 1915, was $775, and for 1916, $800. To use this amount of a very small salary, keeps some guessing as to whether they can continue to "move."

The question naturally arises as to what causes so many moves. Is it the preachers' inefficiency, their restlessness, or the desire of the people for something new? Of course, we would not hint at the trouble being with the presiding elder. But wherever the trouble lies, it would seem that there should be some one who might suggest a remedy. Aside from the financial loss, there must be a spiritual loss, for there is no doubt that it takes a man nearly a whole year to get acquainted with all the people and the needs of his work. Hence, the question at the beginning of this article; if it is not necessary, then, WHY?

This note is not from one who has suffered so much, as it seems some others have. There has not been a move made by your humble servant that did not seem for the best, as to leaving the former work, and he is not complaining as to the charges moved to, so much. If some one who knows will tell us why there are so many moves, we should be thankful to him.

"ITINERANT."

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Is sign you have been eating too much meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clogg you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder weakness.

MRS. FLORENCE SPARKMAN HOLLADAY.

A deep gloom has been cast over this entire community, and the Church has lost one of its most faithful members in the death of Mrs. Florence Sparkman Holladay, wife of Dr. R. L. Holladay, which occurred at her home in Cooksville, Miss., Jan. 16, 1917. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor and she was laid to rest, beneath tokens of love and sympathy, in Cooksville Cemetery.

For several months her health failed rapidly and her loved ones realized that the time of her going away was near. If medical skill, patient nursing, and Christian prayers could have availed, we should have been spared these pangs of sorrow; but we could not stay the hand of death. The Savior called her from all that was bright and joyous on earth to the greater joy and brightness of the Father's home.

She was happily married on April 23, 1902. Four bright little girls blessed this union. She was a tender, faithful mother, a patient, devoted wife, ever ready to assist her husband in his work, especially in relieving suffering humanity. She was also a loving sister and counselor to her two brothers, whose hearts are crushed with grief at her departure.

Reared under the purifying influence of a devoted Christian cousin, who survives her, and to whom she was a daughter, friend and companion—her father and mother having died in her early childhood—she grew up into the Christian life scarcely knowing when first she loved the Savior. She joined the Methodist Church at the age of 11 years, and consecrated her life to it. Language fails to portray her beautiful character. How can we who loved her so much endure the separation? She was my little pupil in the Cooksville school when but a child of tender age, at which time she twined herself around my heart. How well I remember her childish modesty, gentle manner, and unselfish, unassuming nature! It has been my privilege to keep in touch with her in every phase of life. I saw her blossom into happy girlhood and into useful womanhood. When she returned home from college an accomplished and religious young woman, I could but note how her mental and spiritual natures had unfolded and developed in perfect harmony. I shall ever cherish the memory of her as a warm, congenial friend and neighbor.

She went in and out before her friends with a noble life, was generous and charitable to the poor, and sympathetic with all who suffered. Her pure life was a benediction to us all. God grant to each of her precious little girls the full fruition of all her hopes, high ideals and prayers for them in a splendid womanhood, which was the dearest wish of her heart!

To her bereaved loved ones and friends, she leaves the inheritance and influence of an exemplary Christian life and a peaceful death. As we looked upon her calm, sweet face as it lay in the casket and saw how the lines of suffering had been smoothed away and the smile of peace rested like the last ray of the evening sun around the quiet mouth, our hearts could but question in pain and bewilderment, Why? Yet we felt that her abode was under the shadow of God. Faith gently wipes away our tears and points to the beautiful land whither her glad spirit has gone.

Farewell, dear Florence, but not for long! In the fleeting years at best all thy loved ones and friends may by wonderful grace meet thee again. A vacant place is left in the home circle, an aching void in many hearts. Over thy quiet grave many flowers will bloom—even so in our hearts shall thy memory bloom sweetly until we meet thee in the Beautiful Beyond, where sorrow, pain, and death are no more.

Her friend,

EVA C. DOWNER.

GET RID OF HUMORS AND AVOID SICKNESS

Humors in the blood cause internal derangements that affect the whole system, as well as pimples, boils and other eruptions, and are responsible for the readiness with which many people contract disease.

For forty years Hood's Sarsaparilla has been more successful than any other medicine in expelling humors and removing their inward and outward effects. Get Hood's. No other medicine acts like it.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiastic on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

"The best remedy for self-conceit is to be well introduced to yourself."

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT NOTES.

Our presiding elder has visited a number of charges on his first round, and from all points we are hearing of progress.

Enterprise is reported to have made a substantial increase in the assessment for the pastor, Brother Alford. Central and Fifth Street, Meridian, have also made glad the hearts of Brothers Watkins and Ferguson by a pledge of higher salaries.

The district parsonage has, under the direction of the good ladies of Meridian, taken upon itself a new roof. At the meeting of the district stewards in January a committee was ordered appointed to confer with the presiding elder, fix an assessment for repairs on the parsonage, and apportion this assessment to the different charges. This has been done, and we are hoping soon to be able to report that all needed repairs have been looked after.

Dr. Beeson, Lay Leader for the District, has invited all the Lay Activities Committees of the churches of the city to a luncheon to be given at the College Tuesday evening, February 27. At this luncheon, it is hoped that enough enthusiasm will be aroused to insure an "every-member canvass" by every Methodist church in Meridian. This canvass will be for evangelical as well as financial purposes.

Dr. Robert Selby, Commissioner for Emory University, passed through our city a few days ago. He was in the best of humor, and reported some recent substantial additions to his subscriptions.

Rev. George H. Thompson, our efficient presiding elder, preached at the First Presbyterian Church last night. This was the first of a series of services to be held once a month especially for the preachers and their wives, and one of the members of the Meridian Ministers' Association will preach each time.

NOT LONESOME NOW.

"Are you lonesome?" some one asked a light-keeper off the coast of Massachusetts. "Are you lonesome?" And he said: "I was lonesome until a ship was wrecked on this coast and I rescued five men, and since that time I have never been lonesome because now I am constantly on the alert to see if some one else needs help."—Billy Sunday.

LADY TELLS SECRET.

A well known lady gives the following recipe for gray hair: To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

It is the vacancies in the ranks of His friends wherein the mischief lies. Come and fill one gap.—Bishop Ingram.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You simply say to the drug store man, "Give me a quarter of an ounce of freezone." This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender, aching corn should relieve the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn, root and all, dries up and can be lifted out with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that, while freezone is sticky, it dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

Don't let father die of infection or lockjaw from whittling at his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

Remarkable Record for A Kidney Medicine

At least fifteen years ago we began to sell Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and during our entire experience in handling it we cannot recall a single dissatisfied customer; all of our patrons speak in favorable tones regarding Swamp-Root. We have used it ourselves and obtained the usual beneficial results. Our experience has taught us to place Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root among the best remedies on the market to-day for the diseases for which it is recommended.

IS HE CRAZY?

The owner of a large plantation in Mississippi, where the fine figs grow, is giving away a few five-acre tracts. The only condition is that figs be planted. The owner wants enough figs raised to supply a co-operative canning factory. You can secure five acres and an interest in the canning factery by writing the Eubank Farms Company, 1225 Keystone, Pittsburgh, Pa. They will plant and care for your trees for $6 per month. Your profit should be $1,000 per year. For eighteen cents to cever mailing expense, they will send you, prepaid, sample jar preserved figs, grown on the plantation.

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, AND LIVER DISORDERS.

Cleanliness is the first law of health and it means more than keeping the hands and body clean. It demands that the inside of the body shall be kept clear of impurities. It demands that the waste products be not allowed to stay any longer in the body than Nature normally provides.

The importance of keeping your bowels normal is seen when it is remembered that there is not a solitary disease in the entire list that does not demand as one of the first requisites in its treatment the thorough elimination of waste matter from the bowels.

Two of the commonest causes of constipation are wrong diet and irregularity in going to stool. The liver falling to secrete enough bile is another potent reason.

Dr. Miles' Liver Pills are an ideal remedy for such a condition. They gently stimulate the action of the liver and the bowels, and with careful attention to habits of stool and diet, insure their proper and regular action.

The following are some of the reasons why we so strongly advocate the use of Dr. Miles' Liver Pills in cases of torpid liver, billousness, constipation and indigestion: Because they do not cause griping or other unpleasant sensations like ordinary pills. Because their use does not derange the stomach, liver or bowels. Because they are a very gentle laxative and if properly used cause natural movements of the bowels. Because they are small, mild and sure.

Freckles—

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho peels off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking, and, of course, has no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

"Anaemia--Lack of Iron--Is Greatest Curse To Health and Beauty of American Women"

Says Dr. King, Physician and Author

Any Woman Who Tires Easily, is Nervous or Irritable, or Looks Pale, Haggard And Worn, Should Have Her Blood Examined for Iron Deficiency.

Administration of Nuxated Iron Will Increase the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Careworn Women 200 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time In Many Instances.

THE CHILD'S APPEAL

Mother, why don't you take NUXATED IRON and be strong and well and have nice rosy cheeks instead of being so nervous and irritable all the time and looking so haggard and old-The doctor gave some to Susie Smith's mother and she was worse off than you are and now she looks just fine

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without iron," says, Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and author, "In my recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women, I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—nuxated iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of an anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks."

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn meal no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe, the water in which our vegetables are cooked are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

"As I have said a hundred times over organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away habit forming drugs and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver, heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in the blood.

On account of the peculiar nature of woman, and the great drain placed upon her system at certain periods, she requires iron much more than man to help make up for the loss.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles, in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate, or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York physician and author, tells physicians that they should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their patients—Says anaemia—iron deficiency—is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.—Sounds warning against use of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach and do far more harm than good; advises use of only nuxated iron.

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood-beautiful healthy rosy cheeked women full of Life, Vim and Vitality

I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe aggravated conditions with unfailing results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength builder.

Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Howard James, late of the United States Public Health Service, said, "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But so many American women suffer from iron deficiency with its attendant ills—physical weakness, nervous irritability, melancholy, indigestion, flabby, sagging muscles, etc., etc.,—and in consequence of their weakened run-down condition they are so liable to contract serious and even fatal diseases that I deem it my duty to advise such to take Nuxated Iron. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine or secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' use. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Woodville Ct., Miss Conf.

Dear Editor: I wish to state that I am well pleased with my work—the Woodville Circuit. I am beginning my second round, and I find that there is a great interest being manifested. The people are ever willing to assist me in any way that they can to build up the spiritual life in their communities. Pray that we may make this the best year spiritually in the history of this charge.—E. W. Hillman, Pastor.

Oak Ridge, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I read and re-read Dr. Cooper's article relative to the needed revival in our Conference. Not since I have been a member of the Mississippi Conference have I so longed to see people really and genuinely converted. God gave us a successful year in 1916 on the Oak Ridge charge, all things considered; but I saw no revival, and the burden for souls has been laid upon me all this year. It seems, at times, that I must see souls brought to God! So often, in my secret prayers, have I been made to say, "Oh, God, give me souls!"

I want to give attention to other work that is needed, that my Conference expects me to do, but above everything else the revival is needed, which will be conducive to the successful carrying out of all other work, and I am enlisting the prayers of members, preachers, and friends for the revival that our charge needs. Nothing but the effectual, fervent prayers of the righteous will meet the need here. There must be the old-fashioned, widespread, sin-killing, Pentecostal revival before the yielding will come, and nothing but prayer will bring about such a revival. So I ask an interest in the prayers of all who read these lines, that Oak Ridge charge may come up at the end of the year with its pro rata share of the ten thousand conversions.

May God bless you, Dr. Cooper, for giving us the signal. Surely it came at the opportune time.

Yours for victory,
J. A. WELLS.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

FROM MADISON COUNTY, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: You are making us a fine paper. In my humble judgment, I do not remember to have ever seen you take a stand on the wrong side of any question that has ever been discussed in the Advocate.

Well, the time limit took Brother P. D. Hardin from us. We loved him and regretted to have to give him up. He is a very fine preacher and so true, sincere and spiritual.

We had our first quarterly meeting at Madison Station with Brother Morse in the chair. Everybody was well pleased with him. I am sure that we shall love him as well as Brother Hardin, provided the Bishop lets us keep him. When I was a boy, they would ask me which one of the girls I loved best. I would say the one I was with last; so it is with the preachers. I love them all, but it seems like I am a little closer to the last one I am associated with. C. L. RAY.

Renwar Relieves Rheumatism.

It is not necessary any longer for you to suffer those intense pains and aches of rheumatism. Renwar is a salts combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood, and thereby cure rheumatism. Don't wait until those rheumatic pains return. Buy a box of Renwar, and forget about that rheumatism. Renwar is an old, well-established remedy. It is prescribed by the best of physicians, and has thousands of friends. President L. A. Bauman, of Varley & Bauman Company, Nashville, says: "Renwar entirely relieved me of my rheumatism." For sale by druggists. Price 50 cents. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. If your druggist doesn't carry Renwar in stock tell him to order it for you from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

What does your personal influence count for? A young Scotchman once said: "I am a Christian because Marcus Dods is one." Did anybody ever venture such a statement concerning you?—J. L. Gordon.

The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

FROM MRS. T. H. MORRIS.

Dear Dr. Meek: As it is impossible for me to write personally to each of our friends, I would like to have the privilege of addressing them through the columns of the Advocate, advising them of our whereabouts and Mr. Morris' condition.

I came to this city three weeks ago with my husband, Rev. Thos. H. Morris, in order that he might receive treatment for a nervous breakdown. He broke down very noticeably last year in Monroe, having a stroke of paralysis in October. At Conference, he was given lighter work at Arcadia, La., and there broke down completely, suffering an apoplectic stroke on Dec. 25. As soon as he was able to travel, I took him to Shreveport, where Dr. Steel and other friends, including several physicians there, advised special treatment. Dr. Steel was instrumental in securing financial help from a few friends among his members and from some of our friends at Mansfield, so that he, with Dr. Henry and a few others, made it possible for us to come here and start with the very best treatment available. The physicians say that Mr. Morris can be completely restored to health, although it may take many months. The treatment at present is very expensive, but I pray that the way may be opened for Mr. Morris to continue here until he is at least well on the road to recovery.

My address is 910 W. 76th Street, Chicago, Ill. I should be glad to hear from any friends who are concerned.

Very truly,
Mrs. THOS. H. MORRIS.

Why Rheumatism Comes With Cold Weather!

BY VALENTINE MOTT PIERCE, M. D.

A close connection exists between these two—cold weather and rheumatism. Prof. Alex. Haig, of London, has the most followers in the medical profession in the belief that the presence in the system of uric acid, or its salts in excess, is the real cause of rheumatism. Everyone has recognized the difference in the appearance of their water as soon as it gets cold; there is often a copious sediment of brickdust.

Several causes may lead up to an accumulation of uric acid in the system, which, in turn, causes rheumatism or gout, or creaky joints, or swollen fingers, or painful joints. For one reason the skin does not throw off the uric acid, by profuse sweating, as in the hot weather, and the kidneys are unable to take care of the double burden. Another reason is that people do not drink as much water in cold weather as in summer, which helps to flush the kidneys. Again, they eat more meat in cold weather, and some people are so susceptible that they soon develop rheumatism after eating meat.

At all such times persons should drink copiously of hot water, say, a pint morning and night, and take Anuric three or four times a day. This Anuric comes in tablet form and can be had at almost any drug store. It dissolves the uric acid in the system and carries it outward. I would advise everyone to take Anuric occasionally, and continue for three or four weeks, and in that way avoid rheumatism, gout and many of the painful disorders due to uric acid.

DR. BLAKE ON METHODIST UNIFICATION.

We noticed on February 15 Dr. Blake's proposed solution of the Negro question as it relates to the unification of American Methodism, and we stated that we would later have something to say concerning his suggested arrangement of the Regional Conferences in the contemplated reorganization of the two Churches. This promise we will now proceed to fulfill. The following is the gist of his utterance concerning this important phase of the unification problem:

Dr. Blake's Regional Conferences.

"In the original plan of reorganization as proposed by the Joint Commission on Federation, it was suggested that there should be three or four Regional Conferences, one of which should be made up of the colored membership. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in its action recommended that the number of Regional Conferences be increased so as to provide more adequately for the needs of the work both at home and abroad. While the fixing of the number and boundaries of the Regional Conferences may not be as difficult of adjustment as some of the other problems that the Joint Commission must consider, it is doubtful if there is any phase of the whole question that will be more crucial in its outcome than this one. The success of reorganization will depend in a very large measure upon our ability to arrange the Regional units so that they shall not become a divisive factor, but shall make for real unity. Success here means everything. Failure is fraught with peril.

"How many Regional Conferences should there be and what should be their boundaries? Two or three principles should be kept in mind: first, the regional unit should so far as possible represent a homogeneity of interest; second, it should be sufficiently compact to facilitate successful administration, and third, it should do away with sectional solidarity.

"If you will divide the territory east of the Mississippi into four jurisdictions, a northeast, a southeast, a north central, and a south central, and then divide the territory west of the Mississippi into two jurisdictions, a northwest and a southwest, you will have six Regional Conferences, each reasonably homogenerous, fairly compact in area, and with sectional solidarity eliminated.

"Such a division would have this further advantage: the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would have a majority of the membership in three of these jurisdictions and the Methodist Episcopal Church would have a majority in the remaining three. Keeping this in mind, you will see that if you give each Jurisdictional Conference equal representation in the General Conference and on the connectional boards and societies, the two Churches will then have equal power in the General Conference and equal control over the connectional enterprises of the reunited Church. Thus at a single stroke you will do away with any minority representation. The bugaboo of absorption will disappear and the two Churches will come together as one, each on a perfect parity with the other.

"But I would go further. I would provide that whenever desired, a vote on any question in the General Conference might be taken by Regional delegations and that whenever such a vote was taken, it should require the concurrence of the majority of the delegations to pass the pending motion.

"The advantage of such a regional arrangement as I have suggested is in the fact that the two Churches are placed on a parity in the control of the reorganized Church. Sectional solidarity is eliminated and we have one great, united Church, knowing no North, no South, no East, no West. You have an arrangement that would make for mutual confidence and for genuine unity."

Where The Peril Lies.

Before proceeding to the consideration of this suggested arrangement, we wish to call attention to the fact that the peril in uniting the two Churches lies almost wholly on the side of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, about the only danger to the Northern Church being in the possibility of sacrificing some principle that would weaken it with the people of the North. The danger to the Church, South, is evident from the three following considerations:

1. It is outnumbered by the denomination that it is proposed to unite it with, in round numbers, by a million and a half members, not counting its Negro communicants—a majority of nearly two to one. Hence, the merging of the two bodies would naturally result in the dominance of the Church, North, unless some way should be found to guard effectively against such a result.

2. The Church, South, has within its territory some nine or ten million Negroes, the presence of whom constitutes for the major portion of the people whom it serves the most acute race problem that perhaps can be found anywhere on the face of the earth. This condition of things has given shape to the Constitutions and laws of the Southern States and profoundly affects their entire social order. This situation, however, does not extend over the whole of our Connection. It does not exist at all in the West, and is much less menacing in the border States than in those which constitute the heart of the South. Of all the Churches in the United States, the Northern Methodist Church has been the most active in opposition to the policies that the Southern people have deemed it wise to adopt in dealing with the Negroes, and there is at this time no good reason to believe that there has been any change of consequence in its feelings and attitude in this respect. NO OFFICIAL BODY of that denomination has made an utterance that indicates that there has been the least change in its sentiment respecting the social and political rights of the colored population of the South.

3. The trend of immigration is southward, and Northern sentiment is on the increase in the Southern States. The immigration of Southern people to the North is negligible; but this is far from being true as to immigration from the North into this section.

Dr. Blake's Scheme Analyzed.

Keeping these points in mind, let us look carefully at Dr. Blake's scheme for the arrangement of the suggested Regional Conferences. We are at a disadvantage in this respect, since he does not definitely indicate where the lines of these bodies will be, only referring to them in a general way. He says: "If you will divide the territory east of the Mississippi into four jurisdictions, a northeast, a southeast, a north central, and a south central, and then divide the territory west of the Mississippi into two jurisdictions, a northwest and a southwest, you will have six Regional Conferences, each reasonably homogeneous, fairly compact in area, and with sectional solidarity eliminated. Such a division would have this further advantage: the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would have a majority of the membership in three of these jurisdictions, and the Methodist Episcopal Church would have a majority in the remaining three."

This sounds very fair and generous; but let us examine these suggestions. With a million and a half more members in these proposed Regional Conferences than the Church, South, the clear presumption is that in nearly all of those in which our Church would be in the majority the Church, North, would have a considerable contingent. In the southeast jurisdiction, this contingent would likely be small, not amounting to much; in the south central it would probably be large, as it also would likely be in the southwestern. On the other hand, the Church South, would have no contingent at all in the northeast jurisdiction; practically none in the northwest, and likely a smaller one in the north central than that of the Church, North, in the south central.

Under this condition of things, we respectfully submit that a mere majority in three of these jurisdictions would utterly fail to insure the Church, South, equal representation in the General Conference. It is unthinkable that in the ordinary working of things the larger contingents of the Church, North, in these Regional Conferences would exert no influence in the election of delegates. A Church could not caucus and put out a ticket, shutting out the Northern Methodist element, and thus protect itself, as a political party would do under such circumstances. In an arrangement of this kind, the Church with nearly twice as many members as the other would inevitably always have the advantage.

Nor is this yet by any means all. In the jurisdictions along the border and in the Southwest in which we would have a majority, the race problem would count for much less than it would in the heart of the South. With a different environment, the Southern Methodists in those areas would be apt to regard it as less menacing and vital than would those in the States having a large colored population, or possibly a majority of blacks. Mississippians, for instance, could hardly expect the Missourians, the Kentuckians, the Marylanders, and the West Virginians to view legislation touching this problem with the same profound concern that they would. And, besides this, the representatives coming to the General Conference from the foreign mission fields would likely swell the majority of "liberals," if we may use that term, against the representatives from the more Southern States.

But it may be said, Dr. Blake has proposed that, whenever it is desired, the vote on any enactment shall be taken by Regional delegations, and a majority of them would have to approve a measure to pass it. Would not this give adequate protection? We answer, No. It would not afford satisfactory protection for the same reason that we have assigned above, namely, that

BECAUSE SOME ONE HAS FAITH IN ME.

By Grace Noll Crowell.

Because some one has faith in me
I cannot fail, tho' all the way
Winds up the hill.
My staff in hand, and cheerily,
I can but fare me forth each day
With right good-will.

Because some one has faith in me
I needs must keep my heart quite true,
My own faith strong.
With clear, far vision I must see
The path ahead—and what the view
To sing a song.

God help me sing the song, I pray—
God keep me clean and strong to go—
Clear-eyed to see
The untrod, upward winding way,
For fail I cannot. One I know
Has faith in me.

RESTRAINT NECESSARY.

The shores of the ocean are the secret of its depth. A shoreless ocean would degenerate into a shallow pond. It is the restraint of the shore that gives majesty and power to the great blue sea. It is even so with life. A life without restraint is a shallow life. It wastes its resources by spreading out too far. We need the restraint of God's will in our lives to make them deep and strong.—Central Christian Advocate.

A QUAINT REPLY.

A dear old Quaker lady, when asked what cosmetic she nsed to produce such a lovely complexion, replied sweetly: "I use for my lips, truth; for my voice, prayer; for my eyes, pity; for the hands, charity; for the figure, uprightness; for the heart, love." Truth, prayer, pity, charity, uprightness, and love. Could there he a more perfect circlet of jewels to adorn womanhood? They are priceless, yet free to all.—American Messenger.

FOR ALL ALIKE.

It is not the business of the Church to create obligations. We sometimes hear people speak of certain things as wrong for Christian people to do. That may be very true, but, if so, it is also wrong for men who are not Christians to do them. The truth is it is wrong for any man not to be a Christian. These things are inherent in our relations to God and to one another. No man escapes any obligation by refusing to acknowledge the obligation under which he rests. This is all that he does when he assumes the vows of the Church. It is a personal recognition of the obligations that are inherent in the conditions of human life.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD.

And how is any one to grow in the Christian life whose mind and conscience are not earnestly put to it to distinguish between what is in reality Christian and what is not, and to hold to the one and reject the other? A critic of sermons is apt to forget the practical purpose of the discernment here spoken of. He is apt to think it his function to pick holes. "Oh," he says, "snch and such a statement is utterly misleading; the preacher was simply in the air; he did not know what he was talking about." Very possibly; and if you have found out such an unsound idea in the sermon, be brotherly, and let the preacher know it. But do not forget the first and main purpose of spiritual judgment—hold fast that which is good. God forbid that you should have no gain out of the sermon except to discover the preacher's going astray. Who would think to make his fortune only by detecting base coin?—James Denny.

THE BIBLE A MORAL FACTOR IN EDUCATION.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Education in its broadest sense means the development of all the native powers of the individual. It is acknowledged by all who have given this subject much thought that there is yet large room for improvement in our present methods. As a nation, we are intensely pragmatic in theory, dogmatic in statement, and schismatic in argument, but almost lunatic in final results and achievement. We expect to buiid marble palaces out of brickbats. The consequence is, not infrequently, sadness and much disappointment. Whatever a man sows that shall he reap, is a lesson and warning as wide as the earth and as deep as human experience. Men speak of truths as old and new. No truth is ever oid. It is eternal in its youth. Like the dayspring of the morning, truth is ever bright, refreshing, life-giving, and glorious in its vital beauty. When some great truth flashes, like a silvern star, first into the range of the horizon of a man's conscious thought, it is new to him, but some sage saw its uprising ages ago.

Science and revelation were twin-born. The one is the voice of God in nature, the other His voice in life. Men lack vision, when they think or teach that these are brothers of alien households. If reai science, as they hold, is based on experience and observation, revelation is based on information and experience. In the one, only the tested and proven are accepted as final; in the other, only that which harmonizes with well known moral and ethical principles is the canon or rule. This statement, if rightly understood, eliminates all hurtful or endamaging knowledge from truth, whether seen in nature or grace. What are the known and unknown forces and facts—matter and energy—in all the vast range of this universe but laws of truth written by the Almighty Creator? What the voices of seer and Savior, evangelist and apostle, but fuller and clearer tones of the same all-pervasive Voice. We cometimes forget that the Word was incarnate in man before it was written in a book, and so the truth finds its loftiest expression crystailized in heart and life. Since all truth, whether scientific or religious, has its beginning, continuance, and ending in God, its Author, whether its beauty shines in a star, is engraved in rocky strata, or written on the living page, it is the same in essence and meaning; for, after all, only the truth can save men unto righteousness.

Then let the Bible, the greatest source of moral truth known to the world, be read and taught as a system of ethics and so made the basis of education in all our schools. A kind of subtle infidelity, which has grown up from suffrance and neglect of the cardinal principles of Scriptural teachings, obtains in most of our public and State institutions of the day. It is high time that the Christian men and women were awaking to their duty and responsibility in this matter, and seeing that the Word of God is taught to the children and youth of our land.

There ought not to be any opposition to this on the part of our Jewish citizenship; for the Bible is preeminently a Jewish book. Every writer of it, save perhaps Luke, was of this race. And our Christ never taught any moral or ethical principle contrary to that of Moses or Isiah. On the contrary, he repeatedly referred to the Jewish prophets, to reinforce and endorse his doctrine. Roman Catholicism can only save itself as a great Church and a mighty power for Christianizing the world by openly espousing the cause of Bible teaching. Many of the most enlightened Romanists see and acknowledge this. Some few Protestants, be it said to their shame, oppose the reading of the Bible in our public schools. Their plea is, that they fear doctrinal disputation. Well, let it come! The school will grow under it, even as the Churches have grown thereby. As for me, I would infinitely prefer that my child would accept as a guide for his life the doctrine of some one of the great evangelical Churches (other than my own) of America than to drift on the shoreless sea of infidelity.

There is nothing in the Federal Constitution, nor in that of our States, that forbids the exercise of the people's religious privileges anywhere or at any time. The sovereign power is lodged in the people. Let us exercise it on the part of that which makes for a higher life of righteousness for our children.

"WHO'S WHO AMONG SOUTHERN METHODIST PREACHERS."

In the Builetin of the Board of Education for February, 1917, is found a remarkably succinct statistical tabuiation signed by Rev. R. H. Bennett, D.D. A careful and prayerful reading and study of the entire article would prove fruitful.

The reports are from 3517 of our own Southland preachers as to the causes or agencies used of God in their cail to the work of the ministry. I simply cuii for suggestion and not argumentation a few of them:

Occupation when called, farmers	66.7 per cent
Parents Christian	87.6 per cent
Born in the country	73 per cent
Homes with family worship	86 per cent
Average age when called	17 years.
Called when in college (only)	9 per cent
Called in neither school nor college	65 per cent
Human agency in call, sermons (only)	5 per cent
Influence of pastor, sermons and Sunday School combined (only)	25 per cent
Theological training graduates (only)	5.55 per cent
Without any theological training	84.14 per cent
No college training	44 per cent
Obstacles in way of full preparation (finances)	67.2 per cent

If a line underneath were to be drawn for special emphasis, coupled with an interrogation point, it would be the following:

Called when in college (only)	9 per cent
Called through sermons (only)	5 per cent
Called through combined influence of pastor, Sunday School and sermons (only)	25 per cent

Impediment in way of full preparation laid at the door of straitened finances, over 67 per cent, or, to be exact, 67.2 per cent.

Then, true to all history, comes God's honoring of the home with its family aitar: 86 per cent of the 3517 preachers came from homes where the fire burned and prayer was made before and with the children.

A Louisiana society with 300 members has been organized in Washington, D. C. Congressman Wilson, of Harrisonburg, was made President, and Mr. Joseph M. Rault, of New Orleans, Secretary.

It is stated that in the United States it takes about two years to build a submarine war vessel, and about four years to build a battleship. Great Britain, however, is said to be able to turn out a dreadnaught battleship in about eighteen months.

New Orleans is to have a portable Red Cross Hospital. A movement is under way to secure for it an endowment of $25,000 by small subscriptions. An effort is also being made to bring the membership of the Red Cross Society in this city up to 10,000.

The farmers of Lincoln County, Mississippi, met in the Court-house at Brookhaven recently to discuss the organization of a marketing board to control the marketing and shipping of truck and other farm products raised in their county. This was a good example.

The United States consumed during the month of January, 1917 (not including linters), 603,701 bales of cotton, and during the six months ending January 31, 3,367,663 bales. In January, 1916, the consumption was 542,081 bales, and for the six months preceding, 3,075,721.

On February 10, President Wilson signed a bill passed by Congress which appropriates $250,000 for the establishment of a national home for lepers. Where this institution will be located has not yet been decided. According to report, about 150 cases of leprosy, mostly among native Americans, have been tabulated in the United States.

The National Defense Act passed by Congress, which is designed to maintain the United States Army at a strength of 500,000 men in times of peace, calls upon the States for 800 militiamen for each Congressman and Senator. This makes the shares of Louisiana and Mississippi 8000 each. General Scales of Mississippi states that he has been requested to enlist 1000 of the 8000 expected from that commonwealth at once.

It is reported that England may land troops at Tampico, Mexico, for the purpose of protecting her oil interests thereabout. The British Navy is said to obtain most of its oil for fuel from the Tampico district. The possibility of this step being taken by the British Government is affirmed to be due to the statement of President Carranza that he might place an embargo on the shipment of all fuel and other war supplies from Mexico. It may be that his Excellency will yet learn that there is such a thing as talking too much.

President and Mrs. Wilson gave a formal dinner at the White House in honor of Speaker Champ Clark on February 13. This shows that "Time" is the great bridger of political chasms, as well as the healer of personal sorrows. We were pleased to note this incident. Mr. Clark also became a grandfather last week, his daughter, Mrs. J. M. Thomson (formerly Miss Genevieve Clark) having given birth to a son in this city on the 13th inst. He was immediately named for the Speaker. Mr. Thomson, the father of the babe, is the Publisher of the New Orleans Item.

The latest disturbances to be reported among the nations are insurrections in Cuba and Persia. It has been stated that our Government may take a hand in maintaining order in the former country if necessary. The following is a part of a recent press dispatch concerning the Persian situation: "The democratic members of the Persian Congress who fled from Teheran in November, 1915, have set up a new government covering the whole of the southwestern part of the country, bordering on Turkey, which is under the influence of the Turkish and German military forces."

EVANGELISM IN LOUISIANA.

March.

The time has come for the execution of our Conference Plan for a Concerted District Revival throughout our State.

The last week in February was set aside for a week of prayer for this very important work of winning souls; we hope every preacher in the Conference called his people to prayer for this object, as he was requested to do.

New Orleans opens the Campaign the first of March; and Rev. W. W. Holmes writes that most of the Churches in his district are co-operating in the plan. He also states that the month's effort will wind up with a union revival at First Church, New Orleans, led by Rev. D. L. Coale, evangelist.

April.

April, one of our most beautiful months, has been selected for the Lafayette District. We know that Brother May will leave no stone unturned, and we will watch for the good news we expect from the pastors in the Lafayette District.

May.

Shreveport begins in May, with Rev. C. D. Atkinson and his well organized body of preachers and laymen, to add many hundred souls to the churches of that splendid district.

June.

June was chosen for Alexandria (the "Hub" of the State), with our efficient presiding elder, Briscoe Carter, planning to hold a conference with the preachers and the laymen all over his district, hoping to accomplish at every place the largest possible results.

July.

Rev. A. S. Lutz writes that he hopes to get in line for the time set for the special effort in the Monroe District. Brother Lutz reported a great ingathering from his district last year; but we are expecting much larger returns this time.

August.

Ruston District, with Dr. J. M. Henry directing, and the pastors having affairs well in hand, will endeavor to follow the plan for the work as outlined by the Committee on Evangelism, and we feel assured of the heartiest co-operation on the part of all of the preachers in the district.

September.

The last month chosen, but we feel certain that no district will do more thorough work than the Baton Rouge District, under the leadership of Rev. H. W. Bowman. Brother Bowman has written us that quite a number of his preachers have already made plans for the work.

The prospect looks bright. May we not hope that each pastor will organize early for the campaign and secure help ahead of time?

We desire to see every Methodist Church in the State hold a well organized and progressive revival that will endeavor to reach every man, woman and child in the town or community.

The Committee on Evangelism will meet in Alexandria on the 21st of February to discuss plans for the future. Brethren, let us pray and push the battle until God brings the victory.

"We can and we will."

TWO BOOKS.

I would like to call the attention of the preachers and laymen to two books I have recently read. One is the Handbook of all Denominations, by M. Phelan, of Texas.

The book is just what the title indicates. It gives a very concise and true statement of the doctrines, polity, and statistics of each denomination.

The other is "Modern Substitutes for Christianity," by Rev. P. McAdam Muir, D.D. This is a great book and especially adapted to these times. Wherever we go we find there is a tendency to substitute churchism, church ordinances, and mechanical service for the atoning blood of Jesus Christ.

We need to stress as never before Jesus Christ as the only hope for salvation. Whenever and wherever the Lordship of Jesus Christ is recognized, devoted service is sure to follow.

These books can be purchased from our Publishing House. W. M. McINTOSH.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The Woman's Missionary Council will hold its Seventh Annual Meeting in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, New Orleans, La., April 12-20, 1917.

A Workers' Conference will be held Thursday afternoon, April 12, at 2 o'clock and an inspirational service at 8 o'clock in the evening of the same day.

Delegates and visitors should correspond with Mrs. John B. Parker, 1520 Audubon Street, New Orleans, La., Chairman of Committee on Hotels. She will furnish a list of hotels and boarding houses.

As the probable attendance will not guarantee reduced railroad rates, it will be well for groups of persons coming from the same or contiguous territory to secure party tickets or to inquire of the local agent regarding the use of mileage books.

Friday, April 5, has been set apart as a day of special prayer for the approaching Council meeting. Yours cordially,

Miss BELLE H. BENNETT,
President.

BISHOP JAMES ATKINS, D.D.

James Atkins, son of Rev. James and Mary F. Atkins, was born in Knoxville, Tenn., on April 18, 1850. His boyhood days were spent in East Tennessee and Southwest Virginia. He received his education at Riceville Academy and Emory and Henry College. He was licensed to preach in 1870 and became a member of the Holston Conference. He was married to Miss Ella Branner in 1876. He has three children living. The following is a list of his appointments: 1872-1873, junior preacher, Morristown and Mossy Creek Station; 1873-1875, Jonesboro Station; 1875-1876, Abingdon Station; 1876-1878, Asheville Station; 1878-1879, Abingdon; 1879-1889, President Asheville Female College; 1889-1893, President Emory and Henry College; 1893-1896, Asheville Female College; 1896-1906, Sunday School Editor. He was made Bishop at Birmingham in 1906. He was the originator of the Bible Teachers' Study Circle, which is being taken up by other Churches, and is the author of several books and pamphlets on Sunday school subjects. He was a member of the General Conferences of 1890, 1894, 1898, and 1902. He received the degree of A.M. and D.D. from Emory and Henry College. His present residence is at Waynesville, N. C.

The Bishop is expected to speak twice at the Federation meeting in Alexandria on March 14 and 15.

WESLEY BIBLE CLASS DEPARTMENT.

Charles D. Bulla, Superintendent.

The past year has been the most successful period in the history of our Wesley Bible Class Work. Twenty-two hundred classes, with an approximate membership of 50,000, enrolled during the year. There are now 8800 Wesley Classes, with a membership of more than 200,000.

What Does This Mean?

It means:

1. That these classes are organized. They have officers and committees, systematically working out the purposes of the movement—viz., the development of the members in Christian character and their training in Christian service through systematic instruction, Christian fellowship, and mutual helpfulness.

2. These classes are closely related to our Church, and their loyalty counteracts the tendency toward that class independence which has embarrassed other denominations. This commends the movement to our leaders.

3. Emphasis is being placed on Christian activity. The class reports show a varied activity in the class, in the local Church, in the home, and in the community. Our Wesley Class literature emphasizes the fact that personal religion and social religion are not antagonistic, but mutually supplementary, and that a religious experience begets a sense of social obligation.

4. These classes are at once the evangelistic opportunity of the Church, having many unconverted members enrolled, and an evangelizing agency, the class leaders being influential Christian men and women with an eager desire to lead the members to Christ.

Intermediate and Senior Classes.

More Wesley Intermediate and Wesley Senior Classes are being enrolled now than at any time since provision was made for their organization. It is not necessary to resort to all manner of organizations for boys and girls when Wesley Classes may be made to meet their spiritual as well as their physical, social, and intellectual needs. Wesley Classes are flexible enough to include all proper activities of boys and girls from thirteen to sixteen years of age, and at the right time these can be discarded for the interests that belong to the period from seventeen to nineteen. Our young people will outgrow other organizations, but they will never outgrow the organized Bible class.

Wesley Bible Class Federations.

The response of our Bible classes to the appeal of the Church to organize and enroll created a need for a clearing-house meeting where representatives of classes might meet for fellowship and conference. Wesley Bible Class Federations are being formed to meet this need, and they have succeeded beyond the enthusiastic expectation of leaders. The following Federation meetings were held during the year 1916:

North Carolina Conference, Fayetteville, January 19-21. Attendance, 350.

Central Texas Conference, Fort Worth, May 10-12. Attendance, 350.

North Alabama Conference, Birmingham, June 13-15. Attendance, 308.

South Carolina State, Sumter, July 3-5. Attendance, 1000.

Kentucky State, Kavanaugh Camp Ground, August 8-10. Attendance, 800.

Florida Conference, Ocala, October 10-12. Attendance, 344.

A general Wesley Bible Class Conference was held at Lake Junaluska, July 21, 22.

There is no confusion or loss of motion in our Federation meetings. Wesley Classes are members of one household. They discuss the Bible class organization and work in the tongue wherein they were born and return each to its home church to work in accordance with the plans of the Southern Methodist Church.

Our Program.

We will carry on this work of recruiting from the non-church-going population; we will drill in the manual of arms, in strategy and tactics; we will mobilize our class companies in church regiments, our regiments in district brigades, our brigades in Conference divisions, and our divisions in a Southern Methodist army corps, and fall into our designated position in the world-wide Bible class army, to give a good account of ourselves.

WESLEY ADULT BIBLE CLASSES.

The organized adult Bible class is a providential movement. It is the response of the Church to the call of our day. Thousands of men and women are meeting for the study of the Word of God, and, being "furnished completely unto every good work," they are expressing Bible knowledge in the terms of philanthropic service.

General Conference Legislation.

With a view to the federation of all Bible classes in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the General Conference at Asheville, N. C., May, 1910, created the Wesley Adult Bible Class Department. The movement was taken up with great interest throughout the Church. One hundred and twenty thousand men and women were enrolled in Wesley Bible Classes during the quadrennium.

In order to meet the needs of boys and girls of the adolescent period, the General Sunday School Board, May, 1912, authorized the organization of Wesley Intermediate and Wesley Senior Bible Classes.

The General Conference, May, 1914, enacted the following paragraph:

"For the purpose of developing our young people, as well as those of mature years, in Christian character and training them in Christian service through systematic instruction, Christian fellowship, and mutual helpfulness, the Board shall maintain a Wesley Bible Class Department to be composed of all adult, senior, and intermediate classes, organized according to the plan prescribed by the Board. The Board shall elect quadrennially a Superintendent of the Wesley Bible Class Department, who shall have charge of the organized Bible Class work of the Church. It shall be the duty of said Superintendent to promote the organization and enrollment of Wesley Bible Classes and the formation of City, District, Conference, and State Wesley Bible Class Federations, and to travel throughout the connection in the interest of his department." (Par. 253, Discipline, 1914.)

The object of this legislation is the organization, unification, co-operation, and general direction of all Bible classes which shall be enrolled under this plan as a department of the Sunday school work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Standard of Organization.

In order that Wesley Classes may be given equal rank with organized classes of all denominations, classes must conform to the following standard:

1. The class shall have at least the following officers: Teacher, President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer. It shall also have at least three standing committees, as follows: Membership, Social, and Devotional. It is not required that these committees be known by these particular names, but that the class shall have three committees which are responsible for these three kinds of work.

2. The class shall be definitely connected with some Sunday school.

3. Age, twenty years and upwards. (Where in the judgment of any local school conditions make it necessary, pupils under twenty years may be included.)

Advantages of Class Organization.

There are many advantages in class organization: the systematic union of individuals in a class whose officers and members work together for a common end.

Organization provides a plan by which the class can be built up.

It creates a class spirit by furnishing a constitution, name, and certificate.

The organized Bible class is the best brotherhood.

Responsibility is distributed.

Workers are discovered and developed.

Proper class organization places emphasis upon Christian activity.

The Sunday school is furnished an agency for effective service.

BENEFITS OF A WESLEY BIBLE CLASS FEDERATION.

(The following article is from the pen of Rev. Emmett Hightower, our General Sunday School Board's Divisional Secretary for the Southwestern Division. Mr. Hightower has had considerable experience with Wesley Bible Class Federations and his opinions are worthy of careful consideration.)

The following statements are based upon actual observation of the workings of a Conference Federation of Wesley Bible Classes:

1. Federation develops among Bible classes a healthy denominational spirit. Religious work is chiefly done through denominational agencies. The usefulness of a Bible class depends upon close and sympathetic connection with the machinery of its own Church. The desire for fellowship in service is so strong that unless our Church satisfies this craving it will seek gratification elsewhere. The Federation meets this need and at the same time binds the movement to our own Church.

2. The fact that a Bible class must be properly registered at our own headquarters before it can participate in a Federation stimulates organization and enrollment. Registration emphasizes the obligation of a class to be subject to the discipline of the Church. It standardizes class organization and thus encourages class activities and projects those activities into proper channels. It keeps the class in vital touch with our own headquarters and gives stability to its organization.

3. Federation gives opportunity for conference. The Wesley Bible Class movement is yet in the pioneer stage. Every worker in this field needs the experience of other workers. Federation affords a chance to compare notes, exchange ideas, and discuss plans.

4. It broadens the vision of Bible class workers by bringing them into contact with our leaders. More attendance at the Annual Conference, where they heard the leaders of Methodism, has been a most important factor in the development of our preachers. Contact with the leaders in Sunday school work must have results quite as beneficial to Wesley Bible Class workers. It enlarges their horizon, focuses their attention upon things that are really important, and kindles their zeal.

5. Federation imparts an idea of the importance and magnitude of the organized Bible class movement. Great bodies in action are always impressive. The lonely Bible class teacher in the isolated school, facing discouragements, conscious of his own limitations, and chilled by the indifference of those he seeks to help, may wonder if, after all, his work is worth while. Bring that person into fellowship with a host of people intent upon the same pursuit that claims his attention, and he will return to his own task with a bounding heart.

6. Without religious fervor all our plans and organizations avail nothing. To meet with kindred spirits who are conscious of salvation and intent upon service for the King cannot but react in blessing on the earnest soul. What the revival is to the local Church member who gives to it his active co-operation, the Wesley Bible Class Federation is to the Bible class worker who makes himself an integral part of the movement.

WESLEY BIBLE CLASS FEDERATIONS.

It is the duty of the Superintendent of the Wesley Bible Class Department to promote the organization and enrollment of Wesley Bible Classes and the formation of City, District, Conference, and State Wesley Bible Class Federations. In accordance with this action, the General Sunday School Board adopted the following constitution for Wesley Bible Class Federations:

Article III.—Motto.

My Brother and I.

Article IV.—Membership.

NOW ON A CASH BASIS.

The subscription price of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for the year 1917 is $1.50 to both the people and preachers. The Publishing Committee at its recent meeting gave orders to the Publisher to discontinue all delinquent subscriptions and to place the business of the paper on a cash basis. Many of our preachers fail to observe the rule of paying in advance, and in consequence may, unless they give the matter immediate attention, have their names dropped—an embarrassment which the Publisher hopes to escape. Under the new policy instituted, the longest time that ANY delinquent subscriber can possibly be carried is three months. Brethren, please note and heed this very important statement.

DR. BLAKE ON UNIFICATION.

the most acute and vital issue—the issue that most makes protection necessary—does not extend over the whole territory of our Church, and that there are sections of it which, when detached, could not be relied upon with certainty to side with the more Southern States. This would apply to a vote by Regional delegations as well as to a vote in the General Conference. The fact is, while we would not attribute such a motive to Dr. Blake, we doubt whether a more catchy and effective method of shivering to pieces the power of the Southern Church could be devised than this arrangement to detach from the main body of its membership the elements which are the least Southern in their environments and ideals and link them with contingents of the Church, North. AND IT SHOULD BE CAREFULLY NOTED THAT DR. BLAKE'S PLAN LEAVES NO SPECIAL CONNECTING LIINK OF ANY KIND BETWEEN THE REGIONAL CONFERENCES IN WHICH SOUTHERN METHODISTS WOULD BE IN THE ASCENDENCY—they would be utterly dissevered and naturally tend to drift further apart with the passing years.

And there is this further consideration which ought not to be overlooked in this connection: Even assuming that this arrangement would safeguard the delicate interests of the Church, South (which we are convinced it would not), with immigration flowing steadily southward, what guarantee is there that it would continue to do so? Might not the complexion of these jurisdictions in which we are told the Southern Methodists would now have a majority change? We have seen New England change from Protestant to Catholic within the past few decades. In building the constitution of a Church, we should proceed as if we were building for all time. Let us beware of entailing upon our children, by our short-sightedness, a condition of things that would be intolerable and ruinous.

Destruction of Southern Solidarity Sought.

Dr. Blake's candid declaration that one of the things that would be accomplished by his suggested arrangement of the Regional Conferences would be the elimination of sectional solidarity, is worthy of particular notice. We heartily concur in the view that the plan that he advocates would accomplish this result, and, as we see it, along with it would go practically all the true autonomy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and also EVEN ITS IDENTITY. It would, in our opinion, amount practically to the absorption of the Southern Church, that "hugaboo" disappearing only because those fearing it, like Jonah of old, would have passed to where a thing realized could no longer be dreaded as a danger impending.

Why do the Northern Methodists wish to destroy "sectional solidarity" in the South? There is a sectionalism that is predicated upon prejudice and hatred, and that ought to be destroyed. But the unitedness of the South is not to any large extent due to that form of sectionalism. It is based, not upon bitter memories of the past, but upon the fact that there are nearly ten million Negroes in the South and the conviction that white supremacy can only be maintained by the white people of the Southern States standing together. If this menace were taken away, Southern solidarity would soon crumble. Are the Northern Methodists willing to help remove it by aiding to strike from the Federal Constitution such portions of the war amendments as make possible this peril? If not, are they ready to help maintain white supremacy in the States of the South by sanctioning and assisting in the upholding of the constitutions and laws that were made to accomplish this end? We have not seen where any one of them has declared himself to be in favor of either of these two alternatives. Concerning this great question, their leaders and their papers are as silent as the grave.

If they so love and trust and honor the Methodists of the South, as it is claimed they do, why is it that they are afraid to leave the interests of Methodism in the South in their hands? We do not know of a single Southern Methodist who would not be willing to let the Northern Methodist Church represent and act for Methodism in the North, if they would concede the same right to Southern Methodists in this section. Why this difference in the attitude of the two Churches toward each other?

A Strange Role for Southerners.

The most remarkable thing to us about this matter, however, is that there should be intelligent Southern Methodists who seem to think that it would be a great achievement to break up the solidarity of the South, and who apparently are willing to co-operate with Northerners to effect this result. To destroy the solidarity of the South has been one of the chief ambitions of the Republican party ever since the memorable days of Reconstruction, and to bring about such a disruption it has not hesitated to employ every power at its command, from Federal bayonets at the polls, to the bestowment of high honors upon Southerners to win them from their loyalty to the people of the land of their birth. Is the Southern Methodist Church to be used as an entering wedge for the ultimate accomplishment of what the Republican party has hitherto sought in vain to do? If so, and the solid South, situated as it is, is finally shattered, how are the sacred interests that would thereby be imperiled—interests that are absolutely vital to the peace and welfare of the Southern white people—to be protected?

Joint Commission and Oklahoma Plan Repudiated.

The plan of unification agreed upon by the former Joint Commission of the Church, North, and the Church, South, and which, with one modification, was endorsed by our General Conference at Oklahoma City, did not seek to shatter "sectional solidarity." On the contrary, it provided for three white Regional Conferences—one in the South, one in the North, and the other in the West. This plan was designed to stop hurtful competition in the West and along the border, to provide a General Conference (of two houses), with very restricted powers, and to give concert of effort in certain connectional activities, while leaving the three Regional Conferences largely self-governing. A promiscuous mixing up of things, such as is now being advocated, was apparently not at all in contemplation. In proof of this statement, we submit the following declaration of Dr. Claudius B. Spencer, Editor of the Central Christian Advocate, who is one of the representatives of the Northern Church on the present Joint Commission, taken from an utterance in which he was discussing this plan (after our last General Conference had been held): "The phrase, 'three Quadrennial Conferences,' means, and only means, the division of American Methodism into three areas, one of which shall be practically the area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the fifteenth day of May, 1845; a second, which shall be practically what Bishop McTyeire graphically described as the portion of the (Methodist Episcopal) Church not included in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1844, and, a third, which shall include the area in the West, which has been entered since 1844. It is a waste of time to chatter about any other lines of division." (See Dr. Spencer's book, "That They May Be One"—page 49.) Such, according to this distinguished authority, was the meaning of the plan of the original Joint Commission—the plan endorsed, with one change, by our last General Conference. The fact is, it was at first so interpreted by every one, both in the South and in the North. (We do not think it was to the discredit of this plan that it proposed to have regard to the solemn compact of 1844 as to territory and to existing conditions that have since arisen in the West.)

So, this anti-solidarity plan now brought forward by Dr. Blake is, so far as the Regional Conferences are concerned, something wholly different from the one that was matured by the former Joint Commission. And if there be Southern Commissioners supporting it, as we infer there are from Dr. Blake's statement and certain representations that we saw in the Baltimore Sun, they have broken entirely away from the Oklahoma City plan of unification. We think that Dr. Blake, and some others who have made similar statements, are far from correct in saying that the only thing that stands in the way of the unification of the two Methodisms is the Negro question—especially so, if they are expecting Dr. Blake's Regional Conference scheme to go through. If the "liberals" on the Southern Commission made the impression upon the Doctor in "the extended conversations" had at Baltimore last December and January, that Southern Methodists would be willing to have their Church thus chopped up and started on the way to obliteration, we think that they have greatly misled him; and if they themselves have picked up any such notion as this, though we do not claim to be a prophet, we hazard the prediction that if this scheme is ever submitted to the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, they will be disillusioned in a manner that they will not soon forget.

We hardly need to say that we believe that there are a number of men on the Commission of the Church, South, who will never agree to Dr. Blake's proposed adjustment of the Regional Conferences.

The Great Battle

The Lower House of the Minnesota Legislature on January 31, by a vote of 80 to 49, declared for submitting the question of State-wide prohibition to the people. The Wyoming Legislature has taken the same action without a dissenting voice.

On February 22 the Lower House of Congress passed the Post-office Appropriation Bill, carrying an amendment completely forbidding the shipment of intoxicating liquors into prohibition States. The vote on this prohibition amendment was 319 to 72. Only 15 Southern Congressmen opposed it. The Louisiana delegation broke even on it. Aswell, Morgan, Watkins, and Wilson voting for it, and Dupre, Estopinal, Martin, and Lazaro against it. As this bill now stands, it will make all the Southern States "bone-dry," except Louisiana, Texas, and Florida, after July 1, 1917. The Senate has also passed this measure, but, as there are some differences in its enactment as compared with that of the House, it will now go to a Committee of Conference representing the two bodies. These differences, however, relate to other aspects of the Post-office Appropriation Bill—not to the prohibition amendment feature. Another important item of this legislation is that barring liquor advertisements in States that forbid it. There is some talk in Congress of trying to defer the time when this prohibition legislation will take effect.

OLD SADDLEBAGS.

By Rev. Van B. Sullins.

Old Saddlebag, Old Saddlebag,
My Pard of other days,
O'er prairie field, through wooded hill,
We've wandered on our ways.
We never saw our spirits sag,
Or lost the mystic thrill
That tuned each note of praise.
Old Saddlebag, Old Saddlebag,
We've swum the swollen stream,
Our faithful horse that bore the load,
Long since, lay down to dream.
We never saw him limp or lag,
Or lose the winding road
That nowhere ran, 'twould seem.
Old Saddlebag, dear Saddlebag,
We've made the circuit round,
And oft heneath eaeh rustic roof
Gave forth the gospel sound,
Nor did a servlce ever drag,
Where Spirit lent His proof,
And Christ, as King, was crowned.
But Saddlebag! My Saddlebag!
The eve bespeaks the night,
Your face, age-rusted, tells its tale,
Mine too is gray and white.
But soon from Earth's abysmal erag,
Those mounts of God we'll seale,
And stand on heaven's height.

INSIDE AND OUTSIDE CROWDS.

"No," said David Donaldson with decision, "I won't go into the church. You're all right yourself, Fred. If church members were all like you, it would be different. But I can't stand the hypocrites you've got in with you. Look across the street; there goes Dr. Jamison—a long-faced, praying scoundrel, and every one knows it. I'd rather stay on the outside than associate with sueh men."

At the next corner his eompanion turned. "Let's go down Fort Street," he suggested.

David drew back. "What for?" he ejaculated. "That's not an agreeable walk."

"Oh, for just a little way. We've plenty of time."

In silence they walked two or three blocks. Then they came to the worst plaee in all the hideous length of Fort Street. A drunken woman staggered from a crumbling shed marked "Saloon." Two men were brawling loudly on the corner. Little children playing marbles were fighting and swearing as the game went on. A coarse-voiced man was beating a decrepit horse because it could not pull its heavy load.

The young men walked silently along, and their faces showed the disgust they felt. At last Fred waved his hand toward the street, abounding with its unclean life.

"Dave," he said, "I like you: you're a good fellow. If every one outside the church were like you, I might stay out myself. Perhaps I could be as good a Christian out as in. But I can't stand the rest of your hunch. Look at those men and women, those children. Dave, I haven't much use for your outside set. They are low, they are indecent, they are—inhuman. You are all right, but I can't stand that part of your erowd."

David turned upon his friend in anger. Was he to be thrown in with that riffraff? Then he paused. After all, was his friend Fred, a genuine, sincere Christian, to be counted in with the hypocrites inside the church? He laid his hand on his friend's arm and smiled.

"Your point is well taken, old chap," he said. "If you put it that way, I admit that in spite of your hypocrites you people inside the church have got the best of us outside. I'll go with you next Sunday."—Baptist Chronicle.

ANY WAY YOU PLEASE.

"Mamma, I wish you'd call the baby in; he's so cross we can't play!" cried Robert one day as he was playing in the yard with his sister and the baby.

"I don't think he would be eross if you were not cross to him," said mamma, coming out. "He does just as he sees you do. Just try him and see. Put your hat on one side of your head."

Robert did so, and presently the baby pushed his straw hat over on one side of his head just as Robbie had done.

"Whistle," said mamma.

Robbie did, and the baby began to whistle, too.

"Stop mocking me!" said Robbie, giving baby a push. Baby sereamed and pushed Robbie back.

"There, you see," said his mother, "the baby does just as you do. Kiss him now, and you will see how quickly he will follow your example."

Robbie did not feel exactly like doing this, but he did, and baby hugged and kissed him back very warmly.

"Now, you see," said his mother, "you can make a cross or a good boy of your little brother, just as you ehoose. But you must teach him yourself."—Jewels.

THE BLACK MARKS.

Little Ethel had been told that she must not make pencil marks in her father's books, and she was so obedient that her father often lent his pencil to her. One day, however, she grew tired of scribbling on pieces of paper, and thought she would just make a little mark on the edge of the page. So she made a little mark in one of the hooks on the table, and the little mark made her want to make a big mark, until pretty soon she was scribbling all over the reading. Suddenly she thought of her father, and tried to rub out the marks with the eraser on the end of the pencil; but that only made long, black streaks and mussed up the paper.

"O, dear, I can't unwrite these marks!" cried little Ethel, and she rubbed with the eraser until she rubbed a little hole in the paper.

Just then her father came into the room and he told her that the black marks on the white paper were like the marks of naughty words and actions in little girls' hearts. The right way is to be obedient and not make the black marks; for after they are made it is very, very hard to rub them out.—Shepherd's Arms.

TURKISH SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Turkish children recite their lessons all together in the old-fashioned schools, and if you could hear them you would think that you had gone into Wonderland with Alice, where "things wouldn't come straight." The little girls go to school in groups, and with them is always an old servant who carries all their books on what looks for all the world like a small clothes-tree. The boys go and come in two long lines, attended by their teacher. They carry their own books and wear long trousers and fezzes exactly like their fathers. Some of the tiny girls carry their own little tables and drawing boards. In the gypsy village in Scutari the children learn their lessons by songs in the streets. They stand in a circle, with a big girl in the middle, and they get noisier and noisier the more interested they grow.—St. Nicholas.

SOME MATHEMATICS.

"I am not much of a mathematician," said the cigarette, "But I can and do:
Add to a man's nervous troubles;
Substract from his physical energy;
Multiply his aches and pains;
Divide his mental powers; take Interest from his work, and Discount his chanees for sueeess."

Church News

Rev. John Paul, of Asbury College, who is known to many of our readers, expects to sail for Japan next July on an evangelistic mission.

Bishop John C. Kilgo spent Sunday, January 28, with the Edenton Street congregation in Raleigh, N. C., delivering two masterful sermons.

Colonel E. C. Reeves, who has lately been considerably indisposed at his home in Johnson City, Tenn., has, we are happy to state, about recovered.

Bishop James Atkins will preach the Commencement sermon of Emory College on June 11, and Bishop W. A. Candler will preach at the night service on the same day.

Dr. James Cannon, Jr., recently visited New York City, and on the Sabbath, while there, he heard Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis in the morning and Dr. S. Parkes Cadman at the evening hour.

The Southern Methodist congregations at Lynchburg, Va., will undertake to raise $20,000 for a Methodist church in Kobe, Japan. The Japanese congregation that will use this house of worship is expected to provide a site for it at a cost of about $10,000.

After tarrying a few days in San Francisco, where they landed on February 12, Miss Belle Bennett and Miss Mabel Head hastened on to missionary headquarters in Nashville, Tenn. They were shown many courtesies while they were resting in the Western metropolis.

Dr. Ed. F. Cook, Secretary of the Foreign Department of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has tendered his resignation, to take effect in May. Dr. Cook has accepted the position of Director of the Department of Missions in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Bishop C. K. Nelson, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, died at his home in Atlanta on February 13. He was born near Cobham, Va., in 1852, and was made Bishop of Georgia in 1892. In 1902, when that State was divided into two dioceses, he was left in control of the one embracing the northern half of it.

The Pacific Methodist Advocate of February 15 reports that Bishop Waterhouse is slowly convalescing and that he is in a hopeful frame of mind concerning his physical afflictions. Other members of his family, however, have lately been ill. We trust that this choice chief pastor and his stricken loved ones may all soon be entirely restored to health.

The following is from the Pacific Methodist Advocate: "The San Francisco Church with the largest membership is the First Congregational, which has 742 members. Calvary Presbyterian Church stands next with 683; St. Mark's (Lutheran) has 571; Grace, Methodist Episcopal, 565; the Central Methodist, 491; The First Baptist, 451; The First Presbyterian, 423; St. Luke's Episcopal Church, 414; Grace Episcopal, 403; Trinity Episcopal, 400." There is probably not a city in the United States where in proportion to population the Churches are weaker than they are in San Francisco.

Editorial

THE LOUISIANA FEDERATION OF WESLEY CLASSES.

The meeting to be held in Alexandria, La., March 14-16, for the Federation of the Wesley Bible Classes of the Louisiana Conference promises to be an occasion of much interest. The program arranged for this gathering is a most inviting one in prospect, and will doubtless prove to be both informing and inspiring. We trust that the attendance will be large and that great good will result. Let all our pastors and Sunday school superintendents in the State seek to make this meeting count for the utmost possible in the building np of our Sunday school work.

The Adult Bible Class movement is one of the most significant religious developments of this age. The open Bible has been perhaps the mightiest promoter of human progress that has figured in the history of mankind. It means much that so many men and women are taking up the study of God's Word. It is incumbent upon the Christian Churches to see that this study is of a kind to yield the largest and best fruitage. In such an association of Bible students as is proposed there ought to be help and inspiration.

MORE OBJECTIONABLE THAN DR. BLAKE'S SCHEME.

Rev. H. M. DuBose, D.D., a member of our Commission on Methodist Unification, in Zion's Herald of February 21, endorses in a general way the recent proposals of Dr. Edgar Blake of the Northern Commission concerning the matter of uniting the two Churches, and submits himself a plan for disposing of the Negro Methodists. The space is not at our disposal in this issue of the Advocate to print his scheme in full, but we hope to do so later. It leaves the colored brethren in an Associate Connection, organically related to the white department in various ways, including a limited representation in the General Conference and a joint meeting of the Episcopal College (white and black). We regard Dr. DuBose's plan of arranging for the Negroes as even more objectionable than Dr. Blake's scheme, which we discussed in the Advocate of February 15. That a majority of Southern Methodists will stand for it, we do not at all believe.

It is becoming increasingly evident to us from the utterances of Commissioners and the little light that has reached us from other sources that the Oklahoma City plan of unification has no chance of being adopted and that an effort is being made to lead us straight toward a practically obliterating form of organic union. IT IS TIME THAT INTELLIGENT SOUTHERN METHODISTS WERE WAKING UP TO WHAT IS GOING ON. With such a scheme for the Regional Conferences as we have discussed in this issue of the Advocate and with Negroes in the General Confereuce and on our General Boards, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would be in a pitiable plight. And apparently it is in contemplation to have all our Church property to pass into the hands of a Church thus constituted and governed, if the "liberals" on the Commission can have their way, and they are generally understood to outnumber the conservatives—such men as Bishop Candler, Bishop Hoss, Bishop Denny, Bishop Murrah, and Col. Reeves. It begins to look as if we may have a plan of union submitted to us along the lines indicated, and our beloved Church plunged into a controversy that would be greatly harmful, if not completely ruinous. The situation, as we see it, is most unfortunate, and may soon become tragically so.

A RESPONSIBILITY OF PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

There are some persons who seem to think that freedom of discussion means that every individual must have the right to express his mind anywhere at any time, and that any restriction of such a privilege partakes of the nature of unjustifiable tyranny. We ourself have had a few letters in this vein when we deemed it wise to decline to print certain articles in the Advocate. The Outlook, in its issue of February 21, in discussing a recent occurrence in New York City, makes the following suggestive utterance on this important subject:

"Count Ilya Tolstoy, the son of a famous father, is in this country lecturing. Columbia University has refused to give him the use of one of the college buildings in which to deliver his lecture to the students, and the International Club of Students has passed resolutions declaring this refusal to be 'an intolerable curtailment of that liberty of thought and freedom of action which is said to characterize America, and which is and should be the spirit of all enlightened institutions of learning.' We should hardly think the action of the University or these resolutions of the students called for comment were they not accompanied by an editorial in the New York Tribune, the spirit of which is indicated by its title, 'Columbia Censor.' This editorial is not worthy of a paper generally characterized by the discriminating intelligence of the Tribune. The notion that the right of free speech entitles every man to take possession of any hall or church and speak upon its platform or in its pulpit is a preposterous notion. The right of a free press does not entitle any man who has anything he wants to say to demand the use of the Tribune's columns in which to say it. The fact that the Tribune probably rejects a score of offered contributions to every one it publishes does not indicate that the Tribune believes in a censorship of the press. An uncensored stage does not mean that any band of itinerant players has a right to demand the use of any unoccupied theater in which to give its play, and the fact that there is no such right of itinerant players recognized in America does not indicate that we believe in a censorship of the drama. The right of free speech does not mean that any man has a right to demand the free use of any hall in which to give his doctrines to the public.

"Count Tolstoy has no more right to demand from Columbia University the use of one of its halls for his lectures than he has the right to demand of the trustees the use of Carnegie Hall. The buildings of Columbia University have been erected for educational purposes and given to the Board of Trustees to be used in such ways as they deem best for the education of the six thousand and odd students under their care. It is not only their right, it is their duty, to discriminate between different applicants for the use of these buildings. It is as much their duty to edit the use of their public halls as it is the duty of the Tribune to edit its columns."

These are, in our opinion, most wholesome words. It is quite possible for public institutions, in the alluring name of freedom, to lend their influence to the propagation of harmful teachings, such as are entirely out of accord with the purposes of those who established and who maintain them. We have been noticing for some time that the New Orleans Public Library Building seems to be at the disposal of almost any new cult or ism that chances to come along. Note, for instance, the following announcement taken from the New Orleans Item of February 21:

"New Thought Body to Meet.

"The New Orleans branch of the International New Thought Society will meet Sunday at the auditorium hall in the Public Library, from 4 to 5 p. m."

Would not some of the sense of responsibility evinced by the authorities of Columbia University be in order in this case? (Perhaps we should add that The Outlook disclaimed any intention of passing judgment upon the lectures of Count Tolstoy, its object being only to affirm the right and duty of the Columbia managers to do so.)

CALLED TO HIS REWARD.

Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Guntown, Miss., writes us as follows: "On Sunday, February 17, at 3 o'clock p.m., we buried at Saltillo, Miss., Dr. Gladney, the father of Rev. R. H. B. Gladney of our Conference. Dr. Gladney was one of the oldest members of our Church in this section of the country. He was a practicing physician for many years and a teacher for a number of years. He was a man of great learning."

We regret to be informed of the demise of Dr. Gladney, and the bereaved ones have our deepest sympathy in their sorrow. May the Heavenly Father gently lay his healing hand on every aching heart!

"COLLEGE DAY" IN LOUISIANA.

Next Sunday, March 4, is "College Day" in the Louisiana Conference. Dr. R. H. Wynn, President of Centenary College, and President R. E. Bobbitt, of Mansfield College, have jointly addressed a letter to every Methodist pastor and Sunday school superintendent in the State. Other interesting and informing literature is also being sent out. We trust that this occasion will be utilized to the best possible advantage.

DR. FELIX R. HILL STRICKEN.

Information has reached us that Dr. Felix R. Hill, Sr., now residing at Alexandria, La., suffered a severe stroke of paralysis some days ago, one side being completely paralyzed. This will be sad news to thousands in Louisiana and other sections of the Church. We pray that the living Christ may be consciously with this honored and beloved minister in his illness and the anxious watchers by his bedside.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop W. B. Murrah is again at home in Memphis, after having made an official visit to Cuba.

Brother R. P. Houston, of Batesville, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, expresses his hearty agreement with us on the unification issue. We are pleased to have his commendation.

We regret to know that Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of Booneville, Miss., has lately been ill with la grippe. We trust that he will soon be entirely rid of that disagreeable malady. The North Mississippi Conference has in it no choicer spirit than Brother Wyatt.

We have in hand an interesting letter from Rev. W. V. Shearer, pastor of our Central Church at Columbus, Miss., telling something of his work, which we will let our readers see next week. The Lord is graciously blessing Brother Shearer's labors in his new field.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Brown, of Meridian, Miss., have lately visited their son, Mr. L. P. Brown, Jr., of Jackson, Tenn., who is the manager of the Union Seed and Fertilizer Mills in that city. Brother Brown has given us a thought-provoking article in this number of the Advocate.

We are sorry to learn that Joanna, the little child of Brother and Sister S. L. Pope, of New Albany, Miss., has been seriously ill with pneumonia for several weeks. Our heart goes out in sympathy to these anxious parents, and we pray that their stricken loved one may soon be restored to health.

That faithful Christian layman of the Chunky (Miss.) charge, Dr. E. B. Partin, says: "Everything is moving along nicely within the bounds of this circuit. Brother McNeese, our pastor, is liked by all, and the indications are that he will do much good in this field." The Editor is pleased to be assured that Dr. Partin remembers him and his work at the throne of grace.

We are sorry to learn of the death of Miss Pauline Sheppard, a daughter of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, an honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, which occurred at the residence of the family in Mansfield on February 24.

A fuller statement concerning this sad occurrence will appear in our next issue. The grief-stricken loved ones have our sympathy and prayers.

Rev. W. A. Mangum, our faithful pastor in McDonoghville, La., was in the Advocate office last Monday. He was looking well and spoke hopefully of his work.

Evangelist Walt Holcomb, of Nashville, Tenn., and Rev. J. D. Swagerty, of Shreveport, La., chorister, are engaged in a revival meeting at Clinton, Oklahoma.

Rev. J. J. Garner, of Kilmichael, Miss., sounds an optimistic note from his field. It is not unusual for Brother Garner to have things going forward where he labors.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, of Lake Charles, La., is in great demand as a speaker in the interest of missions. He is Secretary of the Board of Missions of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, of the Mashulaville charge, N. Miss. Conf., writes that his work is "moving along very well." We trust that he will have in every respect a successful year.

Our growing young pastor at Centenary, McComb, Miss., Rev. J. L. Decell, has our thanks for a list of 13 subscribers. The Advocate always fares well where Brother Decell has sway.

Rev. James L. Sells, of Wiggins, Miss., reports a great revival meeting, in which he had the assistance of Rev. Dan E. Kelly. His account of this gracious awakening will appear in our next issue.

Mrs. L. E. Barrentine, of Itta Bena, Miss., after a stay of some weeks in New Orleans, has gone to San Antonio, Texas, for a visit. While in the Crescent City she paid the Advocate office an appreciated call.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, of Rustou, La., was a visitor in New Orleans last week. His many friends here gave him a cordial greeting. Brother Snelling expressed himself as being much pleased with his pastorate in Ruston.

The Rayne Memorial congregation, this city, has resumed the practice of having preaching on Sunday night, instead of a vesper service in the late afternoon. Dr. U. G. Foote, the new pastor, is being greeted by excellent congregations.

Rev. J. W. Booth, of Merryville, La., has begun the new Conference year with his accustomed energy. Brother Booth's preaching is characterized by an evangelistic force that grips the people. The outlook is encouraging in his field.

Rev. M. A. Burns, our stirring pastor on the Mt. Pleasant (Miss.) charge, has our thanks for a fine list of 10 subscriptions and a good write-up of his work. We regret that we are forced to defer the publication of his communication until next week.

Our church at Ponchatoula, La., where Rev. J. B. Williams is the popular pastor, is enjoying a goodly degree of prosperity. This charge is fortunate in having in it one of the most useful laymen in Louisiana, in the person of Brother J. R. Ables.

Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, is happy these days. He has quite enough to make him so. He has fought a good fight where the enemy was strongly entrenched, and it now begins to look as if he will even see a "dry" Louisiana at no very distant day.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. W. M. Williams, Collins, Miss., 4; Rev. A. S. Briscoe, Nettleton Cir., N. Miss. Conf., 3; Rev. J. W. Price, Hermanville, Miss., 3.

Brother W. A. Powell, of Liberty, Miss., was in New Orleans Monday of this week and did us the kindness to pay the Advocate office a call. He renewed his subscription and left $5 with the Publisher for our "Helping Fund." We scarcely need to say that we appreciate this act of generosity upon the part of this esteemed layman.

Rev. W. A. Bowlin, of Cedar Bluff, Miss., says: "My first quarterly conference was held a few days since, and the record was broken as to a financial report for the first quarter on this charge. Three out of the four churches paid the assessments for ministerial support in full up to that date. The prospect for a good year was never better."

From the St. Helena Echo (Greensburg, La.) of Feb. 16, we take the following: "That was a great sermon preached in the Methodist Church last Sunday by Rev. H. W. Bowman. Some of these days this preacher will be referred to as one of the 'sons of thunder.' It is very refreshing once in a while to listen to a man who has a message for the soul."

The interesting matter bearing on the Wesley Bible Class Federation meeting in Louisiana, which appears on pages 4 and 5, and the map on page 2, were furnished the Advocate by Brother A. L. Dietrich, our capable and energetic Divisional Sunday School Field Secretary. We are fortunate in having such a leader of our Sunday school forces in this section.

Rev. S. J. Davies, of Shreveport, La., has given us an excellent article in this number of the Advocate. He wields a fluent pen.

Bishop E. E. Hoss left Muskogee, Oklahoma, for Atlanta, Ga., on February 24. This great chief pastor keeps almost constantly on the go.

We are informed that Mrs. Fox, the wife of Rev. George Fox, our pastor at Waterproof, La., underwent a very serious operation at the Chamberlain Sanitarium at Natchez, Miss., on February 13. It gives us pleasure to state that she stood the trying ordeal well, and is now thought to be on the road to recovery. We pray that her restoration to health may be speedy and complete.

Rev. J. T. Abney, of Scooba, Miss., sends us two subscriptions to the Advocate, and in his business letter adds the following note: "The people of this charge are continuing their kindness to the inmates of the parsonage. We received on Saturday, Feb. 17, from Wahalak, by freight, a box weighing 190 pounds, and filled with good things. Of course, it was greatly appreciated. We are undertaking to institute the Duplex System in this charge. The outlook is encouraging."

Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Tupelo, Miss., one of the Conference evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, attended the recent session of the Lake Monroe Bible School, at Enterprise, Fla. He and Miss Emma Tucker were the presiding officers, and the Sanford (Fla.) Herald says that they directed the proceedings in a way to make them most interesting and profitable. Brother Bowen is a hard worker, but he believes in taking time for reading and study.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, the capable presiding elder of the Durant (Miss.) District, writes: "The work has started off well in this district. In spite of the fact that but little cotton was raised in this section last year, the pastors' salaries have been lowered nowhere, and at some places they have been advanced. The finances are in advance of those of last year at this date. The preachers and people are hopeful and we are expecting progress on all lines."

Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg (Miss.) District, writes: "Please kindly announce that the Hattiesburg District Conference will convene at Purvis on Tuesday night, May 8, for the opening sermon, and that the Conference will probably close some time Friday, May 11. I trust that the preachers of the district will make note of the date and so arrange their meetings as not to conflict with it." We thank Brother Jones for an invitation to be present.

Mr. W. E. Stokes, of Macon, Miss., was in New Orleans Monday of this week and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He was looking well and spoke in commendatory terms of his gifted young pastor, Rev. E. Nash Broyles. Brother Stokes is an applicant for the position of appraiser, of which the Federal Farm Loan Bank now being organized here will have several—two being given to Mississippi. He is splendidly equipped for this service, and no mistake will be made if he is chosen for it.

We are in receipt of a communication from Commissioner Browniee, of Grenada College, telling of the fine success he is meeting with in raising funds for that excellent institution, but because of the crowded condition of our columns we cannot get it in this issue of the Advocate. We could give the gist of what he says in a brief note, but we prefer to let him speak in his own language next week. Brother Browniee is enthusiastic and hopeful in his work, which are important elements of success.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., writes us that there has lately been much illness in the Knoxo community, which he serves as pastor, from la grippe and pneumonia. He reports the death of Mr. Walter Lewis, who was a brother-in-law of Rev. F. L. Applewhite of the Sharon (Miss.) charge and a relative of the several ministers bearing the name of Lewis in the Mississippi Conference. He was a steward in our church at Knoxo and was highly esteemed as a man and citizen. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

Our esteemed friend, Dr. I. W. Cooper, sent us on Feb. 20, from Key West, Fla., a beautiful card, with the following message inscribed upon it: "We spent one week in Cuba. There was much excitement on account of the revolution. About one-half of the delegates and preachers could not attend the Cuban Conference. I will write you more about our trip." We know that the "we" referred to by Dr. Cooper included Brother Thomas, of Summit; whether it also embraced Bishop Murrah, who presided over the Cuban Conference, we do not know.

A recent number of the Hazlehurst Courier contained the following: "Hon. J. S. Sexton was operated on a few days since in New Orleans. The operation was on the mastoid bone and was an extremely delicate one. The news from his bedside, we are happy to state, is encouraging, he stood the ordeal well." Mr. Sexton is a member of our church at Hazlehurst and one of the leading lawyers in Mississippi. We hope that the surgical treatment which he has undergone will result in giving him prompt and complete relief from his affliction.

Rev. H. T. Young, Conference Evangelist of the Louisiana Conference, writes us as follows: "I have just closed a meeting at Clinton with Brother Calhoun, who will report the results to the Advocate. He is certainly one of the Lord's elect and the people love him dearly. I have held 101 services since the first of the year and have seen more than 250 people accept Christ. The brethren have been very loyal to their Conference evangelist, and have all my time engaged until September 1." We are pleased to hear of Brother Young's great work and that the pastors of the Louisiana Conference are opening the way for him. The pastors of every Conference should do this for their evangelists.

The program of the New Orleans District Conference is before us. It will be held in the Louisiana Avenue Church and will open at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday evening, March 6, and will close Thursday evening. Bishop E. E. Hoss will be present. He will preach Wednesday night and will have charge of some of the devotional hours. The presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Holmes, is sparing no pains to make this occasion one of interest and profit. Rev. A. J. Gearheard is the host of the Conference, and he has appended to the program the following notice: "If you are coming and expect to stop with friends, let me know at once. I will appreciate a card from you if you expect the Louisiana Avenue Church to entertain you."

From a personal letter from Brother H. H. Ahreus, formerly of New Orleans, but now connected with the Census Bureau at Washington, D. C., we extract the following: "We have been cordially received by the pastor, Dr. Hardin, and the members of the Mt. Vernon Place M. E. Church, South. Every time we have attended service the church has been full of worshipers, and Dr. Hardin is a good preacher. We expect to see Dr. George Sexton next Sunday, Feb. 25, and when he discovers that I have some good Louisiana coffee, I feel sure that he will stick closer than a brother. Great preparation is being made for the inauguration of President Wilson." Brother Ahrens is being much missed in the Crescent City.

Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., gives us 7 subscriptions and jots down in his business letter the following note: "We have just finished repairs on our church to the amount of $650. We have adopted tentative plans that contemplate the tearing away of our present school annex, which has but four Sunday school rooms and a small ladies' parlor, and building instead an annex with 15 Sunday school rooms and a large ladies' parlor and a kitchen. Our building, with these improvements, will be modern in every respect. We are now collecting funds for this undertaking. Our people are loyal and are hard workers. My three years in this important field have been pleasant ones to me, and I am seeking to make this the most profitable one of my quadrennium."

CHURCH EXTENSION MEETING.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Church Extension of the North Mississippi Conference will meet in the Methodist Church at Winona on March 21, at 11 o'clock. Those who have applications to go to the General Board will please have them in the hands of the Secretary of the Board, Rev. J. T. McCafferty, Durant, Miss., in good time for them to be presented to the Executive Committee at Winona.

W. S. LAGRONE,
For the Committee.

It is estimated that the Belgium war sufferers have received from the United States, through the American Belgium Relief Committee, about $12,000,000. The total amount of money received from all lands for this purpose during the past two years was approximately $250,000,000. It is stated that it takes about $19,000,000 a month to meet the urgent needs of the Belgians, who are almost wholly dependent upon outside help. Of this amount, the Allied Powers furnish about $14,000,000 a month.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifuliy dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Mrs. M. J. PETTIGREW, the wife of J. N. Pettigrew, of Beach, Miss., was born on Nov. 17, 1844, and died on Feb. 6, 1917. She was the daughter of R. P. and N. N. Smith. When about fifteen years old she professed faith in Christ and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, of which she was a consistent member for more than forty years, after which time she joined the M. E. Church, South, and remained a member until her death. She leaves a husband, three sons, and two daughters to mourn their loss. In all of the troubles which came to her during her long life she bore herself with resignation, as a Christian should amid severe trials, being always loving, patient, and kind. As a wife and mother she was constant and faithful, and as a friend she was true and loyal. She lived upon a high moral plane. Farewell, dear sister, we shall soon meet again, "for I know that my Redeemer liveth." B. F. SMITH.

On Jan. 1, 1917, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wilson and took from them their darling baby, little MARY LOUISE. She was loaned to them for a short while only—two and a half months. Mary bore the pain which fell to her lot in life with more patience than most people of mature years would do. It was hard for us to see her suffer, and we might well ask the question why one so young had to be a victim of affliction. But our Heavenly Father doeth all things for our good. Earth has lost one of its sweetest charms in the death of this little one, but her soul has been transplanted to a more beautiful realm, and she is watching at the pearly gate—yea, watching and waiting for the loved ones left on this side of eternity's shore. The cross seems almost too heavy to bear; but remember that Jesus carried one that was heavier. Even now He is standing by and saying, "My grace is sufficient for you." The baby can not come back to her loved ones; but they can go to her; and what a happy time it will be when all are gathered home!

FLOY HELMS.

HIRIAM McLINN was born in the State of Mississippi on June 14, 1844, and died at his home near Springfield, La., on Feb. 4, 1917. He was married to Mrs. H. G. Cozens in 1873. There were seven children born of this union—three boys and four girls. His stepson, Homer, was devoted to his stepfather. Brother McLinn joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1874. He was a good man and served his church as a steward for a number of years. Affliction came upon him, forcing him to give up active work in the church. He loved his church, but bad health kept him at home. He had all the assistance his physician, friends, and relatives could give. He was a good and true husband, father, and citizen. He often spoke of his "home not made with hands." The writer visited him often in his last days, always finding him ready to talk of Jesus. We buried him at Jerusalem Cemetery, in the presence of a great number of friends and relatives. He served three years in the Civil War. May the Lord comfort the loved ones. He leaves two brothers and one sister. He died in the faith. His pastor,

H. C. MURPHY.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. CELIA ELIZABETH SINGLETARY (nee Price) was born on Jan. 2, 1838, and died on Feb. 9, 1917, aged 79 years, 1 month, and 7 days. She was happily married to Mr. Hyram Singletary on August 10, 1854, in Rankin County, Miss. Eleven children were born to them, 7 of whom still live to mourn their loss. Mrs. Singletary died in the home of her cousin, Mrs. Alice Casper, in Raymond, Miss. She had been in failing health for several months; the end came very suddenly. We mourn not as those who have no hope, for she often said she was only waiting for the Lord's will to be done. She was reared in a Christian home, and was converted while quite young and joined the M. E. Church, South. She was true and faithful to her Church as long as she lived. She was a member of the old Weslyana Church for more than 60 years. Mrs. Singletary was a remarkable woman. Her Christian character was worthy of emulation. She was a benediction to her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren—these numbering in all nearly 80. She also had many relatives and friends who loved her. Her remains were carried to the old family burial grounds at Wesiyana Church, near Star, Rankin County, Miss., and laid to rest by the side of her husband, who preceded her to the home of the blest several years ago. In the presence of a large crowd of friends and loved ones the funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. B. King. BY A FRIEND.

STOPS TOBACCO HABIT.

MERIDIAN FERTILIZERS.

Elsewhere in this issue appears an advertisement of Meridian Fertilizer Factory. This progressive firm operates large factories at Meridian and Hattiesburg, Mississippi, and Shreveport, Louisiana, and manufacture the well known brands, "Meridian Home Mixture," and "Union Special Acid Phosphate." We are certain that all of our readers are familiar with the merits of Meridian Fertilizers. Mr. T. G. Sinclair, Manager of the western branch of this concern at Shreveport, Louisiana, in a recent interview, when asked as to what he attributed the popularity of these brands in his territory, stated: "Our company has been in successful operation for more than thirty years and has endeavored during that time to give the farming public the very best grade of mixed fertilizers and acid phosphate that can possibly be manufactured. We have figures to show that one-fourth of all the fertilizers sold in the territory in which we operate is the Red Bag kind. Farmers who have used it never quit. We have merchant customers on our books who have been using our brands continuously for more than twenty-five years. We attribute these flattering endorsements of Meridian Fertilizers to the fact that it has always been the policy of our company to give full measure in plant food in all of our brands."—Adv.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

CENTENNIAL BIRTHDAY OF SAMUEL AARON.

February 13, 1917, was a great day for many of the citizens of Collins, Miss., who assembled at the residence of Samuel Aaron, one mile from Collins, to celebrate the one-hundredth birthday of their fellow citizen. A large number of guests were invited to enjoy the elegant dinner of turkey, etc. Friends were calling all through the day to offer congratulations and leave presents for Brother Aaron as tokens of their love and appreciation. After school about 200 pupils came to shake hands with a man 100 years old. The different sections sang songs for Brother Aaron, and he seemed to enjoy this very much. There were possibly four hundred friends who came or sent presents to this old veteran of the Civil War and of the Cross of Jesus. Brother Aaron was converted and joined the Methodist Church when a young man. He came from Alabama to Mississippi in 1885. He has been an active lay worker in the Church for over seventy-five years. He has been very helpful in revival meetings and also in class and prayer meetings. He has been a subscriber to the New Orleans Advocate for many years. He is totally blind, and has been for ten years.

He was married on August 14, 1842, to Miss Eliza McRae, who preceded him to the spirit world four years ago. At 2 o'clock p. m., we had a delightful religious service, which was conducted by Rev. J. W. Allen, of the Presbyterian Church, and the writer. Brother Aaron joined in the singing and his amens to the prayers were hearty. We had hoped to have his old-time friend, Rev. J. H. Evans, with us, but he was not able to be present. We expect to celebrate Brother Evans' ninety-fifth birthday on April 25. These two servants of God are ripe for the harvest. W. M. WILLIAMS.

Big Eaters Get Kidney Trouble

Take Salts at first sign of Bladder irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus ending bladded disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas our Heavenly Father, whose love and wisdom are unquestioned by the faithful, has seen fit to call one of our beloved members, Miss LAURA GATES, to that home above; and

Whereas, In her going our Society has suffered a great loss; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, of Johns, Miss., do deeply deplore the death of our beloved sister, whose cheerful face and willing hands were such a comfort to her aged parents, a balm to the sick whom she nursed, and an inspiration to all who knew her.

2. That we bow in humble submission to the Master's will, believing that "He doeth all things well." Our hearts are saddened by her going, but we rejoice in the hope of meeting her again in that home where there is no parting.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and that copies be sent to the Brandon News and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. L. P. Burnhon, President; Mrs. J. J. Neal, Secretary.

Hair Needs Food

just as every other living thing does, and, just as every other living thing, it will die if it is not fed. Hair food takes the form of the natural oil on which it subsists. Fifty years ago the Creoles of Louisiana, who prided themselves on their hair, discovered a recipe for beautiful hair. By the use of this natural hair oil, "La Creole," they kept their hair beautiful, light and fluffy. This secret has been handed down through generations and presents the very best hair food and hair disease remedy. Does your hair fall out? Is it coarse? Is it stiff? Has it lost its natural luster? Then ask your dealer for a bottle of "La Creole" hair dressing. The price is only $1.00 and it will be the life of your hair. If he can't supply you, write at once to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

AN IMPOSSIBLE PROPOSAL.

Mida's Criterion, a well-known liquor organ, has one sure way of combating prohibition, and it gives its liquor-making and liquor-selling readers the benefit of its discovery. Here it is: "Eliminate bad saloons, indecent pictures, vile stories, thug hangouts, associated assignation rooms, comply strictly with the law, operate your saloon on an orderly plane, along clean, honorable lines; dispense high-grade goods at high-grade prices, as do well-conducted groceries, dry goods stores, or banks, and you will have no prohibition troubles." We wonder if it ever dawned on the editor that these things did not create the sale of liquor, but that the sale of liquor was responsible for these very things. To get a good saloon you must have a good saloon-keeper, and when you get a good saloon-keeper you will find it impossible to keep him in the drunkard-making business.—Christian Guardian.

PERSONAL INFLUENCE.

The Scripture lesson calls on Christians to use this influence purposefully. "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works." How are we using our power of friendship? In later years many a man and woman can look back to some kindly word of a friend as marking a turning point in life, helping to a Christian decision, strengthening one against temptation. Among the stories related of Mr. Gladstone is one that tells of his desire to reclaim two young men from the habit of drinking. He invited them to his home, talked with them earnestly, and when they had promised him to abstain in future he knelt down with them and prayed for them. In later years one of these young men testified to the change in their lives which dated from that event. Many a man, less famous than Mr. Gladstone, has exercised similar influence for good.—Congregationalist.

100 Years Old

"The kidneys play a most important part in causing premature old age and death—the more injurious the poisons passing thru the kidneys the sooner comes decay"—so says a distinguished physician, who further advises all people who are past thirty to preserve the vitality of the kidneys and free the blood from poisonous elements, such as uric acid—drink plenty of water—sweat some daily and take Anuric before meals.

This Anuric is put up in tablet form, and can be obtained at almost any drug store. For that backache, lumbago, rheumatism, "rusty" joints, swollen feet or hands, due to uric acid in the blood, Anuric quickly dissolves the uric acid as hot water does sugar. Discovered by Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y.

Prevent premature old age by simply sipping a cup of hot water every morning before breakfast, taking a little Anuric before meals and live to be a hundred.

THE REFLECTIONS OF A MARRIED WOMAN—are not pleasant if she is delicate, run-down, or over worked. She feels "played out." Her smile and her good spirits have taken flight. It worries her husband as well as herself.

This is the time to build up her strength and cure those weaknesses or ailments which are the seat of her trouble. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription regulates and promotes all the proper functions of womanhood, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength. It cures those disorders and derangements incident to womanhood.

A well-known agent which can be procured at all drug stores is "Pleasant Pellets," made up of the May-apple, the dried juice of the leaves of aloes and the root of jalap. First put out by Dr. Pierce nearly fifty years ago.

JACKSON DISTRICT NOTES.

The campaign for a Greater Millsaps is on in Jackson. The goal that the people of Jackson have set out to reach is $30,000 in 10 days. The first three days show $18,130 pledged. The largest pledge is for $10,000 from Mr. W. M. Buie, a graduate of Millsaps and a nephew of Major Millsaps.

W. H. Lane and the people of Rankin Street Church have joined a mutual admiration society. Lane says it is one of the most pleasant and interesting situations he has ever been in. Congregations increasing. Sunday school enrollment doubled, and all lines of church work prospering. The pastor and people are planning a revival season, to begin March 22, with W. J. Ferguson to assist.

W. H. Lewis and the Capitol Street Church membership are preparing for their spring revival season, which will begin March 25 and run for two or more weeks. Dan Kelly and the Lewis quartette have been secured to assist.

The Eden charge, appreciating both their pastor, A. S. Oliver, and the high cost of living, has raised the pastor's salary from $750 to $1000. Let other country charges do likewise.

Rev. C. H. Ellis is filling efficiently and acceptably the breach on the Lintonia charge made by the resignation of M. A. Massey.

The preachers and laymen of the district will conduct during the first three weeks in March an educational campaign to enlighten and interest the membership more in church history, doctrines, and support.

A happy situation exists in Yazoo City. Dr. Huntley was cordially received on his arrival after Conference. But when he went to Atlanta and came back with his bride the people showed their appreciation of them both in a most royal manner. The church work is progressing well under Dr. Huntley's leadership.

R. P. Fikes, of Brandon, has been besieged three weeks with la grippe. He and his people are happy in their work together.

Lewis, of Madison, was bottled-in most of January with la grippe. He and the people of his charge are expecting the best year in the history of the charge. They will entertain the District Conference in April.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman, and likewise every man, could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags," and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and refreshing the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rhenmatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Boils Disappear.

Away back in 1820 a North Carolina physician compounded an ointment for treating boils and other affections of the skin. So successful did this preparation work that its fame soon spread. To-day it will be found in a vast number of homes. If you suffer from boils, carbuncles or other skin eruptions, ask your druggist for a 25c box of Gray's Ointment. It is also an effective protection against blood poison resulting from abrasions of the skin, cuts, sores, bruises, burns, etc. If your druggist does not sell Gray's Ointment, send us his name and we will send you a generous FREE sample postpaid. Address W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

A GIFT THAT SAVED.

When Livingstone went to Africa, there was a Scotchwoman named Mrs. MacRoberts, quite advanced in life, who had saved up thirty pounds, which she gave to the great missionary, saying: "When you go to Africa, I want you to spare yourself exposure and needless toil by hiring some competent body-servant, who will go with you wherever you go, and share your sacrifices and exposures."

With that money he hired his faithful servant, known as Sebalwe. When the lion had thrown Livingstone down and crushed the bones of his left arm, and was about to destroy him, this man, seeing his critical condition, drew off the attention of the lion to himself, thinking that he would save his master at the cost of his own life. The lion sprang at him, but just at that moment the guns of other companions brought him down, and Livingstone's life was prolonged for thirty years. Surely, that noble Scotchwoman, as well as the servant, should be credited with some, at least, of the results of the noble devotion of that great missionary.—F. B. Meyer.

THE BREECHES BIBLE.

(Letter in Philadediphia Press.)

My husband, Robert R. Dearden, has one of the famous "Breeches Bibles" in good condition. The earliest trace that we have of the book is that it was purchased at an auction sale about the year 1837 at a place called Heywood, near the town of Bury, Lancashire, England. It was brought to America soon afterward by a Mr. Crossley, and purchased from him in the year 1855 by William Dearman of Northampton, Mass., who gave it to his son, Robert, in 1884.

In this volume, the Old Testament was printed in 1598 and the New Testament in 1597. It has the "Apocrypha," also "The Preface of the Christian Reader Touching the Two Alphabets" in the book and directions "How to Take Profit by Reading the Holy Scriptures," and "Godly Prayers." "containing the duties of every true Christian."

This edition was printed during the latter part of Queen Elizabeth's reign. The Bible, which was printed in 1594, takes its name from the following rendering of Genesis iii, 7: "And they sewed them fig leaves together and made them breeches."

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

END STOMACH TROUBLE, GASES OR DYSPEPSIA

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes Sick, Sour, Gassy Stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach-headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest stomach doctor in the world. It's wonderful.

Never Neglect Colds; Treat Them Promptly

Often they lead to those pulmonary troubles which are responsible for more than one-tenth of all lives lost through illness.

Heavy colds which develop deep-seated coughs or cause inflammation of the air-passages and persist in spite of medication, weaken the system to a point where resistance easily is overcome—and asthma, bronchial and pulmonary troubles are the result. To renew normal resistance, Eckman's Alterative has been found highly beneficial in many instances.

Its lime content is so combined with other remedial agents as to be easily assimilated by the average person—and it contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs of any sort. So it's safe to try. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Bookict containing information of value and references sent upon request.

EPILEPSY, ST. VITUS' DANCE AND OTHER FITS.

Epilepsy is one of the most dreadful of nervous disorders. Moreover, it is far more common than is generally supposed. In thousands of homes there are parents who are struggling with children subject to "spasms," "convulsions," or "fits," which would yield to proper treatment.

St. Vitus Dance is another ailment that frequently appears in children, and which causes great sorrow to parents.

Both of these ailments and their several forms has often been successfully treated by the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine. Cases have been reported by parents and adults from every State in the Union, and all of them give credit to Dr. Miles' Nervine.

If you know of anyone who suffers from any of the above mentioned disorders, and if they have found the different forms of treatment they have tried to be unsuccessful, then you will confer a lasting favor on them by advising the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine.

A trial bottle will cost nothing, for if the first bottle of medicine fails to benefit, the empty bottle may be taken to the druggist who will cheerfully refund the money paid for it.

Write to the Miles Medical Co., and they will send you testimonials from cases in your particular neighborhood.

Dr. Miles' Nervine can be purchased at any drug store.

A SAFE LEADER.

The President is maintaining the calm and dignified attitude so needful in these critical days of our nation's life. He wishes to make no unwise or false step. His poise and evident desire to do that which will make for peace hold him firmly in a course which all must admire and which creates great confidence that he will do what is best for the country. May wisdom and strength be given him every day!—Presbyterian Journal.

Favorable Reports for Fine Kidney Medicine

We have been handling your preparation for the past ten years and during that time have heard nothing but the most favorable reports regarding same. We know of several cases of gravel and liver troubles which were entirely restored after using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. It is a pleasure to recommend this preparation, as it tends to make better customers and we believe it is the best all-around preparation of its kind on the market.

Freckles

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho peels off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking, and, of course, has no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

NEED OF CHRISTIAN LITERATURE.

(Extract from report of Dr. Patton, chairman of Christian Literature Committee.)

We are producing in India by mission schools and government schools not less than 200,000 new literates every year, new young men and young women who are learning to read, and we are not supplying those literates in any adequate way with reading material. Adequate! Why, the thing is so pitiable that I fail to find the word to express the situation. There we are by our great educational systems creating this tremendous appetite and desire for knowledge, and we are not supplying that appetite with any food. And while we are idle on the subject, the secular agencies are exceedingly busy. They have discovered that the Mission Boards largely have created a reading public, a great market, and they are very quick to enter into that market with their secular and often antagonistic literature from the standpoint of Christianity. Much of the literature which is being provided for this large and rapidly increasing reading public in a country like India is destructive both of morals and of right conceptions of the truth. It is an intolerable situation with which we are confronted, and the time is ripe for a great concerted movement on the part of all the boards of Christendom to see that this thing is done right and done adequately.

THE GREATEST THING.

In order that we may help in winning the old world back to God, we have been given five things: our life, what we are; our lips, what we say or sing; our service, what we do; our gold, what we do not keep selfishly for ourselves; and, lastly, prayer, what we claim in the name of Jesus, the Victor. The greatest of these is prayer—God's power going out through prayer.—S. D. Gordon.

ENLARGEMENT OUR WATCH-WORD.

There comes a season annually in every business when stock is taken. Credits and debits face each other, and they who have invested their money and their labor in the enterprise reckon their gains and losses. These revelations shape the policy for the succeeding year. Without this knowledge of assets and liabilities the firm must ultimately become bankrupt.

The Greatest Business in the World.

The missionary work is the greatest business of the world, and the Woman's Missionary Society is the corporation of Christian women of the Church set for the high purpose of carrying out the will of God in this great work. The most wonderful thing in God's plan of redemption is not that "He so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son." That God should begin the work of redemption and trust us, his children, to carry his plans to completion is marvelous beyond compare. That he should have faith in the human will to act, of its own volition, in harmony with his own in the great work of saving the world, lifts human life out of the low level of mere creation and dignifies it with divine responsibility.

Our Asset.

The salvation of the world is the business of the Woman's Missionary Society, and our greatest asset is the faith he has placed in us. This love and this trust are the motive and the dynamo of all missionary work.

At the beginning of the year it seems but meet that we should reckon up our past effort and enter upon a high resolve that will enable us to work toward the realization of God's plans. Like the Psalmist, we may well declare, "Thou hast set my feet in a large place," for the great and effectual doors that have opened to us among the Orientals these past years have been equaled only by the marvelous opportunity for service among the Latin Americans, while the call in the home field has never been more urgent. We say it with reverence: "The work of our hands, thou hast established it." Of the love and service and sacrifices of the women in the rank and file of the Missionary Society, a faithful record he has kept. Truly it has been good to have fellowship in this blessed employ.

But there is no place to stop in God's great work, no matter how comforting the thought of past fidelity may be. Demand for enlargement comes with this proof of accepted service. Our work among the Mexicans in our own country is but meager compared with the great need. Holding Institute, at Laredo, Tex., must be enlarged—it must be made new, if we hold it to the high standard of the past. Work is but begun among our cotton mill people and our miners, and there are yet broad fields of service in the homeland awaiting our coming. To lift our Mary Black Hospital to the standard of the new China and to have part in the larger union work for higher development of Christian Chinese leaders will cost larger effort and demand increased resources. The great girls' school, so long promised to Brazil, must be erected. These are but a few of the many larger tasks that await us. Enlargement is God's plan for us this year.

Knowledge and Obedience.

Knowledge and obedience are fundamental to efficient work in the Master's kingdom. In the long past he had but little human help in bringing in the nations, because men were so ignorant. But we have no excuse in this twentieth century; we are no longer ignorant, unless we are so wilfully. We know the world's great woes, we know the balm that heals, and we know God's will. As we love him, we will increase in knowledge and delight to obey his divine law of service. Enlargement of effort through the Home Base, which is so vital to the continuance of the work, and through the Educational Department as it sends abroad facts and figures which wipe away ignorance, must be our watchword. Our young people, our children, our older people must join forces with renewed zeal in this work of redemption. The enlargement of the treasury will follow this sacrificial service, and the number of women "who publish the glad tidings" abroad and at home will become a great host.

Enlargement of the spirit life is basal to missionary work. As he dwells in us are we given all power and that radiant beauty which reveals him in his unspeakable blessedness. And this enlargement is ours for the asking. Let the message go throughout our bounds that the policy of the Woman's Missionary Society for 1917 shall be enlargement. "ENLARGEMENT" shall be our watchword. Our inventory of past service warrants this increased effort, and the fields so white unto the harvest demand it. Our motive shall be love, for He first loved us; and in obedience to his divine commission and wonderful faith in us, we dare to do all the work that angels might covet. We shall make haste, "for we shall run in the way of God's commandments when our hearts have been enlarged with love."—Mrs. R. W. MacDonell.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The seventh annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held at First Church, New Orleans, La., April 12-20, 1917.

Hurrah! How's This

Cincinnati authority says corns dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood polson, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who teiis you that a quarter-ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

Doctor Says Crying Need Of The Woman Of Today Is More Iron In Her Blood

TO PUT STRENGTH IN HER NERVES AND COLOR IN HER CHEEKS.

Any Woman Who Tires Easily, is Nervous or Irritable, or Looks Pale, Haggard And Worn Should Have Her Blood Examined for Iron Deficiency.

Administration of Nuxated Iron in Clinical Tests Gives Most Astonishing Youthful Strength and Makes Women Look Years Younger.

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy-cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and author. "In my recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women, I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—nuxated iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone the brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt.

"As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away habit-forming drugs and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver, heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in the blood.

"On account of the peculiar nature of woman, and the great drain placed upon her system at certain periods, she requires iron much more than man to help make up for the loss.

"Iron is also absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks, then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other trouble in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. I don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate, or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

"I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe aggravated conditions with unfailing results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength builder.

"Many an athlete and prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Howard James, late of the United States Public Health Service said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But so many American women suffer from iron deficiency with its attendant ills—physical weakness, nervous irritability, melancholy, indigestion, flabby, sagging muscles, etc., etc.—and in consequence of their weakened, run-down condition they are so liable to contract serious and even fatal diseases, that I deem it my duty to advise all such to take Nuxated Iron. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York physician and author, tells physicians that they should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their patients—Says anaemia—iron deficiency—is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.—Sounds warning against use of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach and do far more harm than good; advises use of only nuxated iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 64—No. 10. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3185.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1917. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

FINE COURTESY.

The French are a great people. In the present colossal European war their soldiers have shown themselves to be the equals, if not the superiors, of any others in the field. And for chivalry and courtesy, they still stand unmatched. As proof of the latter statement, read the following press dispatch:

"Paris, Feb. 9.—The French Government acceded readily, as far as it was concerned, to the request from the American State Department to give safe conduct to two hundred Germans preparing to leave on the Frederick VIII, including Count von Bernstorff and his staff and German consuls and their staffs. Immediately afterwards Washington inquired if the French Government would extend the number covered by the safe conduct so that other Germans might leave the United States. The Foreign Office promptly advised Ambassador Sharp that it would do so and that it placed no limit upon the number who might leave on the Frederick VIII."

"PASSING OF THE TENDERLOIN."

More than once we have remarked in the columns of the Advocate that when the saloon was struck down, many other evils would go down with it. The following editorial, which appeared under the above caption in the Memphis Commercial Appeal of March 2, is so strongly confirmatory of this view that we are moved to give it a place on our own editorial page:

"The steady wave of reform is sweeping over the country. With the coming of prohibition other reforms follow as a natural consequence. The tenderloin is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. * * * When Colorado went dry, the Legislature sealed the doom of Denver's Market Street, a district known throughout the west, a notorious section of the Western city. No effort was made to close the district. The reform element of the city was willing to watch and wait. The tenderloin of any city naturally closes up when the sale of liquor is abandoned and the sound of music is hushed.

"Perhaps the most infamous colony of crime that has ever prospered in the United States is the famous Barbary coast of San Francisco. The district is known by reputation all over the United States. It is known in Europe and throughout the Orient. Women from every country in the world can be found there. It was a forbidden section of the city for a long time, but tourists, having heard so much about the Barbary coast, always felt a desire to visit it just once and get a glimpse of life in the raw.

"The Barbary coast is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. Certain restrictions have been placed on dance halls and the sale of liquor and the colony at once began to diminish in number.

"An equally infamous district was Galena Street, in Butte, Mont. When the State went dry the street began to lose its population. Prostitution and liquor are good companions. Kill one and the other dies a natural death; that is, so far as recognized vice sections are concerned.

"The tenderloin section of Memphis to-day looks like a deserted village. Women, reading the handwriting on the wall, have left for other and more profitable fields.

"At the present rate the segregated districts in nearly all cities will soon become but memories."

JACKSON GIVES $30,000 FOR MILLSAPS DORMITORY.

Dear Dr. Meek: You will be delighted to know that our new dormitory campaign in Jackson has just closed with gratifying success. The amount upon which the Committee decided was $30,000, and the amount reported at the closing luncheon to-day was $30,756.75.

Jackson has done nobly. The action of its people has made certain the early building of the dormitory, and has given expression to their generous and widespread interest in the College.

Commissioner Black's hands have been strengthened for his canvass throughout the State for the remaining $30,000, a work to which he will immediately address himself with vigor. He has done good work in the local campaign, and feels greatly encouraged in moving out in the wider campaign of the State. He reports having already secured subscriptions to the amount of $3000.

Rev. Andrew A. Clement, under whom the local work has been prosecuted, seems peculiarly fitted for this kind of work, and we are very greatly pleased with his management of the campaign. He is a fine organizer and a persistent worker, and his helpful leadership is worthy of great praise.

The work of the College is progressing satisfactorily, with the best attendance for several years, and the highest matriculation in the College classes that we have ever known. We are looking forward with interest to a series of revival services to begin in the near future.

Yours fraternally,

A. F. WATKINS.

"ONE SWALLOW DOES NOT MAKE A SUMMER."

The ado that some brethren are trying to make over Dr. Blake's recent statement that there is a store in Chicago that will not sell goods to Negroes and a hospital in Boston that will not receive them as patients, is almost pitifully amusing. Why, in those very cities the Negroes and whites attend the same schools, ride on the same cars, frequently eat in the same dining-rooms, and sometimes sing in the same Church choirs; and in Northern States they may and do inter-marry. Has Dr. Blake objected to any of these practices? On the contrary, he was very particular to declare in his recent utterance that he was not justifying this discrimination. The truth is, in view of the existing conditions, the references to such treatment of colored people in the Northern Methodist press, and the obvious purpose for which they are made, constitute about the most unseemly development of the union agitation. Zion's Herald, in which these references have appeared, which recently so flagrantly misrepresented the results of the meeting of the Unification Commission in Baltimore and has made no apology for it, and which is being scattered abroad over the South for the enlightenment of our people, in an editorial opposing the election of Negro Bishops to serve their own race, in its issue of February 2, 1916, made the following deliverance:

"Do not they (Negro leaders favoring such Bishops) see that they are in this, advocating the very thing that demeans them—a Bishop among other Bishops who would not be on AN EQUALITY with his brethren? Do they not see that this is the very thing being done to keep the race under in POLITICAL and business circles? It is this spirit that results in setting aside sections in cities in which to segregate the Negroes. IT IS THIS SAME SPIRIT THAT CREPT INTO THE ADMINISTRATION OFFICES AT WASHINGTON NOT LONG SINCE TO KEEP THE NEGROES BY THEMSELVES. It is this same spirit that works itself out in what are colloquially called Jim crow cars. The whole thing from beginning to end, in its perfected form, is bad, iniquitous, wicked."

Such was the utterance of Zion's Herald before the unification movement assumed its present shape. But circumstances alter cases, you know. Are there those who think that Southern Methodist preachers are "innocents abroad?" It certainly seems so.

BISHOP HOSS IN NEW ORLEANS.

Bishop E. E. Hoss reached New Orleans last Saturday night, coming from Atlanta, Ga., where he had been attending the meeting of the Committee on Regional Conferences, appointed by the Unification Commission. He preached a strong and helpful sermon at Rayne Memorial Church last Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m.; Monday morning he attended the New Orleans Southern Methodist Preachers' Meeting at First Church and delivered a brief address, and at the noon hour lunched with the members of that body in a private dining-room at the Monteleone Hotel. The Bishop later attended and in part presided over the sessions of the New Orleans District Conference, which was held this week. He looked to be stronger than when we saw him last fall, and he was cheerful and in the best of spirits. To know Bishop Hoss is to love and admire him. Southern Methodism is most fortunate to have so great and safe a leader.

FROM REV. R. W. VAUGHAN.

We would be glad to correspond with any good Christian family, preferably Methodist, who would be willing to take a fifteen-year-old girl into their home. We are assured the girl is of good family, good character, and healthy. We would like to place her with a family that would allow her to go to school, and it would be expected that she would help in the housework and do her part in the home. We shall be glad to correspond with anybody who would be interested. We also have a little seven-weeks-old baby-boy we would like to place in a good home. Would like to correspond with any reliable people who could offer a home to girls or boys from four to twelve years of age. Be sure to send the name and address of your pastor. Address, Rob't W. Vaughan, Superintendent Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, Ruston, La.

FLOWERS TO THE LIVING.

By James W. Lipscomb, M. D.

Send me thy flowers while yet I live—
  Wait not till death's cold hand I grasp;
Earth's troubles then will all be ended.
  No thoughtless, unkind words can rasp.

Send me thy flowers while yet I live,
  Speak to me those gentle words of cheer;
Wait not till life's battles finished
  Sadly to place love-tokens on my bier.

Send me thy flowers while yet I live,
  Gladden my sad heart while yet I breathe;
Wait not till earth's fond dream has vanished
  Thy garlands round my silent form to wreathe.

Send me thy flowers while yet I live,
  For 'tis here we need the helping hand;
What matters when the journey's ended,
  And we sleep for e'er beneath the sand?

Send me thy flowers while yet I live
  In words, in actions, also in deeds;
'Tis while living that my soul is rended
  And this mortal heart with grim anguish bleeds.

Send me thy flowers while yet I live,
  For when this frail tabernacle's laid to rest,
It matters not whether clods or flowers
  Be heaped upon my sleeping breast.

Columbus, Miss.

REVELATIONS OF PRAYER.

By prayer we discover God. We discover that He is. We discover that He hears us. We discover that He rules. We discover that He loves us. And through all and in all we discover that by hardship and joy He means to give us life—and the victory.—Dr. C. M. Slattery.

ON READING THE BIBLE.

"Read the Scriptures with prayer. You can not by your own wisdom understand the word of God. In all your reading of the Scriptures, seek carefully the help of the Holy Spirit. Ask, for Jesus' sake, that he will enlighten you!

"Read the Scriptures with meditation. Ponder over what you read; the truth is thus applied to your heart. You see new and deeper meanings. It is better to think over a little than merely to read a great deal."

GOD'S COMMONPLACES.

"Isn't it wonderful?" we exclaim of a blessing from God. But it would be still more "wonderful" if the blessing were not sent. "It's just like Him," said some one of a blessing of this sort. And another has pointed out that it is indeed the commonplace thing for God to take care of us; just as commonplace as it is for a mother to take care of her helpless babe. A mother who does not do so is abnormal. Our God could not be God and fail to take care of us. His provision for our every need is perfect: whether our needs are all met depends upon our attitude toward Him, not upon His attitude towards us. So, if we will accept them, the commonplaces of God's life are the glory of our life.—Southern Churchman.

FIELD, FORCE AND FLOCK.

The phrase, "The Church is not my field but my force," has been doing yeoman service in recent years. It has almost grown tiresome from constant repetition. It would be better if ministers would give up both "field" and "force" a while and try the word "flock." They would be following the Bible. Christ, the Chief Shepherd, Paul and Peter, all used this figure in speaking of the Church and of the relations of pastors and elders to the Church. The very word pastor itself carries the same idea. He is the one who feeds the flock. A higher conception of the thought, "My church is my flock," would lead to better shepherding. It might also greatly help the sheep.—Presbyterian Journal.

MISSION BOARD FINANCES.

Rev. W. W. Pinson, D.D.

The total income of the Board of Missions from all sources for 1916 was $1,403,638.85. Of this amount the Foreign Department received $984,306.35 and the Home Department $424,332.50. This income was divided as follows:

Foreign Department.

General work	$665,574.50
Woman's work	318,731.85

Home Department.

General work	$129,159.52
Woman's work	295,172.98

This is our largest income and represents a total increase of $94,052.13 over 1915 and is $170,971.88 larger than the income of 1914.

It is to be regretted that we fell a little short of the million dollar mark for Foreign Missions, but we came so near it that some generous soul may be moved to round out the million before the meeting of the Board in May.

The increase was divided as follows:

General Work.

Foreign	$38,292.12
Home	13,671.53
Total	$51,963.65

Woman's Work.

Foreign	$25,390.65
Home	16,697.83
Total	$42,088.48

It should be noted that the increase in general income for Foreign Missions was in those items which constitute the regular and necessary support of the Board, while in the miscellaneous income there was a decrease, thus:

Increase from assessment	$17,478.08
Increase from regular specials	32,118.70
Total	$49,596.78

This increase is by so much an enlargement of the basis of appropriations. The decided increase in regular specials shows the encouraging tendency toward voluntary giving. If we add the increase in income from the fields of $12,473.29, we have a total increase in these three items of $62,070.07 for the General Foreign Missionary work.

There was a decrease in miscellaneous income due to the fact that a bequest was received in 1915 which, in the nature of things, was not repeated. The entire miscellaneous income is made up of irregular items which are not constant and which vary much from year to year. This, therefore, is not to be reckoned as a current asset of the Board. Leaving this feature out of the reckoning, the total increase for regular work and woman's work, both Home and Foreign, was $113,336.83. This can with some degree of certainty be counted on as a permanent gain in annual income.

The deficit on the Foreign Department was reduced from $177,851.98, as reported in 1916, to $113,246.98 on January 1, 1917. This reduction puts the finances in better shape than at any time for years. This remaining deficit does not consist entirely of debts to people outside the Board. There is included $39,577.25 independent specials. These are unfinished transactions only partially paid, held temporarily on account of conditions of exchange, awaiting plans, etc. When these are spent, the Board will still have the assets in its own hands. The same is true of $31,783.86 of other funds in the hands of the Board for specified uses, which are charged as a debit.

Thus, a total of $71,361.11, when liquidated, will not pass out of the hands of the Board but will only shift its assets without diminishing them. This leaves $41,885.87 not covered by available assets which is due to others than the Board itself.

With even a moderate increase in income this year, we need have no deficit at the end of the year, either to ourselves or to others.

By action of the Board we are limited to an appropriation of $400,000 from the general funds to the foreign fields, until the deficit is entirely wiped out. We are now in the first year's appropriations under this limit. Shall we not make it the last by wiping the slate clean in 1917?

The income subject to appropriation under normal conditions is now approximately $500,000. It is delightful to realize that the income will stand at that when we reach the end of the deficit, and we can with all safety and gladness reward the patience of the missionaries and rejoice the waste places by a more adequate appropriation.

AN UP-TO-DATE PREACHER.

By Isaac Lockhart Peebles.

An up-to-date preacher is: 1. Born of God's Spirit, knows that he is, and he knows that he is born again (a) because he has an inward sense that he is; (b) because the Holy Spirit witnesses with his spirit that he is; (c) because he has a joy that is full of glory; (d) because he delights in talking about his change and telling it to others, and especially does he strive to persuade others to secure it, for it is so heavenly; (e) because he hates all sin, the popular and unpopular sins; (f) because he loves God so well that he strives to obey him in all things; (g) because he loves the brethren and every one, even his enemies.

2. An up-to-date preacher lives a holy life; and, too, not merely a holy life, but holiness of that high type commensurate with his advantages and the possibilities within him. He is not commercialized and would prefer death rather than to be. He prefers to be ostracised rather than a party to the follies and sins of society and all other circles.

3. An up-to-date preacher preaches the truth, whether it is popular or not. 'Tis not a matter with him as to whether or not it pleases all or any one. He is a messenger of God, and what he preaches is God's message, and therefore he gives it as God's. He does not concern himself about presenting it in a stilted, syllogistic, pedantic style that requires a well trained mind to grasp it—no, not at all; but in that style of earnestness and simplicity that enables all classes to get what he preaches. His business is too serious to waste time by parading himself and leaving his people nothing but wind. He must build up the saints and win sinners. The authority with him, and THE book, is the Bible; and out of it he gets warnings for saints and sinners.

4. An up-to-date preacher is one who advocates the enforcement of discipline and scorns that cowardly thing of having good rules and then allowing subscribers thereto to ignore them as if they were not. He believes in discipline in his own family and strives to eliminate every appearance of heathenism, such as disputings, quarreling, discourtesies, etc., and has family prayer morning and night, and prays not less than three times daily in secret.

5. An up-to-date preacher grows indignant at the least wilful ignorement of any one's rights, and his anger boils when one uses his official position, whether in Church or State, to cower, injure, hurt, and ruin others. In such a one he readily detects that spirit that should make the filthiest devil blush; and should such a one be so devoid of a sense of honor as to boast of his dastardly accomplishments, he regards him with such abhorrence that he feels that devils should avoid his company. What bitterness intensifies in his soul when a preacher can deliberately murder his brother's usefulness and then dare to appear before the people as God's ambassador.

6. An up-to-date preacher is one who is abreast with the age in learning and the best thought. He ranks with the best scholars and the best thinkers. He cycles in the narrowest and widest circles of all useful and needed knowledge. He ranges through all the territories of divine allowances, gathering and contributing as God requires for the edification of the saints and the salvation of the lost, not forgetting that the Bible is the best of all books and that he himself is for the glory of God.

7. An up-to-date preacher is one who focalizes all that he is and has toward one end, and that is, God's giory and the greatest good to our race. He holds in rigid contempt one's preaching just to be seen, heard, or praised, and feels that, if it were possible, such conduct should make a croaking frog blush and silence a gaggling goose.

8. An up-to-date preacher roams at large in the spiritual realm at those altitudes and ranges commensurate with the light and advantages of this period, favored far in advance of all the past. He knows that since God's Book was the guide to people in ages poorly favored, and, too, that God required them to live its teachings in proportion to their possibilities, he therefore requires him and all others of this age to live them also in a manner commensurate with our possibilities, which outrank theirs in this, that we have their lives and a long period of unfoldings of Bible truths and facilities undreamed of by them to develop and to make far mightier our possibilities than theirs. Our blessed Savior said, "For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required." (Luke 6:48.)

May God help every preacher to be an up-to-date preacher in the Scriptural sense!

Meridian, Miss.

"HE BEING DEAD YET SPEAKETH."

By Rev. W. F. McMurry, D.D.

The Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has lately received a contribution of $10,000 from a citizen of Louisiana, the income from which is to be used perpetually in the interest of the Granbery College, at Juiz de Fora, Brazil.

The generous donor, who is now well along in years, did not join the Church until late in life. Some twenty years ago, before identifying himself with the Church, he was spending a few weeks' vacation in Denver, Colorado, and learned from the daily paper that a southern Bishop by the name of Granbery was to preach at a little church in that city on Sunday morning. While not a Christian, his Southern sentiment prompted him to go and hear the Southern Bishop, and, taking a seat in the rear of the house, he listened to the sermon. The Bishop had not been preaching long before the visitor began to cry and continued to do so all the time the Bishop was preaching. At the conclusion of the service he, without introducing himself to anybody or even shaking hands with the Bishop who had so deeply impressed him, returned to the hotel. Some years later he joined the Church, and a few months ago, in reading one of the Church papers, came upon a reference to the Granbery College, in Brazil, and made up his mind at once that he would do something in a substantial way for the institution which, he naturally concluded, had been named for the Bishop whose sermon had so deeply touched him. "This," he said, "explains my interest in that institution, and is responsible for my contribution thereto."

By placing this $10,000 in the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension this good brother has accomplished several things, some of which are as follows:

First—A permanent fund has been established which will be used perpetually to aid struggling congregations in building suitable houses of worship, by loaning this fund to them at a reasonable rate of interest and permitting such loans to be paid in easy installments.

Second—A permanent endowment fund in the interest of the Granbery College, Juiz de Fora, Brazil, has been established.

Third—The problem of investing this endowment (always a serious problem) has been fully and finally determined by placing it with the Board of Church Extension, which has a record above criticism in the handling of its loan funds.

Fourth—The good Bishop Granbery, long since enjoying his reward in the "City which hath foundations," has been honored by one who, at a time when he was not interested in the Church of God, was drawn by sentiments, not altogether religious, to hear him preach.

Fifth—The contribution will become a memorial to the generous donor, and will witness through the unfolding years to his generosity.

DR. DuBOSE'S PLAN.

(We give below the plan for the arrangement of Negro Methodists in the proposed reorganized Church that was submitted to the Joint Commission on Unification by Dr. H. M. DuBose, and which he recently published in Zion's Herald.—Editor of Advocate.)

1. The reorganized church shall consist of two divisions or connections, bearing the same name and organically related, as hereinafter to be designated.

2. The reorganized church shall be known as the Methodist Episcopal Church in America; but the second division shall be additionally designated as the Associate Connection of said church. This connection shall be composed of the present colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of such other bodies of colored Methodists as may unite with the Associate Connection on terms and conditions mutually agreeable.

3. The Associate Connection shall be considered as in every way an organic part of the reorganized church, and shall be governed and administered under the following plan.

4. The Associate Connection shall have the same constitution as the Reorganized Connection, and shall make no changes in the Restrictive Articles to be adopted as a basis of government for the reorganized church, without the concurrent constitutional consent of the General and Annual Conferences of the two connections, but in all other matters of legislation and administration the Associate Connection shall have the same freedom of action as that enjoyed by the Reorganized Connection.

5. The Associate Connection shall have an independent General Conference, enjoying full powers of legislation under the constitution of the reorganized church. The ratio of representation in the General Conference of the Associate Connection shall be fixed by that body from time to time under the constitution.

6. The Associate Connection shall have its own Bishops and connectional officers, and shall have full administrative power over its own Annual Conferences and local congregations, as also over its own foreign and domestic mission work, church extension, and other connectional enterprises.

7. There shall be one general publication administration for the two connections; and the Associate Connection shall retain its interest in the Book Concern of the Church on a basis to be agreed upon and fixed as one of the conditions of reorganization, and secured by constitutional guarantee. On this basis the Associate Connection shall receive its part of profits from the Book Concern, and give such direction to them as its General Conference, acting under the constitution, may direct. The Associate Connection may maintain, at its pleasure, a quota of publication officials at, or in connection with, one or more of the publication houses of the Church, to be designated in the agreement of reorganization, for the adaptation and publication of such literature as it may need; these publication officials to be paid by the publishing agents, and these payments, as all other Book Concern expenses of the Associate Connection, to be charged to the account of said connection, and to be reckoned in the fiscal accounts and the rendering of profits by the publishing agents and Book Committee. The publication house, or houses, designated for the joint use of the Associate Connection shall be administered by a Special Book Committee, composed equally of members selected by the two connections. This committee shall make report to the General Book Committee which shall have general supervision; and when the affairs of the joint publication houses are under consideration the two Book Committees shall sit as one body. The Associate Connection shall be permitted to appoint an associate publishing agent to act with the agent, or agents, of the joint houses in matters relating to the publishing concerns of the Associate Connection.

8. After ten years it shall be competent for either General Conference of the two connections, or other responsible bodies thereof, to propose a division of the funds of the Book Concern on the basis agreed upon at the time of reorganization; such proposal to take the constitutional course in both connections.

9. The Associate Connection shall retain its interest in the Superannuate Preachers' Fund and other joint endowments of the Church, on a basis to be agreed upon as in the case of publishing interests; and all beneficiary interest accruing shall be paid by the several boards or holders into the hands of similar boards or holders appointed by the Associate Connection. On a basis to be equitably agreed upon, the Associate Connection shall appoint at least one member of each of the boards and bodies holding and dispensing vested funds in which the two connections, at the time of reorganization, shall be adjudged to have joint interests.

10. At the time of reorganization, and as a condition thereof, the reorganized church shall pledge, and give constitutional security for, the complete protection of all these interests.

11. The Associate Connection shall be allotted all property represented in church buildings, parsonages, etc., now occupied by colored congregations of the Methodist Episcopal Church; also all primary and secondary school property and funds now devoted to the use of the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church. But certain colleges, universities, and theological schools, hereafter to be designated, shall be held by the reorganized church, and administered in the interest of the Associate Connection through the General Board of Education, or otherwise, as may be determined.

12. The Reorganized Connection binds itself by this plan and agreement to contribute generously and faithfully, so long as there may be need for it, to the maintenance of the causes of education, extension, and general evangelism in the Associate Connection; and for this purpose the General Conference of the Reorganized Connection shall, at its regular quadrennial sittings, assess upon the Annual Conferences of the Reorganized Connection a sum, or sums, sufficient to meet the estimates of these needs, these estimates to be made in a manner hereinafter described.

13. As a binding nexus between the two connections, there shall be created an administrative commission to consist of thirty members, appointed in equal numbers by the two connections in a way to be determined by itself. The membership of this commission shall consist of three bishops, six ministers, and six laymen from each connection. This commission shall estimate during each quadrennium the amounts which may be needed for the maintenance of the causes of education, extension, and general evangelism in the Associate Connection, and report same to the General Conference of the Reorganized Connection, which body shall consider these estimates, change or amend as may seem proper, and assess the same, as hereinbefore directed. All collections returned from the Annual Conferences of the Reorganized Connection for this purpose shall go into the hands of the Connectional Commission, to be paid out in such manner as may be directed or approved by the General Conference of the Associate Connection; nevertheless, this commission shall have power, for reason, to withhold any payment ordered, pending advice to be sought from a joint meeting of the Bishops of the two connections.

14. The Bishops of the two connections shall meet jointly at least once each year, to consider such matters as may be of mutual interest to the two connections, and especially for the purpose of maintaining fraternal relations, and generally considering the welfare of the Associate Connection. A general report of these meetings shall be embodied in the Episcopal Addresses made to the respective General Conferences as a means of maintaining the continuity and effectiveness of connectional relationship.

15. Nothing in the plan is to be construed as a discrimination against the doctrine of the freedom and equality of all men in the Church of God. The doctrine of religious equality is fully and completely affirmed, and there shall never be enacted in the reorganized church a law or rule denying these rights to any believing child of God. The plan herein set forth is based upon the broad plane of Christian statesmanship and mutual understanding, and is suggested and emphasized by the desire to pledge in the present, and secure in the future, the largest results of spiritual and social advancement for the Christian men and women of the colored race, while promoting such a solidarity of American Methodism as will deliver its full force upon the spiritual needs of the nation and of the world.

BY THE EDITOR.

As will be seen by an examination of Dr. DuBose's plan for disposing of the Negro Methodists in the proposed united Church, we were in error in stating that his scheme provided for a limited colored representation in the white General Conference. This mistake was due to a misunderstanding of "section 5" of his plan. Zion's Herald, in which his article appeared, did not reach us until late Monday afternoon when we were rapidly doing the last writing for our issue of March 1, and our reading of his article was in consequence rather hasty. We sincerely regret having made this incorrect statement. Since he does not advocate any colored representation in the General Conference of the white section of the Church in contemplation, as was our impression when we wrote our brief editorial last week, we desire to say that we do not think that Dr. DuBose's scheme is "more objectionable" than Dr. Blake's (which also leaves the Negro out of the General Conference); but we do think it is objectionable to such an extent that the Church, South, could not afford to accept it, and we have no idea, judging from the treatment that has been accorded Dr. Blake's scheme, which in some respects is similar to it, that the Church, North, will entertain any serious thought of its adoption. It should be remembered that this plan was before the Joint Commission at its recent meeting in Baltimore, and was not accepted as a solution of the Negro problem as it relates to unification.

Just prior to our utterance of last week, Dr. Blake's scheme of arranging for the colored Methodists appeared in Zion's Herald, and was being used as a campaign document throughout this section of the Church; and we had taken issue with it in a somewhat extended editorial. So, when Dr. DuBose in his remarks prefatory to his plan gave a general endorsement to that scheme (though not committing himself as to some of its details) and pronounced his utterance the most "statesmanlike" deliverance that he had seen, the weight of his influence (though doubtless unintentionally) was apparently thrown into the scale against us and our cause, which, together with the propaganda that was at work, made it necessary, we thought, to speak without the least delay. We entertain a very high regard for Dr. DuBose and we do not believe it is his purpose as a Commissioner to go beyond the instructions of our last General Conference, nor to be disloyal to the ideals and traditions of the Southern people; but we fear that his plan, at least in its present incomplete form, may have the effect of encouraging others to look in that direction.

A GROWING EVANGELIST.

We give above a picture of Rev. J. H. Bell, of Columbus, Miss., who is entering upon his second year as one of the Conference evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference. His record last year was a notably successful one. He held many fine meetings and witnessed nearly a thousand conversions under his ministry. Consecrated, earnest, and effective, he has a way of winning people that is truly remarkable.

The following are a few commendations of his work from pastors whom he has helped:

Rev. H. H. Norton, formerly of Crystal Springs, Miss.: "I do not remember to have heard a more satisfactory series of sermons at any time. The meeting increased in interest until the final service. If you need efficient help in a meeting set about it at once and secure his services."

Rev. R. P. Neblett thus writes of a meeting held for him at Blue Mountain, Miss.: "There were 82 conversions and reclamations, but this does not begin to measure the good work accomplished—one young man yielded to the call to preach and expects to attend Millsaps College. Brother Bell was at ease and deeply interested, as well as interesting, in every service, wherever we were. His quiet, frank, forceful manner, moved by a sweet spirit of consecration, took a firm hold upon all classes. Not a foolish, useless, or awkward thing was said or done at any time. He is truly 'a man with a message,' and should be used by the brethren."

Rev. J. M. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference: "He preaches with power in his quiet way and stands squarely up for the fundamental doctrines of the Bible as they are taught by Methodism. He is a safe man for any preacher in our Church to use."

Rev. W. R. Goudelock, of Crenshaw, Miss.: "Dancing and card-playing Church members stood up and publicly confessed their sins and renounced these practices. Oh! it was glorious to be in these services. It was impossible to count all the conversions and reclamations, but I think there were at least 100. There were 27 additions to our Church and 11 to the Baptist Church. To the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, I would say, you need not send away from home for an evangelist. I do not think that Brother Bell is second to any. I say this, having heard many."

The Purvis (Miss.) Booster: "The revival at the Methodist Church conducted by Rev. J. H. Bell, assisted by Mr. Meliard, is producing a profound impression upon the community. Mr. Bell has the happy faculty of presenting his subjects to an audience in a plain, practical way that is at once reasonable and convincing."

This vigorous and growing young evangelist has some open dates at present, but persons who may wish to secure his services would do well to write him at once, before his slate is full.

$30,000 RAISED AT JACKSON FOR THE NEW DORMITORY.

The campaign recently inaugurated to raise $30,000 in ten days in the Capital City of Mississippi for the new dormitory at Millsaps College came to a successful close last Thursday, March 1, amid great enthusiasm and general rejoicing. At the one o'clock luncheon at the Edwards House, when the team captains had made their final report, it was found that the total amount subscribed amounted to $30,751 and the joy of the team workers and friends of the College expressed itself in college yells and loud applause followed by inspiring speeches. Besides the team workers, there were present on this auspicious occasion the pastors of the city, several of the alumni, and a number of other friends of the College, among them being Bishop Theodore D. Bratton, of the diocese of Mississippi, who in a felicitous manner expressed his gratification at the success of the campaign, and congratulated the people of Jackson on having such a splendid institution of learning located in their midst. During the campaign the good Bishop was kind enough to make a voluntary subscription of $50 to the new dormitory.

One of the most gratifying features of the campaign was the hearty spirit of co-operation manifested by the people of Jackson, irrespective of creed, all classes being represented among the subscribers. Mr. R. E. Kennington, a Presbyterian merchant, telegraphed a subscription of $500 from New York City. Mr. Isidore Lehman, one of the team captains, is a Jew, and labored just as enthusiastically for the College as any Methodist in the city. The team of college students organized two or three days after the campaign started rendered fine service, and succeeded in raising over one thousand dollars among the students, besides several hundred dollars on the outside. The college boys realize thoroughly the need of a dormitory, and gave liberally to the enterprise. Mrs. Chas. B. Galloway, who is a devoted friend of the College, assisted in organizing the "sunshine squad," which consisted of ten ladies, Mrs. G. C. Swearingen being the team captain, and Mrs. A. F. Watkins one of the team workers. This team secured several large subscriptions, and by their optimism and diligence made an enviable record. An auxiliary squad was organized among the Belhaven girls, who made a much-appreciated contribution to the dormitory.

In thus raising half of the amount needed for the dormitory at Millsaps College, the citizens of Jackson have shown substantial appreciation of its worth and influence, and their example ought to stimulate the interest and liberality of Methodists throughout the State in behalf of a "Greater Millsaps."

The Jackson Evening News and the Clarion-Ledger contributed no little to the success of the campaign by their hearty co-operation editorially, and also by giving large space to the daily reports of the progress of the campaign.

Exclusive of the conditional gift of $10,000 made by Mr. W. M. Buie, the largest single subscription was $1500 made by that big-hearted layman, Mr. I. C. Enochs. Subscriptions of $500 each were made by Mr. Thad. B. Lampton, Mr. R. E. Kennington, and the law firm of Watkins & Watkins, besides one or two others whose names will be given later, as I have not the complete list before me.

On Friday forenoon, March 2, the students and faculty of the College celebrated the successful completion of the campaign by marching in a big parade through the principal streets of the city with banners flying and hurrahs resounding. It was a red-letter day in the history of the College.

The campaign was under the direction of Rev. Andrew E. Clement, of the Tennessee Conference, Commissioner of Hospitals, who gave signal proof of his ability as a leader in an undertaking of this sort. The accomplishment of the task, however, was made possible by the faithful, self-sacrificing service rendered by the volunteer corps of eighty or more of Jackson's best and busiest men and women, who gave themselves unsparingly to the work of the campaign.

COLORED METHODISTS AND UNION.

By the Editor.

Dr. Edgar Blake's suggested arrangement for the Negroes in the proposed consolidated Methodist Church does not seem to be meeting with favor in the North. So far as our reading has extended (and we see most of the Northern Methodist papers), not a single one of them, not even Zion's Herald, has endorsed it, and no other Northern Methodist of note has publicly given it his sanction. On the contrary, many have pronounced emphatically against it, among those doing so being Dr. W. F. Warren, of Brookline, Mass., and Rev. William T. Perrin, Ph.D., of Newton Center. Dr. I. Garland Penn, Secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Society of the M. E. Church, who is one of the two Negro members of the Joint Commission on Unification, has written a vigorous article against it in the Western Christian Advocate, along pretty much the same line as Dr. Jones' utterance, which we recently published.

A Significant Protest Registered.

The following paper, signed by white and colored educators engaged in school work among Negroes, was sent out from Atlanta, Ga., on February 16:

A recent issue of "Zion's Herald" and the "Christian Advocate" contained an address delivered by the Rev. Dr. Edgar Blake, corresponding secretary of the Board of Sunday Schools, and a member of the Joint Commission on the Unification of American Methodisms.

In this address Dr. Blake discussed various propositions having to do with the relation of the Negro membership to the reorganized church, and finally presented the following amazing suggestion, as a possible solution to the so-called difficult problem:

"Personally, I am of the opinion that no group of men ever had a finer opportunity to do a great thing for themselves, for others, and for the Kingdom of Christ, than has our colored constituency. Suppose they should say, 'We recognize the embarrassment in the way of the union of these two Methodisms, and we are willing to do our part to relieve it. We do not want to leave the Church; we want to remain a part of it. But, brethren, give us a Regional Conference of our own, with the same powers as other Regional Conferences. Let us elect our own Bishops and control our own local affairs, as other Regional Conferences do. Give us a representation upon the connectional boards and societies of the Church, safeguard our powers and privileges by constitutional provisions, and we will not ask to sit in your General Conference to legislate for you.' * * * Should union now fail because of the presence of the colored membership, it would mean a very serious blow to their interests in the Methodist Episcopal Church." * * * I do not see how any one, who has a due regard for the future of the Negro, can survey such a possibility without the most serious misgivings."

We, the undersigned, vitally related to the Negro work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, deplore the fact that any official representatives of the World-wide Methodist Episcopal Church, and especially a member of the Commission on Unification, should make a suggestion so humiliating to a large number of self-respecting members of our great Church.

We protest against any proposition which, in the supposed interest of the union of Methodism, would deprive any element of our people of the most sacred rights, which should nowhere be more zealously guarded than in the Church of Jesus Christ.

Haines, professor of public speaking, Gammon Theological Seminary; A. P. Other Colored Ministers Speak.

At a joint meeting of the Baltimore and Washington colored preachers of the Northern Methodist Church a few days since strong action was taken against placing the Negro in a missionary or subordinate position in the united Church. The following are some extracts from the paper there adopted (italics ours):

"We most solemnly affirm that there would be no race problem, and hence the greatest obstacle (?) to organic union would be removed, if certain groups of white folks in both organizations would change their attitude toward us from that which strongly impresses us as being lacking in humanizing elements, to an approach toward the humanity exemplified by Jesus Christ while on earth, and which he unqualifiedly enjoins upon every one of his true disciples.

"It is the surrender of the ethical ideal of our Lord to physical force that has plunged the nations of Europe into this war. This same surrender of the ethical ideal is at the basis of such an assertion as the following: 'We are face to face with social conditions that cannot be ignored.' Over fifty years ago the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southland met what required then more genuine heroism than is necessary at the present time, and she did not waver in the performance of her plain duty. * * *

"Of such unwarrantedly stressed suggestions as these: 'There are few among us who believe our colored constituency have reached the stage in their development when it would be wise to turn over large sums of money to them without any responsibility to others for its control;' 'Racial immaturity;' 'The Negro a Dependent;' 'We will not for certain consideration (chiefly monetary), ask to sit in your General Conference to legislate for you;' 'A waning interest—we unhesitatingly say that they are approval and acceptances of the growing sentiment that has already resulted in Jim-crow cars, disfranchisement, residential segregation, lynchings and burnings of human beings, as well as other indignities that are continually heaped upon us. * * *

* * * "In the past we registered our protest against Jim-crow cars, residential segregation, and disfranchisement. If therefore there is to be pursued in the Church a course that deviates one iota from that which is Scriptural, we shall most vigorously protest, and say, 'Here we stand; we can do no more; God help us.'

"We approve heartily the masterly editorial of the Rev. R. E. Jones, D.D., in the issue of the Southwestern Christian Advocate of February 15, in reply to Dr. Blake's article. We are grateful to Dr. William Fairfield Warren and Dr. W. T. Perrin for their sentiments recently published in Zion's Herald; and we commend for careful reading Dr. P. O. Lowrey's article, originally published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, an official organ of the Methodist Church, South, and reprinted in the Southwestern Christian Advocate of February 15."

General Meeting of Northern Colored Methodists.

A general meeting of colored Methodists of the Church, North, was called to assemble in Washington this week, but subsequently was cancelled on the ground that the notice given was too short to make it representative. Concerning this meeting the following statement appeared in the New York Christian Advocate of February 22, which, we suppose, was issued by the white Northern Methodist preachers of Baltimore and Washington:

A Protest.

We open our forms on Tuesday morning to admit this telegram, which relates to the notice published in The Christian Advocate February 15, page 165:

Washington, D. C., February 19.

Whereas, There have recently appeared in the public press suggestions that there be a meeting of representatives of the colored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church to consider their relations to the proposed union of the Church, North and South;

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape's Diapepsin" digests 3000 grains food, ending all stomach misery in five minutes.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach remedy in the whole world and besides it is harmless. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

Be it Resolved, That the Baltimore and Washington Preachers' Meeting, of Washington Conference, jointly assembled February 19, respectfully urges that there be no such meeting to discuss relations which are clearly established, and it is our belief that such a gathering would lend force to a current of prejudice unworthy of our great Church or any part thereof.

NOTES.

The "bone-dry" law is said to be working finely in Tennessee.

Both Houses of Congress have adopted a measure which will make Washington City, D. C., dry after November 1, 1917.

HOW PROHIBITION HAS HURT SEATTLE.

The following statements from the Business Chronicle of the Pacific Northwest show how prohibition is hurting Seattle, Wn.:

"The facts are that when the so-called dry law was passed in 1914 there were 330 saloons in Seattle. When the law became effective, January 1, 1916, 231 saloons suspended operations, the remainder having gone out of business during the summer and fall of 1915.

"Of these 231 vacancies, practically all have been filled. In 100 cases the same tenants remodeled the former saloons into stores, restaurants, ice cream parlors, etc., and now thrive in their new line of business endeavor.

"Huge gains in both clearings and transactions were made by Seattle's 31 banks in 1916 over 1915. Lacking a half business day of completing the calendar year 1916, clearings were $787,747,068.09 as compared with $612,928,879.69 in 1915, according to the Seattle Clearing House Association. This is a gain of $174,818,188.40 for 1916.

"More valuable than clearings as a barometer of indnstry and trade activity are bank transactions. Lacking one and a half business days of completing the calendar year 1916, bank transactions amounted to $1,848,523,681.72, as compared witn $1,448,853,158.68 in 1915; a gain of $399,670,523.04 for 1916.

"At the call of December 31, 1915, Seattle banks reported deposits of $87,315,076.91. At the November 17, 1916, call, deposits were $107,124,113.32. This is a gain of over $19,000,000 in ten and a half months.

"The United States Bureau of Census estimates that Seattle's population July 1, 1916, was 348,639, which is a gain of 17,805 over July 1, 1915. This city, according to government estimate, now holds the 19th place in the list of the large cities of the United States, leading Jersey City, N. J., and Kansas City, Mo."

METHODIST BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

Open Letter.

Esteemed Brother:

The primary purpose of the Methodist Benevolent Association is to aid the itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church in providing better, materially, for themselves when disabled, superannuated, or enfeebled by sickness or advanced age, and, in the event of their death, for their families; and thus the Association is indirectly aiding the Church in all her laborious and laudable efforts to take better care of these servants of the Church, for whom, in the coming days of dependence, the Church unhappily provides but a pittance.

The Association is meeting a great need, and its record to date is a noble one. Starting twelve years ago with nothing—no members, no stockholders, no fnnds, and no policyholders—it has distributed to the worn-out preachers and the widows and orphans and dependents of deceased members over $175,000. Every claim has been paid, and a guarantee or reserve fund of over $60,000 has been accumulated. This reserve fund belongs to the benefit fund, and it, with the current receipts for the same fund, guarantees the payments of the face value of every benefit certificate at maturity, thus preventing the necessity of changing or increasing the rates. The reserve fund now amounts to one hundred per cent of the legal requirements under the laws of the State.

The Association is chartered under the laws of the State of Tennessee and is under the inspection of the Insurance Commissioner of the State. This fact guarantees the soundness of its organization and assures publicity and other means of absolutely safeguarding the interests of the members.

Mr. J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer of the Board of Missions, and Mr. D. M. Smith, Senior Publishing Agent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are the auditors; and their reports are based upon the investigations of expert accountants, showing the absolute soundness of the Association.

Each policyholder is a member and is entitled to vote and to all other privileges of members at the regular meetings of the members every two years, at which time directors are elected and business rules framed. The Association is entirely mutual, and all its financial prosperity inures to the benefit of the members and policyholders.

It is specially adapted to meet the needs of the itinerant memberships, and it has a class of selected risks, making its business safer than that of similar institutions and enabling it to give high-grade protection benefits at the lowest cost possible consistent with sound business policy.

Five kinds of Benefit Certificates are issued, and applicants are at liberty to choose from them at will—namely: (1) Whole Life, (2) 20-Premium Life, (3) 70-Year Endowment, (4) Term (to age sixty), for the benefit of widows and orphans, and (5) Disability or Old Age, which pays cash benefits annually to the member himself on becoming disabled, superannuated, or on attaining the age of seventy. (See Premium Rates.)

Failure by the itinerant preacher while young to make preparation for the proverbial rainy day, old age, superannuation, or death places the greatest burden on the itinerant system, which is the best system in the world for giving the whole gospel to the whole world. This failure creates unnecessary burdens which fall in the largest measure with all their weight of woe upon the innocent and helpless widows and orphans, who are least able to bear them. The rest falls upon the preacher when he is worn out, superannuated and disabled, and forced to move out of the furnished parsonage home, the only home he ever had, with its living income, the only income he ever received; and though he is sick and feeble and disabled and the income stops, still he must rent or buy or beg and furnish a home on credit or beg and live on charity and the wolves of cold and hunger and debt enter his life, and rest and comfort and contentment depart. He must needs hasten to go with humiliation and a broken and heavy heart to his grave, often many years before his appointed time.

The itinerant preacher, as is well known, cannot own and occupy a home of his own while effective; and when able to save a little surplus there is no safe way of investing it known to him. If he tries to invest it, he loses it; or if he succeeds, he is discounted by his people. If he saves it and doesn't try to invest it, he soon spends it, showing others how to be liberal. But few of our preachers will ever be prepared for the coming troop of hardships except by being obligated and by making small investments by payments in regular and stipulated installments. In this way they can provide an estate sufficiently large to give their loved ones "a home of tbeir own" or its equivalent in cash when that is the greatest need. Adequate and wisely arranged insurance protection is the best estate a preacher can have. Having his family and himself well provided for in this way against financial want and distress, in the event of his death or disability, will add tenfold to his happiness and contentment and to his worth and effectiveness in the service of his Church and Master.

The causes of the difference in prices of insurance in different companies are easily understood. For example, old-line (commercial) insurance companies are founded for profit by capitalists who invest hundreds of thousands of dollars in stocks and who must, therefore, charge the policyholders a very high price for insurance in order to receive large dividends on their investments, to pay large salaries to officers, large commissions to agents, and maintain expensive branch offices (these expenses amounting to forty per cent, approximately, of the entire cost of the insurance); while benevolent life insurance institutions, beginning originally in the Church, are founded by and for the benefit of the poor man without capital, and require tbat the premiums to be paid by the policyholders shall create the funds by which to operate, ninety per cent, approximately, being returned to the beneficiaries in payment of benefits, wbile tbe smaliest per cent possible is used to meet the actual expenses of the management.

Example: Of every $100 paid to old-line companies, $40 is used for expenses; while of every $100 paid to benevolent institutions, $10 is used for expenses. Again, for every $100 paid annually by the average young man to the old-line companies, $3000 of insurance may be bought; whiie for every $100 paid annually by the same young man to the benevolent institutions, $5000 of insurance may be bought.

Again, of every $100 paid to the old-line companies, $60 (more or less) is apportioned to the benefit or reserve or surplus fund; wbile of every $100 paid to tbe benevolent institutions, $90 (more or less) is apportioned to the benefit or reserve or surplus fund. Again, of the $28.10 annual premium paid (New York Life rates) per $1000 at age 35 (Ordinary Life policy) in the old-line company $16.86 (60 per cent), approximately, is apportioned to the benefit funds and the $11.24 (40 per cent) to expenses; while of the $19.30 annual premium paid per $1000 at age 35 (Whole Life policy, same in cbaracter as the Ordinary Life) to the Benevolent Association, $17.30 is apportioned to the benefit funds and the balance to expenses.

The premium rates are graded according to age, in order to require every member to create his own benefit, if he lives out his expectation of life from his age on admission.

The medical examination required of all to show an insurable condition of health is prescribed by the laws of the States in general aud by good business methods in particular. The sick and disabled and dependents, being unable to care for themselves, have a just claim on the State and the Church and society and benefactors, which the strong and healthy cannot have. Thus the Association provides the safest, simplest, and most economical opportunity for the burden-bearer and noble benefactor to take care of his confiding beneficiaries.

We invite correspondence with reference to any matter that may not be clearly set forth and shall be glad to give all information that may be desired.

SLEEPY TIME.

Good night, little baby;
I've counted your toes,
I've kissed all your fingers,
And rumpled your nose.

Good night, little baby;
The day's gone away;
The big tired darkness
Knows not how to play.

Good night, little baby;
My arms are the bed,
My heart is the pillow,
My love is the spread.

THE EXAGGERATOR.

"I'm most dead! It's as hot as fire, and I've been over a dozen miles after that colt!"

Andrew threw himself at full length on the lounge and wiped the perspiration from his forehead.

"Where did you go?" inquired his father.

"I went over to Briggs' and back by the bridge."

"That is a little less than half a mile. Is it so warm, Andy? It seems quite cool here."

"No, not so dreadful if I'd taken it slower, but I ran like lightning and got heated up."

"You started about five o'clock, Andy, and it is now a quarter to six," said his father, consulting his watch.

"Yes, sir; just three-quarters of an hour," answered Andrew, innocently.

"Does it take lightning forty-five minutes to go a half mile?"

"I didn't mean exactly that, father; but I ran all the way because I expected the whole town would be here to-night to see my new velocipede," explained Andrew, reluctantly.

"Whom did you expect, son? I wasn't aware that such a crowd was to be here. What will you do with them all?"

"Jim, Eddie, Tim and Sam told me they'd be 'round after school; and I wouldn't wonder if Ike came, too; that's all."

"The population of the town is 5000, and you expect five persons. Well, as you are very sick, I am glad no more are coming. You couldn't play with them at all."

"Sick!" cried Andrew, springing to his feet, "who says I'm sick?"

"Why, my son, you said when you came in that you were almost dead; doesn't that mean very sick?"

"You are so particular, father, about my talking. I don't mean exactly what I say, of course. I wasn't nearly dead at all, but I did some tall running, you bet. There were about fifty dogs after me, and I don't go much on dogs."

"Quite a band of them! Where did they all come from?"

"There was Mr. Wheeler's sheep dog, and Rush's store dog, and two or three more, and they made for me; so I ran as fast as I could."

"Five at the most. That is not fifty, Andy."

"There seemed to be fifty, anyway," answered Andrew, somewhat impatiently. "Carter's ten-acre lot was full of dogs just making for me; and I guess you'd thought there were fifty if it had been you."

"Ten acres of dogs would be a great many thousands; have you any idea how many?"

Andrew did not like to calculate, so he only shook his head. But his father continued:

"I know no better way to break you of the foolish habit of exaggeration than to tell the children of the trouble you had in going after the colt. You ran like lightning, encountered ten acres of dogs, traveled more than a dozen miles to get half a mile, expected to find five thousand people here to examine your new velocipede, and when you reached home you were nearly dead."

"Please don't, father; the boys and girls will laugh themselves to death."

"Laugh themselves to death at a simple story like this? I hope not, surely."

"But, father, I never, never will stretch things again if you won't tell them," pleaded Andrew.

"I hope not, my child, for it will finally cost you the faith of all your hearers. Nobody relies upon the word of one who is given to habitual exaggeration. State things just as they are. Habit grows with years, and becomes in time so deeply rooted that it will be impossible for you, when you become a man, to relate plain, unvarnished truths, unless you check the foolish habit in which you indulge every day of stretching simple incidents into most marvelous tales."—Mrs. W. T. Morrison, in Western Christian Advocate.

A QUEER ALLIGATOR.

There are pets and pets, but there are few boys who have a pet more profitable than Nick, who belongs to a boy at Fort Meade, Fla. Nick is an alligator with a mission. His mission is crawling through clogged sewers and taking a rope with him. When the Fort Meade superintendent of public works finds a sewer obstructed, he hires Nick, and, fastening a line around his body, lowers him into the pipe and heads him towards the obstruction. He cannot turn around, so he goes forward to the next manhole, taking the rope with him. The rope is then attached to a drag, which is pulled through, removing the obstruction.—The American Boy.

MILLIONS OF MARBLES.

Many millions of marbles are made annually in the United States. It is estimated that the boys of this country use no less than 200,000,000 each year. But there are other users of marbles besides youthful players. The Standard Oil Company is one of the largest buyers of marbles; some of its purchases are used in oilcans, and others of larger sizes are rolled through graded pipe lines to clean out the paraffin that gathers on the inside of the pipes. The manufacturers of ink, chemicals, and powder use marbles. Other buyers of these little spheres are dealers in railway supplies, puzzle-box makers, and salt producers.—The Presbyterian.

FROM THE UPPER END.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

So far as the elder is concerned in these parts, we have advertised "Lost, strayed or stolen," for, as an old friend of my boyhood used to put it, he hasn't been in the white settlement for some time. The last we knew or him he was facing rain and storm and, in company with Wells, hunting a quarterly conference, and I learned that "he came, he saw" and found nothing; consequently there was no "triumphal arch" erected. Doctor, we've had all sorts of weather, except sunshine—perhaps, that we might not forget that "he cometh forth like a bridegroom and that his going forth is from the ends of the heavens, and his circuit unto the ends of it." The sun has shown his face once a week, and we were the ones to rejoice. All farming operations have been practically at a standstill and church attendance has been greatly interfered with; but this pastor has been rather on the run because of the great number of cases of la grippe in the city, which has been rather fatal with the old. Then, too, all sorts of tramps have beset us, from the fellow who "was so hungry that he didn't know where he would get a bed to sleep," to the booster of a city, summer chautauqua, and appeals for relief work from Belgium to Armenia. I often think of the monotony of the grind of an editor, but, Doctor, the grind of the pastor who is beset day and night with calls for endless enterprises is not far behind, and I have almost said that Meek has a soft job as compared with that of some pastors. But in my earliest ministry I had this from a consecrated man of God, "What is life if we don't help?" So I hold my nerves and do the best I can, finding myself repeating with Walter Foss:

"Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man—
Men that are good, men that are bad, men that are weak, men that are strong.
Wise, foolish—so am I;
So let me live by the side of the road and be a friend of man."

But there have been some roses along the way I have had time to make some new friends, such as Dr. A. T. Robertson in his "Divinity of Christ in the Gospel of St. John," and Dr. Kern in his latest book, "Vision and Power," which so besets me that it takes more than one ringing of the dinner bell to break off the spell. His "Ministry to the Congregation" has had much praise, but this is more to my liking. I am certain that I shall not put $1.50 into anything this twelve-month that shall return as much. Of course, when I'm looking into the Sunday school lessons I must have an hour with Bishop Candler on the "Fourth Gospel." Next, before me is Dr. Moore's book on the "South To-day;" the chapter headings are catching to one who has known the South from "before the war" to this good hour, and has felt intensely her interests. Can a man be too jealous of his people and his country? Sometimes I ask if the poet who wrote, "Breathes there a man with soul so dead who to himself has never said, This is my own, my native land," was not writing to strengthen the affirmation. Edward Everett Hale's "Man without a Country" is a doleful story, but it certainly makes a point.

You are giving us some history enacted in 1864-65 in New Orleans, in which Drs. Keener, Walker and others figure, and those ideas of Dr. Blake on Unification, which recall the old adage that the "burnt child dreads the fire." I was not surprised at the failure of the Commissioners to do great things at Baltimore, and I shall be greatly surprised if unification is secured except upon the Oklahoma plan. Peace at any price never secured a peace that is worth the having. Dr. Ivey's Handbook for 1917 don't suggest that we need to fall over ourselves in that direction.

Editorial

IN THE INTEREST OF FAIRNESS.

In a brief editorial in our issue of last week, we used the following language: "With such a scheme for the Regional Conferences as we have discussed in this issue of the Advocate and with Negroes in the General Conference and on our General Boards, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would be in a pitiable plight. And apparently it is contemplated to have all our Church property to pass into the hands of a Church thus constituted and governed, if the 'liberals' on our Commission can have their way," etc.

Without having heard any complaint from any quarter, we wish to say, because it is never our desire to do any one an injustice, that in suggesting that the ultra-unionists on our Commission are willing to have Negroes in the General Conference, we perhaps went too far. Some of them seem willing to take Dr. Blake's obliterating Regional Conference scheme and his plan to place colored brethren on the General Boards, and wish to have our Church property held by a Church "thus constituted and governed;" but it is our understanding that our Commission has thus far unitedly stood against placing the colored brethren in a Regional Conference of the proposed Church, with all the rights and privileges pertaining thereto. Whether they will continue to maintain this position, we do not know. Some of them expressed views at variance with it at the famous Evanston (Illinois) Conference, and others are now evincing a desire to get up some kind of a compromise respecting this phase of the unification problem. Our statement that the Oklahoma plan has no chance to be adopted is, we think, obviously true in the light of the various utterances that are being made. And manifestly there is grave danger that an unwise plan that would precipitate a well-nigh ruinous wrangle among Southern Methodists, may be agreed to by the ardent unionists and submitted to the Church. Such an agitation and struggle would do incalculable harm. No scheme of union ought to be submitted that would not be reasonably certain to keep our own people united.

AN OBSERVATION.

A Church college may not be able to prevent every student that enters it from wasting his opporunities and making a failure in his work, but it ought at least make it as difficult as is possible for him to do this. The strong and capable pupil will do well in almost any institution. The chief work of any good school must have to do with helping and developing those who most need assistance.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Commencement sermon of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., will be preached by Bishop J. H. McCoy on May 20.

Brother R. W. P. Burkitt, of Eros, La., in remitting for the renewal of his subscription, says: "You are giving us a good paper. I agree with you on the unification issue."

In renewing his subscription to the Advocate, Brother A. J. Green, of Centerville, Miss., adds this note: "Rev. E. L. Alford, our new pastor, is well liked by the people here."

Rev. C. F. Emery, our scholarly pastor at Natchez, Miss., has our thanks for several subscriptions to the Advocate. The work in that historic city is going smoothly forward under his safe guiding hand.

The Seashore District Conference, of which Rev. J. R. Jones is the efficient presiding elder, will meet at Gulfport, Tuesday evening, May 1. We highly appreciate an invitation from Brother Jones to be present.

Rev. A. A. Sims, of Carthage, Miss., has brought us under obligation to him for 5 subscriptions from his charge. In his business letter, he says: "My work is progressing nicely and I see no reason why we should not have a really good year."

We have in hand a communication from Rev. H. Armstrong, of Olla, La., one of the esteemed veterans of the Louisiana Conference, which will be given a place in our columns next week. Brother Armstrong's message is a cheerful and interesting one.

Rev. Wm. I White has been transferred from the Iuka Circuit to Shannon, Miss., the latter appointment having been left vacant by the physical breakdown of Rev. W. D. McCullough. Brother White is one of the growing young ministers of the North Mississippi Conference.

"The Young Christian Worker" for March deals almost entirely with mission work in New Orleans, the cover-page containing a picture of "The Margaret Statue," and the first article being a sketch of that remarkable woman. It is a most interesting number of that fine little monthly.

Rev. T. B. Winstead, of the Trenton charge, North Miss. Conf., sends us several subscriptions, and thus refers to his work: "Our activity has been restricted by the severe winter weather, but there is now a change for the better in this respect, and the outlook is brighter. The general situation in this field is encouraging."

In making provision for the Advocate to come to his home for another year, Brother D. W. McLean, of Longville, La., says: "I subscribed for it in January, 1876, and it has been making its weekly visits to my home all these years; so I cannot afford to do without it. It seems to me to have grown better as the years have passed."

Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge (La.) District, in calling attention to his district conference in his second round of appointments, gives us a pressing invitation to attend. We hope that it may be possible for us to do so. Brother Bowman reports that the work is progressing well in the territory under his supervision.

We desire to call attention to the statement of Rev. J. E. Cunningham, of Corinth, Miss., concerning the question whether the Mississippi Centennial Exposition shall be kept open on the Sabbath. This is a matter of much importance, and we think that our preachers and people would do well to act in harmony with Brother Cunningham's suggestions.

Rev. Chas. E. Downer, of Petal, Miss., writes: "We have a revival meeting in progress here at this time, Feb. 27. Rev. J. V. Bennett, one of the Mississippi Conference evangelists, is doing the preaching, and Brother J. S. Duke, of Mendenhall, is conducting the singing. As is shown by the attendance and the manifestation of the Holy Spirit, God is blessing the labors of these efficient and faithful servants."

Mrs. Julia Monroe, of Sycamore, La., writes: "On February 1, God called from our home my beloved husband, Anthony L. Monroe, whom we greatly miss; and on February 7 my precious sister, Mrs. Nettie Perkins, of Grant, La., bade farewell to loved ones and passed to her reward on high. Our sorrow is great, but with sad hearts and tearful eyes we bow our heads and say, 'God's will be done.'"

Brother W. F. Youngblood, of Meadville, Miss., sends us two subscriptions to the Advocate and an order for a Bible, adding: "I have decided to spend a part of the money I give to home missions to place the Advocate in Methodist homes into which it does not go and to put copies of the Word of God where there are none." We are grateful to this friend for his assistance in circulating the Conference organ.

Rev. J. L. Carter, of Wade, Miss., sends us the following note: "We think that the work on the Americus Circuit is somewhat in advance of what it was at this time last year. Our first quarterly conference, though held a month earlier, received better reports than that of last year. We may have our goal set too high, but we want to build a parsonage and two churches before the next Annual Conference. I am among some of the best people in the world and I believe that we can bring these things to pass."

Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, the energetic Sunday School Field Secretary of the Louisiana Conference, sends us a copy of an interesting bulletin issued by the Sunday school of the Noel Memorial Church of Shreveport, La. Brother Breithaupt says: "The Noel Church is making developments in all departments. They say that the 'Every-Member Canvass' in January was a great success. The working forces of this congregation, led by the able pastor, Rev. W. W. Drake, are alive, enthusiastic, and aggressive."

The Library of the Theological Department, Southern Methodist University, is in receipt of a collection of valuable books relating to the early history of Christianity in the United States. Included in this gift are histories of several of the Annual Conferences of Methodism and also minutes of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America from 1798 to 1825. These valuable works are the gift of Rev. E. L. Shettles, who has been from the beginning a benefactor of the University.

In a letter written on February 24, Rev. B. P. Jaco, of Lexington, Miss., says: "I have had a few days' tilt with sciatica. You should hear me groan and see me with a walking-stick. I say 'amen' to Dr. Steel's 'ouch.'" We have traveled along that way and know how to sympathize with Brother Jaco. We trust that his agonies have abated ere this. Brother Jaco reports the death of two esteemed Methodists in his community: Mr. Joel R. Newsom, and Mrs. Laura Beatty Donelson. He sent brief memoirs of them, which will be published at an early date.

Not having made mention of their kindness elsewhere, we acknowledge our indebtedness to the following friends for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate sent in within the past few days: J. L. Decell, McComb, Miss., 2; Rev. S. A. Brown, Kosciusko, Miss., 6; Rev. R. E. Rutledge, Vaughan, Miss., 3; Rev. Robert Randle, Farmerville, La., 2; Rev. C. H. Strait, Johns, Miss., 7; Rev. E. J. Coker, Barlow, Miss., 3; Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, Indian Bayou, La., 3; Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Booneville, Miss., 5; Rev. W. M. Williams, Collins, Miss., 3; Rev. J. W. Price, Hermanville, Miss., 3; Rev. J. F. Waltman, Eros, La., 8.

Rev. W. R. McPherson instructs us to send his Advocate to Willow Creek, Mont., a charge to which he has just been assigned by Bishop W. R. Lambuth. He says: "We have a good church here and a wide field for labor, as there is no other church in the town. The climate is fine and bracing. This is a very fertile valley between the mountains and produces some of the finest wheat grown anywhere in the United States. We have but one problem here in the West—the problem of sin. Men and women need here, as they do everywhere, to know Christ and the power of his resurrection."

Rev. B. P. Fullilove, of Walnut, Miss., says: "I am much pleased with my new field. Of course, it is not ideal—there are some things that are not so encouraging; but I can see that I am getting hold of my people. The weather has been such that I have not been able to get about as much as I had hoped, and an epidemic of measles is prevailing hereabout, which has hindered the work to some extent. We have an industrial school here and there were 13 cases in the dormitory yesterday." Brother Fullilove is one of the choice men of the North Mississippi Conference, and invariably wins his way into the hearts of his parishioners.

Under date of March 2, Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Columbus (Miss.) District, writes as follows: "I have just returned from West Point, where the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference has been holding its annual session. It is the first time that I have attended an annual meeting of these workers for a number of years, but I understand that it is the largest gathering that they have ever had. At luncheon yesterday there were 183 out-of-town visitors registered. Many of the preachers were present. It was an inspiration to be there. Bishop McCoy gave the conference a most helpful sermon."

We have before us a folder announcing the subjects of the sermons that Dr. S. A. Steel, pastor of our First Church at Shreveport, La., will deliver during the month of March. Dr. Steel has certainly selected a series of live topics and we dare say that those who are so fortunate as to hear his discourses will be instructed and profited. This fine congregation numbers more than 1200 and has one of the largest and best organized Sunday schools in the connection. The folder says: "The pride of the school is the Junior Department, taught by Mrs. S. L. Williams. The beautiful room it occupies is elegantly fitted up and furnished, and the furnishing was a donation from Mr. C. W. Blair."

Rev. J. A. Wells, of Oak Ridge, Miss., writes: "Please let me say through your columns that the Lord is answering prayer. On Sunday, Feb. 25, we had a real revival service. Three sisters, aged 14, 12, and 11, joined the Church on profession with tears of penitence. There were few in the house who were not deeply touched when we read and expounded to them the vows of the Church. These were the first persons to unite with the Church since we have been on the work, and they came in the old-fashioned way—just the way we had been praying they would come. We still covet prayer for the greatly needed revival on the Oak Ridge charge."

EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN IN NEW ORLEANS.

On the recommendation of our Conference Board of Evangelism, the New Orleans District is using the month of March in an Evangelistic "One-To-Win-One" campaign. The campaign began with a "go-to-church Sunday." There was quite an increase in the attendance in the churches, both in the Sunday schools and at the preaching services. Personal Evangelism was the theme of all the services that day. A call was made for volunteers and more than 300 responded. With this large number of volunteer workers, we are expecting a rich harvest of souls and a large ingathering to the Church.

The Way One Church Is Working The Plan.

The church community has been divided into eight sections. It has an evangelistic committee of sixteen—two members of the committee to each section. The whole territory has been canvassed, house to house, with reference to securing places for prayer. A great number of homes have been opened for cottage prayer meetings—Catholic homes, Hebrew homes, all kinds of homes. Fifteen or more cottage prayer meetings are held every week. Every Monday night there is a special meeting of the volunteers for prayer. At this meeting reports of the work are given and the definite prayer lists are used. This meeting is called "The meeting for the Inner Circle." We have set as our goal, Five hundred for Christ and the Church by Easter. We ask the readers of the Advocate to pray for us.

EDUCATION DAY IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Louisiana Conference.

The attention of the pastors and Sunday school superintendents of the Louisiana Conference is called to the resolution passed by the recent session of the Conference on recommendation of the Sunday School Board, relative to the endowment of a chair of Sunday School Pedagogy in Southern Methodist University. The original $50,000 raised for this purpose has been equally divided between Emory and Southern Methodist Universities, on condition that an additional $35,000 be raised in each of these institutions. (See page 21 of the Louisiana Conference Annual, 1916.)

The second Sunday in March has been set apart to emphasize this work in the Sunday schools and churches, and to take an offering for this purpose. Let us do our part in this worthy cause. No better way to help your Sunday school could be devised that to give your pastor a thorough Sunday school training in his university course. Your future pastors will be trained in those institutions.

H. N. BROWN,
For the Sunday School Board.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

Dear Mr. Editor: Already forces are at work looking to the opening of the gates of the Mississippi Centennial Exposition on Sundays. Railroads, trolley lines, amusement companies, et al. will likely join the "liberals" of the coast section of the State in favor of a "wide-open Sunday." New Orleans and Mobile may be depended upon to do what they can to help them. Unless strong influences are brought to bear, the thing may be done. The Christians of Mississippi should register a vigorous protest.

At a church conference last Sunday morning, our First Church in Corinth unanimously requested the exposition management not to open the gates on Sunday. The conference also requested the Board of Supervisors to withhold the county's appropriation until assurance shall have been given that every feature of the exposition will be closed all day, every Sunday.

I think every other church in town will enter the same protest. I wish it might be done all over the State. The Christian people of the coast cannot handle this situation by themselves. Let us help them. J. E. CUNNINGHAM.

Corinth, Miss.

A SAD BEREAVEMENT.

Dear Brother Meek: Yesterday I was called to officiate at the funeral of little Willie May Evans, the four-year-old daughter of our brother, J. W. Evans, and his good wife, who has served for some years as supply in the Mississippi Conference. Brother Evans was forced to give up his work on account of the desperate condition of his little girl, who has suffered since October 1 with the worst form of organic heart trouble. On the recommendation of the physicians in Jackson, Miss., they brought their little one to Memphis where the very best medical and hospital service were secured, and every attention given, but all in vain. The parents are, of course, heart-broken over their bereavement, and I know they will have the prayers and sympathy of the brethren with whom he labored during former years.

All of Brother Evans' brothers live in Memphis. His own health is somewhat improved, and it is his present intention to connect himself with the Memphis Conference and continue his work in the ministry. He is living at 612 Marshall Street, where the letters of the brethren will be most grateful and comforting. H. M. ELLIS.

Memphis, Tenn.

MAKING HEADWAY.

Dear Dr. Meek: While Brother Lagrone was in New Orleans visiting his son and getting acquainted with his new granddaughter, it was my pleasure to fill his pulpit at Drew, Miss., and present the claims of Grenada College to the people of that splendid charge. In addition to what had previously been subscribed, I secured $1600, making the total contribution from Drew to Grenada College about $2400.

Brother Lagrone is in high favor with his people and he is doing a great work there. The people of Drew say that unquestionably they have the best preacher in the North Mississippi Conference. And I am quite sure that Brother Lagrone is serving one of the best charges in the Conference. They have one of the best church plants in the Conference, and they are devoutly religious and are genuinely loyal.

I leave to-morrow for Coahoma where I will be with Brother Stephens at Coahoma and Lyons on Feb. 25, and from there I will go to Tunica the first Sunday in March. The brethren throughout the Conference are giving me all the co-operation I could expect and I have had larger success in my work, up to the present time, than I had anticipated. And I have not a doubt now but that I will be able to report at our next Conference, as I have always done, "Everything IN FULL, Bishop." T. M. BROWNLEE.

CALLED HOME.

Miss Pauline Sheppard, daughter of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, a beloved superannuate of the Louisiana Annual Conference, died on Saturday, Feb. 24, 1917, at her father's residence in Mansfield, La., after a lingering illness of several months. Her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Mansfield on the following Sunday afternoon, and was attended by the bereaved members of the family and a large concourse of sorrowing friends.

Miss Pauline was a quiet, modest woman, an exemplary Christian, a devoted daughter, and a loyal Methodist. She was greatly beloved by her family and a host of friends. Although she was afflicted for several years, and was never robust in health, she was of a cheerful disposition. She will be greatly missed in her home and the community. We bespeak for Brother Sheppard and his family the deepest sympathy and heartfelt prayers of the Louisiana Methodists in this sad bereavement.

A FRIEND.

SPECIAL TO BRETHREN OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: A few months ago I accepted the presidency of the Mississippi Conference Training School at a time when several more remunerative positions were offered me. I came here because of the nature of the institution and because the trustees and some others assured me of their co-operation in developing my ideals. The trustees are seconding my efforts and I have reason to believe that I may continue to rely upon them.

As stated to the Annual Conference in December, I desire to increase the facilities here and develop the school into all that its name implies. I believe that all I have planned will be materialized. But I am taxed with much work, and just now other positions are being offered. One place now open to me is in a college where Mrs. Hunt and I can both have positions and where we could keep our children with us until their college courses are completed. Thoughtful minds will at once recognize the force of this. If I knew our proposed development here would be denied, I would feel it my duty to accept what is before me. I am of the opinion, however, that I can rely upon the brethren to help me make this a great and useful preparatory and training school, which will be a feeder to the higher institutions and a blessing to those who can not go to more expensive schools. Will the brethren please let me hear from them as speedily and definitely as possible? I see rare opportunities here and will stand by the Mississippi Conference Training School if the brethren will do likewise. What say the brethren? Faithfully.

Montrose, Miss. ROLFE HUNT.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI EFFICIENCY CONFERENCE.

The Committee appointed to arrange for the Efficiency Conference to be held at Grenada College is now making engagements for the best speakers at our command. We have agreed on June 5 to 8 inclusive, as the dates for the Conference. This is one week later than last year, but these dates will give the management of the College some time after the rush of Commencement to make arrangements for the entertainment of those who go to the Conference. Remember these dates, and if possible do not make engagements for service at this time. We hope to have every member of the North Mississippi Conference, and a large number of laymen to hear the great addresses we are preparing for.

The rates of entertainment will be the same as last year, $2.50 for the entire term. Full announcement of the program will be made as early as we can complete the engagements.

LADY TELLS SECRET.

A well known lady gives the following recipe for gray hair: To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

Turn Hair Dark With Sage Tea

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular, because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

It is not something we don't have that the Lord demands of us, but that we use what we have.—Rev. L. K. Smith.

HARRY LEE GREENE, the oldest son of J. L. and Stella Greene was born July 8, 1908, in Forest, Miss., and died January 17, 1917, in Morton, Miss. Though young, little Harry had tasted the bitter as well as the sweets of life. His mother, Stella (Watkins) Greene, one of Alabama's fairest and most motherly Methodist women, died nearly four years ago, leaving her husband and three children—Harry, Annie, and Cristie. The father being a traveling man, Harry spent a short while in the Orphans' Home in Jackson, Miss. Then he lived with his grandfather, J. B. Greene, of Morton, Miss., where he remained until the summons came—with a few hours' notice of extreme pain—calling him to come up higher. Harry was a studious child, and among his schoolmates and church-going chums he leaves many friends to join the Methodist father, sister, brother, and host of relatives in their sorrow. His body was buried near his mother's side at Pulaski, Miss. The funeral was conducted by Rev. B. Simmons, of Newton, Miss.

ANDREW J. BOYLES.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. MARGARET AMELIA HENDERSON, was born in Madison County, Miss., April 10, 1834, and died on January 20, 1917, at the ripe age of 83. Sister Henderson was a life-long Methodist, having joined the Church in early childhood. Like all true soldiers of the Cross, she fought the battles with faith and courage until the victory was won. The last years of her life she was a sufferer from rheumatism, but she bore her affliction with patience and fortitude; and notwithstanding the fact that she was a constant sufferer, she rarely ever missed a service at the house of her Lord. Many times have we been made stronger in faith and courage as we would behold "Grandma" Henderson with slow and uncertain step approaching the house of God. There was a chair reserved for her and when she failed to use it we knew it was not her fault. She had a smile and kind word for all. Her life's work has been finished, the fruits of which will for many years bring honor and glory to the Lord. "Grandma" Henderson has passed from the scene of life to a fairer world, where she has joined the companions and loved ones who had preceded her to the Celestial City. Her pastor,

Ethel, Miss. C. A. PARKS.

Mrs. FRANCES LAURETTA FRIERSON was born at Jackson, La., August 26, 1844, and when she was about 20 years old the family of her father moved to Amite, where she had ever since resided. She was married to Mr. W. G. Frierson on January 23, 1866, and to them were born 9 children—5 girls and 4 boys. She had been a member of the Methodist Church practically all her life. She was a faithful member and placed it first in all her considerations. She will be greatly missed. After 32 years of married life, a great sorrow came into her home in the death of her husband. She had much to do in the rearing of the family that she so dearly loved. She left to mourn their loss Mrs. A. G. Cook and H. M. Frierson, of Monroe, La., and Mrs. Duncan S. Kemp, A. G. Frierson, and C. G. Frierson of Amite. She also left three sisters and one brother: Mrs. M. K. Thomas, of New Orleans, Mrs. Lenora Forshag, of Little Rock, Ark., and Charles H. Eagan and Mrs. M. A. Feigler, of Ponchatoula. She has 12 grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Mrs. Frierson died on Feb. 25, 1917. The funeral service was held in the Methodist Church on Feb. 26, with the pastor officiating, and the interment was made in the Amite Cemetery.

ALONZO EARLY, Pastor.

Mrs. ANNIE LOUISA DENHAM, daughter of J. O. and Lucinda Edmonston, was born in 1872, near Hope Villa, La., and passed away on May 4, 1916. She was stricken with tuberculosis, which came as a thief in the night, and never loosened its brutal pangs until death claimed her as its victim. She was a member of the Jones Creek Baptist Church, where her honored father is a member of the Board of Deacons. Her mother preceded her to heaven twenty years ago. Among her last words were: "I'll meet my mother." She was a true Christian, and a devoted wife and mother. It was the pleasure of the writer to hold prayer in her home several times. She once held my hand between her bony fingers, and said I thank God that we still have a few men who will do His work. She loved the sweet songs of Zion and the read and preached Word. Heaven will be made sweeter by her having gone on before. Besides her husband, she leaves three sisters, four sons, and one small daughter. We mourn with her loved ones, but not as those without hope; for we believe she was met by the Christ she loved so well, and has placed her thin fingers in the prints of the nails in the hand of Him who said, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

A. R. SINGLETON.

Unto Rev. James McLennan and wife was born gentle Annie in November, 1844, in Port Gibson, Miss. Left motherless at three years of age, she was taken by her sturdy Scotch Methodist preacher father to a home in Scotland, where she spent several years. Returning to the United States for a while, she later again went to Scotland, where she remained until after the Civil War, during which time she finished her education. In May, 1872, she was married to Robert Paxton in Greenville, Miss., to whom she proved a devoted wife until his death in 1908. Christmas morning, 1916, she crossed the border-line of two worlds to be at home with God.

Thus briefly we have given a few incidents and dates in her earthly life, and we cannot forbear adding a tribute to her memory. Having been her pastor for two years, and at one time having lived in her home for a season, we knew her well, and we can testify that she was a Christian of the noblest type. She abounded in faith, love and good works; was devoted to her Lord and her loved ones; was pure in heart, fervent in spirit, thinking no evil, rejoicing in hope. She was a loving and a lovable character. Her husband and two children preceded her across the border-line; five children survive her. In her last years she was a great sufferer, but she bore her bodily pain and weakness in such sweet submission that her memory remains as precious ointment poured forth. She is not dead—simply gone to be with our Lord and to enjoy "life more abundant." May God bless and keep her sorrowing ones! J. W. CAMPBELL.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

From the Field

Eupora, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I want to say something about this splendid charge and people. They have received the pastor and his wife very cordially and have provided comfortable quarters for them in the new parsonage, which, when entirely finished, will rank among the best in the Conference. We have just paid our church debt, amounting to $1636, here at Eupora, and we expect to dedicate our church building some time this spring. Our people are very faithful to the Church and their pastor. Everything indicates a good year.—Thos. H. Mills, P. C.

Wiggins, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Rev. Dan E. Kelly, our Conference evangelist, has been with us for 20 days in a revival meeting and has done some very fine work here, although the weather was about the worst that we have had this winter and despite the fact that an epidemic of la grippe was raging at the time. Toward the last of the meeting, even the worst of the weather could not keep the people from coming. The church was very graciously revived, backsliders were reclaimed, and sinners were converted. Among those uniting with the Church were several families. The ages of those coming into the Church ranged from 8 years to 70, two old men of about the last mentioned age applying. We have received 42 members already, and there are others whom we are expecting to join. We have good reason to think that the total gain will amount to 50 persons. To God be all the praise!—James L. Seils, P. C.

Central Church, Columbus, Miss.

My Dear Dr. Meek: Yesterday, Sunday, Feb. 18, was indeed a red letter day with us at Central Church. At 9:30 o'clock a. m., I addressed the Methodist girls (which number 316) at the I. I. & C. College on the subject: "The Beginning of Methodism." Then, at 10 o'clock we were in the Sunday school, and at 11 o'clock we had preaching services with an overflowing congregation. At 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon we had one of the most helpful and far-reaching Epworth League meetings that I have been in for some time. More young men and women took part in this service than any League meeting that I have ever attended. The meeting was presided over by Brother Sam Ashmore, with a great deal of dignity and manifestation of ability for such work. Bro. Sam is a candidate for the ministry. In response to a former announcement of the fact that we would have a service for men alone at the 7 o'clock evening service, I was greeted by a house full of men anxiously awaiting to hear the message. The speaker held the undivided attention of several hundred men as he warned them against the snares and pitfalls of the devil here and there. At the close of the service a proposition was made to enter into a covenant with God to live a more consecrated Christian life and to render more assistance in the future toward the advancement of righteousness. This proposition was most enthusiastically responded to, and men went on their way rejoicing because they were shown the error of their way and had a remedy for their sins pointed out and made plain to them. This was one of the most enthusiastic meetings for men that I have ever held. Oh, how anxious I am to see men divorce themselves from sin and begin to live for God! It means so much for them and their posterity and the community in which they live. I wish I could go around the world and warn men and women of the wrath to come, and get them to see the horrors of sin and the beauty and loveliness of Jesus. Pray that we might have a great year here at Central Church. We are praying and planning for a great revival.—W. V. Shearer, P. C.

Distressing and dangerous complications may follow if you neglect it. Even when so serious a stage is reached, Eckman's Alterative may bring relief. For more than twenty years it has been widely used in such cases with beneficial results.

As with any medication employed in this trouble, the best results are obtained when the patient pays strict attention to diet and gets plenty of rest and fresh air.

Because of its easily assimilable content of calcium chlorid, this preparation is effective where a tonic upbuilder is indicated. As a corrective of nightsweats it has proved most useful. It may be tried with absolute safety, since it contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Thoroughly Reliable Kidney Medicine

After almost sixteen years of buying and selling Swamp-Root I believe it to be one of the best remedies on the market; and if it be taken according to directions it will cure nine of every ten cases of kidney, liver and bladder troubles. It is a remedy that has given universal satisfaction to its users and in not a single instance has it failed to accomplish results. My uncle after testing Swamp-Root reported that he had derived the best results from its use and my patrons have nothing but praise for the preparation. I have no hesitancy in recommending it to my customers because I believe it will do exactly what is claimed for it.

CLINTON, LA.

Dear Doctor Meek: We closed on last night one of the most remarkable revivals that was ever held in Clinton. Rev. H. T. Young, of Jena, Conference evangelist, did the preaching, and Jack Brokaw, of Bunkie, La., led the singing, which is a sufficient guarantee of itself that both were well done. In spite of the fact that we were handicapped from the very first service by bad weather and sickness, we had splendid results. There were at least 100 conversions and reclamations, and 12 accessions to the Church, with more to follow. There was scarcely a family in Clinton that did not have from one to four cases of la grippe during the time of the meeting—especially was this so with the Methodist homes. Even the writer and his entire family were in bed for several days during the meeting, which lasted two weeks. Brothers Young and Brokaw are a splendid team, and any of the brethren would be fortunate in securing their services. Brother Young is a strong, spiritual preacher, and I am sure that the Conference made no mistake in putting him in the field as Conference evangelist. We ask the earnest prayers of the Advocate and its readers, that the revival flame that has been kindled in Clinton may continue to burn.—A. J. Coburn, Pastor.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

This is the day when nations and municipalities are devsing old age pensions for public servants. Recently great stress has been laid on making generous provision for the aged minister. No plan has been found so sure and satisfactory as a policy of endowment to mature at age 65 with a life income as one settlement option. This provides protection during one's active ministry and matures when salary fails to meet the minister's needs. This is the safest supplement for any other plan to meet the needs of old age. Such a policy is issued by the Methodist Ministers Relief Insurance and Trust Association of Boston, Mass.—Adv.

SHILOH CHARGE, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: As we have not heard anything from the Shiloh work, I thought I would write a few lines. The parsonage has been moved from Shiloh to Johns. We are still in the midst of good people, who are mindful of the preacher's needs. They have brought us quite a lot of good things to eat, and have shown us that they are in every way a noble people. I have completed my second round, on which I found good congregations and excellent people at all the appointments. On Feburary 9, Rev. W. L. Linfield, our presiding elder, drove from Pelahatchie to Shiloh to hold our first quarterly conference. Brother Linfield preached an unusually good sermon. He is very popular among all the people of all denominations. Then, there were set before us all kinds of good things to eat, evidencing that there are good cooks at Shiloh, and we were well qualified for the occasion. After dinner the quarterly Conference was held. It was one of the best we ever attended. We are trying to get our people to take the Advocate and stay closer to the Cross and to love the Lord more this year than ever before. —C. H. Strait.

Constipation

You are apt to think lightly of a slight case of constipation. Did you know that constipation is incipient auto-intoxication or self-poisoning? You cannot be too careful, for constipation without treatment is liable to become the source of far more serious ills. To be entirely healthy and have a clean body, it is necessary to keep the bowels clean and the liver active. When constipated, take Van Lax, for it is the ideal treatment for constipation. Contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. Does not gripe or nauseate. It is pleasant in taste and results. Sold everywhere by the best dealers. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Dr. Meek: In looking through the Journal of the Mississippi Conference for the year 1916, I notice the following errors in the statistics for Canton Station, for which either the printers or the statistical secretaries are responsible, as the duplicate reports in my possession give the items correctly. In Table No. 1 the total membership reported is 315, when it should be 385. In Table No. 3, $112 is reported as the assessment for Home and Conference Missions, when it should read $120.

Yours fraternally,

MT. PLEASANT, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please allow me to say that the Mt. Pleasant charge, so far as we have had opportunity to observe, is the most delightful little work in the Conference. I am sure, too, that those who have been so highly favored in bygone years as to be in the pastorate here, will bear me out in this statement. Situated between the Frisco Railroad on the south, and the Tennessee line on the north, it embraces so God-favored a land that neither the boll weevil ravages, nor the disastrous floods which wrought such havoc to the crops in many portions of the country, were even felt here. The crops of corn, cotton, and hay were the best, so I am informed, grown in some years. But this is not all by any means. Some of the Lord's most worthy servants, who have wrought so well in the past and who are still on the firing line, standing in the front ranks with those who are ready to charge the enemy of souls when the Great Commander gives the order, live and labor in this favored charge. We were very kindly received here, and have had many tokens of appreciation since our arrival. The many kindnesses shown us have already so endeared these good people to our hearts, that if, in the providence of Him who rules on high, we should have no other such pleasures, we could never forget them. Then, too, these tokens inspire a care-worn and hard-worked pastor to put forth every effort to further the cause of the Master, knowing that there are so many willing hands to help him. We are making a very good beginning, so far as material things go. The good ladies have been very busy and have added some very much needed furniture to the parsonage, and have funds ready to buy still other things which are needed. Our Sunday school work is not what we should like it to be, but there is a fine prospect for better things when the spring comes on. We find some choice young people here who give promise for the future. We find the charge in good shape to make a forward movement along substantial lines as a result of the work done by our worthy predecessor, Brother W. S. Selman. He left many friends here and we predict for him a great year on his new charge. Our first quarterly conference was a great success. The district work is in good shape, and from every part comes echoes of an onward movement. But nothing less could be looked for under the very efficient leadership of our wide-awake presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Felts.—M. A. Burns, P. C.

Glass of Salts Cleans Kidneys

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Sure! High Heels Cause Corns But Who Cares Now

Because style decrees that women crowd and buckle up their tender toes in high heel footwear they suffer from corns, then they cut and trim at these painful pests which merely makes the corn grow hard. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw and women are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called freezone applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain. Ask the drug store man for a quarter of an ounce of freezone, which costs very little, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is an ether compound and dries in a moment and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Clip this out and pin on your wife's dresser.

A Godsend to Rheumatics.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood. The cause of rheumatism is uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of your rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Renagh, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

LAMAR, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: While others are reporting in the Advocate concerning their respective charges, we think it is due our people of the Lamar charge at least to tell of some of the many good things that they have done for their preacher and his family and for the cause which they represent. The day after our family reached here after Conference, our Harris' Chapel people, near Michigan City, sent us a two-horse load of fine hay and an abundant supply of nearly every kind of canned goods, fancy groceries, fresh meat, sweet potatoes, chickens, etc. Lamar also gave us a substantial "pounding." And on Christmas, these same communities, with others, gave us another great shower of presents, which were palatable and otherwise substantial. And recently the ladies of Sylvestria Church, near Hudsonville, have completely refurnished one room of the parsonage at a cost of nearly $100. And others, headed by the ladies of Harris' Chapel, have added greatly to the comfort and appearance of the rest of the house by covering floors and doing other necessary re-furnishing. Also, the trustees of the parsonage property have met and decided to make some substantial repairs and improvements upon the parsonage and its premises. We understand that the material for the same has been purchased and that the work will soon be started. And all of this has been done without the solicitation of the pastor. Hence, the people, and not the pastor, are due the credit. We also hope to build a new church at one of our appointments during the year. Our charge has done a nice part by the Orphans' Home and the Hospital. We have one of the best Sunday schools, though not the largest, that we have ever known. We are planning for early collections and a revival of religion at every church and in every home in the charge.—T. H. Porter, P. C.

PEPSIN NUX IRON and

Sarsaparilla—Fine Course of Medicine.

Physicians and pharmacists have long known the desirability and difficulty of combining iron—a superlative tonic—in a blood-purifying medicine.

The combination of the iron with Hood's Sarsaparilla has now been secured through the happy thought of prescribing Peptiron Pills in connection with the Sarsaparilla—the latter before eating, Peptiron Pills after.

In this way the two medicines work harmoniously, giving four-fold results in blood-cleansing and up-building.

Peptiron Pills include pepsin and iron,—note the name, Peptiron Pills,—nux vomica, manganese, other tonics, digestives and laxatives.

What better course of medicine can you imagine for this season? You get blood-purifying, appetite-giving, liver-stimulating qualities in Hood's Sarsaparilla and great strength makers in Peptiron Pills. Buy these medicines today. They also combine economy with merit.

Freckles

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho peels off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking, and, of course, has no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

"Whatever love undertakes to do it does well."

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast, and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

Keep the Skin Healthy.

Skin diseases, such as eczema, salt rheum, pimples, etc., are common in the South. Tetterine Salve is a godsend to the Southern people. It promptly corrects all skin troubles and keeps the skin in a healthy condition. It is fragrant and soothing to the skin. Buy a box and keep it handy. 50c a box. L. M. LIPSCOMB, P. E.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauscated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

"Keep your temper; no one else has any use for it."

STOP THAT PAIN!

The few misguided people who argue against the relief of pain as a first step in treatment, either have never suffered from any pain themselves or else they do not know what they are talking about.

It is all right to realize that pain may be the danger signal for some more serious complaint and it is well to look deep into the reason for pain, but the first step is to gain as speedy relief as possible in a safe way.

Pain is the greatest ally that disease has. Pain is the artillery, it batters down the nervous defenses of the body so that disease can safely take hold of the body.

But not only does pain do physical harm to the body, but it also does moral harm which may be tremendously far-reaching in its effects.

The nagging effect of pain is such that it will change the disposition of a person to such an extent that they will become a burden to themselves and to everybody else. The person who has normally the sweetest temper may be readily turned into an irritable crank by a succession of unrelieved headaches or pains.

Stop that pain by using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills according to directions. They are effective, safe and harmless. They can be purchased at any drug store, and the druggist is always willing to return the purchase price if the pills fail to relieve pain. You are the judge yourself. It will cost you nothing to try.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

The Boils Of Lazarus

were eased by the dogs who licked the infected places, but they were not cured. Many modern people employ the same method in their treatment of boils, pimples, rashes, carbuncles, eczema and other skin diseases. They apply a salve or lotion to the sore places and fondly imagine they have cured them. The important fact which they fail to recognize is, that these skin diseases are diseases of the blood, and that no external treatment can permanently cure them, because they are essentially internal ailments. S. S. S. is the only proper remedy for this breaking out of the skin, because it acts upon the blood, cleansing and revitalizing it, and removing the cause of infection. It should be borne in mind that S. S. S. is purely vegetable, made from native roots, herbs and barks, and that it contains no habit-forming drugs or other injurious ingredients. Obtain a bottle of S. S. S. from your druggist and if you need the advice of a physician, write to the Medical Department, Swift Specific Co., 301 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga.

COUNTING OURSELVES IN.

The story is told in an old Tanril book of twelve Brahmans on a pilgrimage, who, while crossing a stream, escaped with great difficulty. Uncertain if all were alive, one of the pilgrims counted his companions: "Ondru, rendu, mundru, nalu, ainthu, aru, eru, ettu, onpathu, pathu, pathinondru!" this giving the numerals from one to eleven. "Alas, there are but eleven of us; and one of us must be drowned."

But who was missing? All responded to their names. A second pilgrim ranged his comrades in line, and counted. The result was the same. There were only eleven men; and yet they were certain that no one was missing.

"Let me count!" said a third Brahman. When he had finished he declared that somebody was dead. Much puzzled, the men agreed to consult a hermit who lived near.

The hermit asked them to stand in a row while she counted: "Ondru, rendu, mundru, nalu, ainthu, aru, eru, ettu, onpathu, pathu, pathinondru, panirendu!" "Why, there are twelve of you!" she said. "It is all right."

It was not an easy matter to convince them, but they finally admitted their error when they found that each one of them had forgotten to count himself.

The late Jacob Chamberlain, in telling the story, in "The Kingdom in India," asked: "Do we not, fellow Christians, too often fall into this very Brahman dullness, and in God's work each fail to count himself or herself? If there is real work to be done for Christ and the Church, are we not prone diligently and repeatedly to count all the others, and perhaps unconsciously neglect to count ourselves?"

The commission of the Master is, "Ye shall be my witnesses." We hear, but are so apt to interpret the message as applying to any one, every one, but ourselves. How many Christians, thus leaving themselves out of the count, take no part in the God-given work of seeking the lost? What of our opportunities to witness for Christ to those we meet in the home, in business, or when we are seeking our pleasure? Since God says, "Ye," let us be careful to count ourselves in, that we, too, may have a part in bringing the answer to our own prayer, "Thy kingdom come."—Rev. John T. Faris, D.D.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The seventh annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held at First Church, New Orleans, La., April 12-20, 1917.

SUE BENNETT SCHOOL, LONDON, KY.

This school was established in 1897. Prof. J. C. Lewis was elected first principal, which position he has filled ever since until the past year, when, by the action of the Council, he was voted a year's leave of absence, during which time the management of the school has been placed in the hands of Rev. J. E. Savage, pastor of the church, who has been appointed principal, and Mrs. Katherine Jackson French, Ph. D. (Columbia University), dean.

The school plan consists of an administration building, a girls' dormitory, which is a splendid four-story brick and concrete building, with a ground-floor basement, kitchen and dining room, laundry, cold storage, furnace rooms, etc.; a three-story boys' hall; six cottages, a music hall, a manual training hall, pump station, and principal's residence. The total valuation of the property is $85,000. There is also a farm owned by the school worth approximately $4000, which furnishes food products, milk, and butter for the dining room.

School Work.

Every grade is taught, from the first through the high school, which comprises four years of complete work and gives a pupil advanced standing, the school being accredited. Besides this we have departments of instrumental and vocal music and normal, agricultural, model, commercial, manual training, and domestic science departments.

Industrial Work.

The school is conducted on as economical a basis as possible, constant care being paid to the fact that it is the Lord's money which we are expending. As far as expedient, work is given to students to help them earn their way. Would that we were able to furnish a work scholarship to every boy or girl that applies!

Religious Instruction.

Two chapel services weekly, the Wednesday night prayer meeting, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., besides special meetings, have been instrumental in the salvation of a number of the students. The revival meetings held by Revs. Moore and Tillman wielded a strong influence for good, and many of the students were happily converted.

Boarding Department.

By the co-operative plan students secure board, and room rent, fuel, and lights for the small sum of $7.50 per month. Many of them pay their board with produce which they bring from home. And the board which we are able to give is equal to that in many high-priced schools.

General Effect of the School.

Sue Bennett has made an unusual record with its graduates. Up to the present one hundred per cent of its graduates have made good," and the general effect on the adjoining counties has been very helpful. A man said recently that this school had done more than any other single agency to encourage improved economic and social conditions in this section of the State. Our pupils return home to teach the things they learn here, and the leaven is thus spreading gradually throughout the whole section.

The school is growing. During the fall term there was an increased enrollment of twenty-five over the fall term last year. The school is at present almost full, and we shall probably be obliged to make outside arrangements for the teachers who come to us for the special ten weeks' spring term.

Our moving picture machine has been of great benefit to the school, helping very much in the educational work of the institution. The machine was purchased by the Woman's Missionary Society of this State at a cost of $150.

We have been able to realize a power plant and are still praying that God may open the heart of some big brother laymen for this as well as for a chapel. By cutting out the partition and putting in folding doors between two classrooms, we are able to accommodate the whole school for chapel exercises, but it does not give that deep religious influence that a real chapel would. We need the prayers of our friends, and let us pray together that God's blessing may be upon us and upon those who make it possible for us to do this work in his name.—From Sixth Annual Report of Woman's Missionary Council.

Backache

In spite of the best care one takes of oneself, any part of the human machine is liable to become out of order. The most important organs are the stomach, heart and kidneys.

The kidneys are the scavengers and they work day and night in separating the poisons from the blood. Their signals of distress are easily recognized and include such symptoms as backache, depressions, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic twinges, dropsy, gout.

"The very best way to restore the kidneys to their normal state of health," says Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., "is to drink plenty of pure water and obtain from your favorite pharmacy a small amount of Anuric, which is dispensed by almost every druggist." Anuric is inexpensive and should be taken before meals. You will find Anuric more potent than lithia, dissolves uric acid as water does sugar.

BANISHED — pimples, blotches, sores, humors, and eruptions, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For a poor complexion, and for the poor blood that causes it, this is the best of all known remedies.

In every disease or disorder of the skin or scalp, in every trouble that comes from impure blood, the "Discovery" is the only medicine sold that does what it promises.

Scrofula in all its various forms, Eczema, Tetter, Salt-rheum, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Enlarged Glands, and Swellings, and every kindred ailment, are benefited and cured by it.

Cut this out and mail to us with the name of the paper—we will mail you free a medical treatise on above diseases. Address Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. Mother Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All The Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off than You are and Now She Looks Just Fine.

NUXATED IRON WILL INCREASE THE STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE OF WEAK, NERVOUS, CAREWORN, HAGGARD LOOKING WOMEN 200 PER CENT. IN TWO WEEKS' TIME IN MANY INSTANCES.

THE CHILD'S APPEAL

"There can be no Beautiful, Healthy Rosy Cheeked women without Iron."

F. KING, M. D.

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and author. "In my recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—nuxated iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, bloodless women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks."

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars table syrups, candies, polished rice white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago farina, degerminated cornmeal no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor as a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would add salt when your food has no seasoning. As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away habit forming drugs and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of people might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, stripped consumption, kidney, liver, heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in the blood.

On account of the peculiar nature of woman and the great drain placed upon her system at certain periods, she requires iron much more than man to help make up for the loss.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles, in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate, or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York physician and author, tells physicians that they should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their patients—Says anaemia—iron deficiency—is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.—Sounds warning against use of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach and do far more harm than good. Advises use of only nuxated iron.

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood—beautiful healthy rosy cheeked women full of Life, Vim and Vitality

Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe aggravated conditions with unfailing results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength builder.

Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

Dr. Howard James, late of the United States Public Health Service, said, I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But so many American women suffer from iron deficiency with its attendant ills—physical weakness, nervous irritability, melancholy, indigestion, flabby, sagging muscles, etc.—and in consequence of their weakened run-down condition they are so liable to contract serious and even fatal diseases that I deem it my duty to advise all such to take Nuxated Iron. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine or secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older forms of organic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach, on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $50.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

THE CHURCH'S GREATEST WORK.

To say that the work of soul-saving is the chief business of the Church is but to utter a generally conceded truism. Yet this fact is one that could hardly be too much stressed. Other kinds of work are so much easier of accomplishment that there is a very strong temptation to expend our energies in them. To do this, is to turn aside from our noblest opportunities and engage in inferior forms of service. No matter what else a Christian minister may be able to do, if he is not effective in leading the lost to Christ and building them up in Him, he is not in the best sense magnifying his high calling.

But the task of soul-saving is not the preacher's alone. It is the duty and privilege of every disciple of Jesus both to aid in rescuing the perishing and in the perfecting of the saints. And in proportion as the membership of the Church enters actively into this work, is it successfully executed. One of the most striking things about the first Christians is that all seemed to have a passion to tell of the risen Lord and bring others into the Kingdom. We need more of that spirit in this day. Indeed, no pastor who does not succeed in imbuing his people with it can hope to succeed largely.

We desire to offer, in this connection, two or three reflections concerning the matter of securing a revival.

1. Do not get the idea that a revival can be ushered in by manipulation. To be sure, the right kind of effort may help to bring it—it needs to be prepared for; but it is more to be prayed down than worked up. In the rush of these busy times, when there are so many activities and so much planning about methods, are we not too much disposed to neglect united prayer? Is not our praying too much of the hurried and superficial kind? We fear so. It takes time to really pray. There must be a getting apart, quiet hours, a tarrying at Jerusalem.

2. Soul-saving is a work for the spiritual. No man should presume to undertake it until he himself is right with God. The best place for a revival to begin is in one's own heart.

3. The leadership of the Holy Spirit should be secured. No human being, unaided by Divine power, is sufficient for this thing. To undertake it in one's own strength is to fail. As the Holy Ghost sent Peter to Cornelius and Ananias to Paul, preparing each for the other, so will he do with people in this day, if only his guidance is faithfully and rightly sought. Oh, that we might learn to hear and heed His blessed voice as he seeks to impart to us His messages!

A BEAUTIFUL INCIDENT.

That is a beautiful incident in the life of the late Bishop John C. Granbery that Dr. W. F. McMurry has lately written up for the Church press. While visiting in the West, the Bishop was announced to preach on the Sabbath day, and a stranger from the South, attracted by the announcement, found his way to the house of worship and heard the discourse. The message reached his heart and led to his conversion. In the story, as related, there is no indication that Bishop Granbery ever knew that he had that day been instrumental in saving this gentleman. Now, long after the ascension of the good Bishop to the Father's house, he has given, as an expression of his appreciation for the blessing that he received on that occasion, $10,000 to the Loan Fund of our Church Extension Board, the interest on which is to go every year to Granbery College, Brazil, an institution named for his translated spiritual benefactor. This same man has also given $50,000 to the Church Extension Loan Fund, with the understanding that the annual interest is to be applied to the support of the superannuates of the Louisiana Conference.

Truly, Bishop Granbery did a great work on that Sabbath. The fact is, when a preacher faithfully lifts up Christ from the pulpit he can never be sure as to the results this side of the Judgment. As Frederick W. Robertson says in his great sermon on "Religious Despondency," "There is good done of which we can never predicate the when or where." Possibly the surprises of this kind that will come in the Glory Land to saints who went to their graves disappointed because of the seemingly meager fruitfulness of their labors will constitute no small part of their happiness, as they mingle with the innumerable company of the redeemed.

DR. JOWETT MAY RETURN TO ENGLAND.

The Church News Association (New York) reports that it is generally predicted that Dr. J. H. Jowett, now pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, will accept the pastorate of Westminster Chapel, London, which is said to be the greatest Presbyterian Church in England, having attached to it various extension schools. It is said that the preacher who occupies the pulpit of this congregation, "if a really great man, talks in a sense not only to all England and Scotland, but also to the entire English-speaking world and to many countries speaking other tongues."

An official of the Fifth Avenue Church (New York), who is declared to be informed as to existing conditions and Dr. Jowett's feelings, is quoted as having recently made the following statement:

"Under Dr. Jowett's pastorate, Fifth Avenue Church has seen its greatest years, and those years have been ones in which it was asked oftenest what is the matter with New York churches? Not in Dr. John Hall's or any other day have congregations been larger or have financial receipts been so great. Yet the lot of the famous foreign-born preacher in America is rarely a happy one. Dr. Jowett receives $18,000 a year, perhaps the largest pulpit stipend in the world, and probably three times the sum he will get in London if he goes there. But Dr. Jowett's heart is in England. He is English in thought and action. Almost at once he will have the problem of getting to England for the summer. Can he do it? He will if he can.

"But Fifth Avenue Church is not growing in membership, and Dr. Jowett has expressed keen disappointment because it is not. This he has done within a few months. Crowds attend, but they are from other churches, and strangers and visitors. A few old members give most of the large sums of money reported. Conditions in New York are such, and Dr. Jowett's inclinations are of such a type that he cannot extend Fifth Avenue's work in America as Dr. Morgan did Westminster's work in England. The fate of the Fifth Avenue Church will be problematical if Dr. Jowett is lost to America, but we fear the worst. It is an important matter for Protestants of all America."

IS THIS PROPHECY TO BE FULFILLED?

A distinguished and widely known citizen of the South, who has won large reputation as a thinker, writer, and public speaker, and who has been very influential in shaping legislation dealing with the race problem in his State, in commending our position concerning the question of Methodist unification, adds the following thought-provoking words:

"I said, thirty years ago, that if racial lines in the South were ever verged to the point of contact socially and politically, it would come through the Churches."

A SCIENTIST'S VIEW OF PRAYER.

The following statement from Professor Dawson, the Canadian naturalist, is worth passing on at this time when so many are disposed to restrict the influence of prayer: "A naturalist should be the last man in the world to reject the efficacy of prayer, since prayer is one of the most potent of natural forces. The cry of the young raven brings its food from afar without any exertion on its part, for that cry has power to move the emotion and muscles of the parent bird, and to overcome her own selfish appetite. The bleat of the lamb not only brings its dam to its side, but causes the secretion of milk in the udder. The cry of distress nerves men to all exertions, and to brave all dangers, and to struggle against all or any of the laws of nature that may be causing suffering or death (to others). * * * Are we, then, to suppose that the only Being in the universe who cannot answer prayer is that One who alone has all power at his command? The weak theology which professes to believe that prayer has merely a subjective benefit is infinitely less scientific than the action of the child who confidently appeals to a Father in Heaven."

SOUND TEACHING IMPORTANT.

The QUALITY of the religious teaching done is a thing of vast importance. There is too much of a tendency in this day to regard one Church as good as another and all kinds of preaching as equally valuable. The doctrines of Methodism have been her chief glory, and well may we beware of those who would have us regard them lightly.

THE WORST DEFORMITIES.

(Dudley A. Reid, editor of The Missouri Democrat, having been bantered by an editor of a competing paper because he was a cripple, wrote and published this poem in answer.)

Oh, what does it take to make man complete
From the crown of his head to the soles of his feet,
With naught to subtract, and nothing to add,
A man not too good, and a man not too bad?

Is a man but an arm, a leg and a boot—
An eye and an ear, and a tongue and a throat?
Is there nothing more in him to extol?
A brain—or a heart—or a conscience—or soul?

Is the hunchback, the deaf, the mute and the blind
The only unfortunate the frail world can find?
Is there no petrified heart? No brain out of plumb?
No conscience deep-seared and withered and dumb?

Is the miserable gristle in place of a spine,
The shrunken ideal, the hope out of line,
The twisted desire, the wish-washy will,
No cause to suspect the makeup is ill?

Is there no vision to look through the skin
And see the deep voids that may lie within?
The crack on the inside, where the outside is whole?
The warp in the heart, and the limp in the soul?

SIN THE ONLY REAL CALAMITY.

The reason the atonement of Christ was sufficient is that everything was accomplished for the divine government that would have been, had the penalty been inflicted. The sinner is saved if he will enter into God's love as it is offered in his Son. This is the heart of the Gospel. The only calamity is sin. If you are ready to go, there is no calamity in trial or affliction or death. God is not so much concerned about what you have, as about what you are.—Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston.

THE HARDEST TASK.

"People who live only to amuse themselves work harder at the task than those who earn a living." This is as true as when Hannah Moore wrote it. There was never a generation that worked so hard to amuse themselves as this one, and, to judge by their restlessness, their nervousness, their rushing around in pursuit of a new excitement, there was never one which failed more utterly. One of the greatest mistakes made in this day is trying to give men pleasure with their work instead of giving them pleasure in their work. And there is no greater pleasure than to feel that you have done something worth doing and have done it well.—Western Recorder.

THE PRAYER MEETING.

By Malcolm James MacLeod, D.D.

The prayer meeting is one of the vexing problems of the minister's life. Hardly a pastor to-day but is more or less anxious and disturbed over his mid-week service. Some have given up the fight in sheer despair. And yet it would seem as if there never was a louder call for it, never a time when the Church as an organization could so ill afford to dispense with this family gathering; and never a time when the individual members of the Church so needed an hour in the feverish hurly-hurly of the busy week to come apart into a quiet place and commune awhile.

Now it must be confessed that the prayer meeting is not only not a popular place to which to go, but there is grave doubt if it ever can be made such without abusing its purpose. It is a place after all for the select inner circle and for those who desire to delve deeper into the things of God. It is a place for the men and women who believe profoundly in prayer as the final dynamic of the Church's work. But in every live church there ought surely to be enough of such people to make a respectable gathering on Wednesday evenings.—Christian Intelligencer.

After your death you had better have a bad epitaph than an ill report while you lived.—Shakespeare.

THE PERIL PERCEIVED.

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

The country is at last beginning to awake to the peril to the education of the nation which is involved in the Rockefeller and Carnegie Boards. It is to be hoped the awakening of the people to this menace is not too late.

In the early part of the year 1909, I printed in the Atlanta Journal a series of articles pointing out the dangers which threatened us from the plans and purposes of the Rockefeller Board, commonly known as "The General Board of Education." At that time some good people thought I was unduly alarmed, and that my criticism of the Rockefeller Board was not well founded. But many now perceive that my fears were not groundless, and that my conclusions were amply justified by the facts.

At the meeting of the National Educational Association held in St. Paul, Minnesota, in the year 1914, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we view with alarm the activity of the Carnegie and Rockefeller foundations, agencies not in any way responsible to the people, in their efforts to control the policies of our State educational institutions; to fashion them after their own conceptions; to standardize our courses of study; and to surround the institutions with conditions which menace true academic freedom and defeat the primary purpose inviolable in our common schools, normal schools, and universities."

Recently the subject has been brought forward in the Senate of the United States. On Feb. 8, when the bill making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, was under discussion, Senator W. S. Kenyon, of Iowa, offered the following amendment, which was adopted by the Senate:

"Provided, That no part of the appropriation made by this act, whether for salaries or expenses of any other purpose connected therewith, shall be used in connection with any money contributed, or tendered, by the General Education Board, or any corporation, or other organization or individual in any way associated with it, either directly or indirectly, or contributed or tendered by any corporation or individual other than such as may be contributed by the State, county, or municipal agencies; nor shall the Department of Agriculture receive any moneys for salaries or any other purpose from the General Education Board, or any corporate or other organization or individual in any way associated with it, either directly or indirectly, or contributed or tendered by a corporation or individual other than such as may be contributed by State, county, or municipal agencies, except by act of Congress authorizing the same. Nor shall any person paid in whole or in part by any such corporation for services rendered by him be employed by the Government or become or remain an officer of the Government. Any person violating any or either of the terms of this provision shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $1000, or by imprisonment as the court may determine."

Pending the consideration of the amendment, Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon exposed the improper connection of these Boards with the activities and operations of the General Government, and had printed in the Record all my articles which the Journal published eight years ago.

Senator Chamberlain put into the Record also a strong letter from President J. W. Crabtree, of the State Normal School of Wisconsin. In the course of his letter, President Crabtree used the following language:

"Many educators throughout the country are of the opinion that these foundations have a good deal to do with the naming of university presidents and with the naming of men for some other very important places. Were I to desire a university presidency, or were I to desire a promotion to a better position than I now hold, I am firmly of the opinion that I would greatly enhance my chances of such position or promotion by getting the foundation interests behind me. And boards of regents are helpless in this matter. Should the regents ask the president of Columbia University, or the president of any one of four or five other great leading institutions supported by predatory wealth, to recommend a president, some man would certainly be named for the place entirely satisfactory to the foundations. Should the regents ask any one of several of the presidents of certain of our leading State Universities, the name first suggested would very likely be entirely satisfactory, at least that is the way many of us educators believe this matter works. The President of the Ohio University and a very few others are bitterly opposed to foundation plans and policies.

"If it is true that these foundations are making conscious effort to control public school ideals, as you believe, and if it is true, as I believe, that, in their giving pensions, giving men jobs in surveys, aiding men in securing desirable promotions, and in giving others help and preferment, they are doing these things simply to increase their prestige, and to give them recognition which will enable them to outline and direct everything fundamental in public school affairs, this Senate action is a most fortunate deliverance for our cherished democracy in education. I do not believe our Government can afford to go into partnership with Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Rockefeller, or still worse, with their paid agents, on a thing so vital as that of shaping the school policies of our country.

"In regard to the free foundation surveys throughout the country, the fact that funds are provided by the predatory interests through these foundations naturally arouses suspicion. What do we give the predatory interests in return?—is a fair question. Possibly more of a share in shaping our educational policies than we are aware of. It is certainly an easy matter in conducting a survey to find a fact basis for all conclusions previously decided upon and to substantiate nothing which is not in absolute harmony with the standards and ideals of the paid officers of the foundations. Perhaps the chief reason the Carnegie foundation is repudiating its pension is because the survey club accomplished more rapid and certain results than the pension club.

"There are two kinds of government—the one handed down from above, and the other coming through the people. Corresponding to these two theories in government are two policies in education. The one which is handed from above is plutocracy in education, and the other is democracy in education. It stands to reason that a foundation leadership would develop plutocracy in education rather than democracy in education.

"I have wondered whether this drastic resolution of the Senate was not hastened by the announcement in the press of the beginning of a great movement under the auspices of the foundations and financed by them, to revolutionize elementary and secondary education in America. I have also wondered whether the action taken by the Federal Government will not interfere seriously with foundation plans of surveying State normal and other teacher-training schools of the country. The fact that the Senate looks upon this gratuitous surveying and other work of the foundations as a most serious menace to democracy in education in our public schools, will doubtless make it embarrassing for any State superintendent, State board of education, or even city board of education to make use of foundation men or foundation money for these surveys of teacher-training schools or of the teacher's work in the public schools. In other words, this action of the Senate would seem to be far-reaching in its effect.

"It is expected that friends of the foundation will attempt to secure the passage of a resolution at the February meeting of the department of superintendence at Kansas City requesting the United States Senate to reconsider its action, so as to enhance the interests of education by the use of the foundations' millions. It is not believed, however, that any such resolution will pass. The pension club can hardly be used on the membership of this particular department. We do not admit that educators are purchasable, but if the foundations do expect those who have directly or indirectly received pay from them to stand for this resolution, what about those who have not received pay? If they expect help from men who have secured promotions through their aid, what about the larger number of men who have not received special favors from them? I think the department might very properly request Congress to make larger appropriations for the bureau of education.

"It seems to me that the Senate, having cut the connection higher up, educators might render a valuable service by standing in the way of connections being formed between the foundations and school authorities lower down. I firmly believe this will be done."

President Crabtree is entirely right. Governmental connection with these foundations ought to be severed all along the line.

In the universities of a number of Southern States there are engaged men who are called "Professors of Secondary Education," and who are paid by the Rockefeller Board. As I understand, these professors do not teach, but in some way they classify, "standardize," and corral the high schools of the commonwealths in which they are engaged. If such officers are needed in the institutions of these States they ought to be paid by the State Governments and entirely separated from these Boards. If the General Government sees danger in having the agents of these Boards connected with its operations, the State governments may, with far greater reason, fear any such connection with State institutions.

In the course of the debate in the Senate on Feb. 8, Senator Chamberlain put in the Record a vigorous editorial from the New York Times. Under the caption, "Radical and Dangerous," the Times said:

"The Central Education Board announces that it will give its support to 'an experiment in the education of youth in this country which, if successful, will mean practically the complete modernization of elementary and secondary schools.' The Teachers' College of Columbia University is to be made the experiment station for carrying out the plan. It is an undertaking to which educators, universities, colleges, and all who are interested in the training of youth should at once give their most serious attention, because, in the first place, theories which the experimenters hope to apply to the educational system of the country are radical and subversive of a very great part of what we hold to be sound and worthy in our present system of training, and for a second reason, because there is marshaled in support of this experiment and these theories the incalculable force of the $30,000,000 controlled by the General Education Board. The experiment will be carried through, said a member of the board, 'whatever it costs.' Therein, we think, lies a visible peril to the educational interests of the country."

The Editor of the New York Times is right. This proposal is both radical and dangerous, and the wider and ulterior purpose which is obviously back of it is still more perilous.

The editorial of the Times closed with the following paragraphs, which everyone who is patriotically concerned for education in our country will consider most seriously:

"There is a vast compelling force in $35,000,000 Without exception colleges need money. If a college makes bold to hint to those charged with the disbursement of the General Board's funds that it could make good use of, say $200,000, conceivably the board might reply that if the college would consent to make some changes in its curriculum, if it would discontinue certain effete branches and show greater kindness for the theories of the modern school, the matter might be considered. Faculties might resist, but trustees, possibly, would be inclined to yield. At any rate, the danger is actual, present, it seems to us to be very great.

"Where does the General Education Board get its authority to impose its views as to courses of study upon the teaching body of primary, secondary, or higher educational institutions? Where is its authority to enter upon experiments which if successful, will mean practically the complete modernization of elementary and secondary schooling, whatever it costs?' The General Education Board was incorporated by the act of Congress approved on January 12, 1907. The objects of the incorporation were: 'The promotion of education within the United States of America without distinction of race, sex, or creed.' In section 5 of the act the board is empowered to do many things. It may 'establish, maintain, or endow elementary schools, primary schools, industrial schools, training schools, normal schools, training schools for teachers or schools of any grade or higher institutions of learning.' Nowhere do we find that the board was vested with authority to spend money and use its influence for the modernization of education or to control or to have anything to say about the curriculum of any college or the course of study in any school. It would appear that in its experiment the board has ventured outside its field, that it has exceeded its powers under the act of incorporation. Whether that be true or not the announced aims of the board of this experiment are so far-reaching, revolutionary and in the view of many educators who have already expressed their opinions upon these theories so dangerous to the interests of the country and to the minds of youth that they should have immediate and earnest consideration. If this experiment bears the expected fruit we shall see imposed upon the country a system of education based on the theories of one or two men and replacing a system which has been the natural outgrowth of the American character and the needs of the American people. It is as if we should be called upon to abandon our system of common law which has sprung from the daily business and social relations of the people, and adopt in its stead a code drawn up by three or four men in a law office and brought into force and effect by the acts of the State Legislatures. The plans of the General Education Board call for careful examination."

The plans of the General Board of Education call for careful examination, as the editor of the Times truly says, and they call for more than a careful examination. They call for prompt and vigorous and effectual resistance. Wise men are beginning to see the peril of these plans and purposes, although they have been late in perceiving the danger. It is to be hoped that it is not too late to avert the threatened damage to the education of the nation.

FROM THE UPCOUNTRY.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

I have just read your review, and masterly analysis, of Dr. Blake's now famous Boston address on the Unification of Methodism. At first I was favorably impressed with Dr. Blake's views, and said so. But further reflection made me pause, and the longer I reflected the more convinced I became of the danger that lurks in the scheme he suggests. You have clearly shown where those dangers arise, and that we cannot afford to go into any organization that in its practical workings would weaken, if not destroy, our solidarity. It may be our misfortune that we are placed in circumstances where we cannot act freely. And then it may be the providence of God that has raised us up for a special work, and only as a bulwark of Anglo-Saxon civilization against the unwisdom that would swamp our ideals by subjecting us to the control of an untutored race, but as a Church that can extend sympathetic help to that race without practicing hypocrisy.

But, Meek, the fight has been won. There will be no "Union." Even Zion's Herald practically concedes it in the last issue just come to hand. Blake's speech was a bold one. He brought them to the scratch. The colored brother is not going to "go out" of his own accord, and they cannot put him out. We are not going to change our relation to him. So there we are, and all this sentimental agitation about "union" is idle talk. The sooner it is stopped the better for all concerned, for it is already beginning to stir bad blood and imperil fraternity. We are not as near the millennium as the Saratoga enthusiasts imagine. Look at the colossal lying going on among the nations. Germany pretending, and professing, friendship for the United States while plotting to "conquer" us. We caught Zimmerman with the goods. What a chapter could be written on the blunders of Germany. She blundered when she counted on running over little Belgium and eating breakfast in Paris before she could mobilize. She blundered when she counted on the disaffection of the British Colonies. She blundered when she counted on the support of the German Americans. And now she has on alone all her blunders by uniting all America her solid foe. Now we are no longer divided in our sympathies. We are all Americans again, standing solid for the flag against the enemy that deliberately plots to dismember us and overthrow our liberties.

We—we are delighted with Shreveport. It is no easy matter to follow George Sexton. Everybody knows him, everybody loves him, Jew and Gentile, big and little. You may outspeak him, but as he once gets that hypnotic handshake, the verdict is his. Even the presiding officer of the Senate will vacate his chair to shake hands with Bro. Vardaman about it. When old Sex gets to the gate and St. Peter learns his name he will say "It is no use to look up his record. If we don't let him in here and he wants to get in, he will find some way," and the pearly gate will swing wide and he won't be there five minutes till there will be a crowd around him. He turned over to me a great church. We are starting off with fine prospects. The people have given us a genuine Methodist welcome and, without substituting anything from their high regard for the former pastor, have taken us into their hearts.

When I get my fortune, Meek, if it is a million, I am going to give a hundred thousand dollars to the Church press. I will do it on one condition—that they will give us live stuff in the paper, and not consecrated dullness. Part of the endowment would have to be spent on intellectual spice. A reader ought not to have to be spurred to read what the paper contains. It ought to be so entertaining that it would attract him and almost compel him to read it. Our Church press has been hit hard by these times. witness the quality of paper they use and the very limited space they give. They are so poor they are unable to pay and first class writing deserves and ought to receive compensation. Only one of our Church papers has ever paid me for anything I have written except to send me the paper for correspondence. If they had money they could command high class literature and not have to fill up their columns with speeches for insomnia.

But before I give any money to the press or anything else, when I get my fortune I am going to start me an industrial school like the one I had at Lumberton where boys and girls can get an education, and pay for it with work. Those two years were the happiest of my whole ministry and I made the mistake of my career in giving it up. If I knew where I could borrow $50,000 for ten years to start such a school now I would give up this magnificent Church at once and go at that. That was educational missionary work of the first order. We had rich boys as well as poor boys there and our system made men out of them. We had been there only two years, and had accommodation for only 30 students, yet without a dollar spent for advertising we had 500 applications for admission when we had to close. These applications came from all parts of the country, from poor boys who wanted to get to school; from poor girls who had no chance, and from the parents of boys who lived in the city and wanted to get their sons away from city temptations. One man who had given thousands to one of our best colleges, and whose son was a student there, expressed deep regret that we had closed as he was intending to put his son with us. When I asked him why he wanted to take his son away and put him with us he said "He has too much idle time, too much athletics and is learning many things not advertised in the catalogue." Both the woods and the cities are full of boys and girls that need the sort of training they got with us. If you hear of anybody who wants to back up that proposition let me know and this parsonage is "to let."

THE COMING STATE CONVENTION

The writer of these lines ventures to express the sincere hope that the coming Sunday School State Convention to be held at Jackson, April 10-12, may be largely attended by our people throughout Mississippi. No one rejoices more than I over the development of the denominational work in our State. Nearly all of the denominations have in the field now men who are doing great work along denominational lines. This is as it should be.

But there is no other work in which it is so possible and profitable for the denominations to meet in a joint effort for the perfecting of all of our work, and for the reaching of the waste places of the State as is this. I am sure no one doubts the value of a common meeting ground for the Christian people of the State. Even Methodists may become self-centered and narrow.

The value I have received from this State work and the impetus given my work by it from time to time and the value I have received personally from the character and efforts of Fred Lee, goad me to a good word from me any time for this work. Let's all be there.

Church News

Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, the well known English minister, whose health is not robust at present, will serve for one year a church in Melbourne, Australia.

The campaign of the Protestant Episcopal Church to secure $5,000,000 for retired ministers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers has gone largely beyond the goal—$6,500,000 having been secured.

The New York Christian Advocate has taken over the constituency of the Northern Christian Advocate, which served the Buffalo area, the publication of the latter periodical having been discontinued.

Dr. V. A. Godbey, President of Coronal Institute at San Marcos, Texas, has tendered his resignation, to take effect at the end of the present session of that Institution. Dr. Godbey has held this position only a few months.

Cardinal James Gibbons, of Baltimore, recently spent several days in New Orleans, visiting relatives. It is his habit to make an annual visit to the Crescent City. This distinguished prelate will be 83 years old the 23d of next July.

Rev. R. P. Shuler, noted as an evangelistic pastor, is preaching to overflowing congregations at Centenary Church, Paris, Texas. It is said that his flock has grown until a new house of worship, which he is planning to build, is needed.

We take the following from the Central Christian Advocate: "The Francis Asbury equestrian statue will be placed at 16th Street and Columbia Road, Washington, D. C., this space having been recently set apart by Congress for this purpose and the name of the location changed to the "Francis Asbury Plaza."

The China Christian Advocate says: "Miss Lochie Rankin has completed 40 years of service as a missionary. She has lived at Shanghai, Soonkong, and Huchow, and other cities. In all these places she has been abundant in labors, teaching women, girls, boys, and young men. Some of her students now occupy important positions and are useful men in Church and State. She is admired, honored, and loved by all who know her, foreign and Chinese."

We take the following from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate (Atlanta, Ga.): "Dr. Edgar Blake, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a member of the Joint Commission on Unification, while in the city last week in attendance upon the subcommittee meeting, called to see us. Despite our disagreement with Dr. Blake on his plan of unification, he was very pleasant, and we enjoyed very much his all too brief visit. Dr. Blake is now taking a little rest after rather too much work, and will spend some time in Florida."

Dr. Andrew Murray, distinguished as a pastor, teacher, and the author of devotional books, died at his home in Wellington, South Africa, a few days ago, in the 88th year of his age. He was educated at Aberdeen, Scotland, and Utrecht, Holland. Leaving the pastorate in 1874, he founded an institution for young women and a mission training school for young men. These schools and his literary work had completely occupied his time for a number of years. Some of his best known books were "With Christ in the School of Prayer," "Like Christ," and "Abide in Christ." Dr. Murray lived upon the heights and his influence extended throughout the English-speaking world and into other lands.

All the local preachers of the district will be expected to make written reports to the Conference. Let the pastors so advise. Rev. C. W. Crisler will preach the opening sermon at 8 o'clock p.m., Tuesday.

J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

THE LAYMEN'S MOVEMENT—WHAT ABOUT IT?

There was a good deal of talk during the last round of Conferences concerning the Laymen's Movement; but little it seems was said looking hopefully to its organization and promotion as planned by the last General Conference, with reports of its progress to every Conference in the Church. Ex-officio representation of district and conference lay leaders was defeated by the vote of the Conferences for several reasons needless to rehearse. That it was prematurely submitted is perhaps the chief reason; for, if the laymen's work had first been established and become an actual power in the Church, the vote for it would probably have been doubled.

That issue, however, is for some time settled: and the question now is, What next? In short, let a new beginning be made. It might be well to change its name. Then, let the Church officials give the laymen's work a fair trial according to law, or make an earnest effort so to do, which few will claim has been generally attempted.

This will necessitate more careful study of the purpose and plan of the work and its relations to other organized activities of the Church. The result may modify present plans and methods, but will hardly fail to show how imperative is some such reorganization of its spiritual and material forces if the Church hopes at all adequately to accomplish its mission in town or country in this new day.

Reluctance to increase the machinery of the Church is perhaps the best explanation of the hesitancy or disinclination of pastors to introduce and push vigorously the Laymen's Movement in their charges. To the older and more conservative among them, this particularly applies. Answer that could be made will not be offered; analysis of the situation is the object now in view. It is true that through the board of stewards, the women's missionary societies, the Epworth Leagues, and the adult Sunday school classes, missionary, social, and evangelistic work to a considerable extent is accomplished. But these severally and collectively do not enlist the membership of the whole Church and express its united effort to meet the obligations of its great gospel commission. Our men too generally merely look on, perhaps approve and contribute to these good causes, but in small number actively participate in them.

Progress in various kinds of social service made by organized adult Bible classes is notable, and may explain the indifference in some places to the Laymen's Movement. That stewards in some charges include the Conference collections in their budget may there argue against "adding machinery to the Church." Through their deaconesses, settlement work, and otherwise, the home mission society of our women is extending its religious and social work in mill districts, mountain regions, and congested city sections; which also may partly account for lack of interest in a more general effort by the Church in similar directions. Epworth Leagues, Y. M. C. A.'s and Salvation Army workers, belonging to the Church or aided financially by its members, may yet further explain the difficulty of making this new movement in the Church popular and effective.

Recognizing all this, and not forgetting, too, the absorption of many members in business, society, pleasure seeking, and other things, negative or antagonistic to the claims of the Church on their time, service, and means, the question still confronts every loyal pastor and layman, What about the Layman's Movement? Is it needed or not? This is a serious question, perhaps a vital one. In its answer the Church may be facing a crisis in its history. Prayerfully, wisely, promptly it should be considered. The law of the Church on the subject should be carried out, amended, or repealed.

The union of Methodisms may or may not be an issue seriously affecting their influence and destiny. That they continue their mission of "spreading Scriptural holiness" among men is a matter of infinite importance. Hence, the success or failure of a movement intended to re-energize, multiply, and more definitely direct the spiritual and material forces of every congregation in it is or should be of momentous concern to every loyal member of the Southern Methodist Church.

DABNEY LIPSCOMB,
District Lay Leader..

Columbus, Miss., Feb. 18, 1917.

I WANT TO SAY, "AMEN."

I noticed in a recent issue of the Advocate that the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference, at their meeting which was held at Hattiesburg, expressed it as their opinion that it would be better to have preaching at the night service during the sessions of our Annual Conference than to turn the hour over to the various Conference Boards, and I am dropping this note to the Advocate just because I want to say, "Amen." Had I been in Hattiesburg, and had I been admitted to the council of the presiding elders, I would have risen to my feet and would have said, "Amen" loud enough for it to have been heard clear across the town. However, the presiding elders did not advise me of their meeting, or invite me to be present, so I want to say "Amen" loud enough for it to be heard all over our Conference territory. I have thought for some time that I would say something on this subject through the columns of the Advocate but hesitated to do so, and now I am glad that these brethren who are able to secure action in the matter have spoken. Let the Boards hear what the presiding elders, as voicing the sentiments of many of us, have to say: "it is our opinion that we should have preaching at night during the sessions of our Conference." Will they hear it, and if they hear, will they heed? The time has come when our Conference Boards must no longer be allowed to monopolize, with their decreasingly interesting programs, the only hour in which the community can be reached with the gospel of the Son of God. Let all the people say, "Amen."

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference convened in the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church on March 6, at 7:45 p. m., and adjourned on March 8 at 10 p. m. Between those hours was crowded one of the livest sessions ever held in the New Orleans District. Old men, ministers of former years in New Orleans, and young men alike are confident that the session just closed was of more than ordinary consequence.

There are certain things of telling importance that should be mentioned. Bishop Hoss honored us by spending Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in New Orleans, and by preaching a sermon of fine spirit and of true worth on Wednesday morning. Every committee took the trouble to inform itself about the subject in hand before making a report, and as a consequence every report was worth hearing and provoked lively discussion. The program was well planned and there was no place for a dull minute, and said dull minute never appeared. The presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Holmes, knew just what the Conference ought to do, and at no time did he permit the delegates to run away with the subject in hand until it was finished.

Some district legislation passed through the Conference that should mean much to New Orleans Methodism. A report was adopted authorizing steps to be taken to impress upon recording stewards the necessity of keeping accurate records of the proceedings of all quarterly conferences. Steps were taken looking toward the better distribution of the Gospel along the Mississippi River, both above and below New Orleans. Laymen acting as a committee came out strongly in favor of the layman giving more than his money to the Church. A ringing call was sounded for the lives of men as well as their money.

Perhaps no greater work was done than that which created a District Board of Church Extension and also a District Board of Missions. New Orleans has suffered a long time because of a lack of local connectional spirit, and the making of these two Boards will largely overcome this fault. The names of the men who compose the Board of Church Extension and the men and women on the Board of Missions of the District are a guarantee of a policy of vision and aggressiveness. Brother Holmes assured the Conference that this new venture would succeed, if everlastingly keeping at a thing has anything to do with success, for it is his expressed intention to keep at the plan outlined until it does succeed. This assurance means success already to those who know W. W. Holmes.

For the thirtieth time W. B. Thomson was elected a delegate to the Annual Conference. With him as delegates are S. H. Meyer, Edward Alvis, C. O. Chalmers, and W. W. Carre and Van Carter as alternates. W. H. Black was elected District Lay Leader. Those who know W. H. Black recognize him as a magnetic leader and a layman with a thorough Christian influence in every part of the District. J. R. Abels and Dr. U. G. Foote were elected trustees of the Seashore Campground, and the following men were elected as an Ad Interim Committee on License to Preach: R. H. Harper, U. G. Foote, R. M. Brown, and A. J. Gearheard.

The Conference was honored by visits from Revs. K. W. Dodson, R. W. Vaughan, H. W. Van Hook, Briscoe Carter, C. V. Breithaupt, and N. E. Joyner. These men brought messages of great helpfulness, and, besides the sermon by the Bishop, the Conference was inspired by two spiritual sermons—one by Rev. A. I. Townsley, and the other by Rev. T. J. Embree.

Little was said about what we have done, but much was said about what we hope to do as Christians during this year. Stress was laid on the One-to-Win-One Campaign that has been inaugurated, and hope was expressed that the union revival to be held in First Church under the leadership of Rev. D. L. Coale, of Dallas, Texas, would be largely attended.

Before closing this report mention must be made of the fact that the Conference lamented the small circulation of our Advocates and other Christian literature in our homes. The general condition of the Church was found to be good, but emphasis was laid upon the need of co-operative work and specific effort along purely evangelistic lines. The Annual Conference was requested to memorialize the next General Conference to so change the instructions concerning quadrennial Boards as to include the Publication Committee in the quadrenulal instead of the annual Boards.

The Epworth League and the Sunday school came in for lengthy consideration, and missions were discussed from every angle. Speeches were made by a large number of delegates and invited guests, and the whole session was most informing.

The Secretary was the host of the Conference, and does not hesitate to say that he was supported by a loyal congregation of men and women. We have no fears of criticism about our entertainment and the quality of the luncheons served by our ladies. If we had any fears, we would only have to refer to the resolution of thanks and appreciation written by Rev. A. I. Townsley in superlatives and passed by the Conference by a rising vote. A. J. GEARHEARD, Secretary.

TO LOUISIANA METHODISTS.

We would call the attention of all our people in Louisiana to the fact that by Conference action, Easter Sunday is designated by the Louisiana Annual Conference as Orphanage Day, and that every Church and Sunday school is expected to take a collection for the Orphanage on that day. We would further remind you that our Orphanage is the only institution of its kind in Louisiana that is owned and operated by the Methodist Church, and that Easter Sunday in the spring, and "Work Day" in the fall are the only days set apart by the Church for our support, and that we are in the main dependent on these two days to secure means necessary to carry on our work. We now have 115 children in the home, and have agreed to take others as soon as possible. The heavy increase in the cost of everything makes it imperative that we have the most generous response to our appeal for help that we have ever received. We depend on the Easter collections to carry us through the dull summer months. We sincerely trust every Sunday school and church in the Louisiana Conference will make a special effort for the Orphanage on Easter Sunday, April 8.

Yours, for the protection and care of the homeless children of Louisiana,

ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,

Superintendent, Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

ANOTHER FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Dr. W. F. McMurry, of the Board of Church Extension, reports another $50,000 addition to the Loan Fund Capital, and says that Rev. T. E. Sharp, D.D., pastor, Madison Heights Church, Memphis, Tennessee, is entitled to much credit in securing this substantial contribution to the permanent funds of the Board, which comes from a citizen of Memphis. This is the second $50,000 addition to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension since the beginning of 1917.

PRESIDENT WILSON ASSAILED BY BISHOP QUAYLE.

(Having taken the trouble to inquire whether this interview was ever repudiated or corrected by Bishop Quayle, and finding that it has not been, we reproduce it as an aggravated illustration of the tendency of preachers to meddle with politics in this day. It is taken from the St. Louis Star.—Editor of the Advocate.)

Bishop William A. Quayle, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in an interview with a reporter for the Star to-day, said: "If we had a MAN at Washington for twenty minutes the trouble with Germany would be over.

"Germany does not want war with us, but she has imposed on President Wilson so long, she thinks she can do it again. For more than a year and a half she has done what she now impudently announces she will do."

Five minutes before, the Bishop, who returned to-day from a month's stay in Florida, had declared to an audience of railroad men, gathered at luncheon at the Railroad Y. M. C. A., that "the time has passed when an American can be told from across the sea where he can go, when he can go and how. I hold that an American can go anywhere he chooses on any ship. He can go to the rim of creation if he wants to.

"The time has come when we must declare whether we are craven or men. We might lay the blame on the one man on whom the responsibility for decision lies, but we should decide ourselves. Some will cry, 'Let's be boobies and play small,' but it's our own business and we must attend to the job. 'Civilization is run with courage.'

"Who is Germany that she should tell Americans where they can sail? Does she own the seas? The Bible tells us the seas belong to the Lord, and we have as much right on the Lord's property as any one else. When there is anything bad in the world, I believe in whipping it out."

Bishop Quayle denounced pacificism as "pusillanimousness."

"In these ominous times somebody must stand hard by and see that American rights are maintained," he continued.

"Men are telling us that lightning is in the skies and may strike us at any time. My friends, there never has been a time when lightning was not in the skies; but the brave man is he who is not afraid of the lightning, but fears only God.

"If President Wilson is surprised at this latest German declaration, he is the only one among us who is. We all have expected it for months."

REV. T. B. RENEAU, LOCAL ELDER.

Thos. Burton Reneau was born in Wilkinson County, Miss., on Sept. 11, 1826, and died at Oak Grove, La., on Jan. 11, 1917, aged 90 years and 4 months. He came to East Feliciana Parish in early life, and from thence to West Carroll in 1854. He was twice married, both companions preceding him to the other world. By his first marriage there were several children, of whom Wm. H. Reneau, of Oak Grove, alone survives. His second wife was a widow, and the mother of Dr. Thos. N. Pulley, of Floyd. Brother Reneau was fortunate and happy in both marriages, and was left alone only a few years by his late companion. He was an ideal man—vigorous, hale, and hearty, but he was not perfect; he had his weaknesses and faults, and doubtless made mistakes. Let us hope, as we believe, that they were mistakes of the head and not of the heart, for 'tis human to err, and there is none perfect—no, not one. Yes, he was a model, so to speak, and a solid character, strong spiritually, morally, mentally, and physically; and surely gray hairs were an ornament to his head and "a crown of glory," for they were found "in the way of righteousness," mercy, truth, and piety. He had gone through and withstood the shock and wreck of cruel war, suffered its many losses and crosses—these and even more—and had come up through great tribulation and out to the final unscathed, uncontaminated, and undaunted; had filled many positions of honor, profit, and trust in Church and State; had served his time and people well, and, like St. Paul, had fought a good fight, had kept the faith, had finished his course, and had won the crown. Yea, though not rich in this world's store, he had laid up treasures in heaven, and has gone on to possess them. He died as he lived—at peace with God and man. Oh, may our "finishing be as fine, our hopes as bright, and our reward as great and deserving!"

At the L. & N. Station, Rev. W. E. Thomas will be assisted by Mrs. Paul Renshaw, Mrs. W. M. Vaught, and Miss Carrie Keith.

Required for Health and Beauty.

It is surprising that it is necessary to repeat again and again that the health and beauty of the skin require that the blood shall be pure. If the arteries of the skin receive impure blood, pimples and blotches appear, and the individual suffers from humors. Powders and other external applications are sometimes used for these affections, but will never have the desired effect while the causes of impure blood remain.

The indications are very clear that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, removing pimples and blotches, and giving health and beauty to the skin. It gives tone to all the organs and builds up the whole system. Insist on having Hood's Sarsaparilla when you ask for it. Don't take anything else.

The Great Battle

NOTES.

The last Congress should go down in history as "The Prohibition Congress." Truly, things have improved since the time when the committees of the Senate and House that handled matters pertaining to the liquor traffic were kept well packed.

In a statement announcing that pneumonia had caused 2377 deaths in New York City within nine weeks, the Department of Health of that city embodied a warning to the public that "alcohol is one of the most potent allies of the pneumonia germ."

We take the following from the New Orleans Item: "The 'bone-dry' amendment to the Postal Appropriation Bill, signed by the President a few days ago, will cut off 70 per cent of the liquor shipments from New Orleans when it goes into effect on July 1. Several exclusively mail order liquor houses are expected to go into other business."

The Richmond Virginian says: "In passing the Porto Rican Government Bill, Congress inserted a provision concerning prohibition. The measure calls for prohibition in the islands one year after the enactment, and stipulates that the people of Porto Rico may vote on the question within five years. The time will soon come, we trust and believe, when the American flag will wave over no territory cursed by the legalized liquor traffic."

A VOICE FROM ENGLAND.

A report of the Royal Commission of the Poor Laws of Great Britain said:

"A great weight of evidence indicates drink as the most potent and universal factor in bringing about pauperism." Again it said: "Apart from accident and the ordinary illness of life and bereavement, the root cause of pauperism and lunacy is drink." In the evidence of Sir James S. Davy before the Commission, this appears: "Practically no total abstainer is a pauper."

A WISE BENFACTION.

By Rev. W. F. McMurry, D.D.

The $50,000 contributed to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension recently by a citizen of Shreveport, Louisiana, the income from which is to go perpetually to the support of the superannuated preachers of the Louisiana Conference, is a benediction that will accomplish great good.

First—The $50,000 will be used perpetually as a loan fund to aid church and parsonage building. It will be administered in such a way as to enable congregations who cannot build without aid to use this money at a reasonable rate of interest, and be permitted to pay their loans in convenient installments. This will result in the building of several churches every year.

Second—As an endowment in the interest of the worn-out preachers of the Louisiana Conference the contributor has secured the best possible investment for his fund. There is, perhaps, less possibility of loss in making it a part of the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension than any other form of investment that could be selected. The Board loans its funds on first mortgages plus personal security, and is very careful not to invest it in securities that do not amply protect the investment. All such funds in the hands of the Board of Church Extension are exempt from taxation. This annual expense is saved. The administration expenses of the Board of Church Extension are lower than secular financial institutions. There is no loss of time in the earning power of the endowment: there are no commissions to pay, and the draft representing the income will go annually to the Joint Board of Finance of the Louisiana Conference. The eye of the Church, through its Board of Church Extension, is upon the investment, and the principal and interest are both at work accomplishing the ends desired.

President Woodrow Wilson has lately been ill with a cold, made worse by the bad weather on the day of his inauguration for a second term.

UNIFICATION.

Mr. Editor: We have never written a word on the above subject. We now write from the southern edge of southern Methodism, and solemnly promise to say "not a word" on the much-discussed trio, viz.: The powers of the General Conference, the number and nature of the Regional Conferences, and the "brother in black." We merely desire, in a brotherly way, to call attention to an incorrect impression, and then make a suggestion. Dr. Blake, in his interesting Boston address, says:

"The M. E. Church, South, has seven Conferences on Northern territory; while the M. E. Church has eight Conferences on distinctly Southern territory."

Now what is the impression made by this statement upon the minds of those unacquainted with the history? Certainly the impression is that both Churches have occupied territory which, in the plan of separation, they agreed not to occupy. This is the impression; but not the fact.

We feel sure that Dr. Blake did not intend to make an incorrect impression, and most likely it did not come to his thought. Now, it is this impression, unintentionally made, to which we call attention.

Let us ask Dr. Blake, where are the "eight Conferences" of the M. E. Church in the South? Answer: The most, if not all, of them are on the ground which, in the plan of separation, they agred to leave entirely to the M. E. Church, South. Where are the "seven Conferences" which the M. E. Church, South, has on Northern territory? Are they on ground which they agreed not to occupy? Not so. How many of the seven are on the ground left to the M. E. Church in the plan of separation? Answer: One, and only one. That Conference lies in Southern Illinois, and has forty-one charges—only one charge more than is allowed in a presiding elder's district.

How much missionary money did the Southern Church expend in that Conference? Answer: None. How much missionary money has been expended in the eight Conferences of the M. E. Church in the South? Answer: Thousands, and multiplied thousands of dollars.

Now we ask, Where are the other six Conferences which the Southern Church has on Northern territory? Answer: They are in territory which at that time was undeveloped—territory which was not considered in the plan of separation, and which was occupied mostly by herds of buffalo and roaming Indian tribes.

This "Great West" has been developed and partially evangelized by the two Methodisms since the separation. In some places the Southern Church was first to pioneer, and in some places the Northern Church was first.

The West was not occupied by either Church, nor was it even considered, at the time of the separation. Such are the facts as we understand them. But the outside world gets the impression that both Churches, alike, have occupied ground they agreed not to occupy.

Now we would modestly suggest, that we can never right a wrong by continuing the wrong. We must go back to where the wrong commenced and get right there; and then go forward in the right. Again, "Nothing is settled until it is settled right." Then the suggestion is, that we come back and stand by our agreement. Let the M. E. Church, South, get off of Northern territory, and turn over their one Conference to the M. E. Church. Then let the M. E. Church turn over their eight Conferences in the South to the M. E. Church, South. Now we stand right before each other, and before God and men; and are in keeping of the pledge which we mutually made.

We are now ready to consider the Great West, which God has given to the two Methodisms through their missionary efforts; and which has (so far as we know) never been considered in any Church council.

Let there be an agreement, and draw a line through the West, dividing it after the manner that the occupied territory was divided in 1844, and afterward ratified, as we understand, in the Cape May Agreement. Then let the Southern Methodists, north of that line, unite with the M. E. Church, and the Northern Methodists, south of that line, unite with the M. E. Church, South.

Now what do we find? We find all the troubles between the two Churches are at an end. We are off of each other's ground, no longer building "altar against altar." And we are in the happy consciousness of having redeemed our broken pledges and dealt with each other according to the "Golden Rule." Now, having "truly and earnestly repented of our sins, we are in love and charity with our neighbors," and with each other.

We are now ready for a real, genuine, sure-enough love-marriage, with no domestic brawls to follow. And if "there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth," what a jubilee will there be in the good world when between five and six millions of Methodists have repented and renewed their broken pledges. Now, we are on shouting ground; and no wonder if they should shout on earth and in heaven.

Now we are right, and ready for unification on the right basis. And if we never get unification, thank the Lord, we will be right anyway! No more trespasses or troubles; but a heart-to-heart fraternity and fellowship, while we go forward "with songs of triumph," cultivating Immanuel's lands" and bringing the lost millions back to Christ.

Candor is always best. And we may as well be candid and "confess our faults one to another;" for we will never be ready for, and will never have a happy and satisfactory unification until, by some God-directed process, something similar to this state of things is brought about.

THE CHARM OF THE PULPIT.

The charm of the pulpit is not in eloquence, or in fantastic ritualism, or in learned disquisitions upon the questions of the day, so much as in the sweetness and light which alone exhales and shines forth from the tender passion of the Cross. Cultured Boston, the intellectual hub of the universe, as it fondly believes, turned out en masse lately to weep and rejoice at the simple story of the Cross as told by Billy Sunday. Nothing has so stirred that city since the days of Wendell Phillips. It is the simplicity which is in Christ which the world needs, and it will be satisfied with nothing less.—The Methodist Protestant.

POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE MORALITY.

"Well, John, what can I do for you?" Dr. Browne inquired cordially as he came into his study and shook hands with John Forbes.

"I am applying for a position in a bank, sir. Some recommendations are required, and I thought you might be willing to give me one," John answered confidently.

The clergyman sat still, looking very thoughtful.

"I certainly should like to recommend you, John," he said, at length, "but I have a feeling that I ought to be truthful about what I say in such a matter, and I am wondering just what I can say truthfully that will impress the bank in your favor."

John's face showed surprise. "Why, I can't think of anything very wrong that I have done," he said, after a pause.

"That's exactly as I had rated you," replied the rector, "and I must admit that the rating does not impress me very favorably. Suppose, for instance, that you wanted work as a porter, and the bank wanted to know whether you were physically strong enough for the work? I might be able to mention one hundred diseases you did not have. I might make it two hundred, or any number, but that would not answer the question. The bank would not want to know how many diseases you didn't have, but how much physical strength you did have. You might have no disease at all, and yet have almost no strength.

"I'd like to believe that it was different with you morally, but honesty compels me to say that I never have seen an intimation of it in your life. I never heard of you doing anything very wrong, but neither have I heard of your doing anything very good. I can't say that you have moral character just because you haven't any great vices. You haven't been positively vicious, as some of your friends have, but I sometimes fear that you have no more attained a moral character than they; it's even possible that some of them are nearer to it than you.

"You have only drifted. You have let yourself float along the line of least resistance. You have frittered away your time and your opportunities. You just barely escaped failure all the way through your high school course. So far you have escaped doing anything very wrong. You also have escaped doing anything very good. In fact, you haven't done anything at all."

"I might have expected some efficiency expert to look at things that way, but I didn't think a Christian minister would!" said John, sullenly.

"That's exactly the Christian point of view and the Christian teaching," returned the Doctor. "Jesus, in one of His parables, told of a number of people who suffered punishment after death. It is a striking fact that not one of them was condemned for wrong things he had done, but for right things he had left undone. John Forbes, turned about and faced the thing squarely. You haven't been a man—you have been a kind of jelly-fish. You haven't been anything positive. You have been a trailer, a hanger-on, a negative weakling. Let me see you for one week positively do something that is hard to do, something you are disinclined to try and less inclined to stick at, and then come back and I'll give you the recommendation."

"I'm pretty mad," said John, "but I'm going to do as you say."

"I want you to keep mad until you have done it," replied Dr. Brown.—Youth's Companion.

BOYS AND GIRLS.

The difference is apparent early. A boy has as much fun in stoning a cat as a girl has in hunting for violets. A boy's curiosity is directed to the ice box; a girl would like to see what is in the top bureau drawer.

A girl can give the impression when away from home that her parents are wealthy; a boy cannot.

Every boy is old enough to be welcome to sit in the neighbor girl's parlor many years before his sister thinks he is old enough to sit in the parlor at home.

A girl is never so young that she will reveal to guests at a party that the spoons are borrowed; a boy child never grows so old that he fails to.

Give a boy a dollar and he will eat it; give his sister one and she will wear it.

A brother and sister may have hair of the same shade, but the boy's is called red and the girl's, auburn.

When brothers fight, it is over the larger share of pie; when sisters quarrel, one has worn something belonging to the other without asking permission.—The Youth's Companion.

THE FIVE W'S.

Here they are, all in a row; who, what, where, when and why? Any newspaper reporter can tell you about them, for they must be answered in every "story" he writes. If a person is involved in an accident, the reporter must give the name and occupation. He must tell what happened, where it happened, when it happened and why.

Definiteness is the watchword of the newspaper office. Why not make it the watchword in the home? Why not teach our children directness and clearness of speech during the school vacation?

One day my neighbor's little girl came over to visit me. She stammered, repeated, duplicated and lost herself as she talked. Instead of saying "Charlie likes cake," she would say, "Charlie, he likes cake." That is just one example among many, but it is typical of her involved, mixed, hazy and haphazard conversation.

One day my neighbor's little girl came over to visit me. I was impressed with the orderliness of her speech. No matter what happened, she could tell it to me calmly and directly.

A little boy we knew boasted he would never fall from his bicycle. He was extremely confident. However, when this very thing did happen, my precise little speaker told me in her first sentence:

"George Jones fell off his bicycle and sprained his ankle in front of Judge Paulson's a few minutes ago while he was learning to ride."

Could anything be more compact? When my cousin's little girl told me so smoothly about the fall, I mentally gave her a one hundred per cent.

No mother is doing her duty unless she teaches her children the reporter's recipe of who, what, where, when and why. Try it!—Louise Van Auken.

WEEK OF PRAYER, APRIL 1-8.

By Rev. W. W. Pinson, D.D.

Do we need a special season of prayer for the whole Church? By every voice and sign of the hour we do. Never in human history was the call to humble, penitent, importunate prayer more clear and emphatic. The ferment of the world, the madness, the bitterness, the agony, the cruelty that have turned Europe into a reeking horror, call us to our knees in intercession.

The situation we face in our own dear land sends a tremor into every serious heart, and calls every Christian patriot to prayer.

The strain that is being put upon the Christian Church in America to meet the crushing responsibility it faces, and its spiritual unpreparedness for such a responsibility, call still louder for prayer.

The immediate, clear, and definite needs of our world-wide enterprise that have pleaded and waited so long in vain, call loudest of all. Surely, then, no one will question the timeliness and urgency of a week of prayer in every church in Southern Methodism.

Self-Denial.

Is there any need for self-denial? Why couple this with prayer? Because there can be no true prayer without it, and because our prayers cannot be answered except through the sacrificial life of the Church. It is mockery to pray without the spirit of self-denial that gives and serves. An easy-going, luxury-loving, self-pleasing Christianity that says "Lord, Lord," and does not His will, can not meet the needs of an hour like this.

The spirit of self-sacrifice must take hold on the Church before it can lay heartily hold of such issues as we face. The Church at Antioch fasted—and sent forth its best.

The Need.

We need twenty new missionaries for the foreign field and five for the home field. We know how to get them, for we have been told by the Master, "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest." After they have been secured they must be sent. But prayers cannot send them. We can complete our prayers only by furnishing the means by which alone they can be fully answered.

The Time.

Easter week. We shall be thinking of the agony, the shame, the betrayal; of the patience, the tenderness, the divine pity; of the Resurrection, the Great Commission, the Ascension. What more fitting time to renew our faith, our consecration, and our experience, and to "let the Christless millions tramp across our hearts." What better time to test our loyalty, our service, our giving by the standards of His love and sacrifice! May our whole Church hear in the stillness of the secret place, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." May the Master himself say over and over in these days, "If any man will be my disciple, let him deny himself."

The Objective.

Twenty new missionaries for our seven foreign fields. They are sorely needed. They have not all been found. There is not money to send those who have been found. This week of prayer should furnish not only the men, but the money. We asked for twenty in our first week of prayer three years ago and were enabled to send out ten. Under far more favorable conditions this year we should not fall short of twenty.

The Home Department needs teachers and equipment for Wilson Institute, our new school for Mexican boys, in San Antonio, Texas. One-fifth of the offering from the Week of Prayer will be used for this purpose.

Editorial

DR. CRUTCHER'S METHODIST STATISTICS.

Under the caption, "A Study in Methodist Statistics," the Baptist Chronicle of March 1, contained the following article from the pen of Rev. G. H. Crutcher, Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Missions of the Baptist Church in Louisiana:

"Their total membership is 37,812, which was an increase over the previous year by 1,122. The District showing the largest increase on profession of faith was the Baton Rouge District. The District showing the largest decrease in profession of faith was Alexandria. There was an increase in adult baptism hy 25 and a decrease in infants baptized by 91. Both of these are encouraging to the Baptists. The Methodist brethren maintain a presiding elder in each of the seven districts. These presiding elders are largely enlistment men, strengthening the appeal of the pastors for all general denominational work. They report 282 general organs taken, * * * and Conference organs to the number of 1697. This does not show our Methodist brethren to be reading papers. They do not even compare favorably with the Baptists of this State, and we felt that we were bad enough. They raised for both Home and Foreign Missions $12,376, which was an increase for both over the previous year, but about equal to what Louisiana Baptists gave for Foreign Missions. For all religious purposes they made a total advance in their offering of $57,184. Our Methodist brethren have 150 churches, with very few of them real country churches. Baptists have 711 churches co-operating with the State Mission Board."

We frankly confess that we were surprised to see such an article as this above the signature of Dr. Crutcher; for, though we are not personally acquainted with him, it was our pleasure to hear him preach in a tent meeting at Shreveport last fall and we formed a very favorable opinion of him. Note the following statement: "There was an increase in adult baptisms by 25, and a decrease in infants baptized by 91. Both of these are encouraging to the Baptists." We can understand how it might rejoice a Baptist to see a declension in the number of infants baptized; but, since adult baptisms represent grown-up persons professing faith in Christ, it is quite beyond us to understand how any Christian could feel encouraged to know that the number of such individuals was small. Would Brother Crutcher rather have them continue in their sinful ways than to avow faith in Christ, submit to baptism, and become Methodists? We assure him that such is not our feeling when the Baptists have an ingathering; on the contrary, it pleases us to see them have success in leading unsaved souls to Christ. Before leaving this point, we desire to call attention to the fact that the figures given by Dr. Crutcher are a gain and loss only as compared with the number of baptisms administered during the preceding year—only a slight variation in the relative annual ratios. The total number of infants baptized in the Louisiana Conference during the year 1916 was 949, and the number of adults 1338. The number of additions to the Church on profession of faith was 2666, and by certificate and otherwise. 3596, making a total of 6262; but the losses (from deaths, removals, etc.) were sufficient to cut the net gain down to 1122.

Dr. Crutcher says that the 37,812 Methodists in the State gave for both Home and Foreign Missions last year $12,376, which is about what the Baptists of the State gave for Foreign Missions alone. The Doctor does not seem to understand that different denominations do not have the same method of tabulating their statistics. For instance, his computation does not include the more than $3000 that the Methodists gave to Church Extension and the several hundred dollars given to the American Bible Society, both of which funds are purely missionary (most denominations have no separate Church Extension Fund); nor does it embrace the $25,000 raised by the Woman's Missionary Societies (much of which went to missions), nor the gifts of the Epworth Leagues to Missions, and the nearly $3000 raised for that cause by the Sunday schools. If we cared to strike back at our brother, we might taunt him with the fact that in all the interdenominational tables of missionary statistics that we have ever seen the Baptists were set down as about the lowest per capita givers. It should be noted that the $57,184 advance mentioned by the Doctor was the increase in the current regular finances of the Church; the total amount raised for current finances being $476,280. We do not mean that Dr. Crutcher stated anything contrary to this, but we think it is well for the public to have the complete figures.

What the Doctor says about the circulation of our Church periodicals is true—the showing is much below what it ought to be; but we wonder if the Baptists of Louisiana, who claim to have nearly twice as many members in the State as we have, can show more than twice 1979 weekly Church organs taken.

The Doctor greatly blunders when he states that the Methodists have only "150 churches" in the State of Louisiana. Surely, that must have been a typographical error. For the Louisiana Conference Minutes plainly show that the Methodists have 406 church organizaztions, and 357 houses of worship, valued at $1,419,310.

But the funnlest thing of all is the effort of Dr. Crutcher to exclude the Methodist preachers of Louisiana from the country and coop them up in the towns. Why, the Methodist circuit riders are preaching the Gospel in sections of the State, as, for instance, on the lower coast, near the mouth of the Mississippi River, where no other Protestant minister is ever seen. If the Doctor were to undertake to keep up with some of our rural workers as they push out into the remote interior, he would have to get rid of the automobile that they were raising money to purchase for him on the Sunday that we heard him preach in Shreveport and get him a pony and pair of saddlebags, or a dugout and paddle. He ought to know that Methodist itinerants have never been outstripped in the work of pioneering.

One thing more we wish to say: Methodist statistics are taken carefully every year and they are about as accurate and reliable as Church statistics can well be. The National Census Bureau has complimented our Church upon her manner of gathering them. On the other hand, the Baptist Church is not connectional, attendance upon its Conventions is optional, and its statistics are generally understood to be rather loosely secured. Dr. George Summey, the accomplished Editor of the Presbyterian Journal, after putting himself to considerable trouble a few years ago to obtain dependable statistics concerning the denominations in this State, declared publicly that the statistics of the Baptist Church then available were to be regarded as scarcely more than estimates.

We have no great fondness for parading Church statistics, and we feel very much like apologizing to our readers for the space that we have devoted to this review of Dr. Crutcher's article; but we felt that we could not permit the public to be given a wrong impression of the virile and growing Methodism of Louisiana, even though this were unintentionally done. We have no desire to wage a warfare against the Baptists, who have many excellencies that we admire. Rather would we bid them Godspeed in their labors to extend the Master's kingdom.

REV. W. D. McCULLOUGH TRANSLATED.

Dear Dr. Meek: Brother W. D. McCullough died last Saturday morning, March 10, about 6 o'clock, at the hone of his daughter, Mrs. McMullens, here in Shelby, Miss., and we buried him on last Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. J. R. Countiss, assisted by the writer, conducting the obsequies. Brother McCullough had been here about four weeks; but one would have thought from the kind treatment and many courtesies shown him that he had been here many years. His was one of the most largely attended funerals that I have seen in the Delta. It was a great blessing and inspiration to this pastor to be associated with this faithful servant of God and to minister to him these few weeks. It is needless to say that he died well.

W. M. CAMPBELL.

Shelby, Miss.

It is with much sorrow that we have learned of the death of this well known minister, who was our personal friend. He had been ill for more than a year and knew that the sunset of his earthly life was near at hand. But to the righteous, the twillght of time is but eternity's golden dawn. May sustaining grace be given to the stricken loved ones! We trust that a fitting memoir of the deceased will soon be furnished the Advocate.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, the well known evangelist, is engaged until the third Sunday in April, after which time he has some open dates. His address is Yazoo City, Miss.

Bishop Morrison, who has had something to do with the upbuilding of Southern Methodism, speaks through our columns this week on the subject of unification. What he has to say is well worth reading.

The meeting just held at Petal, Miss., with Rev. J. V. Bennett doing the preaching and Rev. J. S. Duke leading the singing, was quite successful. Rev. Charles E. Downer, the pastor, will tell about it in next week's Advocate.

Brethren who desire to have notices appear immediately should get them to us by Monday. Tuesday morning is chiefly used for the correction of the last articles that have been put in type for use. Our last forms are closed Tuesday at noon.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, pastor of our First Church at Laurel, Miss., says: "Our League will give the week, March 18 to 24, to putting the Advocate in every home in our church." We shall appreciate this assistance of the Leaguers.

From the February Bulletin of St. Mark's Hall, we glean the following items: Number of visits made, 425; patients treated in the clinic, 354; prescriptions filled, 882. Mrs. A. P. Holt, of Crowley, was an appreciated visitor for several days.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey's recent article on the Negro and Methodist union, which first appeared in our paper, was copied in Dr. R. E. Jones' paper, "The Southwestern Christian Advocate," of this city, and in the Central Christian Advocate, of Kansas City.

Rev. J. G. Johnson, of Black Hawk, Miss., sends us several subscriptions, and in a business letter appends the following note: "We have begun the work of the new year in earnest and the outlook is encouraging. I trust that this will be the best year of my quadrennium."

Rev. W. S. Harrison, of Starkville, Miss., one of the noblest veterans of the North Mississippi Conference, in referring to our pastor at that place, Rev. J. C. Park, says: "Brother Park surprises and delights us with his efficiency, both in the pulpit and in the pastorate."

Rev. G. B. Love, of the Silver Circuit, N. Miss. Conf., has been much hindered in his work by rainy weather and muddy roads, but reports progress notwithstanding. We trust that there is soon to be a better day for our rural workers, so far as the roads are concerned.

Dr. and Mrs. U. G. Foote entertained Bishop Hoss during his recent visit to New Orleans. These new-comers to the Crescent City have been royally received and are rapidly becoming identified with New Orleans Methodism. Dr. Foote is preaching to growing congregations.

Miss Nyna Pollard, of Batesville, Miss., has our thanks for a club of 9 subscriptions, with a check to correspond. She says: "Everything is moving along nicely here, and we feel that we shall have a good year. Our pastor, Brother Mohler, puts forth every effort that he can to promote the work."

New Orleans Methodism is getting things in readiness for the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council, April 12-20. This will doubtless be a great occasion. If you have not already done so, send in your subscription to the Council Daily. See the notice telling to whom to send elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.

Rev. Hilary Westbrook, pastor of our Seventh Avenue Church at Meridian, Miss., writes us as follows: "The work has had a splendid beginning in this charge, and everything seems to promise another good year. In spite of unfavorable weather, the attendance upon the services of the Church has been excellent."

The following friends, to whose kindness no reference has elsewhere been made, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. D. Harper, Opelousas, La., 2; Rev. H. J. Maddox, Heidelberg, Miss., 2; Rev. W. M. Sullivan, Columbia, Miss., 2; Rev. S. A. Brown, Kosciusko, Miss., 4.

Our long-time friend, Rev. G. D. Purcell, of Dubach, La., sends us two subscriptions, and adds: "I will take the month of March to present the subject of Christian education to my people. You may also count upon me to represent the Conference organ before every congregation. The paper is appreciated in this charge."

The appointments of Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe District, reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate. The first ones are as follows: West Monroe, March 18; District Epworth League Conference at Monroe, March 24 and 25; Bonita, at Bartholomew (a.m.) March 25; Brooklyn, at Chatham, March 28; Tallulah, April 1.

Brother John P. Rembert, of Longview, Texas, an ex-Mississippian, in renewing his subscription, says: "This is my 41st subscription to the New Orleans Advocate. It seems like a weekly letter from home, and I become more attached to it, if possible, every year. I am with you, heart and soul, on the unification issue. Keep turning on the light."

Rev. Jasper L. Smith, of Pachuta, Miss., sends us 7 subscriptions, for which he has our hearty thanks. Concerning his work, he says: "We have been the recipients of many courtesies and favors since our arrival in this field. The good ladies gave us a dining-room and kitchen shower several days ago. The parsonage floors are being made beautiful."

Rev. O. L. Savage, of Webb, Miss., writes: "I report the death of Brother Thomas J. Robertson. He was born Sept. 5, 1831, and died March 4, 1917, being 86 years old. He was the oldest member of our Church and one of the landmarks of Methodism in this section. He will be greatly missed in his home and community. He was ill only a few days. We trust that our loss is his eternal gain."

Mrs. Josie S. Cook, of Ringgold, La., after instructing us to send the Advocate to her, instead of her mother, Mrs. Alice M. Bryan, deceased, says: "My dear mother left this world for a better one last July. She had taken the Advocate all my life. I have read it since I could read anything. The first recollection I have of reading anything in a newspaper is of reading its 'Home Circle,' 50 years ago."

Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., sends us a somewhat extended notice calling attention to "Mexican Day in our Sunday Schools," which is March 25. Literature for this day may be had by writing the Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, 810 Broadway Street, Nashville, Tenn. A program for the occasion may be found in The Missionary Voice for March. We hope to be able to print Brother Lewis' more extended statement next week.

Dr. Frank W. Loy, the able District Superintendent of the New Orleans District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was an appreciated visitor to our office one day last week. He and the Editor discussed the subject of unification and were able to see each other's view-point and agree as to what are the great obstacles to the union of the two Episcopal Methodisms. We counted it a privilege to converse with a brother of Dr. Loy's insight and candor.

Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Jackson (Miss.) District, writes that his District Conference will convene at Madison Station at 9:30 o'clock on April 24. The brethren are urged to have their Church Conferences elect delegates in accordance with the rule of the Mississippi Conference and to send their names to Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., Madison, Miss. A fuller statement will appear later.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., our gifted young pastor at Homer, La., in a personal letter to the Editor, thus refers to his work: "We are getting along very well here, though the weather conditions and the large amount of sickness existing have been considerably in the way. On good days the attendance at church is good. I have done a good deal of visiting since I have been here and have become acquainted with most of the people."

Rev. T. M. Brownlee, Commissioner for Grenada College, spent Sunday, Feb. 25, with our congregations at Coahoma and Lyon, Miss., of which Rev. J. E. Stephens is pastor, and secured for the College which he represents subscriptions amounting to $1200. This is one of the choicest charges in the Greenville District. Brother Brownlee reports that Brother Stephens is in high favor with his flock and that he is doing a great work.

Our hat is off to Miss Mollie Higginbotham, of Mer Rouge, La., who has sent us 18 subscriptions accompanied by a remittance of the proper amount to pay for them. It has for many years been her rule to take care of the interests of the Advocate in her community and send in annually a fine list of names for our mailing files. Mer Rouge is one of the choice charges of the Louisiana Conference, and we are pleased to have our paper reach so many of its homes.

Rev. C. A. Northington, of the New Albany (Miss.) Circuit, who is one of the Advocate's unfailing friends, has sent in 30 new and renewal subscriptions. Brother Northington was somewhat discouraged as to his ability to circulate the Conference organ when the existing conditions forced us to discontinue our club rates; but his success shows what a live pastor can do even when the way seems difficult. We scarcely need to say that we are grateful for this fine service.

Rev. R. T. Pickett writes as follows from Collins, Miss.: "The work in our new charge, the Williamsburg Circuit, has begun well. We are serving a good people. Our first quarterly conference, which brought to us our new presiding elder, Rev. W. B. Jones, was an inspiring occasion. On March 3 we conducted the funeral service of one of our oldest members, Brother R. H. Powell. He was in the 77th year of his age and had been a faithful member of the Oakvale Church. He was an honored Confederate veteran."

We have received from the pen of Dr. T. B. Holloman a tribute to Mrs. Esther Jane Jones, who was the widow of Mr. Benjamin F. Jones, and the mother of Rev. B. F. Jones, D.D., of Moss Point, Miss., and Mrs. Alice Lewis, relict of the late Rev. W. B. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, who passed to her reward a few weeks ago. It will appear in the next issue of the Advocate. Dr. Jones, because of illness, was denied the privilege of being present at the obsequies of his beloved mother. He and all the other sorrowing ones have our sympathy in their bereavement.

In referring to Dr. DuBose's plan for the arrangement of the Negroes in the proposed new Church last week, we said: "This plan was before the Joint Commission in Baltimore and was not accepted as a solution of the Negro problem as it relates to unification." Dr. DuBose thinks that this may not convey to the public accurately what took place. Here is his own language concerning the matter: "To the Commission at its late sitting, I submitted a paper touching upon this aspect of the general problem, the details of which need not here be adverted to. As that paper has not yet been acted upon, nor had any bearing upon the deliberations of the body, the fact of its existence may be mentioned without any violation of the rule." The Doctor then states that the plan published is in some particulars an extension of that submitted to the Commission. It was not at all our purpose to create the impression that Dr. DuBose's paper had been formally voted down, but that when the Commission, after lengthy deliberations, reached a deadlock on the Negro question, though informed as to its salient features, that body did not turn to it as furnishing a way out of its perplexities.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE IN WEST POINT.

A four days' session was held and the people of West Point provided to the fullest for the comfort and convenience of their guests, besides attending the sessions both day and evening.

A splendid representation from all portions of the Conference, also many visitors and delegates, came, making the attendance feature equal if not surpassing that of former years.

Mrs. J. W. Conger presided. She is an excellent presiding officer. Bishop McCoy preached the annual sermon on Tuesday evening. Some pronounced the sermon to be the greatest one to which they had ever listened. Quite a number of the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, and about half of the presiding elders, were present.

With one or two exceptions, the old officers were re-elected. To have the privilege of attending such an inspirational meeting is uplifting and helpful. Our sisters compose a very choice conference, and their consecrated energies are being used mightily in the Master's cause.

Rev. L. P. Wasson is universally loved by the people of West Point, and he is doing a great work there. The people of all denominations esteem him as a man and true servant of the Most High.

E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

WINNING ONE IN NEW ORLEANS.

There was nothing lost by the pause in the work of personal effort by the coming of the District Conference. We only had a pause by the way and now go on refreshed and stronger for the pause. The enthusiasm of the Conference intensified our purpose to succeed. We learned to see things in a larger way. We were inspired by our great opportunity and our difficulties seem less. There is nothing impossible to them that believe and try. The last is as necessary as the first. Those who believe are the people who undertake.

The people are here who need our Christ. What a privilege to win them! What a joy it brings to that man who presents to his Lord a new servant! The results of our efforts will be only as we make them. We have a large force in this city, a force large enough to take it. Our Methodism is not lacking in holy men and women; may it not be lacking in zeal! The best of all is, "God is with us."

We have yet four weeks. We should win at least one hundred per week. Whatever result we may have in actual numbers, we will have an increase of spiritual power and interest for the union meetings to be held after Easter. Methodism in New Orleans is active; it was never so aggressive as now. It has ceased to talk of difficulties and is planning for victories. It expects victories. It is going out to get results. In proportion to the forces engaged will the victory be complete.

New Orleans, La. U. G. FOOTE.

Ladies! Darken Your Gray Hair

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Just as the night shades fell Sunday evening on February 18, 1917, the death angel summoned to its eternal home the spirit of Mrs. EMMA E. COUTCH, who was born in Loulsiana on January 7, 1875. In early childhood, Mrs. Coutch joined the Methodist Church at Rocky Springs, Miss., and lived a consistent member till God took her to himself. In a quiet little spot, hedged in by cedars and boxwood, in the Wallace Cemetery, near Humphreys, Miss., at high noon, Monday, February 19, the body was laid to rest, my father, Rev. T. J. O'Neil, officiating, while a host of friends, with their presence and floral contributions, paid tribute to the dead. The husband, Mr. W. W. Coutch, three little boys, and several other near relatives survive to mourn their loss.

Her pastor, J. W. O'NEIL.

On Feb. 23, 1917, the sweet spirit of Mrs. JANIE RAGSDALE took its flight to a world unknown to us. She was 63 years of age and had been a member of See's Chapel, M. E. Church, South, for a number of years. She was held in high esteem by all who knew her. She leaves a husband, eight children, and a host of friends to mourn her death. She was a loving wife and mother and will be missed in the home, the church, and the community in which she lived. On Thursday she was operated on for appendicitis. She was buried the following Sunday. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Geo. A. Baker, after which her remains were laid to rest in Longtown Cemetery.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is still,
A chair is vacant in the home,
Which never can be filled.

Mrs. HORTENCE BAKER.

Mrs. LAURA BEATTY DONELSON, wife of William Alexander Donelson, was born in that part of Yazoo County which is now Holmes County, Miss., on June 4, 1832, living her long life in this section, until Saturday, Feb. 24, 1917, when she passed to her reward from the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. R. Miles, with whom she had spent her last years, and where everyone held her in high regard and affectionate love. Besides this daughter, she leaves a son; R. A. Donelson, of Coffeeville, Kan., and a daughter, Mary Donelson, of Chicago, Ill., with fourteen grandchildren and one great-grandchild, to mourn her departure. This good woman was a life-long Methodist, who had unfaltering faith in God. In all the reverses, hardships, and sorrows of life, she always said her Father did what was best and that she would trust Him. A large concourse of friends attended the burial service and her body was placed in the cemetery near Lexington.

BEN P. JACO, Pastor.

On October 10, 1916, the death angel came into the home of Brother and Sister Napoleon Brown and summoned their little twelve-year-old daughter, DOSSIE MAE, to her home above. The death was a shock to the community, her illness lasting only a few days, when the father called her home. She was a member of the Methodist Church and indeed a Christian. She was a regular attendant of the Sunday school, and took marked interest in church work for one of her age. To know her was to love her. We miss her so much, but God is blessing her influence. It has had a part in bringing some to God since she has gone; and it is evident that others are being touched by the Christian life of the little darling. We all join in prayerful sympathy for the parents, a smaller sister and brother, and many other relatives and friends, who cherish the memories of the sweet-spirited child. And may her prayer for the salvation of boys and young men in whom she was interested be answered!

Her pastor, J. L. CARTER.

It was on Dec. 14, 1916, that Brother WILLIAM GRIFFIN GOFF, who was born on Jan. 22, 1885, passed to his eternal reward. For eleven and one-half months he was confined to his bed, suffering with lung trouble. He was very patient through all of his affliction, and, though he knew that he could not recover, his cheerful disposition made the way easier for the kind friends and loved ones who sought so gladly to meet every wish that he expressed. On July 4, 1910, he was married to Miss Emma Reid, who died June 4, 1915. To his care was left little Lavelle, now five years old, who seems to understand and to feel very sensibly the loss of "mother" and "daddy." Brother Goff joined the Methodist Church and was converted when a boy, and was loyal to the Church and a real Christian to the time of his death. He served as a steward and Sunday school superintendent for several years, and was effective in both offices. He always delighted to see the church work prosper. Only a short time before his death he would call in his friends and exhort them to live the Christian life. We feel very much the loss of this brother and pray God's richest blessings upon the grief-stricken father and mother, and three brothers, and three sisters, with "Little Lavelle," who mourn his departure. Heaven is made sweeter, for we know that Brother Goff is there. His pastor,

J. L. CARTER.

Mrs. MARTHA FINETTE SMITH (nee Cowger), was born on Sept. 25, 1832, and died on Feb. 20, 1917. Her father moved from middle Tennessee, to Oxford, Miss., when she was three years old. Here she was reared, and in 1853 she married Alford M. Smith and came as a bride to his home near Sardis, Miss. In 1883 she was left a widow, and four years later she moved in the vicinity of Tyro, Miss., where she lived up to the time of her decease. She joined the Methodist Church in her girlhood days, and lived a consistent Christian life, her latter days being devoutly given in service to her home church and community. She was one of the chief factors, both inspirational and financial, in the building of the church at this place, of which, she was always a liberal supporter as well as a stay to the pastor and his family. Almost since the beginning of the New Orleans Christian Advocate she has been a subscriber to it, never getting in arrears but once in her subscription, and then through an oversight of her pastor. Until within a few days of her death she showed a lively interest in the life of her community. Rather, was she 84 years young than so many years old. How much we shall miss her! Upon whom has her mantle fallen? Her pastor,

A. M. BENNETT.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

From the Field

Brooklyn, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: The outlook for a good year on the Brooklyn and Bond charge is encouraging. Our first quarterly conference, which was held at Brooklyn on Feb. 15, was a pleasant and profitable occasion. Quite a number of our official members were present, and all enjoyed very much a short sermon by Brother J. R. Jones, our presiding elder. There was an increase made in the assessment for the pastor and presiding elder over that of last year. There is considerable interest being manifested in all departments of our church work, especially in the work of the Sunday school. We believe that our Sunday school at Brooklyn is second to none in the Seashore District. We have here a population of 400 or 500, and there are but eight men who are not in some way connected with our Sunday school. The membership of our Sunday school is as large as that of the church. We desire the prayers of all the brethren that we may make this the best year in the history of this charge.—D. W. Ulmer, pastor.

First Church, Laurel, Miss.

My heart is all aglow with the interest and enthusiasm of a great Sunday School Institute. Rev. J. L. Neill gave us a few days, leaving us, to the regret of the whole church to-day. Brother Neill is without the least bit of questioning the greatest Sunday school instructor I have ever heard. He is energy and enthusiasm personified, and these two very necessary adjuncts are made to glow in the light of God's presence and are driven by the Holy Spirit. If no one but the pastors could hear Brother Neill in this work, the Church would be amply compensated for the investment of the time of one of our best men and the dollars that this demands. But our people also are getting Neill's vision, and the results are manifest even now: an awakened Conference, a revived Church, and the realization of all that Methodism means in Mississippi. God bless the Sunday School Board, and Brother Neill. Let us make our Children's Day offering large enough to give Brother Neill the assistants that must be provided if we keep this work moving forward. W. B. HOGG.

Washington Ct., Miss. Conf.

Dear Dr. Meek: We held our first quarterly conference for the Washington Circuit on Monday last. Our presiding elder, Brother Sharbrough, stopped by on his way back from Natchez and gave us a couple of hours for our conference and one of the best sermons we have heard for a long time. It was clear, forceful, and deeply spiritual. Quite a number of folks were present from the community and the other churches and all expressed themselves as being delighted with the sermon and the entire service. We are encouraged by the large number of ladies present at these conferences. The business part of the conference was very pleasant. The stewards voluntarily raised the assessment for the pastor's salary more than 25 per cent over that of last year. The entire assessments for the superannuated ministers and the American Bible Society were reported paid and 25 per cent of both mission claims—in all more than a third of all Conference assessments. We have a small membership in the five churches comprising the circuit, but the faithful few is not surpassed in fidelity and loyalty by any church in the Conference, and every one, regardless of denomination is kind and hospitable to the pastor. Washington is the largest church and the oldest in the Mississippi Conference, probably antedating any in the three States of Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana. It was organized by Rev. Tobias Gibson in 1799 and has continued until the present time without interruption. Some of the strongest and best men in Mississippi Methodism have served it and quite a number of men who stand high in the Conference at the present time began their itinerant ministry here. The ground where the present building stands was purchased in 1821 and the building was completed during the decade that followed. With proper repairs, which we are now planning, it ought to last a century longer.

The Kingston Church was organized some time before the Civil War, and for considerably more than half a century has stood as a monument to the noble men and women who loved Methodism in the early history of the State. Taken together, the grounds and the building make perhaps the most beautiful country church in Mississippi.

Pine Grove Church was organized in 1901 from two older ones, Linwood and Locust Grove. Its influence on the surrounding country cannot be estimated. Its history is full of old-time revivals and many can testify of the blessings that came into their lives at this place.

Cannonsburg is the "infant" of the charge, beginning its existence less than eight years ago in the Greenwood Presbyterian Church at that place, which by their kind permission we still use. We enjoy their cordial cooperation, as we do that also of the Baptist people. Though it has only twelve members, it is a very active congregation, and one of the most pleasant, if not the most pleasant in the Conference to serve. It overpaid both assessments last year, and began this year by paying its entire Conference assessment before the first quarterly conference.

We have borrowed Mars Hill from the Woodville Circuit this year. Large congregations greeted us there on both preaching occasions and the interest manifested gives promise of great things this year. The young folks have a large and splendid choir which adds much to the service. With best wishes to the Advocate,

J. B. CAIN.

City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron.

To Make Beautiful, Healthy Women and Strong Vigorous Men

NOW BEING USED BY OVER THREE MILLION PEOPLE ANNUALLY

Quickly transforms the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of weak, anæmic men and women into a perfect glow of health and beauty—Often increases the strength of delicate, nervous, run-down folks 200 per cent in two weeks' time.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen, that a number of physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below:

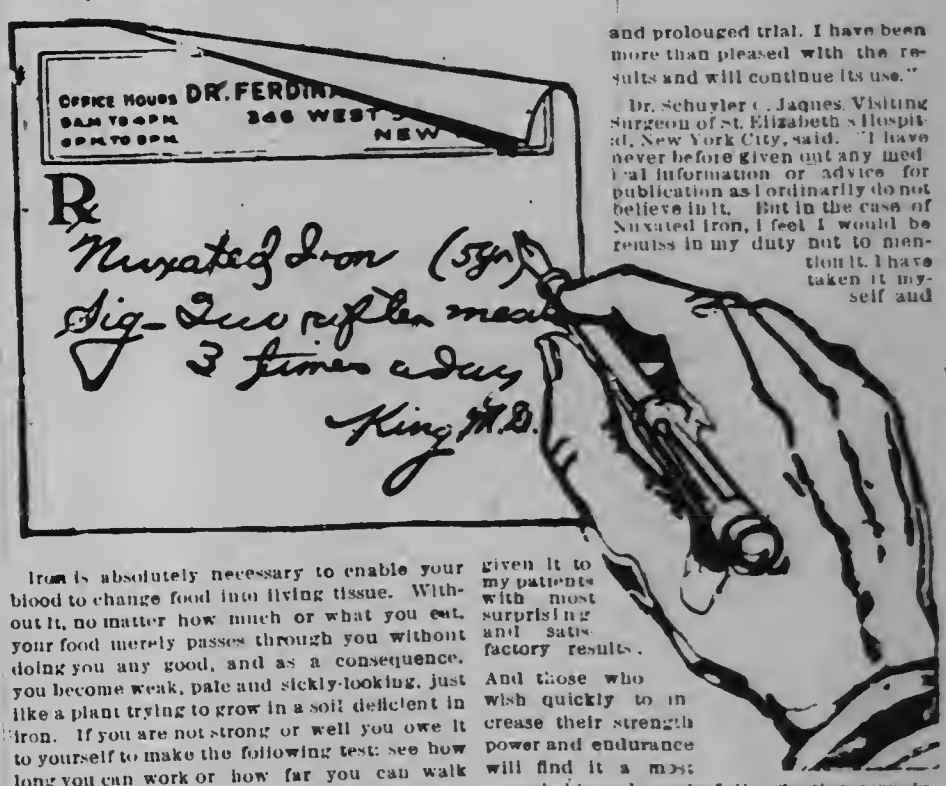
Dr. King, a New York physician and author, says: "There can be no vigorous iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale. The flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory falls and they often become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

In the most common foods of America the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked is responsible for another grave iron loss.

Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt.

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely in both this country and in prominent European Medical Institutions says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away habit forming drugs and nauseous concoctions and take Nuxated Iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart troubles, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood."

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health, at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.



Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good, and as a consequence, you become weak, pale and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children, is alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prizefighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. T. Alphonsus Wallace, a physician of many years experience in this country and who has been given many honorary titles in Eng- and said: "I have given Nuxated Iron a fair and prolonged trial. I have been more than pleased with the results and will continue its use."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron, I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy

Dr. Howard James, late of the United States Public Health Service says, "Patients in an enervated and devitalized state of health—those, for instance, convalescing from protracted fevers, those suffering from a long standing case of anaemia, all such people in my opinion, need iron. Of late there has been brought to my attention, Nuxated Iron. In practice, I have found this an ideal restorative and upbuilding agent in these cases above mentioned.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

THE METHODIST REVIEW—AND A SUGGESTION.

I have been reading the METHODIST REVIEW for a number of years and while I am free to admit that it has always been one of the ablest periodicals sent out by any of our Protestant Churches, I do not believe it has ever been edited in a more inspiring and scholarly manner than under its present editor, Dr. H. M. DuBose; then, again, in my estimation it has never been safer and sounder from a Methodistic standpoint. But what does this signify to those who never see and read it? If all our Methodist preachers, and especially our younger preachers, would take and read the Review carefully, there would soon be a freshness and forcefulness which would attract the favorable attention of their congregations. There is scarcely a single article in any number of the Review which is not well worth the price of the Review for a year. Now the suggestion—I recognize the fact that many of our preachers do not feel able to pay $2 per year for the Review. In all such cases, some individual member of the church or the official board ought to provide the $2 and have the pastor read the Review. I do not believe there are a dozen pastoral charges in Southern Methodism where this suggestion could not be practically carried out if brought to the attention of the official board. Suppose we try it? C. C. FISHER.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which, if not eliminated every day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood, causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, hut who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter-pound of limestone phosphate at the drugstore. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

STOPPED CHILDREN'S CROUP COUGH

Scared mothers who dread the hoarse cough of croup at night will find a sure quick help in Foley's Honey and Tar. It stops croup quickly, and if given at bed time, will prevent the dreaded attack. Mrs. Billie Mayberry, Eckert, Ga., writes: "Three weeks ago two of my children began choking and coughing and I saw they were having an attack of croup. I gave them Foley's Honey and Tar at bedtime; their cough stopped and by morning all signs of croup were gone." Croup; whooping cough, tickling throat, bronchial and la grippe coughs quickly stopped. Try it.

THE WINONA DISTRICT.

Dear Doctor Meek: I have about closed my first round of appointments and I am sending in the second. There are several things worthy of special note going on among the good people of this district, which show growth, enterprise, and expansion, both in a spiritual and financial way. The pastors are energetic, evangelistic, and are bringing larger and better things to pass all the while for humanity and the Kingdom. The outlook is most assuring from every standpoint. We have many great laymen within the bounds of the old Winona District. They are a loyal, big-minded and broad-spirited set of men, who are doing fine things in standing by the preachers and promoting the interests of the Kingdom. I find them, for the most part, large in view and generous in means to meet the financial needs of the pastors and the Church in these extraordinary times of unprecedented prices in living. They have readily recognized the obligation to take care of their pastors and their families in comfortable human style and have in numbers of instances raised the pastor's salary. Greenwood raised the pastors salary to $2400; Moorehead, to $1000; Sunflower, to $1200; Lambert, to $1150; Drew, to $1600; Ruleville, to $1650; Webb, to $1500, etc. Others will follow this worthy example.

With the $10,000 to $12,000 church going up at Moorhead and the $15,000 church under way at Ruleville, and with brick and timber on the ground and the contract let at Webb for a $12,000 to $15,0000 church, and Belzoni coming round the curve with a $12,000 to $15,000 church, and Brother Brooks getting ready at Dublin for a $4000 or $5000 church, it seems, Doctor, that there is no little, parsimonious spirit animating the people of the Delta, but that their horizon is coming to be as boundless as those fertile fields. The preachers, where they are backed up by their good people and are doing things, have a smile on their faces that will not rub off. L. M. LIPSCOMB.

FROM BROTHER LAGRONE.

The first quarterly conference was held while I was in New Orleans, ten days ago. This is the first one I have missed in forty-five years, and I did not like to break my record, but I had the reports in the hands of the Secretary and I thought if Lipscomb and Brownlee could not hold things down here in my absence I would call them incompetents. The congregation gave good reports of both of them. Brownlee represented Grenada College and the cause of education in the morning, and Lipscomb preached at night. Grenada College is several hundred dollars better off by the coming of Brownlee.

When I reached home the Board of Stewards reported the assessment for Foreign and Domestic missions paid in full and gave me the receipt from the Conference Treasurer, Brother Bynum. I received the appeal from Brother Duren for help and before I could get a chance to read it, it was all paid; and the pastor's salary is more than paid to date. I am going to do my best this year, Dr. Meek, for there are scores of men with watering mouths to come to Drew, and if I do not move up, some of them will roll me for the place.

Will the brethren pardon me for a suggestion? It is this: In every charge where the official Board has assumed the benevolences and have a budget system, let the preacher positively refuse to receive more than his per cent of the amount paid in, especially until the mission assessments are paid, and it will come. I do not think it is fair for the preacher to keep the full amount of his salary and let these men on poor charges go in want. We are taking from them what legitimately belongs to them, and it is not right. Almost any board of stewards will appreciate the pastor more and make a stronger effort to bring up the entire amount. This has been my position for years and I have not failed but once to get what I wanted.
Drew, Miss. W. S. LAGRONE.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER!

It's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

Freckles

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho should peel off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking and, of course, should have no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

Uric Acid!

Ever since the discovery of Scheele in 1775 that uric acid was found within the body—most eminent physicians agree that rheumatism is caused by it; also many distressing symptoms as headache, pain in back, stomach distress, swollen feet and ankles, gout, etc.

It was Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., who discovered a new agent—called Anuric, a harmless remedy that if taken before meals will carry off the uric acid from the system and in this way the pains and aches, the creaky joints and all the distressing symptoms of rheumatism and other maladies disappear. You can easily prove this yourself, by obtaining Anuric at almost any drug store, or send Dr. Pierce 10c. for trial package. Try it and be convinced that Anuric is many times more active than lithia and eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar.

WITHIN THE REACH of every woman—health and strength. They're brought to you by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Take this medicine, and there's a safe and certain remedy for all the chronic weaknesses, derangements, and diseases peculiar to the sex. Sold in tablet or liquid form.

You will escape many ills and clear up the coated tongue, the sallow complexion, the dull headache, the lazy liver, if you will take a pleasant laxative made up of the May-apple, juice of the leaves of aloes, root of jalap, and called "Pleasant Pellets." You can obtain at drug store these vegetable pellets in vials for 25c.—ask for Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

THREE MONTHS.

Dear Advocate: As short as the time may seem to many of us, one-fourth of our ecclesiastical year is behind us. The winter has been a trying one. How the furious, cold winds will make a lean and frail old body tremble! For fifty or more years the weight of this writer was from 150 to 160 pounds. It is now 30 to 40 pounds less than that. I shall soon be at that rate like the darkey's fish—"all swunk up."

My last birthday celebration was better attended than for several years. Not much cash in sight, but a big tableful of groceries. Who brought them? Baptists, in the main. There are few Methodists here. About Christmas and New Year some pretty post-cards were received. A few preachers sent cards, viz.: Dr. R. H. Wynn, J. M. Henry, H. B. Perrett and wife, and others. I sent a gentleman friend a New Year card, and he sent me by return mail a $25 check, and other smaller checks were received before and after the holidays. My Lord is good to me, and gives me friends who share my burdens and poverty, and cheer me on my way. What am I doing for Him? So little! Each Monday morning I go out, by special request, to our elegant High School and open it with Bible reading, prayer, and a Scriptural talk.

The Standard pastor, Rev. E. G. Wood, has begun to preach here now, and is encouraged by the reception given him. Our new presiding elder has been around, and called on this writer and family, and we enjoyed the visit. God bless you!

Olla, La. A. ARMSTRONG.

MEDICINES, LIKE MEN HAVE CHARACTER

From their fine outward appearance, through the various elements of strength that go to make up the standing of a remedy, including the final and absolute test—does it "make good"?—does it cure?—Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills conclusively prove every day that they are medicines of the highest character.

Hood's Sarsaparilla originated in a physician's successful prescription.

Peptiron Pills, named from pepsin and iron, include nux and other tonics.

For scrofula, eczema, humors, boils, pimples and other eruptions—for loss of appetite, indigestion and dyspepsia—for kidney and liver troubles—for loss of appetite, that tired feeling—for brain-fag, nerve exhaustion, anemia and poor, thin blood—Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills make the ideal course of medicine, the former before meals, the latter after.

NERVOUSNESS AND DISORDERS OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

The energy that gives life to the body is known to be nerve force. It is this hidden energy that creates the difference between the living and the dead body. It is the indefinable something that the body is robbed of in death.

Irregular distribution of the nerveforce is responsible for many of the disorders of the system. Consequently any remedy that has the power to soothe the irritated nerves, thus regulating the supply of nervous energy, is of inestimable value.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is such a medicine. It not only soothes the irritated nerves, but it induces a more regular distribution of the nerveforce, and thus assists the bodily organs in performing their proper functions. Furthermore, it induces a natural sleep, which is nature's greatest tonic and strengthener.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is especially recommended in cases of Sick, Bilious and Nervous Headache; Epilepsy; Fits; Irregular, Profuse and Painful Menses; Neuralgia; Sciatica; Sleeplessness; Melancholy; Backache; Nervous Irritation and Nervous Dyspepsia.

For more than 25 years Dr. Miles' Nervine has been largely used, and the success that it has met with on all sides is the best proof of its merit.

If you think that Dr. Miles' Nervine is suited to your case, procure a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, which you will find wrapped around the bottle, and then if you are not benefited return the empty bottle, one only, to your druggist and he will return your money in full. The Miles Medical Co. repays him the full retail price, so there is no reason why he should not return your money promptly.

"WHAT BEAUTIFUL HAIR!"

Have you ever heard that remark made as some one passed by who had carefully kept hair? Did it not make you envious and did it not make you ashamed of every coarse, stiff or gray hair in your head? Did it not make you wish that you, too, had kept your hair carefully and could hear similar compliments passed on ou? Don't envy a beautiful head of hair. It is your privilege to have one. The beauty of the hair depends entirely on its care; and its luster depends on the food on which it subsists. Hair must be fed. Every single hair is a distinctly individual living thing and it demands food. Unless you feed it, it is going to be stiff and coarse and void of beauty. Follow the example of the Creoles of Louisiana, who pride themselves on their hair. Get their recipe. It was kept as a race secret for many years but you can get it now by asking our dealer for "La Creole," the natural hair dressing, or by sending one dollar to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

The District Conference of the Port Gibson District will meet at the Methodist Church in Port Gibson, Miss., on Thursday morning, April 26, at 10:45 a.m. An introductory sermon will be preached Wednesday evening by Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson. Friday afternoon will be given to a missionary institute, and a missionary sermon will be preached Friday evening. The session is expected to close Saturday afternoon in time for all to return home for Sunday who must do so, but it is desirable that all who can, spend the Sunday with us in Port Gibson. As the session will be short it is the more important that every member, and especially every pastor, be on hand for the opening, Thursday morning. Brethren, please be at roll call. If possible the pastors' reports should all be in on Thursday, or early Friday morning at the latest, so that the committees can get to work. Let such reports be well matured, if not written, and as concise as can be, to give the necessary information. A written report tends to both comprehensiveness and brevity. Local preachers who cannot attend are urged to send in written reports. T. J. O'Neil, W. W. Graves, and O. S. Lewis are appointed a committee for the examination of any who may apply for license to preach, or for recommendation for admission into the Annual Conference.

WHAT THE DOCTOR KNOWS

KIDNEYS MUST BE RIGHT TO INSURE HEALTH.

Few people realize to what extent their health depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

The physician in nearly all cases of serious illness, makes a chemical analysis of the patient's urine. He knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly, the other organs cannot readily be brought back to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected or abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's Disease, which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble, caused nearly ten thousand deaths in one year in the State of New York alone. Therefore, it is particularly necessary to pay more attention to the health of these important organs.

An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

The mild and healing influence of this preparation, in most cases is soon realized, according to sworn statements and verified testimony of those who have used the remedy.

When your kidneys require attention, get Swamp-Root at once from any pharmacy. It is sold by every druggist in bottles of two sizes—50c. and $1.00.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

LISTEN TO THIS! SAYS CORNS LIFT RIGHT OUT NOW

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn, the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out with the fingers.

It is a sticky ether compound which dries the moment it is applied and simply shrivels the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You are further warned that cutting at a corn is a suicidal habit.

SPECIAL DAY OF PRAYER—FRIDAY, APRIL 6.

Friday, April 6, is to be observed as a day of special prayer for the Council meeting—a day when all of our women shall be united in praying for the outpouring of the Spirit upon this session. Do not forget the date, but let us with one accord continue in prayer and supplication.

WE DID NOT REACH THE GOAL SET FOR 1916.

Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb writes: "The statistics for the year do not bring us quite to the goal which we had set for ourselves. Our collections have advanced more than $42,000, and we have reported about 38,000 new members. Notwithstanding the fact that we did not reach our goal, we feel that there is much to be grateful for and to encourage our souls, and that we will take fresh courage for a new effort."

COUNCIL HYMN.

The Program Committee have selected No. 197 in our Church Hymnal as the Council hymn, and are asking that each Council member become familiar with the words and music as written in our hymnal. It would not be amiss for all who anticipate being at this meeting to learn the words of this inspiring hymn, and as the lips utter the words may the soul breathe them as a prayer. "This hymn seemed more perfectly than any other to voice the feelings of each woman engaged in our great work, and we trust that a great blessing will come to us in the use of it."

WORK OF COMMITTEES AT LOUISIANA ANNUAL MISSIONARY MEETING.

A full report of the proceedings of the Louisiana annual meeting, recently held in Crowley, has not yet reached our desk, but Mrs. Holt has forwarded the reports of committees, and as some important recommendations were made and passed upon, and there is great eagerness on the part of the officers for this part of the work to be brought before their women without delay, we publish as much of this report as possible in this issue.

Report on Extension of Work.

With our 1916 two-year goal before us, that of winning the unorganized charges of the Conference, we your committee on Extension of Work, recommend:

1. That in order to successfully continue the campaign work, we endeavor to put into the field a Conference organizer;
2. That we set for ourselves a goal of seven points for 1917, viz.:

Seven complete organizations in each district; 7 districts to organize 7 mission study classes each; 7 districts to gain 100 members each; 7 districts to send 7 boxes each; 7 districts to have 75 per cent of auxiliaries observe the Week of Prayer; 7 districts doing definite Social Service; 7 districts to pay pledge in full by Harvest Day.

3. That the campaign be pushed through the three months of the spring and three of the fall—March to May, and October to December.
4. That quarterly Conference Bulletins giving campaign progress and items of interest be sent to each auxiliary by the Superintendent of Publicity in connection with the Council Bulletins;
5. Realizing a need for organizing Missionary Societies in unorganized territory, we recommend that a missionary program be given once a quarter by the auxiliary at a near-by place and that an organization be effected if possible. If not, we recommend that this program be given anyway.
6. That where there are as many as three interested women, we try to effect an organization.
7. That all auxiliaries hold a special service on December 1, using the program prepared by the Harvest Day committee for that day.
8. That all auxiliaries strive to reach the Standard of Excellence for the Roll of Honor and that each member be supplied with Standard of Excellence in leaflet form and that an enlarged copy be kept before the Society. We recommend also that the Recording Secretary keep an accurate account of points gained at each meeting, total for the year to equal 75 points, in order to put the auxiliary on the Honor Roll.
9. That a public service shall be held by each auxiliary when the opportunities and needs of Scarritt Bible and Training School shall be presented, a call made for volunteers and an offering taken for Scarritt Loan Fund.

Mrs. A. P. HOLT,
Chairman.
Mrs. W. M. BUCHANAN,
Secretary.

Finance Committee.

We recommend:

1. That, in addition to the regular dues of 20 cents per month, each member be taxed 5 cents per month to provide a Conference Expense, Retirement and Relief Fund.
2. That each auxiliary pay $4 for the Scarritt Loan Fund.
3. That the first meeting in January be observed by all auxiliaries as Pledge Day, and that pledge cards be placed in the hands of every member.
4. That the solicitation of pledges be continued until each member has made response.
5. That the envelope system be used for offerings.
6. That the auxiliary treasurers procure record books.
7. That we instruct our representatives to the Council to make a pledge for their Conference of $5450.
8. We suggest that auxiliaries adopt the budget plan of collecting offerings.
9. That, as a Conference, we make our budget for 1917, $15,000.

Mrs. J. J. HOLMES,
Chairman.

Report of Publicity Committee.

We recommend:

1. That each auxiliary in Louisiana be urged to select a live, wide-awake, capable woman as Superintendent of Publicity and that this office be magnified.
2. Recognizing the value we receive from mission study, we urge that each auxiliary organize a Mission Study class either in circles or as a society, as each society knows its own need.
3. That, where Bible Study Classes cannot be organized, pledge cards be signed to pledge themselves to systematically study their Bible each day.
4. We urge a wider use of our local papers.
5. In small towns having no papers, that posters advertising the meetings be placed in some center of intercourse as, for instance, the post-office.
6. That the Publicity Superintendents do not read the Bulletin, but present it by posters, charts, and other devices that make their appeal to the eye as well as the ear, and that each society use the Bulletin.
7. That a poster with a complete list of the State officers and addresses be made and placed before every auxiliary and that the Publicity Superintendent call attention to it before the quarterly reports are sent off.
8. That each Superintendent urge every member to take The Missionary Voice and the New Orleans Christian Advocate and other Church papers.
9. That the subject of Study and Publicity be presented at each District Conference and that each auxiliary begin now a collection of posters, and that they be sent to the district meeting.
10. That all auxiliary Superintendents of Study and Publicity apply to the State Superintendent of Study and Publicity for a Year Book and helps for missionary societies and all literature setting forth their duties.

Miss GRACE GATEWOOD,
Chairman.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?".

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

We all know a right we do not do; whatever we do, whatever we give, whatever we are, there is more we ought to do, more we ought to give, and more we ought to be.—Canon Barnett.

Meat Cause of Kidney Trouble

Take Salts to flush Kidneys if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

FEDERATIONS STIMULATE BIBLE CLASS ORGANIZATION.

Mr. J. M. Way, our General Sunday School Board's Field Secretary for the Atlantic Division, which contains ten Annual Conferences, has recently issued two brief bulletins that throw some interesting light on the effect Federations have on the organizing of classes.

His "Atlantic Division Bulletin III, 1917," is as follows:

Number of Wesley Bible Classes enrolled up to Dec. 31, 1916—

1. N. Carolina Conference	529
2. S. Carolina Conference	405
3. Florida Conference	401
4. Baltimore Conference	400
5. U. S. Carolina Conference	363
6. Virginia Conference	325
7. N. Georgia Conference	206
8. Western Va. Conference	203
9. S. Georgia Conference	159
10. W. N. Carolina Conference	133
Atlantic Division	3124
Increase in 1916	713

Number of Classes in Federations—

1. South Carolina	768
2. North Carolina	529
3. Florida	401
Total in Federations	1698

The three Federations have 54 per cent of the classes.

His "Atlantic Division Bulletin IV, 1917," is as follows:

Number of Wesley Bible Classes enrolled at Nashville during the year 1916—

1. North Carolina Conference	141
2. North Georgia Conference	95
3. Virginia Conference	87
4. Florida Conference	83
5. South Carolina Conference	79
6. Baltimore Conference	70
7. South Georgia Conference	56
8. Upper So. Carolina Conference	42
9. W. N. Carolina Conference	38
10. Western Va. Conference	22
Atlantic Division	713

New Classes organized in the Federation—

1. North Carolina	141
2. South Carolina	121
3. Florida	83

Of total increase in number of classes 48 per cent were in the three Federations, these covering four Annual Conferences.

The four Conferences in the Atlantic Division that are covered by Wesley Bible Class Federations contain about 30 per cent of the Church membership of the Division; yet it will be noticed that these same Conferences have 54 per cent of the Wesley Bible Classes of the Division, and for the year 1916 made a gain of 48 per cent of the classes enrolled from the entire ten Conferences of the Division. Two Conferences of that Division have more enrolled Wesley Bible Classes than they have Sunday schools. These Conferences are the Upper South Carolina and Florida.

We are not making figures for the Gulf Division yet—but we are trying to get ready to do so, by organizing Federations and pushing the organization and enrollment of classes. Watch us grow awhile before we enter the lists with Brother Way and begin to issue Bulletins and make reports.

Editorial

IT LOOKS LIKE WAR.

At this writing it is reported that Germany has sunk three American ships, and that President Wilson is considering the advisableness of calling an immediate session of Congress, that the situation that has arisen may bo promptly and vigorously met. If these reports be true, our Nation is probably on the verge of war. The President certainly has been forbearing and patient, and if he should decide that the time has come for hostilities, we feel sure that the American people will trust his judgment in the matter and give him their united support.

But if war shall be declared, we do not think that there will be any cause for great alarm. Germany is already encircled by the most powerful armies and the mightiest fleets ever mustered in the history of the world, and is steadily staggering toward a crushing defeat. What figting our forces may do, will likely ho restricted to naval engagements of comparatively small magnitude. While responding heartily to any calls that the Nation's leaders may make upon us in the event of war, it is to be hoped that our people will remain calm and retain their self-control, that peace and good order may prevail throughout our own country, in which the population is so cosmopolitan. The United States is in no peril from Germany and her allies.

THE FALL OF THE RUSSIAN THRONE.

Perhaps nothing that has occurred since the outbreak of the European war has occasioned more surprise to the general public in the United States than the abdication of the Czar of Russia, and the surrender of both his own rights and those of his youthful son, the Grand Duke Alexis, to the throne of the Empire. A brother of the monarch, the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, has been named as regent, but, according to report, he will insist upon a plebiscite that will enable the Russian people to name their own ruler. Indeed, this vast monarchy seems to be headed toward a republican form of government.

The press dispatches indicate that one cause of the Czar's dethronement was the influence over him at this crucial time of his wife, Czarina Alexandra, who formerly was a German princess and whose sympathies are said to be with the Teutons. We should not wonder, however, if a lack of capacity to rule in so stormy a period was not the real cause of his deposition. Weak kings, exercising considerable power, may be put up with as national leaders in the easy times of peace, but when the destinities of empires are trembling in the balances the call is for men of capacity and force. It has been said that one thing that made possible the marvelous career of Napoleon Bonaparte was the fact that weaklings were in charge of the governments of so many of the European States.

What effect will the Russian denouement have on the great war now raging across the Atlantic? That is difficult to say at this time. The new Government seems to be thoroughly loyal to the Allies and many think that Russia will now fight more effectively against the Central Powers. This will likely prove to be the correct view unless internal dissension should spring up within the Empire. There seems to be a widespread impression that the Grand Duke Nicholas, another brother of the Czar, whose fame as a soldier is world-wide, will now show himself to be the strong man in Russia, and that under his efficient leadership "the Mighty Colossus of the North" will play a larger and better part among the nations of the world.

It may be that this development in Russia will prove to be the harbinger of coming peace—that other thrones will likewise soon crumble, and that the suffering peoples of the stricken and bleeding nations now engaged in deadly conflict will take things into their hands and cause cruel war to cease. If one may believe what one reads, ominous rumblings of dissatisfaction are already being heard in Germany. This observation scarcely applies to England and France, which already have governments responsive to the will of the great masses composing their citizenship.

THE SOUTHERN PEOPLE AND THE NEGROES.

Some of our Southern Methodist editors have lately stated that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in placing its Negroes in a separate ecclesiastical organization in 1870, and in insisting now that the same thing be done in the proposed unified Church, was moved to take this position in the interest of the welfare of the colored race. This is true, but it is not the whole truth. The fact is, the Southern Methodist Church has been prompted to pursue this course by a consideration for the welfare of both the black people and the white people of the South. It has been, and is, her reasoned conviction that the peace, happiness, and progress of the two races necessitate the maintenance of such a policy.

And not only is this true as respects the establishment of separate Churches for the white people and the colored people; it is also equally true concerning segregation in all the other spheres in which it has been put into practice. The underlying basis of such legislation has not been a feeling of dislike for the Negroes and a purpose to push them off in a spirit of unkindness and ill-will, but a desire to do what experience has demonstrated to be best alike for them and the Caucasian population of this section. In support of this position, we submit the following quotation from "Studies in the American Race Problem," an illuminating volume from the pen of the Hon. Alfred H. Stone, of Greenville, Miss., who gave a number of years to the study of the Negro question, both in the South and in the North, and who is at present a distinguished member of the Mississippi State Legislature:

"Probably the commonest of all the mistakes of opinion as to the attitude of the Southern white man toward the Negro arises out of the legal separation of the two races in cars and schools. Such legislation is described as 'petty persecution of the Negro,' and attributed to a desire to 'humiliate, stigmatize, and degrade him.' These quotations are fairly typical editorial expressions of opinion on the question of Southern motive. As a matter of fact, such legislation is the embodiment of enlightened public policy, and is the surest guarantee of a minimum of friction between the races. In almost every instance of separate car legislation, public sentiment was crystallized into law as the immediate result of intolerable local conditions, not infrequently accompanied by concrete acts of racial violence. Local manifestations of irritation and impatience arising out of racial contact occur here and there throughout the North and East from time to time. But thus far in none of these States are conditions sufficiently uniform to furnish a general State response to local sentiment. I quite distinctly recall the introduction of a bill in the legislature of a Western State a few years ago to prevent intermarriage between the races. It was prompted by a peculiarly distressing case of the kind—but failed to meet with sufficient response to become a law.

"The Negro population of Texas has never been enough to present for the entire State all the phases of the race problem as we find it in South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana, and some of the other Southern States. In 1900, there were, in round numbers, 620,000 Negroes to 2,400,000 white people. But it has been sufficient in various places to cause some acute local conditions to present themselves, and large enough in the State as a whole to insure a final response to local demands. The separate coach law there, as in several other States, merely represented the culmination of public sentiment which had developed through a number of years. The law was not passed until it had clearly become necessary to the maintenance of peace and order, and the prevention of racial outbreaks in many parts of the State. Not until twenty-five years after the Civil War, when the State contained practically 500,000 Negroes, was the legislature finally compelled to act. IT IS IDLE—IT IS CHILDISHLY PETULANT AND IGNORANT—to charge this action to a desire to 'humiliate the Negro,' or to 'subject him to petty persecution.' The final moving cause, the concrete incident which solidified public sentiment into a demand which could no longer be ignored, was a tragedy which occurred on a train carrying mixed passengers. It came only after the people of the State realized that they had postponed too long the enactment of a law which would have rendered such an occurrence impossible. And in Kentucky the same result followed the shooting of a young woman by a Negro on a train on which there was no separation of the races. Each case merely furnished the straw which broke the camel's back. People who are accustomed to seeing an occasional Negro on a train, and he ordinarily well behaved and unobjectionable in his person, cannot form the faintest idea of the conditions which render such legislation a necessity. * * * *

"The necessity for the separation of the children of the two races in schools was always realized as next in importance to laws against intermarriage. Such separation was in fact coincident with the inauguration of Negro schools and has always obtained in the Southern States." (Mr. Stone here tells of how an outbreak of trouble among the pupils in Kansas City, Kansas, led to the establishment of separate schools for the Negroes in that municipality.)

From this informing utterance, it is perfectly obvious that considerations that were in the highest sense patriotic, humanitarian, and Christian, have led the commonwealths of the South to insist upon this separation of the two races in the respects indicated. And precisely the same principles were involved in their separation in the

THE LAST LAP.

"Good night, good night, I am going to rest,
Like the setting sun in the crimson west;
My three-score years and six shall seem
Like the passing hour of a midnight dream;
I shall pass through the valley on a silver cloud,
With the shadow of death for a traveling shroud;
I shall climb the hill to the pearly gate,
Where the bands of angels constantly wait,
And pass in through with staff and rod,
Forever at home in the City of God."

THE MODERN IDOLATRY.

"There is in our day a marvelous idolatry of talent; it is a strange and grievous thing to see how men bow down before genius and success. When once the idolatry of talent enters the Church, then farewell to spirituality; when men ask their teachers, not for that which will make them humble and godlike, but the excitement of an intellectual banquet, then farewell to Christian progress."—F. W. Roberson.

GOD'S WILL.

There is a beautiful figure in one of Wordsworth's poems of a bird that is swept from Norway by a storm. And it battles against the storm with desperate effort, eager to wing back to Norway. But all in vain; and so at last it yields, thinking that the gale will carry it to death. And the gale carries it to sunny England, with its green meadows and its forest glades. Ah, how many of us have been like that little voyager, fretting and fighting against the will of God! And we thought that life could never be the same again when we were carried seaward by the storm. Until at last, finding all was useless perhaps and yielding to the wind that bloweth where it listeth, we have been carried to a land that was far richer, where there were green pastures and still waters.—G. H. Morrison.

WANTING RIGHT THINGS.

One woman remarked to another: "I have no time to do so and so!". "You mean that you do not want to do it!" replied the woman addressed. This put a new thought into the mind of the first speaker, who after a pause rejoined, "Well, I guess that's so!" People generally find time for what they wish to do. Our dominant desires promote ingenuity in discovering ways and means of accomplishing the particular ends sought. One hour cannot, of course, be multiplied into ten or twelve hours, even by the hardest toiling men; but, where a good cause calls for support, and an intelligent method is employed in the apportionment of active periods among several kinds of tasks, a great deal of effective work may be accomplished, constituting a splendid total in the course of the year. Wanting right things, we will work for them!—N. W. Christian Advocate.

PRESIDENT WILSON TO A SUNDAY SCHOOL.

(From the Western Christian Advocate.

Recently a pastor in Cincinnati, while preparing for a patriotic service on Sunday, March 4, wrote President Wilson asking for a message from him to his people. In response he received the following personally signed letter, which ought to be read by our superintendents of Sunday schools throughout this area:

"No study is more important to the child than the study of the Bible and of the truths which it teaches, and there is no more effective agency for such study than the Sunday school. It certainly is one of the greatest factors in our lives in the building of character and the development of moral fiber, for its influence begins almost as soon as the child is able to talk, and continues throughout life. The Sunday school lesson of to-day is the code of morals of to-morrow. Too much attention cannot be paid the work which the Sunday school is doing. (Signed) "WOODROW WILSON."

"COMMIT THY WAY UNTO THE LORD."

These words are of special value to the youth, standing upon the threshold of worldly activity. It is at this very critical period in life that one needs the advice of loving friends who are wise counselors, experienced in the ways of the world and possessing a knowledge of the influence of the various courses of conduct upon the heart and life of man. Sound advice is a good thing. Solomon says: "My son, be admonished." We are taught in the Bible that if we desire Him to do so, the Lord will instruct us in the way that we should go. We need not, therefore, proceed blindly. He has promised to lead us; hence the whole thing devolves upon our being willing to let him. If a man's salvation is accomplished it must be brought about by a co-operation on his part with God. Man is urged to lead a godly life, but he is left free to accept or reject this proposal, being assured, however, that he can not escape the consequences of his choice, for "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

After all, there are but two paths in this world—the one trodden by Christians, and the slippery path of sin. They have both been traveled by countless thousands and are well worn. There is no new way to heaven; neither is there any to hell. The way in which one meets the difficulties along the road of life is one's solution of the mystery of life itself, which is the greatest of all problems, involving, as it does, all others. Which shall be thy way? "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." Because a certain course of conduct seems to be right does not necessarily imply that it is right. It may be directly opposite from what it appears to be. Remember Eve's experience in the Garden of Eden, and Lot and the fair land which he chose. To be governed by appearances altogether is often to be deceived. In a race a good beginning does not always result in a good ending. In the race of life, how many bright and promising careers have ended in the black despair of failure! Forget not the end of the journey, for it must come and will come with as much certainty as the beginning came. In fact, one may keep from beginning a course, but if it is begun the end may force itself upon him. The beginning must have the concurrence of a human agent, but the end may be a power unto itself. The end, therefore, is of more consequence than the beginning, for it brings the results. Who can say that a man is happy and that he has lived worthily until he has reached the end of his earthly pilgrimage and has been judged by God? Bright is the beginning of the worldly life, but the end of it is bitterness and death to all that is divine in man. The wages of sin are purchased by the sacrifice of all that is pure and noble and sublime in the soul. Then, man merely exists as a monument to the awfulness of sin. It is not God's will—it can not be—that any should live in this state, having crushed all that is good in their own natures, being shunned by the righteous; but man works out his own salvation. God can do no more than he has done and is doing. Every man seals his own fate.

Jesus said, "I am the way." Those who have rejected Christ have never been known to rejoice over that fact as they neared the end of life. The words of Julian, the Apostate, when he exclaimed, "Oh, Galilean, thou hast conquered," are doubtless on the lips of every other dying sinner, whether uttered or unuttered. The fact that those who fail to accept Christ seem to regret it in the end, or to be gloomily silent concerning the matter, is significant. As we have said, the wise thing for every one to do is to hearken to the call of Christ and commit his way unto him. The following experience, so beautifully described by the sacred poet, may be realized by all:

"I heard the voice of Jesus say,
'Come unto me and rest;
Lay down, thou weary one, lay down
Thy head upon my breast!'
I came to Jesus as I was,
Weary and worn and sad;
I found in him a resting place,
And he has made me glad.

I heard the voice of Jesus say,
'Behold, I freely give
The living water; thirsty one,
Stoop down, and drink, and live!'
I came to Jesus, and I drank
Of that life-giving stream;
My thirst was quenched, my soul revived,
And now I live in him.

I heard the voice of Jesus say,
'I am this dark world's light;
Look unto me, thy morn shall rise,
And all thy day be bright!'
I looked to Jesus, and I found
In him my star, my sun;
And in that light of life I'll walk,
Till traveling days are done."

ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The world is at sea on the subject of education. It is caught in the maelstrom of so many currents of thought, that we are confronted by a whirling confusion of ideas and theories. Materialism, crassism, and assuredism exclude the Bible from the halls of learning in State, and many of the endowed universities. Religion must not so much as be mentioned in the common schools, lest the pupils should learn to be bigoted and fanatical. The psychology taught is decidedly naturalistic. The brain secretes thought as the liver exudes bile. Thought is a process of cerebration; imagination, the fumes that arise from calorific temperature of body heat—vague fancies, like jack-o'-lanterns, from the bogs and fens. Milton's sublime creations and others like his are mist forms or steam wreathes, arising from the little furnace beneath that burns meat and bread. Memory is cell replacement; will is functional results. Any and all the mental powers are but results of the little choo-choo engine called the body, that runs for a while, and then, for the want of life fire, stops and goes to pieces.

Do you wonder that men who swallow such rot as this are at sea on training and equipping the youth of our land for service to God and humanity? The super-man has taken the place of the over-soul in this system of philosophy. The material is exalted, the spiritual ignored. Fearfully and wonderfully made is this body; still more fearsome and amazing is the physio-psychic teaching advocated by the disciples of this cult.

The Church of God must, can, and will meet the issue—meet it by a clear, full and indubitable statement and doctrine of a system of thought contained in the Divine Revelation and tried by human experience. The Christian college is the answer to the skepticism of the age. Stalwart thinkers who recognize the spiritual factors of man's being as its largest and loftiest exponents, should come to the front and show this generation what we are and where we are. America should take warning and banish from her life the gross materialism, which, under the guise of culture, has changed the fair fields of Germany and the vine-clad slopes of France into battlefields like unto shambles and charnel-houses. God, the Almighty, has only to leave them to their folly and they will work their own ruin. His mill grinds exceeding small. And thought rules and runs the world. Human conduct is only crystallized thought; and right thinking, with all its results, can come only from right teaching.

Centenary College is one of the sources of the right kind of life and thought. Thank God, there are many Christian colleges in the land; but this is ours, and we must care for our own. Her past history is abundantly able to take care of itself—a goodly part of it is in heaven—but this age is on ages telling. Her shadow and impress is on Louisiana Methodism to-day, but the shadow is lengthening with some. Ere the even-tide closes, may the old guard witness a large and liberal outpouring of means for the continuance of a larger life of their dear old Alma Mater!

THE MISSISSIPPI EXPOSITION—ANOTHER SUGGESTION.

Dear Mr. Meek: I notice that in the Advocate of March 8, Rev. J. E. Cunningham tells of a Church Conference held by the First Methodist Church of Corinth, Miss., at which resolutions were passed asking the management of the Mississippi Centennial Exposition not to open the gates on Sundays, and suggesting that other pastors and churches take similar action. I think this is an important question and one which should arouse us. The action of the Corinth Church Conference is looking in the right direction, but I believe I can suggest a better solution of the problem.

As is well known by every one who understands the purposes of such enterprises as Expositions, they are for advertising purposes on a large scale and are not, as is sometimes imagiued, for financial gain. In fact, as a rule, they are financial losses, except as to their advertising value. In this, the public celebration of Mississippi's 100th birthday, every worthy interest and enterprise within her borders should be properly represented, and certainly there is no interest. enterprise or institution quite so worthy of laudable publicity as the Church and its auxiliaries and concomitants—the Sunday schools, missionary societies, Y. M. C. A.'s, etc. Our laws, both moral and statutory, dedicate one day out of seven especially for work in these institutions. Then, why should not Christian workers use this same day, Sunday, to make public such advantages and progress to the "stranger within our gates?"

Now, I would not be understood as favoring any unholy alliance between the material and spiritual interests of the State; but I do favor asking the management for the use of this day by the Church for the purpose of making public the commendable moral and religious advantages offered by our great State. This can be done by arranging a religious and moral service of a high, interesting, and instructive order for each Sabbath. I feel quite sure that those who are managing the exposition would join the Churches in arranging a regular Sunday program that would be inviting to the visitors and a credit to the moral and Christian interests of the State. So, I hope that the subject of the "Sunday Closing" of the Exposition will not longer disturb the Church so much as the "Sunday Opening" of it for the purpose of advertising our moral and spiritual advantages.

Let us seize this great opportunity to invite persons to come among us who, when contemplating becoming a part of our citizenship, would look first for "the one thing needful"—the thing that makes a State great and worthy of a noble people.

SOME REFLECTIONS ON UNION.

Rev. James H. Felts, Presiding Elder of the Holly Springs District.

It is said that Cardinal Newman could not find in the New Testament the immaculate conception of the Virgin Mary, but by a "principle of doctrinal evolution," he could "show the immaculate conception—the infallibility of the Pope, and any other desiderated tenet * * deduced from the utter silence of the Scripture on the subject." In other words, when Mr. Desire begets a thought he is soon grandfather of a theory. The Northern brethren had a thought just after 1844 that resulted in a theory in 1848. That theory has taken many forms, has been clothed in many colors, always with an inordinate fondness for black. They have been a kind of self-appointed wet-nurse, with a peculiar propensity for giving expert advice to the South on the "Negro Question," while enjoying practical immunity themselves. The migration of the "brother in black" is beginning to drain their milk supply. The acute stage has been reached in Chicago, and the demand far exceeds the supply in Boston. Sambo wants more than baked beans. Some of the white brethren, with the fortitude of the Spartan youth who stole the fox, are declaring that "all is well." We are interested. But why should we "fling a fit" because Dr. Blake, UNOFFICIALLY, made a speech in Boston that reads well? Is there any valid reason for supposing that his Church will follow his lead? On the contrary, has he not been bitterly attacked by Dr. Perrin and vigorously by Dr. Warren? Did not Dr. Jones (colored) pay his respects to the address without mincing words? And did not this same Dr. Blake advocate a General Conference having "power to determine the constitutionality of its own acts?" Did not this same Dr. Blake say that "practical expediency, to say nothing of gallantry, should lead us to include women as well as men in all the councils of the denomination?" Did not this same Dr. Blake insist that the "Missionary Sectional Conferences should be given representation in the General Conference" on the basis that it would "solve the colored problem" and "retain the Negro in the Church as an integral part of the organization?" No? Well, suppose you read his address delivered at Evanston, Ill., in February, 1916—less than a year before his Boston address. I am not personally opposed to every "theory" he advances, but I do say that if the spirit or letter of his two addresses are put in force there will be left scarcely a vestige of our Church.

We have no race problem in our Church. We settled that on December 16, 1870. More, the solution has been mutually satisfactory and helpful. Why should we have thrust upon us at this late day a new-old problem? Let the brethren in the North settle their growing problem—then we can talk UNITY with less friction and better prospects. If we surrender our peculiar relationship to the South we will cease to be important factors in the life of the South. The Regional Conferences as proposed by Dr. Blake's Boston speech, would destroy that relationship.

Clinging to the past? Jesus Christ, the superman, built on the past into the future. He who respects no past has no future. To recognize no obligation is to transmit no good. The downfall of nations is but the history of squandered inheritances. Esau sold his birthright for "bread and pottage of lentiles;" ours should not be for sale at any price, however hungry some of the brethren may be for union.

Dr. Blake, in February, 1916, said: "The question ought not to be, what shall it profit this or that branch of Methodism? but what shall it profit the kingdom of God?" Well, what shall it profit the kingdom of God to become world-wide in name and provincial in practice? Isn't it better to be provincial in name and world-wide in practice? Isn't a provincial somebody better than a world-wide nobody? Is the kingdom of God to be profited by "hogtying" the Southern Methodist Church in the "land of her nativity?" Are we to ignore the personal preferences, even the prejudices, of thousands of our people? Shall the head say to the tail, "I have no need of thee?" Is the "Negro question" any more important than the "white question?" Dr. Blake has made two really good speeches. The Boston speech was an improvement over the one at Evanston. Will either Church accept his leadership at present? "I am From Missouri."

MRS. ESTHER JANE JONES—AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

"Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age: like as a shock of corn cometh in his season." As thus it was written of God's oldest, truest witness, so it may be written of her whose name appears above. If to live many days shall be counted a blessing, how much more blessed to have lived them well! From November 10, 1829, to January 17, 1917—more than eighty-seven years—is a long span, covering a life rich with a fruitage of "good works and almsdeeds which she did."

Esther Jane Leighton, daughter of George W. and Sarah Ledbetter Leighton, was born in Jefferson County, Mississippi, where she resided through her long, eventful life of more than four-score years. On January 15, 1846, when she was in her eighteenth year, she was happily married to Benjamin F. Jones, a young planter, near the town of Fayette, Miss., who preceded her to the grave, in 1860, leaving to her care a family of four daughters and one son. How well she bore the added burden of such a loss is evidenced by her children, two of whom are known to the readers of the Advocate in the persons of Mrs. Alice Lewis, widow of the late Rev. W. B. Lewis of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. B. F. Jones, D.D., pastor of the Methodist Church at Moss Point, Miss. She is also represented in the Mississippi Conference by two grandsons—B. F. Lewis, pastor at Canton, and W. H. Lewis, pastor of Capitol Street Church, Jackson. When but a girl, she joined the Methodist Church, at the historic Cane Ridge "meeting-house," near the present town of Lorman, in Jefferson County, where she and her husband were especially prominent, he filling the positions of steward and classleader in the community. After her husband's death, she became even more interested in the work of the Church, supporting it largely with her means, and in her home the weary itinerant always found the prophet's chamber with its refreshing quiet and comforts.

"A mother in Israel," long before her years would suggest the loving appellation, the young preacher found in her a sympathizing, helpful friend. The statement written by one concerning her, would voice the sentiments of many: "Her life was a benediction to me and I count myself fortunate in having been her pastor." "I will bless thee, and thou shalt be a blessing," can be truly written of this faithful servant of God.

Much of her life was spent "in the days that tried men's souls"—days of war and reconstruction—when many strong men faltered and failed; but through them all she was steadfast to her trust, bearing with loyal fortitude the complications and changeful experiences which they brought. Born on November 10, 1829, and dying on January 17, 1917, she "went to her father in peace and was buried in a good old age." Peacefully and quietly, conscious to the last, she slipped away. Her last words were, "My Savior." She sleeps in peace, and her children rise up to call her blessed.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PROGRESS.

As Treasurer of the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference, I feel that I owe it to the cause to call attention to the assessment for the support of the Field Secretary, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney. No phase of our home mission work is more important than this. The Sunday school field is our most fertile field, and to refuse to cultivate it diligently is to close our eyes to our most splendid opportunity. The past year showed no increase at all within the North Mississippi Conference in the matter of church membership, but there was a net gain of more than 1900 in our Sunday school enrollment. A good deal of this splendid gain must be credited to our Field Secretary and his assistants. His salary is certainly not out of proportion to the work he is expected to do. It may not be large enough, but surely it is small enough. The Children's Day Fund is entirely inadequate for the Board's needs. There is therefore, imperative need of the small assessment on each charge for the Sunday School Field Secretary. Several of the charges have already paid their assessment. Among them are New Albany, Red Banks, Water Valley (First Church), Cockrum, Como, Acona, Kilmichael, and Coldwater. Some of these, however, paid only in part. This early payment is a great help to the Board. We had to borrow some money to begin the year's work and early payments will enable the board to cut off the interest account. Send on your assessment for the Sunday School Field Secretary.

THE SOUTHERN PEOPLE AND THE NEGROES

Churches. If Sonthern Methodists shouid presume to embark upon a different course from this, or even to compromise these well-established principies which have been evolved from years of experience, they would come in conflict the necessary social order of the South and forfeit the sympathy and confidence of the Southern white people, thereby largely incapacitating themselves for effective religious service among them. It is not a mere chance circumstance that, except where immigration or some other unusual cause has heiped it, the Northern Methodist Church, though rich and aggressive, has made practically no headway in its work among the whites in the heart of the South. Back of that faiiure lies a reason which it is not at all difficult to discover.

There is one other point that we wish to touch upon before ieaving this snbject. We have observed on the part of some Northern writers, and, we also regret to say, of some who are Southern, a disposition to misrepresent the condition of the colored people in the Southern States and the treatment which is accorded them. There have been some deplorable cases of violence in the South, which were a shame and reproach, and which are condemned and deprecated by an overwhelming majority of the white peopie of this section; but to represent these occurrences as being general or numerous is to misstate the facts. For instance, if our memory is correct, there was last year in the State of Mississippi, in which there are more than a million Negroes and a large tenant ciass of whites, competing to a considerable extent in the same industries, but one lynching. There ought, of course, to have been none; but we doubt whether under like conditions there is a Northern State in the Union that would have made a better showing.

Worse still have been some remarks which have tended to reflect upon the integrity of the courts in the Sonthern States. Some of these aspersions have gone so far as to intimate that our judicial tribunals do not rightly safeguard the property interests of the black man. We do not hesitate to say that, in onr opinion, these insinuations are without just warrant. We presume that few, if any, would contend that conditions in the South as they affect the Negro have retrograded within the past few years, and no iess an authority than Dr. Booker T. Washington made the following statement in 1904: "I have said that such lawless conditions exist only in a 'few' counties in the South, and I use the words advisedly. In the great majority of counties in the South, life and property are just as safe as anywhere in the United States." Dr. Washington also said: "If we were to move four miliions of the eight millions of Negroes from the South into the North and West,.....a problem would be created far more serious and compiicated than any now existing in the Southern States." We aiso addnce, in this connection, the foliowing deciaration of Mr. Stone concerning the situation of the Negro in the Mississippi Delta: "I am well within the limits of conservatism when I assert that in the materiai potentialities of his environment the situation of the Negro here is infiniteiy superior to that of any European peasant. It is not claimed that there are no instances of injustice to the Negro. Not at ail. But I do claim that nowhere else is his general treatment fairer—nowhere is his remedy more certain."

The truth is, the course of the Southern whito peopie toward the Negroes has been substantiaiiy the same that moral and intelligent whites, when in power, have pursued toward them in every iand where the black population has been numerous, even in the Northern States. This we stand ready to show at any time. We say this without the least feeling of unkindness toward the peoples of African blood. We have never written one harsh word concerning the Negro race; nor shall we do so. There is nothing in our power that we would not do to promote what we conceive to be the true interests of the colored man, as well as of the white man.

LOUISIANA WESLEY BIBLE CLASS FEDERATION NOW A FACT.

In spite of the handicap of some disappointing breaks in the program, the Louisiana Conference Wesley Bible Class Federation meeting at Alexandria last week was one of the finest meetings our Church has ever heid in Louisiana, and many were the persons whose expressions of appreciation gratified the hearts of those who had worked and prayed for the success of the meeting.

At the opening session Wednesday afternoon, March 14, Dr. C. D. Bulla, answered in a very pleasing way the question "What Are We Here For?" and that evening Mr. R. F. White extended in weil-chosen words Alexandria's welcome to the Wesley Bibie Class hosts, which Brother Brown, the chairman of the Conference Sunday School Board, responded to in iike manner.

The illness of Bishop Atkins (his physician having absoiutely forbidden his doing any work at aii) kept him from fiiling his place on the program, but Dr. Bulla made an excelient substitute, and held his audience to perfect attention as he spoke most effectively, with the Wesiey Bible Class motto, "My Brother and I," as his text.

Dr. S. A. Steel, the deservedly popuiar pastor of First Church, Shreveport, made a host of new friends with his matchless address on "The Bible," and, as he conducted his audience through the Church's "Westminster Abbey" and portrayed in such weil-chosen language his word-pictures of Abraham, Moses, Saui, David, Eiijah, Eiisha, John the Baptist, Peter, Paui, Judas Iscarlot, and iastly the Master himself, one could almost see the very men themselves, so vivid and iife-iike were the Doctor's word-paintings.

Dr. George R. Stuart wired that a broken trainscheduie prevented his reaching us, and an eieventh-hour S. O. S. cail was sent to Dr. U. G. Foote, pastor of Rayne Memoriai at New Orleans, and the Doctor responded most promptiy and loyally, and his address the second night, and closing session, of the meeting on "The Value of a Human Soul" iifted a iarge audience to the highest inspirationai point of the whole meeting and added another to the Doctor's aiready iarge coiiection of triumphs.

Rev. Emmett Hightower, our General Board's Fieid Secretary for the Southwest Division, gave two splendid addresses—on the "Relation of the Wesiey Bibie Class to the Church" and "The Wesley Bible Class and Teacher-Training"—and won the frlendship of Louisiana's Wesiey Bibie Ciass foiks by his forceful and loyal utterances.

"The Wesley Ciass and Missions" was discussed by Rev. N. E. Joyner, of Lake Charles, in one of the best, clearest and most heipfui ways the writer ever heard it presented, and there can be no doubt about either the speaker's at-homeness with his subject, or that good was accompiished by his presentation of it at this meeting.

Mr. T. W. Hoiioman, Aiexandria's prince of iaymen, made a most excellent presiding officer as temporary chairman, and his address on the subject "How Can the Wesley Bible Class Help the Superintendent?" was up to his usual A-1 standard of exceiience.

Yes, Brelthaupt was there, and "with the goods," too. Didn't make any difference whether it was as "choir," or in discussing "The Wesley Bible Class in the Country," or just as a plain Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, C. V. "made good," and more than one of us is ready to confidentiy predict that the Louisiana Methodist Sunday schooi work will improve tremendousiy under his inspiring ieadership, backed as it is by a ioyal Sunday Schooi Board, headed by Chairman Brown.

Mr. C. O. Chaimers most worthiiy represented the New Orleans Christian Advocate in a spiendid address, and it is our hope that every Wesiey Bible Class famiiy wiii become a reciplent of the "Advocate's" weekiy visits.

Pastor-host Coleman was ever-present with a hearty handshake and winning smiie, conducted most acceptabiy the conference on adult Bible class teaching, and kept a calm and happy exterior even when his auto tire "busted."

Much credit is due the people of First Church for the eminent success of the Federation's first meeting, and especiaiiy do we want to mention the Pitts class for their parf in the publicity work and Brother Copenhaver for much self-sacrificing work as head of the reception committee.

Mansfield sent down a fine, large hustling business delegation of men and women and waged a successful campaign for the Feedration's meeting next year. After iooking over the Mansfield "bunch," ioaded chock-full of enthusiasm, faith and enterprise, no other piace dared enter the lists against them, so the 1918 meeting goes unanimously to Bobbitt, Moore and Sharpe—and Mansfieid.

Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, was elected president; Mr. R. T. Moore of Mansfield, vice president, and Mr. O. C. Bates of Alexandria, secretary-treasurer. In addition, a strong executive committee composed of one person from each presiding elder's district was elected.

Presiding Eiders Carter, May, Atkinson, Holmes, and Lutz were present and by counsel and prayer added materiaiiy to the helpfuiness of the meeting. The presence of many pastors was also most gratifying.

The possibility that the threatened railroad strike might prevent Dr. Buiia and Mr. Hightower from reaching other appointments caused the Federation to adjourn with Thursday night's session, rather than at noon on Friday as had been planned. But, notwithstanding this and the other changes noted, a highly successful meeting was held and the Federation started out weil on its career of usefulness. The corps of officers elected assures a good year's work.

"MEXICAN DAY" IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

We designate our missionary work by three terms: (1) Foreign Missions, (2) Home Missions, and (3) Conference Missions. Foreign Missions relate to work done outside the United States; Home Missions reiate to work in behalf of foreigners within the United States, while Conference Missions relate to missionary work done within the bounds of any Annuai Conference.

Many wiii naturally think that "Mexican Day" is in behalf of Mexico; therefore, they wiii think this appeal is in behalf of Foreign Missions. The fact is, "Mexican Day" is to be observed in behalf of the Mexicans in Texas. Of the 800,000 Mexicans in the United States, 400,000 of them are in Texas. Of this 400,000 there are 75,000 chiidren of school age. Last year only about 10,000 of these children attended schooi.

The Roman Catholic Church is the Church of these people, but thousands of them have lost faith in that Church and are now without reiigious or moral instruction of any kind whatsoever. Most of these people speak Spanish; therefore, they can hear the gospel only in that tongue. We have but 6 American missionaries and 15 Mexican preachers to minister to the spirituai and morai needs of these people who are within our borders. The Church membership of our Mexican Mission is 2200 and we have about 2500 pupils in the Sunday schooi. These people are very responsive when they are approached tactfully, but to finance a campaign of aggressive gospel preaching among these ignorant and deluded people we must have money therefor.

Our Missionary Board has had prepared two ieaflets: "Mexican Day in the Sunday School," and "Our Mexicans in Texas," that they wiii gladiy send to ail pastors and superintendents who will apply for them. Besides this, The Missionary Voice and The Workers' Council for March have both carried the program for Mexican Day that shouid be observed in ali our Sunday schools. Please iet our pastors and superintendents see that "Mexican Day" is observed in all our Sunday schools. "Mexican Day" is March 25.

Bagdad, the chief Turkish city in Mesopotamia, was captured by British troops last week. This city has a known history stretching back about four thousand years, and is thought to have had at one time a population of 2,000,000. This victory is regarded as a very important one in the present titanic war.

Work is under way to construct four new buildings for Sophie Newcomb College, which is affiliated with Tulane University. These four structures are expected to cost about $800,000. This will leave Newcomb College an endowment of over $2,000,000, which is expected to yield $100,000 per annum for the maintenance of that institution.

Hon. James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, reached Key West, Fla., on March 11, being accompanied by Mrs. Gerard and about 40 Americans who had been in the German Empire. From Florida, Mr. Gerard hurried on to Washington, where he was warmly welcomed. He stated that the German Government seems bent on carrying on the submarine warfare aggressively, regardless of consequences. He reported food conditions in Germany to be serious, but not critical.

Speaking in the House of Lords on February 13, Admiral Baron Beresford, of the British Navy, said: We have lost since the beginning of the great war 4,000,000 tons of shipping; but we have made up this loss very considerably—probably to the extent of 3,000,000 tons. There is not the slightest reason for a panic. We have done remarkably well, but we shall do a great deal better in the future." DR. PERRIN REPLIES TO DR. BLAKE.

[Two or three weeks ago, Dr. Wm. T. Perrin, a widely known minister of the Northern Methodist Church, wrote an article for Zion's Herald combating Dr. Edgar Blake's suggestion of having the Negroes in the Church, North, to surrender the right of representation in the General Conference of the proposed united Church. To this Dr. Blake made reply, representing that the Northern Methodist Hospital in Boston would not receive colored patients. We give below Dr. Perrin's latest answer to Dr. Blake, which appeared in Zion's Herald of March 7, being moved to do so by the fact that Dr. Blake's statement concerning the Boston Hospital has been paraded considerably throughout the Southern Methodist Church. To us, it is no wonder that the distinguished Southern Methodist layman who mailed us this article of Dr. Perrin, added: "I have about come to the conclusion that, however desirable the union between the Northern and Southern Churches may be, to say the very least (in the euphemistic language of some of our ecclesiastical brethren)," the time is not yet ripe.—Editor of Advocate.]

Dr. Perrin's Article.

Mr. Editor: A question of privilege! In explanation I quote from Dr. Blake's address: "I believe in a free forum. * * * It is highly desirable that our Church should have the freest and fullest presentation of the subject, provided it is free from personalities and partizanship;" and from his "Reply to Dr. Perrin:" "In view of the fact that Dr. Perrin is president of the association whose hospital appears to draw the color line in its most offensive form, no further comment on his contribution seems to be necessary." In behalf of the New England Deaconess Association I wish to present some facts. I do not claim that we are doing all we ought for colored folks. We do, however, receive colored patients in our Deaconess Hospitals in Boston and Concord. Only last Sunday I was introduced to a colored girl who has recently been a patient in our hospital in Boston. In both hospitals we serve all races and creeds and have done so from the beginning. In our Training School for Christian Service we have at present a colored student and number several such among our former pupils. In the institutional work at the Deaconess Home colored boys and girls are welcomed, and in the summer time colored children are taken with the rest to our Fresh-Air Home at Haverhill. One of our most efficient deaconesses has charge of the Children's Church at Morgan Memorial, where no color line is drawn. One of the most respected workers there is a black man—a local preacher. Believers in human brotherhood rejoice in the success of this splendid institution, where, as in few places, the endeavor is honestly and fearlessly made to apply the principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to all men regardless of color, race, creed, or previous condition.

May I add a personal word? Mrs. Perrin and myself, sorry for those under bondage to race prejudice or insistent social customs, have been happily free to entertain in our home Christian gentlemen without regard to color. At our family gathering, in another home, on last Thanksgiving Day, as heretofore for years, there sat at the table with us a colored person without any consciousness on the part of any one present of any distinction on account of complexion.

My article, "A Fine Opportunity," in Zion's Herald of Feb. 14, ought to be judged upon its merits. This is all I ask.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN.

How it is Being Conducted in McDonoghville.

1. At the beginning of the new Conference year the pastor began preaching and talking on the need of personal work and home visitation on the part of the Church.

2. Pledge cards were printed and pledges were secured for personal and definite work. From those making pledges one General Committee was appointed, with Mr. W. H. Black as chairman, who, with the assistance of the pastor and official board, worked out a plan for the campaign.

3. From the General Committee several committees were appointed, each having a chairman. The town was districted, and to each district a committee was assigned.

4. On Wednesday evening, Feb. 21, a consecration service was held at the church, being conducted by Dr. U. G. Foote and Rev. C. C. Wier. At this service, the pastor, with his faithful band of workers, stood before the altar and renewed their vows of loyalty to Christ and pledged their hearty co-operation to win souls and be builders in Christ's kingdom. Since then the committees have been busy nearly every night holding Bible readings and prayer-meetings in houses, and doing personal work. From 10 to 15 prayer-meetings are held each week in various parts of the town. On some nights as many as 4 or 5 prayer-meetings are held. These committees have been canvassing the field and getting it ready for the revival meeting which begins Wednesday, March 21, at 7:30 p. m. Rev. H. T. Young will do the preaching. We are expecting a great revival. We believe that the great levers for a revival are prayer and personal work before the meeting begins. Much good has already been accomplished, and the end is not yet. We have tried to do our best. We leave the results with God. Any consecrated Christian can win souls if he isn't afraid to give God a chance to use him.

(We are also using the "Inner Prayer Circle," which we count a very valuable factor.)

SACRED CANTATA.

At the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on Friday evening, March 23, there will be given by the members of the choir and Sunday school, with others assisting—fifty voices in all—the Cantata, "Under the Palms." This Cantata is intended to illustrate the Jewish Feast of the Tabernacles, or Harvest Festival, during which the people dwelt for one week in tents or booths made of evergreens, ornamented with fruits and flowers. Several of the psalms were written for this feast and were sung by the Levitical choirs of Asaph and Kora, to the music of a great number of instruments, made by David and Solomon. It was at this feast that Christ said: "I am the water of life; I am the light of the world." This occasion is expected to be a notable one. The general public is invited. * * *

The Great Battle

A PATRIOTIC PROHIBITION PROPHECY.

God's clock has struck the hour that knells the final doom
Of base resorts that flourish in shades of moral gloom.
Our country's sacred honor conditions new commands,
And pulpit, press, and platform unite in firm demands.
No legalized temptation shall lure the feet of youth
To wander from the pathway of purity and truth;
No revenue degrading our treasury shall claim;
No partnership with evil shall mar Columbia's fame;
No breweries, no distilleries, no wineries, no bars,
Shall purchase their protection beneath Old Glory's Stars!
O statesmen wise, who legislate beneath the great white dome!
O patriotic Chief, within historic White House home!
This vision will be realized. High on the scroll of fame,
In characters of fadeless light, will shine each honored name
Through whose supreme endeavor and by whose earnest thought
Were moved the forces which this glorious conquest wrought.
Leaders of our Republic, this prophecy fulfill!
Be brave! dare face the issue! it is the people's will!
Then vict'ry bells will peal above the liquor traffic's grave,
And o'er our nation's dome at last a stainless flag shall wave!

—Mrs. Nellie Hazard Bradley, in American Issue.

NOTES.

The Richmond Virginian pithily says: "When this prohibition fight is over, above John Barleycorn's grave we are going to put a monument which bears the words, 'Here lies John Barleycorn; and he always did LIE!'"

Dr. Wiley, of "Pure-Food" fame, says of the use of alcoholic drinks: "It tends to make persons more subject to disease, more likely to perform criminal acts, and less likely to live to a green old age."

Both Houses of the Missouri Legislature have passed bills providing for the submission of a prohibition amendment to the State Constitution. There are, however, in the enactments of the two bodies differences that will send the measures passed to a joint Committee of Conference.

TO UNCLE SAM.

(Reproduced from the American Issue by request.)

Dear Uncle: I wish to engage in a new business; a business that I am sure will in a short time net you larger revenue than at the present time comes from the liquor traffic. In brief, I desire a United States license that will give me and other "citizens of good moral standing" a right to steal horses and automobiles for "personal use." I want a federal license that will make the business of stealing horses, buggies, automobiles, bicycles, and accessories lawful, and give it the protection and support of the United States government. At first my request may seem unreasonable; but please waive judgment until I give you my reasons for making the request.

I am aware that the people of my State have passed laws prohibiting the stealing of these things, but, Uncle, could you not put me in touch with some good judge or attorney-general who understands law sufficiently to be able to find some technicalities that would make it possible at least for me and my associates to steal horses and automobiles from other States for "personal use?"

First, you may be interested to know how I stand regarding local option and this prohibition movement that is sweeping over the land. Well, I am not so much opposed to prohibition as I once was. I believe in prohibition that will prohibit all foreigners from stealing horses and automobiles for personal use or any other use. I want to see this business carried on decently and only by American citizens "who are of good moral character." I am willing to abide by a law prohibiting my business on Sundays, election days, or after twelve o'clock at night. I am also willing to be prohibited from stealing from minors. But if I am altogether denied the privilege of stealing these things, the result will be, that, just like the bootleggers, a lot of sneakthieves and liars will, under cover, unlawfully steal them anyway. And you will then receive no revenue to help reduce taxes. You know that prohibition against stealing does not prevent stealing in any country. "Prohibition does not prohibit." A refusal of such a license would only be an interference with my personal liberty.

My associates and myself are willing to pay a liberal fee to the government for this federal license. We are also willing to put ourselves on record not to steal colts, or horses that have no sense, neither would we take old broken-down plugs. We would not take automobiles that had been used over one year, and would agree to steal but a limited number of Fords each year. Can you not readily see that my proposed business would greatly increase all lines of legitimate business throughout the country? And, furthermore, we would agree to steal only from well-to-do people and the laboring men.

I feel confident that you will agree with me when I say that my proposed business would not be nearly so injurious or dishonorable as the business of selling drugged liquors for drinking purposes. For instance, my business would not cause any man to beat his wife and children or raise a disturbance in the community. Neither would my business wreck homes, fill jails, asylums, or county hospitals, for the sober, industrious, and respectable part of the community to support. My work of stealing would not condemn wives and mothers to lives of drudgery and want. Neither would it wreck manhood, debauch politics, or bind people to a hellish slavery. We would do nothing to steal the honor of the man, the virtue of the woman, or the future of the child.

In your one hundred and forty years of experience, have you ever known of any thief or band of outlaws whose record can approximate the awful results of the liquor traffic? Can you think of one word that can be said in favor of the open saloon or the personal-use plan that is not in some way dictated by self-interest? Candidly, would it not be saner and more just to grant me a federal license to steal or burglarize, and protect me in that business, than to grant to others license to sell intoxicating liquor for drinking purposes and protect them in that business?

I therefore hereby petition you to grant me and my associates the privilege of calling special elections, so that each county, town, or precinct may vote on the question of whether or not they will license "white slavers," gamblers, thieves, and murderers to commit their crimes, and thus have local option on thievery, murder, etc.? And then each community for a license fee could license thieves, and murderers, and throw certain restrictions around them so that they could carry on their business in a decent and respectable manner, and then we would not have thieves and murderers going around, like the bootleggers, committing their crimes in violation of our laws.

Awaiting your reply, I am,
Faithfully yours,
W. L. SIMMS.

EVANGELIZING THE CHILDREN.

In carrying out the plan of evangelism, as unanimously adopted by the Louisiana Conference at Baton Rouge, no phase of the work is more important or more far-reaching in its possible fruitage than that involved in the evangelization of the children. This is true for several reasons. In childhood, as we realize, and as is abundantly proved by the results of child study, the most favorable time comes for the effective presentation of the question of the personal acceptance of Christ; again, the Church has committed to its care in the Sunday school a large number of children who are there for the purpose of being taught their religious duty and privilege; and further, the Sunday school itself is organized so as to put each child under the direct influence of a teacher who ought to be able to lead the child to the Savior. With these conditions, the largest part of our revival work ought to come from the conversion of the children of the Sunday school. If this work is rightly and thoroughly done, we shall have secured a band of young Christians in training for the Church of to-morrow, whose lives will be useful to the Church for a generation to come.

In order to secure the best results in this direction, it is necessary to pray and plan very definitely for the evangelization of the children. With the hope of emphasizing the importance of such work, and perhaps furnishing suggestions for those who are planning for it, I take the liberty of suggesting the outlines of a plan, which with some variations and with greater or less success, has been worked in my own pastorates for many years past.

1. Survey the field. A careful study of the ordinary Sunday school roll will reveal a large body of boys and girls, perhaps 25 per cent of the total enrollment of the school, between the ages of seven and sixteen, who are in easy reach of an earnest evangelistic effort, who have never made an open confession of Christ or united with the Church. This fact furnishes material for a large work of evangelism under the most favorable conditions.

2. Organize a co-operative effort. By getting the teachers together for council and prayer, the pastor can lay the importance of the salvation of the children on the consciences of the teachers and secure their co-operation in praying and working for the definite enlistment of these young people in the Christian life. Let me emphasize the thought that our purpose is not simply to get them to join the Church, but to secure their personal acceptance of Christ as their Savior.

3. Preach upon the importance of the salvation of the children. There is so much skepticism on the part of parents and others about the readiness of the children to seek and find the Savior that the responsibility of leading them to Christ is shirked. We need to preach upon the subject and give a special and urgent invitation to parents and Sunday school teachers to be present.

4. Plan for an effective "Decision Day." This may be done by personal talks with the children by the pastor, frequent evangelistic talks to the school or to different classes, or by holding special services in the afternoon for a week leading up to "Decision Day," in which the duty of a personal decision for Christ is presented to the children in a way suited to their age and intelligence. At the close of such special effort or services, let a call be made in the Sunday school, without undue appeal to the emotions, for those who will give their lives to Christ to make it known by signing a card prepared for the purpose, or by simply coming forward and giving in their names.

5. Train for intelligent Church membership. Let those who have thus signified their purpose to live the Christian life be gathered together into an instruction class by the pastor and carefully taught the meaning of the Christian life and of the obligations of Church membership. After several weeks of such instruction and the testing of their purpose, let those who are fully determined to assume the obligations of Church membership be received with impressive ceremony, having memorized the answers to the ritual questions. In this training, the co-operation of the parents should be secured as far as possible, and the reception into the Church be made an impressive event in the lives of the children and in their homes.

Such a plan, so far as my experience goes, has never failed to bring into the Church a class, larger or smaller, of earnest boys and girls, many of whom have developed in later years into useful and effective workers in the Church.

MANY LIVES AT STAKE.

"Mother, dear, how is the pain now?"

"A trifle easier, Kenneth."

"Hadn't I better go for Dr. Booth? You might have something worse than just a cold?"

"No, dear; i'll be better soon," sighed the sick woman, as she turned over in her bed to go to sleep.

Mrs. Osborne had been sick for two days, and owing to the fact that she and her thirteen-year-old son, Kenneth, lived two miles away from the village and that for the last week there had been a continuous storm, none of their friends had yet heard of her illness. Her husband, who was an engineer, had been killed in a wreck, and the shock of his death had left her delicate in health.

The odd jobs that Kenneth did after school hours and the sewing his mother took in supported them, for they lived inexpensively and the rent of the cottage was small. But unfortunately, this winter had been unusually cold, and as fuel had been scarce the little pile of money had gone rapidly down toward the toe of the old stocking.

Mrs. Osborne had caught a hard cold, and as it grew rapidly worse Kenneth grew alarmed, for now her racking cough came from the lungs. The boy had not been able to go to school because of the poor condition of the roads during the storm, so he had ample time to serve his mother. As dusk came on he lighted the lamps and walked softly into his mother's room. She being asleep, he went back to the kitchen and began reading.

Presently he was aroused by a call of "Kenneth, Kenneth!" Hastily he put down his book and went to his mother. She was lying down, breathing hard, and with great effort she gasped, "Go for Dr. Brown—quick!"

Before she could get further than "Doctor" the boy was off like a flash. He hurriedly put another stick in the stove and wrapped a muffler around his throat. Then hastily he tied a long cord around the collar of his great St. Bernard dog and, catching up a lantern, started off for the village.

Outside, the wind was raw and cold, and the snow blew in fitful gusts. But this night of darkness and cold held no terrors for the boy of the plains. As he went hurriedly over the snow-beaten path, his faithful dog, not understanding the master's gravity, suddenly gave a loud bark, followed by others of a sharper variety, and bounded off before the boy. But Kenneth called him back and patted the animal on the head, saying, "No, Jack, no barking nor whistling till mother is well again." And the good dog, seemingly comprehending, walked sedately by the boy.

Soon the lone pair neared the railroad track and, with his lantern swinging along at his side, the boy started to cross it, when something glittering caught his eye. He kneeled down and was closely inspecting it when a cry of horror arose from his lips. What! Could it possibly be! Yes. It was. A rail had broken and was projecting out on the other side of the track, meaning a wreck for the 7:30 limited.

What was he to do? If he waited for the train, which would probably be late, owing to the storm, his mother's condition might grow worse. If he ran for the doctor, the lives of the passengers on the limited would be endangered to a great extent.

Duty and love! Which should he choose?

While his mind was revolving these thoughts his eyes lighted on the faithful Jack. Suddenly an idea occurred to him. He gave a cry of joy, and in a twinkling had wired the lantern to the collar of the bewildered animal. Then, allowing but a few feet of cord, he fastened one end to the rail, the other being securely tied to the dog's collar.

He patted the animal affectionately and then started off. Jack did not understand these maneuvers, and tried to follow his master, but the commanding presence of the rope compelled him to retreat, which produced a long series of barks. And Kenneth strode on, his mind filled with perplexity as to whether he had done right.

* * *

"Forty minutes late! Guess she'll stand more speed?" The speaker turned to his companion, who grunted acquiesence.

"Chilly weather this!" The speaker was not rewarded this time by either a grunt or a nod from his companion, for that worthy person was otherwise engaged, being at that moment leaning far out of the cab window for the limited.

Suddenly an exclamation burst from his lips, and with one bound he had drawn his head from the window, and, rushing over to the long lever, pulled it with such force that the long train came to an almost abrupt standstill.

"Heavens, man! Why did you do that?" exclaimed the first speaker, Robbins by name.

Without replying to his query, the fireman jumped to the ground just as the train ceased motion. Simultaneously several other officials did so, and they advanced to the spot where a light shone, as a solitary star, on the track. Here they found a huge St. Bernard, none other than our friend, Jack, sitting in the middle of the track, trembling and shivering in the cold, with a lantern wired to his collar. The dog jumped up joyfully when freed, but his tail, stiffened from the cold, could not wag with its usual velocity.

"What in thunder did any one want to tie a dog to a railroad track this cold night, and with a lighted lantern!" it was the fireman who spoke. Then suddenly his eye caught the gleam of the broken rail and with an exclamation he called to his companions to look. They did, and their faces grew grave as they thought of the danger that had been so imminent.

But who had tied the dog to the track? Here was a mystery. There were foot-prints in the snow. Faint tracks, which led to the village, could be seen, but that was all. As they stood, gesticulating and wondering who their benefactor might be, the sound of an approaching horse was heard. It grew nearer and nearer and finally stopped a few feet away, and a boy climbed down from a light business buggy. Then a crack of a whip and the hoof beats continued, this time receding in the distance.

Running up to the dog, around which the men were circled, the boy threw his arm around the neck of his beloved pet, who in his turn barked in recognition.

"What does this mean?" "Is this your dog?" "Did you tie him here?" were the various questions from the men.

"Yes, yes," cried Kenneth, for it was he. "I did."

And he told them the whole story—of his fear of his mother's condition and his perplexity as to what he should do on the discovery of the broken rail. Then suddenly he jumped up from his leaning posture over the dog, saying that he must now return and see what the doctor, who had driven him to the train, said of his mother's condition.

But he was gently detained by the crowd of excited passengers, who realized what the boy had done and how much they owed him, also the dog. Question after question was poured upon him with such rapidity that the boy's mind was bewildered.

Who was his father? What did he do? An engineer? Why, they knew him well!

A purse was collected and a gentleman passenger came forward and presented it to the boy, together with his card, saying that when the lattor needed assistance to call on him. But Kenneth stoutly refused the purse, saying that they would have to see his mother about that. Two of the gentlemen accompanied him home, while the others returned to the train.

To-day Kenneth Osborne is one of the most trained engineers in the company in which his father had been employed and which he himself had aided when a boy.

His mother fully recovered her health and loves to tell the story of her boy and his faithful dog, Jack.—Helen T. Monifort, in San Francisco Call.

THAT ANNUAL SERMON ON THE MINISTRY.

The need for more preachers and for stronger preachers is felt in all the churches. Two of the methods by which our Church seeks to co-operate with the Spirit of God in calling men into the ministry is to observe annually Vocation Day in all our Sunday schools and to require a sermon once a year in every pulpit on the Claims of the Christian Ministry.

Our Sunday school authorities have moved up the date of Vocation Day this year from the fourth Sunday in September to the Sunday before Easter, viz., April 1, and it is to be observed in connection with Decision Day. The object of this notice is to request that the day be properly emphasized in all our Sunday schools and to suggest that this will be an appropriate time to preach the annual sermon on the Claims of the Christian Ministry. May we not have a ringing call on this subject from every pulpit in Southern Methodism? If Saul is hid among the stuff, let us find and summon him to his kingdom under divine guidance. Civilization crumbles without the Church and the Church languishes without strong leadership. When did the world ever need worse than to-day an able and consecrated ministry? We must all help call the leaders of to-morrow. The Department of Ministerial Supply and Training, Atlanta, Ga., will send literature on the ministry free to all pastors who write for it.

A SETTLED METHODIST PASTORATE.

The Western Christian Advocate of March 7 states that the members of the Woodward Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church of Detroit, Mich., have projected the construction of a great house of worship to cost approximately a half million dollars, with the understanding that Dr. M. S. Rice, the present incumbent, is to remain their pastor as long as the congregation so desires. The Western Advocate further says: "Bishop Henderson has consented to this arrangement, pronouncing it in accord with the Methodist plan of appointment year by year, which, in the course of events, need not be molested by the appointing powers."

As we see it, this is a straight-out abrogation of the principle of the itinerancy, Bishop Henderson to the contrary notwithstanding. If a man is held by a contract, he is no longer movable. For our part, we have never had any doubt that the removal of the time limit would weaken, and possibly ultimately destroy, the itinerant system. We would not particularly object to the extension of the pastoral term in Southern Methodism to six years; but we should regret, because of what we are convinced such action would involve, to see the time limit completely abandoned.

DR. HENRI ANET IN NEW ORLEANS.

Rev. Henri Anet, D.D., a representative of the Commission having in charge the Franco-Belgian relief work, is in new Orleans. He spoke at Trinity Episcopal Church last Sunday morning, delivering a very impressive address. Among other things, he said:

"Unless help comes from American brethren, Protestant Home Missionary work in Belgium and Northern France will be seriously cut, if not stopped entirely. England, which helped the first year, can do nothing more. Holland, a former giver, is using her energies to care for her own suffering people. Belgium's own contributions have fallen to half the average for prosperous years, and will further decline. Some do not think this an appropriate time to ask for funds. I do. During the first ten months of the war, the Church had more converts in Belgium than in any other year. The second year showed a further gain. An evangelical paper, recently started, sells ten thousand copies weekly. A school for ministers has opened with 22 men, eager to carry the Gospel to the people.....The Belgian nation is not destroyed nor is the Belgian Church. We are perplexed, but not in despair. The Church is stronger, though our buildings have been destroyed by the German authorities upon the pretext that they were centers for snipers. In Belgium, 30,000 non-combatants—men, women, and children—have been killed—some by accident and the bursting of shells, but most of them in cold blood."

We are heartily in sympathy with this appeal for funds to keep up Christian work among the stricken Belgians. In our opinion, the cause is a most deserving one. Mr. Anet is thoroughly endorsed and commended by Bishop W. R. Lambuth and other well known Christian leaders in the United States. We trust that large assistance may be given him in the South.

INTERMARRIAGES IN MASSACHUSETTS.

A correspondent desires information concerning intermarriages between white and colored people in the North. We regret to state that at present we have not at hand the statistics for the years that have just passed, but the following statement is from a dependable source, being based upon the Report of the Massachusetts Bureau of Labor and the Annual Reports of the Registry Department of the City of Boston: "For the past five years (prior to 1904) of all the Negro marriages in Massachusetts, an average of about 10 per cent were mixed. Moreover, in these cases the white party was generally the woman—very infrequently the man. Of the 52 mixed marriages in 37 of the towns and cities of the State in 1900, 42 were between white women and Negro men.

"During the five years from 1900 to 1904 there were 143 marriages between Negroes and whites in the city of Boston, and 907 in which both parties were Negroes. In other words, with a Negro population of 11,591, there were 1050 marriages. Of these 143, or 13.6 per cent, married white persons. Of these mixed marriages 133 were cases of white women marrying Negro men, while only 10 white men married Negro women."

Massachusetts formerly had a law forbidding marriages between whites and Negroes or mulattoes; but it was repealed in 1843.

DR. C. F. EVANS DEAD.

We have noted with sorrow the announcement in the press of the death of Dr. Charles F. Evans, which occurred a few days ago at his home in Lexington, Ky., where he had resided for a number of years. Dr. Evans was a native of Louisiana, having been born in Madison Parish in 1841. When young, he moved with his mother to New Orleans from Shreveport, where his father, who was a merchant, had recently died. In this city he worked his way steadily up in the business world, being connected as an accountant with some of its best known firms. At the outbreak of the Civil War he became chaplain of the Fourteenth Louisiana Infantry, and was with General Banks' army at the Battle of Mansfield, serving at that time as chaplain of the Crescent Regiment. He was married in 1864 to Miss Laura Pauline Ellis, a daughter of Colonel R. M. Ellis, of this city.

At the close of the war, Dr. Evans entered upon his career as an itinerant minister, which was a long and distinguished one. He filled many important appointments in several States, among them being Canton and Meridian, Mississippi, Monroe, Shreveport, Baton Rouge, and Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans, in Louisiana, and Arkadelphia, Pine Bluff, Hot Springs, and Little Rock, in Arkansas. He was at one time presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and served a term as Publisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. He was an active participant in the memorable fight against the Louisiana lottery and did much in his various fields of labor to promote the prohibition cause. The closing years of his ministry were spent in Kentucky and he had for some time been on the roll of superannuates of the Kentucky Conference. He was possessed of unusual pulpit gifts and enjoyed a large degree of popularity as a preacher.

His first wife having died, Dr. Evans later married Mrs. M. J. Roberts, of Lexington, Ky., who also preceded him to the grave. He is survived by four children—Rev. W. G. Evans of this city, Mr. Eugene E. Evans of St. Louis, Mo., Dr. Charles A. Evans of Arkadelphia, Ark., and Miss R. H. Evans of Lexington, Ky. Dr. Evans was 75 years of age. His obsequies were conducted by Dr. John R. Deering and Dr. G. E. Cameron, and the interment was made at Lexington, Ky. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that Divine grace may comfort and sustain them.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. M. Aiford, of Bunkie, La., gives us two subscriptions, and thus refers to his charge: "The work here is progressing favorably, and we are expecting a great year."

Rev. C. E. Fike, of Rayne, La., says: "Things are progressing well with us. We are to entertain our district conference this year, and are looking forward to it with anticipations of much pleasure."

We have before us a printed copy of the financial budget of our church at Macon, Miss., of which Rev. E. Nash Broyles is the popular pastor. This historic charge seems to have a well planned financial system.

Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Oakland, Miss., sends us some subscriptions, and reports that he has been cordially received in his new charge. We predict that the more Brother Rogers' people see of him, the more they will esteem him.

Rev. W. J. Walters, our pastor on the Waynesboro (Miss.) Circuit, has been remembering the Advocate on his rounds, with good results. He states that the work of the Church is going forward in a gratifying manner in his field.

Rev. Stonewall Anderson, D.D., of Nashville, Tenn., will preach the Commencement sermon of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, at Jackson, Tenn., on Sunday, May 6. This school has had a good session under the presidency of Rev. H. G. Hawkins.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney is beginning to shape things toward a Federation of the Wesley Bible Classes of the North Mississippi Conference next September. This meeting will be held in the choice little city of Durant. We trust that it will be a great occasion.

Dr. S. A. Steel, of Shreveport, La., has been invited to deliver an address on "Francis Asbury" before the approaching session of the Baltimore Conference. A rare treat is in store for that fine body of loyal Southern Methodist preachers who live and work along the border.

Mr. Webster Millsaps Buie, a member of the Galloway Memorial Church of Jackson, Miss., and Treasurer of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, made a trip to Atlanta, Ga., last week. Mr. Buie is one of the most promising young laymen of Mississippi Methodism.

Writing from London, Ky., Miss Ida Parker, in a business note ordering the renewal of her subscription, says: "I enjoyed the article on the Sue Bennett School which recently appeared in the Advocate. I wish that all Methodists could know more about this institution. It is located in a splendid mission field."

In electing Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., President of their State organization, the Wesley Bible Classes of Louisiana made a happy selection. Judge White is not only a lawyer of conspicuous ability, but also an outstanding Christian layman. His forbears have had much to do with the making of Methodism in Louisiana.

Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, La., spent a day in Atlanta, Ga., last week, and while there had the pleasure of a visit to the campus of Emory University with Bishop Candler for his guide. He was delighted with the site of that institution and the buildings that have been erected. He says that he found Bishop Candler looking unusually well and in fine spirits.

The Post-office address of Rev. C. H. Ellis has been changed from Camden, Miss., to Yazoo City, Miss., R. F. D. No. 2. Brother Ellis, than whom there is no more worthy minister in the Mississippi Conference, has been engaged by Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Jackson District, to serve the Lintonia charge. Brother Ellis is on the honor roll of superannuates.

From a card from Brother H. H. Ahrens, who is so well known to Louisiana and Mississippi Methodism, but who is now connected with the Census Department at Washington, D. C., we take the following: "Mrs. Ahrens' health has improved wonderfully since we came here. The inauguration ceremonies were magnificent. We are enjoying our stay in Washington, and I am greatly delighted with my work."

Rev. J. D. Nesom, of Lake Arthur, La., writes as follows: "The church here is in a fairly good condition. Our Sunday school is making new records right along. The woman's missionary society is constantly on the move. I am doing my best to keep up with the advancing host. We are to receive 7 persons into the Church right away. Our presiding elder takes a lively interest in the work throughout the district."

Rev. F. L. Crowson, of Webster, Fla., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, adds a few lines commendatory of the Editor for his defense of the interests of Southern Methodism. He also expresses regret that the Church press generally does not have more to say concerning the need of a holy Christian life. We agree with Brother Crowson that the call for a deeper spirituality in the Church needs to be sounded forth.

We have seen it stated in some of the Church papers that the Conference of Missionary Secretaries at their last annual meeting petitioned the General Board of Missions to raise the assessment for foreign missions 50 per cent. The wisdom of such a step at this time is being questioned in some parts of the Church, on the ground that so many of the charges are failing to pay the missionary assessments as they stand at present.

The following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions, sent in within the past few days: Rev. H. J. Moore, Montrose, Miss., 3; Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Booneville, Miss., 9; Rev. W. L. Duren, Columbus, Miss., 8; Rev. Thomas Camerou, New Albany, Miss., 2; Rev. J. W. Dormau, Water Valley, Miss., 2; Rev. W. S. Shipman, Itta Beua, Miss., 4; Rev. S. A. Brown, Kosciusko, Miss., 2.

Under date of March 17, Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Lafayette (La.) District, writes: "I am sending you a part of my second round of appointments. The first round ended well. I am looking forward to a great year in this district. My evangelistic campaign will begin the first week in April. A great ingathering is confidently expected. I am in receipt of a letter from Bishop Hoss this morning, in which he states that he is improving."

Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, of Shreveport, La., writes: "The work of the Texas Avenue Church is moving on nicely. We have had several accessions on profession of faith since Conference. I can so arrange my work, by using my local preachers, as to be able to give some time to revival meetings in Louisiana and Mississippi. So if any of the brethren need my services, I should be glad to hear from them. My address is 1601 Fair Place, Shreveport, La."

Rev. Albert S. Lutz, the able presiding elder of the Monroe (La.) District, in sending in his second round of appointments, adds the following note: "The work in this district is advancing nicely. All the preachers seem to be busy in the Master's service. The Gilbert charge has had a gracious revival under the preaching of Rev. H. T. Young, our Conference Evangelist. Plans for other meetings are being perfected. We are hoping that this may be a year of great revivals."

From a letter from Brother D. A. McKinnon, of Pachuta, Miss., we extract the following: "Rev. H. R. McKee, our pastor, is a choice man, and is very much loved by his people. My family and I have just passed through the saddest time of our lives, caused by the home-going of my eldest son, who was 17 years of age. He was a promising boy, who had been a member of the Church from early childhood and who gave evidence of a saving knowledge of Christ." We sympathize with these sorrowing ones and pray that the Master may have them in his gracious keeping.

Rev. H. M. Whaling, Jr., of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., writes: "Mrs. L. M. Fowler, of Henderson, Texas, has presented to the Library of Southern Methodist University a collection of theological works from the library of her husband, the Rev. L. M. Fowler, lately deceased, whose long and distinguished ministry in Texas Methodism reached back to pioneer times. These books were secured to the University through the good offices of Prof. John Wynne Barton, and were very much appreciated."

Rev. S. D. Howard, of Winnsboro, La., in a business letter bringing us 4 subscriptions, appends the following reference to his work: "We are moving along fairly well, all things considered. I was sick for a month after I moved here, and my wife and children also have been ill. We had our first quarterly conference on March 3 and 4. Rev. A. S. Lutz, our presiding elder, came on Saturday and remained through Sunday, but, because of the inclement weather, he could preach only once. He was a guest at the parsonage, and we greatly enjoyed his fellowship."

Rev. F. L. Appiewhite, of Sharon, Miss., sends us the following notice: "Brother Galloway, of Madisonville, Miss., a steward in our church there for many years, died on March 2, lacking but a few weeks of being 88 years of age. He was an uncle of Bishop Charles B. Galloway and the father of Mrs. Hawkins, wife of the Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of Jackson, Tenn. He owned considerable land in Madison County and was a great lover of the Church and all its interests, having missed very few quarterly conferences during the last sixty years. He was a man of saintly character and will be much missed."

Rev. Frank Brookes Hill, our pastor at Patterson, La., who is an Englishman, has two sons (all he has) in the British Army. Referring to them in a personal letter to the Editor, he says: "Where they are I do not know. I hear from them very irregularly just now. The last time I heard they were both in England, but I expect that they are now 'somewhere in France.' Whilst I am very proud that they are doing their share and are not 'slackers,' I get depressed at times; yet, in quietness and confidence, get strength and leave them in God's care." We scarcely need to say that we greatly admire our brother's fine spirit. May the Heavenly Father continue to have both him and the brave ones at the front in his watchful keeping, until they shall again be brought together!

Rev. J. B. Randolph, manager of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, writes: "The health of the home is good; so far, we have escaped the measles which is prevailing in this city. We have a good corps of helpers, who are both loyal and efficient." Brother Randolph has recently mailed a letter to all the pastors and Sunday school superintendents in Mississippi, urging them to see that a collection is taken monthly for the Orphanage, the necessary running expenses of which amount to $1700 a month. They are also requested to aid in placing the Orphanage paper, "Our Home," in every Methodist family. The price of this publication is 25 cents per annum. It is sent free to every person who gives as much as $2 a year to the support of the institution in the interest of which it is issued. The brethren should give Brother Randolph their hearty co-operation. We have no more important work than that of caring for these children, who have only the Church to look to for their support.

MARVIN GALLOWAY SCHOLARSHIP.

Dear Dr. Meek: The Methodists of Mississippi and all other friends of Millsaps College will be much gratified to learn that Brother George W. Galloway, an honored layman of Madison County, who died on March 1 at a ripe old age, made provision in his will for $1000 to be set aside for the establishment of a scholarship at Millsaps College as a memorial to his son, Marvin, to be known as the "Marvin Galloway Scholarship." The principal is to be kept perpetually, and only the interest used in assisting a worthy student each session, preferably one from Madison County, if possible. This is a noble benefaction, and many a student in the years to come will profit thereby.

Yours fraternally,

M. M. BLACK.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT NOTES.

Rev. George P. Fikes, pastor at Moscow, has been in Meridian for a week suffering from a carbuncle on his throat. He was seriously sick for several days, but has so far recovered as to be able to return to his work.

Rev. I. L. Peebles, who is doubtless one of the best posted men in our Conference on doctrinal points and discipline, is "young and happy," and wishes me to say for him that he is open for engagements in revival work wheresoever the brethren may need him.

The first round of Quarterly Conferences will be finished this week, and Brother Thompson, the presiding elder, seems to be well pleased with his start. Two young men, one each from the Enterprise charge and the Clarke circuit, have been recommended for license to preach, and the following charges have increased the salaries of their pastors: Meridian, Central; Meridian, West End; Shubuta, and Enterprise.

District Conference will meet at Shubuta on April 17, and we are looking for the best attendance in a number of years.

Brother Witt, one of our honored superannuates, has taken upon himself the task of raising $1000 for the Superannuate Endowment Fund from the churches in Meridian. He thinks that he will be able to report that amount raised by the time our Conference meets at Vicksburg.

Brother Broadfoot's family has had the measles for about a month. He reports the last one well on the way to recovery. Very naturally his work has been somewhat handicapped by this epidemic, but, even with that, he has done as well as those of us who have had no such drawback.

Dr. Beeson entertained the Lay Activities Committees of the churches of the city on February 28. After a nice program given by the music puplis, dinner was served by the Domestic Science Class, and speeches were made by Prof. Harrell and the leading men of the Meridian District.

Dr. J. M. Glenn, presiding elder of the Macon (Ga.) District is this week engaged in a meeting at the College, which is being well attended, and is doing much good. ELMER C. GUNN.

Meridian, Miss., March 15, 1917.

In the 65th Congress, soon to convene in a special session, Hon. J. H. Bankhead will be in the Senate, and his son, Hon. W. B. Bankhead, will be in the House, both from Alabama. This will be the first time that a father and son have ever served in Congress together.

Church News

Fire recently destroyed one of the buildings of our Mission at Kobe, Japan. It was valued at $25,000.

Dr. George R. Stuart, of Birmingham, Ala., has lately been campaigning in Pennsylvania in the interest of prohibition.

Rev. J. M. Culbreth, pastor of the University M. E. Church, South, in St. Louis, Mo., has been sorely bereaved by the recent death of his wife.

It is stated that in a revival recently held in the First M. E. Church, South, of Houston, Texas, by Evangelist D. L. Coale, a woman 110 years of age, and her daughter, nearly 90 years old, were received into the Church.

The total membership of the Protestant Evangelical Churches in San Francisco, according to a recent religious survey in that city, is 15,713. The Roman Catholic adherents are set down as numbering 115,921. The city's population by the Census of 1910 was 416,912.

Bishop Waterhouse states that he is slowly but steadily improving in health. He is still at Los Angeles, but expects to come East in the near future. He hopes to attend the spring meeting of the College of Bishops and to have a part in the work of episcopal supervision during the present year.

Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D.D., the widely known evangelist, who has been seriously ill, seems now to be fast regaining his health. He was able on February 25 to occupy the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church of Jamaica, Long Island (said to be the oldest Presbyterian Church in the United States), and deliver a powerful sermon to a crowded house.

The Missionary Training School of Emory University will be located in the Wesley Memorial Building, which has domitory room for about 50 young women and classroom facilities for 600 or 700 students. Dr. J. A. Sharp will be at the head of this institution. There is urgent need for financial assistance in the way of providing scholarships in this school. A scholarship is rated at $250, and it may be provided either by an individual, or a church, or any other organization in a pastoral charge.

Young People Often Have Kidney Trouble

I take pleasure in telling to others what Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root did for my son fifteen years ago. He had been suffering with kidney and bladder troubles for about two years, day and night, getting worse all the time. He had tried several remedies, but received no benefit until he took Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, which relieved him in a short time, and now he is entirely well. I am happy to recommend Swamp-Root as I am confident it will do all that it claims in the ailments for which it is so highly advised. You may have my permission to publish this recommendation for the benefit of other sufferers.

Very truly yours,
MRS. BLANCH BOLL,
75 Darby Street,

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known down-town druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

The subject of this sketch Mrs. LILIAN HAMIL (nee Weldy) was born on Jan. 29, 1893, and departed this life on Jan. 8, 1917. She was happily married to Mr. J. T. Hamil on Dec. 4, 1915, and to this union was given a bright little boy who is in the tender care of his father and grandparents, who are heartbroken over their sad loss. Lillie was a sweet Christian girl, having joined the Church when quite a child and having lived consistently until the evening of Jan. 8, 1917, when she succumbed to the deadly effects of toxemia. We laid her remains to rest in the McLain Cemetery, in the twillght of the evenlng of Jan. 9, 1917, to await the resurrectlon call.

Sleep on, dear Lillie, in thy house of clay;
We hope to meet you in a far brighter day.
Only a space of time, only a fleetlng breath,
Until we shall meet again where we will know no death.

Her pastor and friend,
P. H. HOWSE.

JOEL R. NEWSOM was born in Noxubee County, Mississippi, on April 22, 1843, and dled at his home in Lexington, Miss., on Monday, Feb. 19, 1917. With his parents in chiidhood, he moved first to Leake County, and thence to Yazoo County, where they died, and he came into the section that is now Holmes County, where at about 18 years of age he joined the Confederate Army, becoming a sharpshooter with tbe First Mississippi Battallon, Featherstun's Brigade, Loring's Divislon. His comrades say his courage always enabled him to find the most dangerous places. He became a Christian in youth and was an active member of the Methodist Church, being always regular in attendance. The last place he went was to Church, then home, then to God. In his life of 74 years he was rarely ever sick, but always active and vigorous; hence his sudden death, from heart failure, was a great shock to us all. His pastor conducted the funeral servlce according to the usage of his church at his home in the presence of a host of friends, Confederate veterans, and his daughters, Mrs. Griffing, Mrs. Hall, and Mrs. Matthews, with the sons, J. W. and W. R. Newsom; then his body was tenderly placed in the cemetery at Lexington. BEN P. JACO, Pastor.
